Lending a Hand

Capacity Crowd Hears Opera Review History

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont (CP) — Across This Land, a song review of the 25-year history of the Canadian Opera Company and its touring group, made its debut here Saturday to a humming and warmly-applauding audience.

The capacity crowd in the 800-seat Shaw Festival Theatre heard 15 soloists and an orchestra of 24 under musical director Errol Gray sing in duets, trios, quartets and choruses the best-loved works of a panorama of opera.

But it was not opera alone. The program ranged over Sweet Adeline, in barbershop harmony, and the folk song, There's a Hole in the Bucket, Sweet Liza, ending with the quartet from Rigoletto, a chorus from Tales of Hoffman, and the Sextet and chorus from Lucia Di Lammermoor.

The two-hour show was conceived by Jan Rubes, veteran bass of the company and its new touring director and program development officer, who also acted as master of ceremonies.

It tells in mime, pictures and word, the trials of touring the continent from coast to coast and from Key West to the Arctic by bus, singing one-night stands in such operas as Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte and the current production, La Boheme.

It is to get away from the one-night stand curse of touring that Rubes developed this alternate program. During two weeks here, the touring group is also developing recital and chamber music programs to round out its travelling repertoire.

The touring group of the Canadian Opera Company is really the only on-gong opera company in the country. The main company's season is limited to a few weeks each autumn in Toronto, and other opera companies in Canada merely put together special performances for each season.

In its 12,000 performances, the group has averaged more than 200 miles of travel between shows, Rubes said.

Across This Land could serve as an introduction to opera for non-opera-goers, but it in no way plays down to an adult audience.

No one singer stars in the show, but the honors are spread among such performers as Barbara Collier, Carol Anne Curry, Ann Cooper, John Arab, Peter Barcza, Avo Kittask, Peter Milne and Phil Stark.

Some of the special talents of the orchestra are also set out, with a string quartet, and a woodwind quintet with french horn interspersed with the singing.

Across This Land now will be taken on a tour of Ontario, along with La Boheme.

Showbiz Briefs

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Barbra Streisand won the best actress award Sunday night at the fifth International Film Festival of India for her portrayal of a political activist in the move, The Way We Were.

The awards, chosen bya 10-member international jury, were announced at the end of the two-week long festival.

The Hungarian film Dreaming Youth, was named the best film and Iran's Behruz Vusoghi was selected best actor for his role in the Iranian film, Tangsir. Vusoghi was the only award winner who was present at the ceremony.

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — Actress-dancer Ruby Keeler has recovered from brain surgery and has returned to her home in Laguna Beach, Calif., a hospital spokesman here said.

Miss Keeler, 64, was admitted Nov. 20 to correct what surgeons said was a bulge inside a blood vessel in her brain. She had been on the critical list and under intensive care until Dec. 4.

She was released from the hospital Jan. 13, a spokesman said.

RETURNS HOME

David Toguri, Vancouver-born choreographer and director, will return to Canada as co-director with Robin Phillips of The Two Gentlemen of Verona and The Comedy of Errors, Stratford's Canadian Tour productions, which open in Winnipeg Feb. 10.

La Boheme Suffers Little From Condensed Version

By EUGENE LANG

Practically every seat in the house was occupied at Centennial Secondary School Tuesday evening as the Canadian Opera Company, sponsored jointly by the Quinte Arts Council and Corby Distilleries Ltd. presented an English version of Giacomo Puccini's best loved opera; La Boheme.

Although the original four acts were condensed into two, none of the basic story was lost or missing, although the action does take place in the 1830s, not the 1890s as the playbill mentioned.

Fine performances were turned in by all the participating cast, although more movement could have been forthcoming in some of the solo arias, instead of the singers simply standing in one spot as they held the centre of attraction.

The two principals, Ann Cooper (Mimi) and Glyn Evans (Rodolfo) handled their respective roles with emotional impact, their voices blending beautifully in their first act duet. In this and their respective solo arias the tempo could have been given a little more push, not leaving their listeners with a feeling of stodginess and listless motion.

Basso Ronald Bermingham (Colline) was excellent at every appearance with a voice of resonant depth to depict his part. Deborah Jeans (Musetta) came across extremely well, her waltz song delightfully portrayed, although she does have a tendency to pull back, when she could let herself go with more animation.

Peter Barcza (Marcello) gave an accomplished enactment of his role as lover of the coquettish Musetta. James Anderson (Schaunard), Peter Milne (Benoit), Barney Ingram (Parpignol), Phil Stark (Alcindoro) and Briane Nasimok as the waiter delivered themselves admirably of their respective parts.

Orchestral balance was extremely well devised by Conductor Errol Gay, although a heavy accompaniment was noticed during some of the arias. For a travelling company the sets used were throughtfully produced, but the film slides (even if one set was reversed) did little to enhance the effect that they were intended for. In summation: An excellent performance that left the audience enthralled as attested by the waves of applause when the final curtain closed.

LONDON (AP) — James Bond's kid brother has become a purse snatcher, but it's all for a good cause.

Neil Connery, 36, a look-alike of his brother Sean, will star in a brief government television commercial warning the public against thieves in supermarkets.

Sean Connery won movie fame playing Bond, the fictional British secret agent, in several films.

Neil made his film debut seven years ago in an Italian movie called Operation Kid Brother. But since then he has been waiting for offers.

He says one problem is his looks. Letters to producers invariably produced the same reply: Sorry, you look too much like your brother.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Craig Stevens foresees a return to elegance in films and television. That is why he is casting his lot with The Thin Man.

Stevens will be starring next month in a 90-minute mystery based on the classic Nick Charles character created by Dashiell Hammett.

The show will appear on ABC's late-night Wide World of Entertainment. The network has an option for three more 90-minute Thin Man shows or for a prime time series.

"Either way would be OK with me," says Stevens, who spent four years solving crimes as TV detective Peter Gunn.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, Jan. 23

Aries (March 21-April 19) You'll have second thoughts about something you felt you hastily agreed to. However, it will work out ok.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) With any commercial transactions today, be careful the price isn't raised once the deal is set.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You'll have to be on guard so you won't unintentionally slight a friend by excluding her from an activity with another pal.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Don't embarrass yourself by seeking a favor of one whom you feel is likely to turn you down.

Leo (July 23-Aug 22) Your self-discipline will be well in hand for most of the day, but as the evening wears on you'll grow a little too lax.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your present aims can be satisfied without resorting to methods that you wouldn't be proud to tell others of.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone will be giving you a good idea that you should apply in total. For some reason you'll dilute its potential.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's time to remind a certain party of an obligation long overdue. Be prepared to counter some flimsy excuses.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're apt to misinterpret the motives of one who is very cooperative. It's not like you to be this suspicious without cause.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It wouldn't be wise to gossip with co-workers about something the boss told you in confidence. Keep this matter secret.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're reasonably safe in taking chances on things today that are well thought-out. Press beyond a calculated risk and the string will snap.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You will create problems if you expect more than you're entitled to from a venture. Share fairly.

Experts Can Tell If Growth Over

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter is 13 years old and is five feet, eight inches tall. I am 5-foot-5, and my husband is six feet.

My daughter has had about six periods. I'm told that growth usually stops after menstruation begins.

Years ago my neighbor's family doctor told her that her daughter still had a little way to go before her growth would stop—something about putting her arm under a machine and being able to see the bone structure.

Is there any way we could find out about our daughter and whether she will continue to grow? We don't want to do anything that might harm her, but we would like to know because she is quite conscious of her height and we would like to help.—Mrs. D.D.

Indocrinologists, doctors who specialize in glandular disorders, some of which can be related to abnormal growth can tell with some accuracy by x-ray what is called the "bone age" of the child. If the epiphyses (bone endings) of the limb are closed off (fused), then they can say that further growth will not occur.

They can tell a great deal from the degree of this fusing, including how much further growth can be expected. Human growth is determined mainly by the secretion (or lack of it) of one of the several hormones manufactured in the pituitary gland. This particular hormone is called human growth hormone (HGH). Heredity is, of course, another important factor in just how tall an individual will become

Growth in girls follows a different pattern than in boys. In the case of boys, puberty is usually accompanied by an additional surge in growth with production of testosterone, the male sex hormone.

With girls, puberty is related to the production of estrogen, the female sex hormone, which means a slowing down of vertical growth, with more emphasis on development of sexual characteristics such as the breasts.

Since you are concerned, you should visit an endocrinologist who will be able to examine her and tell you what you can expect in the way of future growth for your daughter.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the newest development in diabetes and its treatments?—J.K.G.

Most of the exciting new developments in diabetes have been in the laboratory—experimental but promising.

These include a system of automatic monitoring of the blood sugar keyed to release insulin when needed. Another involves the actual transplant of insulin-producing islet cells in the pancreas with a resulting decrease in blood glucose. Such studies have been done with laboratory animals, and in the case of monitoring are only beginning to involve humans.

As far as the standard treatment of diabetes is concerned there is little new. As a founding member of the American Diabetes Association back in the 190s, I have watched this particular field with interest.

Weight reduction is essential if the patient is obese, as is an appropriate diet, with or without insulin supplement, depending on the seriousness of the diabetes.

Medication to lower blood sugar continues to be an effective treatment. Exercise should not be neglected.

It may be years before we have a better understanding of the complex physiology of diabetes or before the new laboratory studies result in cure or more efficient control. Many dedicated medical researchers are at work around the country on this problem.

First Aid Course Is Changing

VANCOUVER (CP) — First aid is changing.

The St John Ambulance course now is a multi-media experience

At a trial run, 18 top physicians, British Columbia government officials and educationists attended a scaled-down version of the course.

The course is a juxtaposition of vivid film segments, practical training and workbook sessions. It normally takes eight hours but it was shaved to just under four for the trial run.

Ken Scorse, a director of training for St. John Ambulance, said the program was devised because of a conviction that people trained in first aid are more likely to be safety-conscious.

He said studies have found that first-aid training can decrease the effects of accident by 30 to 40 per cent.

"As a result of this, it was felt that there was a need to train the bulk of the population. So a course was developed that could be conducted in an eight-hour period."

He said he hoped the course will be adopted in school programs so that eventually everybody will have first-aid training.

South was interested in seven after his partner opened the bidding, but settled for six after North showed no kings in response to the Blackwood five notrump

Then when dummy hit the table South saw that even six was in some jeopardy. There was a sure heart loser and the defenders held four trumps to the queen between them.

An ordinary player would bang down the ace and king of trumps, drop the queen and make the slam, but South was just devious enough to have a plan that might tell him something about the trump distribution

West had opened the king of hearts so South took his ace and led the suit right back. West rose with the queen and shifted to a diamond after East's jack signal. South won with dummy's ace and led the jack of hearts.

South had played rapidly, but East had been thinking right along with South. What was South trying to do? He surely could have pulled trumps before plunking down the jack of hearts, and if he had wanted to set the heart suit up he would have done so by leading a low one, not the jack. So East simply discarded a diamond.

Now South went into a huddle and finally came to the conclusion that East's failure to ruff meant that he held the guarded queen of trumps. South led dummy's nine of spades; took a finesse and lost his slam.

Tour in Style

LONDON (CP) — Despite higher unemployment and soaring inflation, some people are still touring the world in grand style. A spokesman for Cunard Line Ltd. said all 1,400 places were booked on its liner Queen Elizabeth 2 for a 92-day cruise around the world. The less expensive berths were $3,290 and the ship's two penthouses went for $92,600 each.

OPEN TO NON-WHITES

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — The South African Institute of Personnel Management has decided to open its membership to Africans and other non-whites in 1975. The decision was taken after a vote by the institute's 1,700 members.

Stretching Beaver

Ralph Bice, 75, a veteran Ontario trapper, shows students how to stretch a beaver pelt during three-week course sponsored by the College of New Caledonia in Prince George, B.C. State Will Sink Ships To Make Fish Homes

BILOXI, Miss. (Reuter) — Mississippi is going to sink ships to raise fish.

The idea is that certain types of fish are known to be attracted to artificial underwater banks, particularly for breeding.

So the state's marine conservation commission (MCC) has decided that the logical thing to do with five of its mothballed Second World War Liberty ships is to sink them just offshore in the Gulf of Mexico.

The decision means that the MCC will rid itself of the unwanted ships, remnants of the vast freighter fleet hastily assembled during the war for transatlantic convoys, and at the same time aid the valuable commercial and leisure fishing industry in the area.

After being stripped of all equipment, the vessels will be towed to a spot south of here and scuttled.

Fisheries experts said the gulf's fertile Marine Crescent, off Mississippi, is the world's second most productive fishing ground, ranking only behind marine nurseries off India in seafood production.

Tidal water and deep-sea fishing lure thousands of tourists to Mississippi's gulf coast every year and sport fishing is a way of life for local residents.

No licence is required for deep-sea fishing. For trying their luck in other waters, fishermen pay a nominal fee.

An abundance of free fishing piers also jut out into Mississippi Sound and into bayous, rivers and the ports of several coastal cities.

The outlying barrier island chain, close to where the ships will be sunk, forms a natural barrier for the sound, providing salt-water fishing for speckled trout, redfish, mackerel, flounder, lemonfish and others.

It is expected reef fish, such as red snappers and groupers, will thrive in the five old hulls, providing year-round fishing.

FRINGE BENEFITS

Prairie Schooner Travelling Stage

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — A 14-foot-tall copy of a Conestoga wagon or prairie schooner used in pioneer days in Western Canada, will become Stratford Festival's fourth stage, travelling within a 40-mile radius of this southwestern Ontario city.

Built for the festival's forthcoming production of The Comedy of Errors, the wagon will be hauled by tractor to children's hospitals, senior citizen's homes and other institutions for afternoon shows for people who cannot get to the city.

Robin Phillips, new artistic director of the festival, says it is important for actors and actresses working here to get away from the main theatres and have more direct community contact.

B.C. Trappers Go to School

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Fifteen British Columbia trappers have gone back to school to study their trade and to improve both their earnings and the lot of their prey.

Most of the trappers are used to the controversial leghold trap—condemned by anti-trapping groups as unnecessarily cruel to animals. They studied the Conibear trap, already in wide use, and the new Challenger trap, designed by Bill Gabrey of Vavenby, B.C., which is unproven.

The three-week course was sponsored by the College of New Caledonia. Seven of the trappers already hold registered B.C. traplines.

The students divided their time between the classroom, where they studied skinning and stretching of furs, and field experience on two traplines near Prince George where 105 Challenger traps were tested.

The fur preparation part of the course was taught by Ralph Bice, 75, an Ontario trapper, and was the main attraction for most of the students.

Mr. Bice has given a similar course for six years in Ontario and trapping officials estimate it led to a 30-per-cent increase in the value of furs there. It is the first time for such a course here, but the students said it was long overdue.

A veteran trapper said he is ashamed of furs he prepared before he took the course and learned proper methods.

The course and others which follow will be revolutionary for the B.C. trapping industry, said Joe Carty, president of the B.C. Registered Trappers Association and a student in the course.

Mr. Carty said "experience is not enough" for most trappers who could improve the value of their catches by better skinning and stretching methods.

Almost 1 million worth of furs passed through the association's receiving depot in Prince George last season, but the return could have been 30 per cent more, he said.

The trapper students were shown how to skin, stretch and clean all major fur-bearing species of northern B.C., including otter, beaver, muskrat, marten, mink, fisher, lynx, wolf, coyote, fox, bear, weasel and squirrel. Mr. Bice hoped to demonstrate on a wolverine also, but could not obtain one.

Fur deteriorates quickly if not adequately cleaned, and auctions have "bins and bins" of fur made practically valueless for this reason, Mr. Carty said.

They came from all parts of northern B.C., including one from remote Fort Ware, 400 miles north of here. They range from experienced trappers like Mr. Carty and Delbert Richards, to Clyde Rool, 17, of Vanderhoof, youngest trapper in the course, and Robert Belisle of Prince George, an insurance salesman who just bought a trapline and plans to spend his winters near Mica Creek, B.C., far from the pressures of city life.

Three of the students were Indian trappers.

The first course, backed by the B.C. fish and wildlife branch, Canada Manpower and the trappers' association, ended in December, but others are planned with Mr. Carty and Mr. Richards instructing. There already is a waiting list.

Newfoundland Interests U.S. Companies

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Several United States firms are reported to be interested in the industrial potential of Newfoundland, says a spokesman for industrial development in the province.

Officials of two U.S. firms will visit the province early in the year, the spokesman said, and at least two dozen others have expressed interest in development opportunities.

He said one of the firms sending officials to the province in January is in the aluminum industry—an idea that has been kicked around by Newfoundland governments for years.

Colleges Plan Cram Course In Math

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa's two major universities are considering new basic mathematics courses because of a decline in the mathematical abilities of first-year students.

"It's a decline in the ability to handle simple things—reduction of fractions to their lowest common denominator, multiplication of fractions, simple algebra and square-root problems," says Remi Vaillancourt, head of the University of Ottawa math department.

"The saddest part is that they can grasp the principles of advanced algebra or calculus, but can't apply them because they lack these basic skills."

Donald Dawson, chairman of the Carleton University mathematics department, said both universities are finding "a very uneven distribution of mathematical skills" among first-year students.

"Some students have excellent training, while others are very badly prepared, although they are bright enough."

Both said part of the decline may result from the elimination of province-wide departmental examinations.

Mr. Vaillancourt said the elimination of these examinations has removed a standard on which to base high-school marks. Some aspects of courses taught at the high-school level were useless.

Inflation and Recession Talk Greets MPs Returning to Work

OTTAWA (CP) — Continuing high inflation and talk of recession greet MPs today as they return to the Commons after a one-month Christmas vacation.

While the MPs were away, some of their fears about deteriorating economic conditions were confirmed by Statistics Canada.

An annual 10.9-per-cent increase in the consumer price index was reported, plus a December unemployment rate of 6.1 per cent. The inflation rate was the highest in 26 years and the largest increase in a year not affected by war.

Prime Minister Trudeau said last week he does not consider Canada to be in a recession, but opposition members are sure to seize on the economic statistics and an acknowledged recession in the United States to attack the government.

In addition to economic arguments, MPs also face contentious energy matters and a Commons order paper piled high with bills at various legislative stages.

Despite sustained activity between the Sept. 30 throne speech and the Dec. 20 adjournment, only 20 bills have been passed. Many pressing items are still before the House and several have not yet been introduced.

Among them are bills to prevent excess corporate profits and deal with monopolies and one to establish a national petroleum corporation.

The monopolies bill would form the second half of Liberal government competition policy. The first part, covering unfair marketing practices, was in committee when the Commons adjourned.

An anti-profiteering bill was introduced just before the then-minority Liberals fell in the last Parliament, with the NDP saying it did not go far enough and to Conservatives calling it impossible to administer.

Mr. Trudeau has said the new version will be altered, but no specific changes have been given.

The petroleum corporation, first mentioned as government policy in December, 1973, would be aimed mainly at exploration, research and development. The principle has been generally endorsed by the NDP, but Alberta Conservatives have called on the government to give private industry a better break in developing oil and natural gas resources.

Another key item still outstanding is the petroleum administration bill authorizing the oil export tax and the imported oil subsidy to eastern Canadians.

Labor Chiefs Meet With Cabinet Today

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor chiefs and federal cabinet ministers will meet today for cautious talks on the state of the economy.

In contrast to the wide-open public meeting the Canadian Labor Congress holds annually with the cabinet, today's session will be closed.

Labor Minister John Munro, who has called publicly for a set of tri-partite meetings between labor, management and government, declined to comment Tuesday on the planned session.

And Joe Morris, president of the 1.9 million-member Canadian Labor Congress and the leader of the labor delegation, would say only that the talks will centre on "inflation and other issues." He described the meetings as "exploratory."

The meeting is the first of a series the government hopes to hold with labor, business, professionals and perhaps other interested parties.

No agenda has been set for the meeting and no immediate results are expected.

But it is understood that one major topic to come up will be how the national income is shared and how it should be split up in future. Participants are likely to discuss what should be a proper share for labor, business and other interests.

The cautious approach is being taken because of the disastrous experience government and business leaders had in 1971 when the voluntary incomes restraint program flopped after labor refused to back it, a government spokesman said Tuesday.

Mr. Morris who firmly rejected wage and price controls in the 1974 federal election said Tuesday he is going to the meeting with an open mind.

He will be accompanied by the three other full-time officers of the congress and leaders of some of the country's largest unions. He said he expects some sparring between the sides, although the congress officials are prepared to talk.

He expects the cabinet ministers will ask that the talks remain confidential.

The government spokesman said Mr. Turner might be the key minister in the meetings, which will continue with various interest groups into February and March.

Roman's Election Costs Tops

OTTAWA (CP) — If Uranium king Stephen Roman runs again for the House of Commons in the Toronto riding of North York, he will have to trim his campaign budget by $73,512.

Mr. Roman, the millionaire president of Denison Mines Ltd., spent $108,759 in the July 8 general election trying to defeat Liberal Barney Danson. Mr. Danson, now urban affairs minister, spent $41,825.

Mr. Roman, a Progressive Conservative, was the highest spending candidate of those reporting to the chief electoral officer.

But under the new Election Expenses Act, which came into effect last August, a candidate is limited to spending $1 for each of the first 15,000 electors in his riding, 50 cents for each of the next 10,000 and 25 cents for each one in excess of 25,000.

Under the act, election expenses now include the value of donated goods and services with the exception of volunteer labor.

But the law also provides reimbursement of some election expenses to all candidates who obtain at least 15 per cent of the vote. In a constituency with 80,000 electors, this means payment of not more than $7,500, plus the fee for the candidate's auditor.

The law also limits the amount registered parties can spend to 30 cents per elector in the ridings in which it has nominated candidates.

Using figures from the July election, when there were 13,360,479 eligible voters, the Liberals and Conservatives with candidates in all 264 ridings each could have spent a maximum of about $4 million under the new law.

As a result, the major political parties may develop surplusses in the next election, said Prof. Khayyam Paltiel of Carleton University, an expert "There's no ceiling on the amount you can raise."

Figures made available to Prof. Paltiel for a forthcoming study show the Liberal national office raised the most money for the July campaign—about $6.2 million.

Cost of Feed Grains Seen As Hazard in Food Supply

OTTAWA (CP) — Feed grains, a commodity most Canadians consume by the hundreds of pounds every year although they may not be aware of it, are emerging as the biggest stumbling block to lower food prices and decent incomes for farmers.

World stocks of the grains—including corn, barley, rye, oats and oilseed crops—declined substantially in 1974 and are expected to decline again in 1975, pushing up demand and prices.

The two-day 1975 agriculture outlook conference, which ended Tuesday, heard spokesmen for many segments of the farming industry warn that producers' costs, because of the feed grain shortage, will climb accordingly.

Feed grains are used to fatten cattle, hogs and poultry as well as keep egg-laying chickens busy and enrich the diet of dairy cows—a cost reflected not only in milk, but also in milk products such as butter and cheese.

But Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, closing the conference, said farmers could overcome the threat by careful management.

"You in the farming industry have done the impossible before and I'm sure you can again," he told delegates from the federal and provincial governments as well as groups from the United States, Britain and France.

Mr. Whelan had some advice for "one farmer living out of the pocket of another," such as feed grain producers who can profit from a shortage while other farmers must foot the bills.

"To the agribusiness people here today, I warn you: Don't be greedy. . . . Without a healthy farm industry, you can't survive."

Anxious Mother

Mrs. George Fields keeps vigil outside her small farmhouse about 12 miles east of London, Ont, Tuesday night. A gunman, identified as David Wayne Cline was holding Mrs. Field's four children at gunpoint. The children were later released and Cline was captured by police early Thursday morning.

All Hostages Safe

Tear Gas Quickly Subdues Kidnapper

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Police armed with rifles and using tear gas flushed Donald Wayne Cline out of a townhouse early today, ending a drama that started Tuesday.

Cline, 22, who escaped from prison last October, surrendered quietly at 4:53 a.m. after police fired tear gas into the house in which he was hiding. He earlier had released unharmed a 12-year-old boy he had held hostage for 33 hours.

"It went smooth as silk," Police Chief Walter Johnson said moments after the capture. "He came out right away as soon as he knew we meant business."

Th house, on Boullee Street in the city's north end, was surrounded by police at about 4 a.m. Police talked with Cline on the telephone and said that during the conversation he held a gun to the throat of a woman.

She later was identified as Gail Guest, a friend who had joined Cline in the farmhouse at Thamesford, Ont., about 15 miles east of London, Tuesday while he was holding four children for ransom.

Both Cline and Miss Guest were taken to police headquarters.

Chief Johnson said Cline threw out his weapons and emerged from the townhouse with his hands up after police fired in tear gas.

Neighbors had been told by police to take refuge in their basements.

There was no immediate indication of how police discovered where Cline was hiding.

His hiding place was apparently discovered about 2½ hours after Cline freed Robert Field, 12.

The boy, the last of four children held hostage, walked into provincial police headquarters accompanied by a man identified only as Red.

James Erskine, provincial police deputy commissioner, said Cline and Miss Guest were dropped off in the city before Robert and Red showed up at headquarters.

The gunman traded three of the children for $10,000 and an unmarked police car Wednesday afternoon.

He fled the farmhouse with Bobby, Miss Guest and Red, identified by police only as a man with a criminal record, who volunteered to drive the getaway car, a brown 1973 Dodge equipped with a police radio.

Police tracked the car on a zigzag course from Thamesford, 15 miles east of London, to the Rosedale section in central Toronto where the gunman fired at a police surveillance car.

The shooting caused no damage but police stopped following the getaway car after Cline radioed to the police dispatcher: "Get this bastard off my tail or I'll shoot the kid."

At midnight, provincial police saw the car heading west on Highway 401.

Then Bobby and Red turned up in London with the getaway car but without Cline and Miss Guest.

The drama began Tuesday afternoon when four men burst into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Field.

When police arrived—they were conducting a house-to-house search for four men who robbed a grocery store in the small village—three of the men escaped.

Cline remained in the house and took Donna Marie Field, 31, and four of the five Field children captive. The fifth child, Gregory, 8, was in hospital for a minor operation.

The gunman released Mrs. Field but held the children hostage while he bargained for his escape with police who surrounded the farmhouse.

Early Wednesday morning, Deputy Commissioner Erskine arrived at the scene from Toronto with the $10,000 ransom demanded by Cline.

After six hours on the telephone, he negotiated the release of three of the children.

He said that Cline had assured him that once he was out of the area and convinced he was not being followed, Bobby would be set free.

Wen Mr. Field drove up to the house in an old black convertible, the man called Red followed in the getaway car containing a suitcase with $10,000 in small bills.

The three younger children emerged and climbed into their father's car.

Mr. Field drove his children to a nearby service station converted into a police command post where their mother waited.

As soon as the three children left the farmhouse, Cline prepared to get away by insisting that roads be cleared of police and press cars.

When the departing vehicles passed the farmhouse, three shots were fired at them.

Minimum Wage Put at $2.40

Labor Minister John MacBeth announced the 15-cent-an-hour increase, effective May 1, in the minimum wage.

The minimum wage goes to $2.40 an hour from $2.25, which went into effect Oct. 1, last year.

Ontario ranks second only to British Columbia, which has a minimum wage of $2.50 an hour.

Mr. MacBeth said the minimum wage for construction work will be increased at the same time to $2.65 from $2.50.

The student rate increases to $2 from $1.90.

98 Belleville Engineers 'Sick' over Unpaid Bonus

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Rporter

Traffic on the Canadian National Railways mainline between Montreal and Toronto, along with that on a branch line to Ottawa, ground to a halt this morning — the result of what one Toronto CN spokesman terms an "illegal strike" of train engineers in several locations across Canada. The strike is said to be on a rotating 24-hour basis. It is not known what areas will be effected next.

By 11 p.m. Wednesday, 70 of the night shift's 80 engineers in Belleville had called in sick, the night crew clerk here said.

CN public relations spokesman John Noel said today, 98 of 136 night and day shift engineers in Belleville had called in sick.

"There is no justification for this mass withdrawal," he said.

A spokesman for CNR said 127 of 264 engineers in Toronto reported they will not be at work today because of sickness.

Employees say the action stems from a dispute over a 10 per cent cost of living bonus promised by the company which they feel should have been effective Jan. 1.

"This seems to be the root of the problem but discussions are still being held between the company and the union," said Mr. Noel.

Similar actions have taken place simultaneously in New Brunwick, Manitoba and Saskatchewan but "are not disrupting regular service," except in this area, said Mr. Noel.

Union officials in Belleville refuse to discuss the engineers' withdrawal, saying they know nothing about it.

Jack Histed, chairman of grievances in the Belleville local, preferred not to discuss the situation Wednesday night and said there "will be more answers following a union meeting in Toronto today".

This union meeting will serve as a prelude to a union-company meeting arranged for Jan. 28.

There is no word when the engineers will return to their jobs, "though I hope they come back immediately" said Mr. Noel.

The Great Lakes region — hardest hit by the walkout — "handles the biggest volume of business" said Mr. Noel.

He said today's Turbo and Rapido trains between Toronto and Montreal have been cancelled. The only morning passenger train to operate was the Lakeshore, which left Toronto for Montreal at 9:25 a.m.

Robert Burns, Rideau area manager based in Belleville, said today a noon passenger train is expected from Montreal, "staffed by supervisors".

Lottery Will Continue

Olympic Financing 'Assured' - - Bourassa

QUEBEC (CP) — The financing of the 1976 Summer Olympics became virtually assured late Wednesday night when Premier Robert Bourassa said it is "almost certain" there will be an extension of the Olympic lottery to cover a $200-300 million deficit.

The premier told a committee of the national assembly the extension, for an unspecified number of years, would apply only in Quebec province.

Lottery revenues from outside the province cannot be used for construction costs. The revenues are for administrative costs of the Olympic organizing committee (COJO).

COJO said Tuesday lottery revenue is expected to reach $200 million. It originally was estimated at $32 million.

Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau said Wednesday the estimated increase in revenue makes a strict interpretation of the original agreement with other provinces unrealistic.

It would be absurd, the mayor said, if COJO finished with a $200 million surplus in lottery revenue and Montreal ran up a deficit on construction costs.

But Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said he would not tolerate any violation of the promise he made to the other provinces. "It is a question of honor."

Indentured Slave Trade Blamed on Travel Agency

VICTORIA (CP) — Immigration officials here have broken a smuggling ring that brought East Indians into Canada illegally and then indentured them to travel agents in what one official has described as "a form of slave trade."

Doug Cook, officer-in-charge of the Victoria immigration office, said Tuesday his department monitored arrivals at Victoria International Airport from Dec. 20 to Jan. 20 after learning of the operation.

He said a travel agency in Vancouver operated by an East Indian, whom he declined to name, is believed responsible for setting up the scheme, but no charges have been laid.

The agent charged each of the illegal immigrants a fee of three times the cost of the $1,200 return fare or more, Mr. Cook said.

Officials feel the persons would have been in debt for life unless they were able to save enough money to buy a passage back home.

Trade Can Be Tricky

Jail Gates Will Yawn for Businessmen

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation slowly working through the resumed parliamentary session seems sure to confront some U.S. businessmen with being damned if they do and damned if they don't.

If they don't permit sales from their Canadian subsidiaries to Communist countries such as Cuba, they will run afoul of the pending legislation.

If they do permit such exports, they will be breaking two strong U.S. laws in effect for years and irritants in Canada-U.S. relations.

Either law provides fines and jail terms for transgressors.

But there is unlikely to be any change in Washington's ability to reject sales from U.S. subsidiaries in Canada to Communist states.

This permission includes re-export of U.S.-manufactured items—say a small part in a commodity largely manufactured in Canada.

The Canadian situation is this:

Approval in principle has been given to two bills, on combines and corporations, that include sections designed to ensure that foreign law does not dictate the actions of foreign subsidiaries in Canada.

If exports by those subsidiaries are not in conflict with Canadian law, then U.S. subsidiaries here could do business with Communist countries including enemies of the U.S.

This runs counter to provisions of the U.S. Trading with the Enemy Act and the more specific Export Administration Act. Those acts confront U.S. citizens, resident inside or outside the U.S., with jail terms and fines for permitting exports to certain countries.

The two laws affect individuals—company directors or officers in Canada or the U.S.—and companies.

There have been numerous examples of their impact on Canadian exports ranging from trucks for China to flour, locomotives and office furniture for Cuba.

Officials say no estimate can be made of the number of Canadian export sales lost by fear of breaking the U.S. law rather than U.S. officials invoking the two acts.

The U.S. embassy spokesman said this week that Washington is aware of the difficult position Americans will face from the Canadian legislation.

An external affairs official said the courts may be asked to resolve the matter.

He Can't Find the Handle

Metro Junior B East All-star netminder Jim Metz of Pickering is having some trouble finding a handle on the puck. The goalie just couldn't seem to get ahold of it on this occasion in the second period of the game at the Memorial Arena. Metz didn't need much time to cover up, but Dave Taylor of Belleville made sure he wouldn't be bothered while he was catching up to the puck. Taylor rode West All-star forward, Doug Crawford, of Bramalea, out of the play cowboy style. The East won the game 9-4. For story, see Page 15.

Stay Away!

A discarded grocery cart, lodged in ice off the east bank of the Moira River near the footbridge, sits as mute warning to anyone with an idea of testing the ice buildup which occurs each winter near the river's mouth. City police advise the loose ice is never safe, and with the strong current, "if you went through there, it'd be goodbye".

Plomer Says Air Command Admission of 1960s Error

MILFORD — Former Royal Canadian Navy Commodore James Plomer, now a Prince Edward County resident, says the federal government's decision to create a separate air command within Canadian defence department represents "a first step in a long road back to get things right again."

Today he termed the new air command "a grudging admission of the original error of unification."

He added, "It's still begging the issue. To call it a mobile command, a maritime command and an air command is a weasly-worded way to get back to army, navy and air force."

Commodore Plomer said service persons should have a voice in what they want.

"They can't recruit people today. There is a very poor selection and they can't retain people. They don't like it and are not attracted by the uniform."

"Members of the armed forces should have a say in the uniforms they wear," says Commodore Plomer.

He predicted that if the recession increases, recruiting will be boosted by it, as this has been the pattern in the past.

The retired naval officer discussed his resignation in 1962 noting that the navy then "was going downhill fast".

"Unification merely helped it on its way," he said.

Double Planning Levy to Continue

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Three Hastings County municipalities will continue paying member ship dues to two planning areas for the present.

The issue — involving Frankford and the townships of Sidney and Thurlow — has been a lingering problem between both county planning areas since their formation four years ago.

It remained unresolved after debate Wednesday by Hastings County Council when a majority voted the planning levies remained unaltered.

The dilemma originated with formation of new local planning groups at provincial government prompting four years ago.

All three local governments are partners of the Quinte Planning Board (QPB) — along with municipal neighbors, Belleville and Trenton.

But, as member municipalities of the county they also are involved with services of the Hastings Planning Area, which represents the rest of the county.

Hence, they are levied membership costs in both groups.

The three actually receive 75-per-cent rebate on their Hastings area payments, county administrator Carl county administrator Carl Bateman noted.

He estimated net costs thus are about: Sidney, $3,000; Thurlow, $1,700; Frankford, $400.

But the extra county charge has been an irritant with the QPB, which has branded it a "double levy" against its partners.

Mayor Robert Patrick of Trenton, QPB, chairman, is writing the provincial government to resolve the issue — along with a second problem: Secession of Brighton, Murray and Brighton townships from the QPB's original western boundaries.

His letter, outlined to county council by Mr. Bateman, brought no reaction on the boundaries dispute.

Bureau's Brief Getting Attention in Ottawa

TRENTON — An evaluation of the Citizens Bureau and its request for funding is currently under way in Ottawa but "nothing officially and not too much unofficially" has been decided yet, says a consumer and corporate affairs ministry spokesman.

In an interview from Ottawa Wednesday, the spokesman said no decisions or conclusions have been made concerning a brief submitted by the Trenton consumer advocacy group.

He said the brief, which he said contains "a high degree of documentation" of the bureau's work, is being actively considered.

"It doesn't leave us cold," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

"We're interested in the sense that we've given it to two people in the department to assess."

William Hockley, bureau spokesman, said in Trenton Wednesday the brief was submitted to the federal ministry because the bureau's work falls under the consumer protection aspect of the ministry's jurisdiction.

He said the brief requests either a grant or a contract with the ministry for $30,000 — enough to pay the salaries of three employees and operate the bureau office for a year.

Until earlier this month, the bureau has operated with voluntary staff and few dollars for office expenses and rent since midsummer, 1974. This month, the United Community Services in Belleville granted the bureau $500 to help offset costs.

The ministry spokesman in Ottawa said the bureau's funding request is definitely being considered:

"It's not sitting in the bottom of someone's "In" basket."

He declined comment on the possibility of dovetailing the bureau's role into that played by Consumer Help Offices now being establised across Canada.

Such offices financed by the federal ministry provide consumer information and assistance at local levels across Canada.

It is a sister program to the ministry's Box 99, a recourse centre and clearing house for consumer information.

In Ontario, three local offices are in operation — in Toronto, Windsor and Thundr Bay. In all, 12 operate now in Canada and eight others are planned by March.

Plans for Centre Under Revision

TRENTON — Construction might begin in March this year on the medical arts centre at King and Elgin streets, a spokesman for the company building the structure said Wednesday.

The centre now is less ambitious than originally anticipated over six months ago. When plans were first announced, it was to be four or five stories.

The spokesman said it now will be limited to three stories with provision for addition of a fourth.

The number of vacant offices in Trenton and economic conditions in general, which have already delayed construction plans, forced the owners to reconsider the size of the structure, he said.

Estimates obtained from two outside sources indicate the cost of the building might range between $500,000 and $600,000. Tenders for erection of the centre will be called shortly.

The major occupant of the building, and only ground-floor tenant, is Shoppers Drug Mart. In the upper two stories, reached by elevator, 12-15 suites will house professional people, mainly doctors.

A number of the professional tenants are also principals in the company building the centre.

Designed by Kingston architects, MacLennan Associates, the building will likely house the bio-chemical laboratory and facilities for X-ray equipment. Total floor space will be 18,000 square feet.

Budget Passed

PICTON — The Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority (PERCA) has approved a 1975 budget of $238,845, with a total of $59,638 to be paid by the authority.

The balance of $179,207 will be met by regular grants totalling $139,498 and supplementary grants of $39,709.

Expenditures included in the 1975 budget are administration, dam maintenance, acquisition and development of conservation areas, water control and conservation services.

Most expensive item is water control, budgeted at $131,000. Under this heading land acquisition and construction is estimated at $91,000.

Administration costs are budgeted at $57,095 for 1975 and acquisition and development of conservation areas is estimated at $42,450.

Of the $59,638 to be raised by the PERCA, a levy of $35,138 is required. A surplus of $5,000 is anticipated from 1974 and a conservancy of $19,500 is listed in budget figures.

PERCA Members Re-elected

PICTON — Chairman of the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority (PERCA) Henry Leavens of Bloomfield was re-elected to office by acclamation Wednesday during the authority's annual meeting.

Mr. Leavens has served as chairman of the PERCA since 1967.

Vice-chairman of the authority, Donald Bond, was nominated for the chairman's seat but withdrew his name owing to other commitments. He was returned to office by acclamation for another term as vice-chairman.

Also re-elected by acclamation were chairman of the finance committee, Jack Stenning, chairman of the land-use advisory board, Donald Walker, chairman of the wild life advisory board, Clinton Green, water control advisory board chairman Roger Redner, and chairman of the information and education board, Ross Benway.

This hereford calf, born Saturday on the farm of Austin Sprague RR1,, Demorestville, would have been worth $65 at any Quinte area sales barn a year ago Today, similar 80-lb. calves are bringing the beef farmer about $4.00. A case in point is Bloomfield farmer, Harm Veenstra, who sold a 70-lb. calf at the Picton Livestock Sales for $5.00. Expenses for the calf, including medicine and sales barn commission fee, total $4.98.

Teach-in

Key note speaker for professional development day at Bancroft was Eric Runacres, Hastings County director of education. Mr. Runacres told more than 100 elementary and secondary school teachers that the emphasis on education for the next 20 years will be on learning, not on teaching. The Wednesday seminar was held to discuss teacher self-evaluation.

Authority Reports Busy Year Preparing Sites

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — In 1974 the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority (PERCA) progressed extensively in the field of conservation says chairman Henry Leavens.

In a report to the annual meeting of the full authority, Mr. Leavens said the addition of a project co-ordinator and conservation authority superintendent to the permanent staff were definite factors responsible for the increasd activity of th authority.

"I feel the authority now is in a position to make positive contributions to the preserving and conserving of the natural resources which lie within its jurisdictional boundaries," said Mr. Leavens.

He outlined PERCA activities in 1974 included tree planting at Macaulay Mountain Conservation Area, preparation of the educational an drecreational shelter for official openings and design and erection of a workshop.

At Bloomfield, the mill pond was drained and a start made in dredging and in a tree clean-up program.

In Consecon, general supervision was provided on construction of the mill dam and a millstone erected as a permanent marker.

Mr. Leavens referred to land acquisitions; noting 60 acres fronting on Prince Edward Bay at Little Bluff now is being obtained by the authority.

Also, about 340 acres of department of national defence property (the former Camp Picton) will be acquired as an addition to the Macaulay Mountain Conservation Area. The Authority has approved expenditure of $9,000. for this land.

Project SWEEP employed 23 summer students in 1974 to carry out several projects in all of the conservation areas.

Among these projects were a sandbag dam at Demorestville, general clean-p of Massassaga Point Conservation Area, construction and distribution of wood duck nesting boxes at Beaver Meadow and Little Bluff and preparation and erection of signs for conservation areas and nature trails.

David Murray, Regional Conservation Authority program supervisor told the meeting the 1974 review indicated the authority had been "very active and involved in a great number of things.

"This is a credit to the community as a whole," he observed.

Child Course Offered

STIRLING — A course designed to make a better relationship between parents and their children is going to start here next Monday. Friday is the last day for registration by telephone at the Stirling Senior Public School.

It is called Parent Effectiveness Training and the instructors are Mary and Don Raddon of Plainfield. Mrs. Raddon and her husband took an instructors course on the matter, and this is the third course they are offering.

The sessions are three hours a night, every Monday night for eight weeks. The cost has been lowered to $40 a person or $85 a couple.

STIRLING — A former reeve of Stirling, Harold John Wells died at 2 a.m. Wednesday in Belleville General Hospital. He was 64. Mr. Wells, of 166 Belleville Rd., Stirling, had been ill for the last two years. He was taken to hospital Tuesday.

Mr. Wells was a councillor for four years prior to becoming reeve in 1948. He held the position for four years and was a big force in getting the community ball park and artificial ice in the arena a few years ago. He had served on the Stirling recreation committee as chairman and was head of the finance committee for the artificial ice. He worked constantly at the arena when it was installed.

Mr. Wells was a charter member of the Stirling Rotary Club when it was formed 25 years ago and past president. He was a member of St. Paul's United Church, and had been a steward, an elder, and a trustee.

The former reeve was also a past master of Stirling Lodge 69, AF and AM, and was a member of Keystone, Chapter 72. Mr. Wells came to Stirling 45 years ago from Marmora Township. He started the business which bears his name here 40 years ago. He was the owner of Wells Ford-Mercury Sales.

Mr. Wells leaves his wife, Martha, son Allan, of Stirling, daughter Sandra (Mrs. Lynn Johnston, Newmarket); five grandchildren, two sisters and four brothers, Mary (Mrs. Bruce Robinson, Madoc), Albert Wells, Trenton, Richie Wells, Marmora, Russell Wells, Marmora, Orval Wells, Lindsay, and Mrs. Stewart Hardy (Helen), of Marmora. He was predeceased by a brother, Irvin.

He is resting at the Hogle Funeral Home, 87 St. James St., Stirling until 10 a.m., Friday, Jan. 24, then at St. Paul's United Church, Church St., Stirling, from Friday noon. Service will be held in the church at 1.30. Interment will be Stirling Cemetery.

Educator Stresses Learning

BANCROFT — Films, speakers and discussion centred on the topic of teacher self-evaluation here Wednesday as more than 100 elementary and secondary school teachers from the North Hastings Associated School Group and Bayside Secondary School in Belleville heard county education director Eric Runacres say — that the spotlight in education will be on learning rather than teaching.

"During the next 20 years of education, or perhaps forever," Mr. Runacres said, "the theme will be on Let's Look at Learning, the spotlight is not on the teacher now."

Mr. Runacres said the focus of education also will be on what happens to a child in a learning situation. "This takes a new type of teacher, whose skills rest with the ability to set the learning environment."

Also assisting the teachers in establishing the criteria for teacher evaluation were Hastings superintendent of education Frank Tate, North Hastings trustee Earl Hawley, Bancroft parent John Weese and North Hastings student Carol Stevenson.

1975 Levies Approved

PICTON — The Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority has approved 1975 municipal levies totalling $36,894, an increase of approximately $3,000 from the 1974 levy of $33,801.

Of Prince Edward County's 10 municipalities Ameliasburg will pay the largest share of the levy — a total of $8,028 or 21.76 per cent.

Hallowell is next with a share of 18.56 per cent or $6,847, then Picton with a share of $6,297 or 17.07 per cent.

Sophiasburg Township will pay $5,445 or 14.76 per cent of the total levy.

Not all R.R.S.P.'s are alike.

Consider the Toronto Dominion Retirement Savings Deposit.

The TD RSD is a bank deposit. That's the big difference. Its high-yielding interest rate is adjusted twice yearly to match that of the TD five-year Certificate of Deposit. And you never have to worry about fluctuations in the market value of stocks and bonds as you would with some other R.R.S.P.'s. Finally, there's no interest penalty for deregistering your TD RSD at any time.

As with all R.R.S.P.'s, eligible annual contributions are deductible from your current taxable income — up to $4,000 in some cases. So depending on your circumstances, the 1974 income tax you defer can be substantial.

The money you put into a TD RSD works hard to earn more money for you. For example, if you start your TD RSD at age 35 and contribute $1,500 at the beginning of each year, you'll have put in $45,000 by the time you're 65. Assuming a conservative rate of return over the 30 years of 7½% per annum, compounded semi-annually, your savings will have grown to $171,277!

Your TD Manager is the person to ask about a TD Retirement Savings Deposit. You'll get all the facts, and you'll be pleased to know that you can start for as little as $250 with contributions of $100 or more whenever you wish. But hurry, March 1st, 1975 is the deadline for the 1974 tax year.

TDRSD ITS TIME IS NOW.

Combating Recession

With recession hitting the auto industry, dealers are coming up with ingenious schemes to maintain public interest and keep business going.

Locally one dealer has a weekly display of vehicles for sale indoors, with coffee to soothe the palate on a cold winter's day.

And of course there have been those price rebates announced by some manufacturers. Americans too are exhibiting characteristic dash, in their sales effort, presenting a variety of attractions for customers — in addition of course to the cars — from dancing girls to elephants.

Whether such exploitation of women will find favor with the feminists during this International Women's Year is questionable, but there is no doubt it will help draw customers to the display rooms.

It will help the economy too during this time of recession. And speaking of recession, it may be noted in passing that a large U.S. department store chain of about 1,200 stores around the country, has announced it is closing about 200 of them over the next two years.

Golfing Greatness

A department store catalogue available locally, as in other centres, contains pictures of a handsome young man who is modelling golf clothes.

The clothes are his own line, bearing his name which is Johnny Miller. If Miller were not a golfer, he could still make a lot of money as a male model. But as of now, and his incredible record supports it, Miller is possibly the best golfer the world has ever seen.

Not even Palmer in his day, or Nicklaus, ever put together such consistently low scores, or performed so seemingly effortlessly — as Miller has just done amid the sage brush and the cactus and the sun of Arizona. And all repeats of successive victories last year.

An all-American boy . . . and a classic golfer, with a modest manner as well. That's Johnny Miller.

A couple of years ago, up among the leaders in the Crosby tournament, Miller shanked an iron shot — hit the ball off the neck of the club to the right — and lost ground. Duffers everywhere might have felt sympathy for him then. Of course he was no duffer then, merely human; today he is golfing greatness.

Women of Africa

Women are playing a vital role in emergent Africa, according to an article by Robin Wright in The Christian Science Monitor.

They are to be found in a full range of occupations from those of ambassador and marine biologist to cab drivers and military tasks.

While this may be great for the ego and the liberationist tendencies of African womanhood, it has had some less desirable consequences too. In Nigeria for instance officials estimate that 70 to 80 per cent of all smuggling is done by women. Prostitution is a growing problem in some of the larger cities.

The divorce rate has skyrocketed. As a Cameroons diplomat at the United Nations explained to Wright, many men cannot accept working wives as yet. They present a threat.

There is a familiar ring to this, at least where male reactions to the feminist movement is concerned. Strange in these circumstances that black men and white men do not see more eye to eye in other matters!

Then there is the role of women in the achievement of independence in Africa. Wright quotes Louise Crane, the Zaire-born author of Ms. Africa. "The feminist movement," she writes, "has much to learn from the women of Africa. They have been a vital part of the independence movement in all the 38 (now 43) nations that have become free of colonial rule since 1950."

A pertinent question at this point: do these same women, given their hitherto dependent status — like that of their white sisters — subscribe to the auhoritarianism of much of independent black Africa? Dictatorship is the norm in many states: religion has been banned in Zaire for example, and Uganda has banned foreign publications.

Will the women of Africa become militant and powerful enough to question this trend away from democracy and toward autocratic rule? It may be that this — their most vital role yet — is for the years ahead.

Work-Sharing Norwegian-Style

Liberating Both Men And Women

Mark Goldsmith
in
The Christian Science Monitor

OSLO- The way to free women from their household drudgery is to liberate men from their "oppressive" 40-hour workweek. At least that is the view of a group of radical social reformers who are experimenting with a new "work-sharing" family plan in which parents with small children work part-time.

The unique scheme, which has been tested on six families here over the past three years, was formulated by Dr. Ola Rokkones, director of Norway's progressive Family Council, as a model for the family of the future.

Dr. Rokkones, a firm believer in equality between the sexes, explains his motivation for the plan: "We have to do something about the family now, before we completely lose contact with one another and wear ourselves out trying to make ends meet.

"In today's society when a woman takes a part or full-time job, she hasn't got a chance of competing with a man. When she gets home in the evening her work there is just beginning."

So in the spring of 1971, six couples - all with small children and from varying economic backgrounds - were recruited to take part in the experiment. Family experts from Oslo University then brought employers and parents together to work out a job schedule whereby the couples worked no less than 16 hours a week and no more than 28.

During a typical week, the wife would go off to work in the morning while the father stayed home to mind house and children. Around lunch time she was back home and it was father's turn to go out and make the living. When both parents chose to work during the same hours, the children - like most other Scandinavian children - were dropped off at the local state-subsidized day-home, an operation similar to a nursery school which has facilities for children from six months on up.

The Bulkos, one of the families taking part in the experiment, says the extra time they now have to spend with their five-year-old son Olva, is more than worth the loss in family income, and they have made arrangements to continue working part-time even now that their part in the experiment is over.

Johnnes Bulko, a technician and middle-income wage-earner explained: "Before I started working part-time, I used to only see my son in pajamas on his way to bed. I was always too tired to spend any time with him."

Johannes' wife Ann, a book-cover designer who used to work at home, says she disliked being cooped up in the house all day. "Now I have the best of both worlds working part-time at home and the rest of the time on the outside."

Professor Groenseth, a family expert at Oslo University's Institute of Sociology, and chief co-ordinator for the experiment, admits the work-sharing plan is only a dream at present, the kind of experiment a selected few countries like Norway can afford to toy with. But he is convinced that in time it will catch on.

Strongly opposed to the traditional family setup in which the husband is the key provider, Professor Groenseth points out the serious short-comings of the so-called "dual work" arrangement advocated by many women's liberationists and quickly spreading among many modern families in which both husband and wife work full-time.

"In the first instance, the woman is trapped at home with the job of taking care of the children and the house while the man is out making a living. And in the second case, with both parents working full-time, neither one has the time or energy to spend with the children and keep the household running smoothly.

"It makes no sense whatever to bring the mother into the one-sided occupationally absorbed and stressed work role the father is already into," he added..

Professor Groenseth happily reports that interest among Norwegians for the part-time work scheme is growing. Today Norway's ruling Social Democrats and all other major political parties have included, in their party platforms, proposals for reduced working time for parents with small children. And in neighboring Sweden where 55 percent of mothers with children under the age of 17 hold down full or part-time jobs, the plan has attracted particular attention.

An Air Canada Link For Sudbury

Sudbury Star

The Canadian Transport Commission's decision to disallow the Nordair application to serve Sudbury with an east-west air link was received with disappointment by some local political representatives. It was, nonetheless, a sound decision.

Air Canada now is firmly committed to starting the new service in April. It will offer Sudbury passengers direct access to Ottawa, Montreal, Thunder Bay and Winnipeg, thus connecting them with the rest of the airline's east-west network. Nordair offered the western leg only as far as Thunder Bay.

It is the national airline's undeniable responsibility to provide this service to Sudbury. That is a point we have made continuously these dozen years past. There have been many attempts by the Sudbury and District Chamber of Commerce and local municipalities during that time to persuade Air Canada that the service is necessary. Until last year, the reply was always that there would be insufficient usage to make the link economically viable.

Now Air Canada, it seems, has had a change of heart. At least it is prepared at last to add Sudbury to its east-west schedule. Probably all that means, in effect, is that aircraft now overflying this city will put down here and remove the inconvenience for passengers who previously have had to fly to Toronto before beginning their journeys east and west.

Arab Investment Possible

Housing: There's Still A Shortage But Financing Will Be Easier

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

If this is your year to buy a house, financing will be cheaper and easier.

But finding the house you want could be harder than ever.

First, the good news: The chartered banks have recently reduced their residential mortgage lending rate by half a percentage point, to 11 per cent on loans guaranteed under the National Housing Act and to 11.5 per cent on conventional mortgages.

This reduction reflects the decline in the general level of interest rates throughout the economy—and also the strong cash position the banks find themselves in now that the Bank of Canada has authorized them to reduce their cash-in-the-till reserves.

Then, too, the investment managers at the big pension funds and insurance companies are coming back into the mortgage market with money to lend.

In the case of the pension funds, the reason seems to be that they have no alternative—the stock and bond markets are dead.

As for the insurers, many of them had made their full quota of 1974 mortgage loans as early as last May, and had to withdraw. Now they can re-enter the mortgage-lending business with a new 1975 budget.

In addition, 1975 will be the first year for home-buyers to receive up to $600 in annual subsidies under the federal government's Assisted Home Ownership Plan.

Finally, there could be a big new supply of foreign capital available for housing. Urban Affairs Minister Barnett Danson has confirmed that exploratory talks have been held with a view to heavy inestment in Canadian housing by oil-rich Arab states.

Now the bad news: Accommodation is in short supply, especially in major metropolitan areas.

Housing completions at last report were running at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of about 245,000 units, down from a 1973 peak of 280,000—and the trend appears to be continuing downward.

For the last three years housing completions have fallen an average of three per cent short of the level needed to meet demand, as estimated by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

The supply picture is even gloomier when you look at the figures on housing starts—running currently at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 174,000 units, down 43 per cent since one year ago.

The shortage of housing is made all the worse by the low vacancy rates in rented accommodation. Couples are forced to consider buying a house when they might really prefer an apartment—if they could find one.

In major metropolitan areas, apartment vacancies have dropped below one per cent, reflecting the cutback in construction activity during the past two years.

Both federal and provincial governments have recently moved to stimulate a revival of construction of apartments and houses.

But such moves depend for their success upon the co-operation of municipal governments—which, in many parts of Canada, appear to have an unspoken commitment to restricting growth, for the benefit of existing property owners.

As social pressure for adequate accommodation continues to build up, so will the tensions between housing's "haves" and "have-nots" at the municipal level.

Khyber Pass Skirmishes

Tribesmen Are Seeking Autonomy

By JOHN HAY
The Canadian Press

High in the mountains near the snow-filled Khyber Pass a war of propaganda and scattered violence continues between Afghanistan and Pakistan.

In the middle of the dispute is a movement among the Pathan and Baluchi tribesmen of northwest Pakistan for autonomy. The movement is being resisted by the Pakistani government and helped—at least vocally—by the next-door government of Afghanistan.

News from the remote corner of the Himalayas is scarce, but a couple of weeks ago a tattered band of Baluchi men, women and children struggled through the snow into Afghanistan, reports from the capital of Kabul say they were fleeing from the Pakistani army fighting the rebels.

Shortly before, a bomb had wrecked the offices of Pakistan Airlines in Peshawar, capital of Pakistan's North-West Frontier province.

Pakistan quickly accused Afghanistan of prompting this latest in a series of bombings. It also accused Kabul of helping Pathan tribesmen to over-run two Pakistani military outposts near the Khyber.

From Kabul, the response has been loud but non-violent, relying on a radio propaganda campaign to support self-determination in the area it calls Pushtoonistan.

On its side, the Pakistani government in Islamabad is keeping up its own propaganda attack on what it terms Afghanistan's meddling in internal Pakistani affairs.

Relations with Afghanistan have been off-again-on-again since Pakistan's independence from Britain in 1947.

The shah of Iran recently tried to reconcile the two Moslem countries, largely to establish stable relations on his own southern border.

Pakistan's prime minister, Zulf Ikar Ali Bhutto, then announced that Afhanistan's president, Mohammed Daud, had rebuffed an invitation to a meeting in Pakistan.

Afghanistan retorted that Bhutto's announcement was just a propaganda stunt.

Primitive, poor and mountainous, Afghanistan seems hardly equipped to mount a serious threat to neighboring Pakistan, which maintains considerable military power.

But Daud commands a kind of Trojan yak, which conceals oil-financed aid from Moslem brothers in Iran and the Arab states.

It remains to be seen whether the shah and the sheiks will let their aid be used in a war against Pakistan. For now, it is unclear whether either country really wants to go past the talk-and-skirmish stage.

Riel Legend Is Staged In Ottawa

Kitchener-aWaterloo Record

Only a few hundred yards from Parliament Hill in Ottawa, in the National Art Centre Theatre, the first full-scale production of the original play John Coulter wrote about Louis Riel is on view.

Since a limited first production in Toronto in 1950, Coulter's material has been expanded for an annual recreation of the courtroom drama of Riel's trial in Regina, where the real trial took place. The story has also been used, with a different libretto, for an opera to music by Canadian composer Harry Somers.

Thus the Ottawa production is not especially significant to the rehabilitation of Riel as much more than a half-mad rebel. But it has special interest nevertheless, for it brings Riel and his cause to life again 101 years after he managed to take the oath of office as duly-elected MP for Provencher.

He didn't stay in Ottawa long then, for in the confused situation of that day, with the former rebel recognized as a patriot by Manitoba's lieutenant-governor, he was still technically a fugitive under federal law. Startled officials, realizing who they had just sworn in, alerted the guard and Riel once more fled to the United States.

At this time it is interesting to speculate what might have happened had he stayed to fight his case in Canada, but he had unfortunate experience of federal promises before and chose freedom in exile to the risks of justice in an aroused and anti-Riel federal capital.

It is perhaps a commentary on the attitude of Canadians to one of the most significant events in Canadian history that it was an Irishman, John Coulter, who authored the play which helped to get the Riel case before the general public. It was a case, moreover, which dramatized the forces which continue to bedevil Canadian national life, and not even Mr. Coulter assays a final judgement on Riel the man.

But there is no doubt that his mercurial public career did play an important part in the political history of Canada. The tragedy of his historical rehabilitation i sthat it has yet had no effect on his people, the Metis of the Western plains whose property rights he defended against the encroaching developers from the east.

For the descendants of the Metis of his day are among the most neglected of Canada's minorities. The results of French-Indian marriages or liaisons, they do not benefit from the varied aid programs and payouts to Indians or Eskimos, and all too often constitute that element of the population in Northern Ontario or Western Canada which appears most frequently in the courts.

UK Testing Synthetic Tobacco

Brockville Recorder and Times

Cigarette manufacturing firms are just as determined to stay in business as are most smokers determined to continue smoking. But the manufacturers may be a little more interested in the health of the smoker than the smoker is himself, or herself. At least that is the conclusion one can draw from what is happening in Britain.

It has long been agreed in most medical circles that cigarette smoking is one of the main contributors to lung cancer and respiratory ailments. Campaigns have been waged against smoking and most countries now require the manufacturers to carry a health warning on the packages. This could, eventually, lead to the end of the tobacco business, say after another three or four generations. Looking far ahead the tobacco people have been striving for some manner or means to prevent such an end. Thus it is not surprising to read in the "London Letter," regular monthly publication of the BBC, that Britain's Imperial Tobacco Company, one of the world's leading cigarette and tobacco firms, has received government approval to embark on public trials of a new synthetic tobacco aimed at reducing the risk of cancer from smoking. About six thousand smokers have been chosen for the test of a new cigarette which contains a proportion of synthetic material, perhaps up to half.

Public Reaction To Quebec Story

Letter in
The Montreal Gazette

I found the recent public outcry concerning juvenile detention centres and the subsequent action on the part of the provincial minister concerned, most impressive.

Obviously our so-called "apathetic" public can, by the stimulus of the media, be aroused to demand and effect change quickly.

There are several vital issues confronting us at the moment and playing an important part in our everyday lives; namely, the frightening rise in food prices, the gradual erosion of English language rights in this province and the lack of a consistent government policy on the development of our own oil resources.

We live in climatic conditions when the continuing supply of fuel oil is an absolute necessity.

Since the public at large seems to be so successfully stimulated, by the right combination of radio and newspaper, maybe our media could assume this positive role.

Perhaps they could even help ensure Montreal's architectural landmarks and green spaces.

The challenge is there. Obviously our public cares.

Mrs. Shirley Cohen.

"For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness." 1 Corinthians 3:19

It may come as quite a shock to a "know it all" society to see just how we measure up in the eyes of Him who is the author of all wisdom and might.

Course 'Unique'

Health Course Completed

Five students were feted during a Tuesday dinner graduation in the hospital central service program under the Loyalist College School of Health Science and Community Studies.

June Rickard, allied health chairwoman, said Wednesday the graduates were Louise Lavigne and Sandra Mackintosh, both of Frankford, Shirley Martin of Belleville, Phyllis Strickland of Consecon and Margaret Walt of Trenton.

They were part of a course which is believed to be "the first program of its kind in a community college in Canada," noted Mrs. Rickard.

She explained the program "trains people to operate in a central service department in any hospital." That is the department which processes, packages and sterilizes all equipment for a hospital, she said.

The 15-week program began Oct. 1 last year. "We feel it's quite unique," commented Mrs. Rickard. "They (graduates) are well equipped to work in any area."

Report Polluters Suggests Purcell

Preferable procedure for prosecuting a polluter: Call you local environment ministry office.

That's the advice of city manager Wilbur Purcell after consulting with legal and ministry officials.

His inquiries followed ponderings two weeks ago by Ald. Jack Ireland who asked what a citizen does when he catches a polluter in the act.

Such a citizen may contact the ministry, said Mr. Purcell.

But, any action taken must be based on evidence collected by ministry officials — not by the complainant.

The alternatives to official action are private prosecution — which means either engaging a lawyer or going before a justice of peace, who will decide if here's sufficient evidence to issue a summons.

But, said Mr. Purcell, cases concerning the public interest would best be handled through the ministry.

Fee Increase May End Youth Trouble at Arena

The City recreation department has moved to solve a youth problem troubling its rollerskating program.

It's new — and higher — charges rule out general admissions. These are non-skaters who paid 25 cents to enter the Ben Bleecker Auditorium and watch the recreation program.

But, such admissions produced problems with "some youth standees" and police had to be called at times said recreation director Clifford Belch this week.

By dropping general admissions, officials hoped to eliminate such problems for concerned skaters. However, "common sense" would be used where needed — for example, an adult accompanying a young skater would be admitted.

Meantime, higher labor costs and equipment rentals have pushed up skating fees, in the new schedule he presented parks and recreation committees this week.

"We're hoping the increases will bring us up to at least a break-even basis," he said.

Recreation vice-chairman Joan Guthrie said she thought the new fee schedule "awfully expensive" but the program couldn't lose money.

The new admission fees will cost adults $1.25 and children 50 cents — a 25 cent increase for both groups. The $1.50 fee for couples has been deleted.

Zoning A Concern

A standard application for parks board ruling on rezoning needed for a North Park St. multiple-housing project produced an official caution from officials this week.

The rezoning involves 68 units in 11 buildings near the greenbelt zone that stretches back from the west bank of the Moira River.

Parks and recreation board members noted that drainage installation was planned across the green sector to the river.

Ald. Jean Smith warned such a project might not only interfere with the parks landscape but also the West Riverside Park swimming area. The committees passed a suggestion the drainage be rerouted below the swimming area and nearby Lazier's dam.

The Moira River Conservation Authority — owner of the riverside green belt strip developed by the city parks department — will be advised of the caution.

Lunch Honors Poet

The hotel management program at Loyalist College have planned a special Robbie Burns Day lunch in Club 213 today.

Fred Goerke, co-ordinator of hotel/motel and assessment, said tentative arrangements call for a piper to pipe in the haggis "and the waiters, we hope, will wear kilts."

Mr. Goeke said the special Scottish lunch in honor of Scottish poet Robbie Burns, was conceived by chef Ed Gould, who "wants to expose the students to as many dishes as possible." As well as North American dishes, the students prepare Italian, German and Scottish food throughout the year.

Club 213 which is the college's dinning lounge, is run completely by the students, he said. The program is operated in co-operation with the Four Seasons.

Bank Expands

Senior staff members participated in opening of renovated and expanded Toronto-Dominion Bank in Bancroft. From the left they are W. K. Lyon, manager; D. G. Kidd, assistant manager (administration) and L. A. Grose, assistant manager (loans). Mr. Lyon said the renovated and redesigned quarters increase the bank's size by approximately 35 per cent and allow space for six more employees who will be hired over the next two years. Identification was incorrect with a previously published picture.

Sewer Cost High

Cost of installing a sanitary sewer on a part of Maple Drive and Annie Rose St. has caused some householders to withdraw their names for a petition requesting the project.

As a local improvement, the installation would cost nearly the normal rate. Among reasons for the high cost is the fact some property cannot be assessed because of what's known as "flankage exemption," and the price of easements.

Local householders petitioned for the project last April.

City Council this week had letters from three of 15 people informed of the costs. They objected.

Newsmakers

Interest Slow

The parks department received one tender on its annual plant supplies bidding this year — from Glenora Gardens, Picton. The city parks board Tuesday night approved the tender — $2,552 for $15,000 — 20,000 plants.

Rinks Ready

A prolonged mild spell delayed creation of outdoor rinks around the city, parks director Lloyd Syer told the parks and recreation-arena board Tuesday night. Rinks now are being flooded and several already can be used by skaters, as cold weather continues.

CP Shed May be Moved

The entrance to Victoria Park may be improved — but not immediately.

The entry point — off South Front St. — is flanked by the CP Rail right of way — and is overlooked by a railroad section toolhouse.

The city's parks board has had city manager Wilbur Purcell in contact with CP officials over possibilities of moving the sectionhouse — to one-time station building further east.

The results reported by Mr. Purcell this week:

In 1971, an estimate of such relocation was $700. But now the men and equipment needed have been transferred. Present cost of the project is about $2,000. Meantime, all work appropriations for 1975 have been allotted. However, a "firm reply" of intentions may come from the railroad by November.

Republic of Enkeldoorn

The Republic of Enkeldoorn is only about half the size of a flyspeck on the map and has a total population of 100. The jail is in the hotel's bar and the prison bars just wide enough to take a drink. Buck Rogers is president and Colonel Dennis Castell is commandant of the Enkeldoorn Light Horse and Charter Camel Corps. "We have only two classes of citizen," Rogers explained. "Those we accept and those we put in jail". Enkeldoorn is strategically located to catch Rhodesians going south and South Africans going north. (CP Photo)

ENKELDOORN, Rhodesia (CP) — Visitors to this tiny community are likely to be thrown into jail the moment they arrive.

Then again, there are worse jails. This one is next to the hotel bar, close enough for the bartender to hand a drink to a prisoner.

Furthermore, the cell door opens instantaneously if the visitor hands over a 50-cent fee to have his passport stamped with a visa from the self-proclaimed Republic of Enkeldoorn.

"We only have two classes of citizen," said Buck Rogers, a former Royal Air Force type who is president of the republic, "those we accept and those we put in jail."

Henry Cook, urbane host of the hotel, is prime minister. The cabinet, consisting of regulars at the bar, is shuffled more often than in any banana republic.

In its 20 years of existence, the republic has jailed some distinguished guests including Rhodesian President Clifford Dupont, former member of Parliament for the area, and members of the Pearce Commission, which toured Rhodesia a few years ago in an unsuccessful effort to marshal public opinion in favor of a settlement of the former colony's differences with Britain.

Finance Minister Cyril Godfrey, the local bank manager, takes charge of the revenue from the visas.

"We're in an ideal spot here," he said. "We catch Rhodesians going south and South Africans going north.

The republic issues about 500 visas a year, the take goes to charity and to developing local amenities for Enkeldoorn's population of about 100.

"We have a favorable trade balance," Rogers said. "We export the best beef in the world, mainly to the neighboring state of Rhodesia. You might say we are the biggest bullshippers in Africa."

The president said relations between the republic and Rhodesia are somewhat strained.

"There's no particular reason why they should be, but we keep them that way."

Enkeldoorn, he explained, was ahead of its time when it declared its independence.

"The big news then was the federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. We were against it in this town. We said it would not work so we declared ourselves a republic.

"South Africa followed us in declaring a republic and then Rhodesia did the same."

The president's reply was disparaging when he was asked about the republic's feelings toward Canada.

"They can't skate in Moose Jaw," he said. "And they speak bad French everywhere."

His knowledge of Canada's frailties may come from Hazel Astbury, who currently works behind the bar.

Miss Astbury, who spends her life riding horses in various parts of the world, arrived in Vancouver in 1965 and told immigration officers the purpose of her visit was to attend Expo 67 in Montreal. She figured it would take her two years to get there.

Since then, she has ridden across the United States, Ireland and Rhodesia before she fell off a horse in South Africa and suffered a broken back. When she is fully recovered, she plans to complete her South African trip and move on to South America.

The republic's cabinet appointments are strictly based on merit. The minister of transport and communications obtained his post by working his way up from assistant stationmaster and then stationmaster. There is no railway line within 50 miles.

The prison is operated by two groups, the Enkeldoorn Stranger — bashing Society (ESS) and the Sanitation and Dungeon Squad (SDS), which share the same philosophy about law enforcement.

"You just might do something, so it's best that we put you inside where you won't have the opportunity of doing something if you should decide to do something," the guard on duty explained.

Enkeldoorn also enjoys strained relations with the neighboring town of Unvuma, which Rogers plans to annex to the republic. Unvuma's handful of residents have sworn to fight the takeover to the bitter end.

UNEMPLOYMENT HIGH

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Labor Minister Clyde Cameron said unemployment in Australia is at its highest level since the Depression of the 1930s. He said 266,998 Australians were out of work at the end of 1974, or 4.5 per cent of the work forces.

Price Index Climb Fast

OTTAWA (CP) — For the first time since last May, the consumer price index here has gone up at a faster year-to-year rate than in the United States.

The U.S. index in December was 12.2 per cent above December, 1973, U.S. authorities reported Tuesday. Statistics Canada reported earlier that the crease was 12.4 per cent.

However, the annual average in Canada was slightly lower than that in the U.S.

The rise in the index in Canada was generally more rapid late in 1974 with the result that the average for the year was 10.9 per cent. The average for the full year in the U.S. was 11 per cent.

The December increase in the Canadian consumer price index was one per cent and in the U.S. seven-tenths of one per cent.

The May, 1974 index level in Canada was 11 per cent above May, 1973, and in the U.S. the May-to-May rise was 10.7 per cent.

Production Drops During November

OTTAWA (CP) — Output of the economy continued to weaken in November last year—the latest month for which figures are available—because of weakness in both service and goods-producing sectors.

Statistics Canada said Wednesday that the index of real domestic product, a measure of the value of goods and services produced, showed a fifth successive monthly decline.

The index, adjusted for seasonal variation and discounts price increases in measuring real growth, was down four-tenths of one per cent from October.

In spite of recent production declines, Statistics Canada says real domestic product was up 4.2 per cent in the first 11 months of 1974 over a year earlier.

The manufacturing sector, which accounts for one-quarter of the real domestic product index, was off last month by two-tenths of one per cent from the October level.

Weaker consumer demand was reflected in the trade sector, with the sub-index for retail trade down four per cent and wholesale trade 2.5 per cent.

Motor vehicle dealers showed a 6.9-per-cent drop, shoe stores were down 6.5 per cent and hardware stores five per cent.

Average Pay Increase Outstrips Living Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings of more than four million workers rose 13.8 per cent during the 12 months to November last year, outstripping the 12-per-cent increase in consumer prices in that period, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

The average weekly wage in November was $187.94, compared with $185.73 a month earlier. The figures are adjusted to account for seasonal factors.

Knowles Fails To Learn Who Pays for Pool

OTTAWA (CP) — Two MPs tried without success to determine in the Commons Wednesday who is paying for the prime ministerial swimming pool at 24 Sussex Drive.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) called for an investigation to determine the names of private donors financing the estimated $200,000 cost of the 20-foot by 40-foot enclosed pool.

His motion, requiring unanimous consent to come to a vote, was lost in a chorus of "Nos" from Liberal MPs.

Even Little Habits Can Drive Us Silly

There's not a human being without habits.

We are creatures of routine, who sometimes develop little ways and mannerisms that become so much a part of us, we don't even know they exist.

And very often these trivial habits irritate the people around us.

You know how it is when someone does something that grates on your nerves ... the same way the sound of squeaky chalk on the blackboard sent shivers down your spine at school.

Here are some of the provoking habits that irk people. Check the list to see if you recognize yourself – or some of your friends and relatives.

Habits like these:

– Chewing gum and snapping it.

– Opening a phone conversation with "Guess who?" or "I'll bet you don't know who this is!"

– Constant throat-clearing, nose-sniffling or smoke-induced hacking.

– Referring to adult women as "girls".

– Borrowing small change and consistently forgetting to pay it back.

– Talking loudly in an office, restaurant or theatre so that everyone nearby is disturbed.

– Saying "uh-huh, uh-huh" while listening to someone else talking.

– Forgetting to put lids and tops on tubes and bottles.

– Folding down the corners of pages, or breaking the spine of a book by leaving it open, face down.

— Being late for dates and appointments.

– Folding maps improperly and crumpling them into the car glove compartment.

– Telling the same jokes or anecdotes over and over.

– Giggling.

– Biting fingernails and nibbling the eraser ends of pencils.

– Using expressions or phrases that are unnecessary, out-of-date, or simply passing fads .. such as "Would you believe..?" or "The thing being ..'.' or "At this point in time ..." or "Wow! Outasite!"

–Taking more food on a spoon or fork than can be eaten in one mouthful.

– Smoking cigarettes, pipes or cigars in a small room or automobile in which others are non-smokers.

– Drumming fingers to some mental melody while reading or driving.

– Looking over the shoulder of the person talking, to see if anyone else more interesting is coming along.

– Suddenly thinking of something else in the middle of a conversation, leaving the listener hanging in mid-sentence.

– Forgetting to clean out the bath-tub after a bath.

– Exaggerating, and the use of superlatives such as "Fantastic! Really incredible! Marvellous! Tremendous!".

– Tuneless whistling or humming.

– Flicking the television or radio station selector over and over again before settling on one program.

– Yawning, stretching and looking bored while others are talking.

– Not washing dishes and cutlery properly.

– Always leaving a little food on the plate or a little coffee in the cup.

– Back-seat driving.

– Saying "Are you sure?" after someone has answered a question like "Did you remember to unplug the iron?!".

Well, what do you think? Do you recognize yourself?

Are you sure?

At the 'Y':

Hundreds of Free Hours Supplied by Volunteers

Volunteers tend to be particularly generous, dedicated and more willing to donate time and skill than most people. Luckily for Belleville, there are scores, perhaps hundreds, of good-natured individuals who keep city clubs and organizations going.

Executive Director of the YMCA, Di Diamantides, is the first to point out that there would be no "Y" recreational programs without volunteers. In fact, the amount of time volunteered by adult leaders at the "Y" reached a staggering figure last year — 2,445 hours.

The range of the volunteers' services covers a wide spectrum of activities, from Jim Driscoll's judo classes (he and his two assistants teach 18 hours a week) to Enid Rowe's swimming lessons for adults.

The pool is also the domain of Helen Diamantides who teaches ladies' aquabics, John Peoples who teaches diving and Wilf Tausenfreund who coaches speed swimming.

Physical fitness on solid ground is handled by volunteers like Mike McMurter who leads an evening gym for men, and Ray Kraszewski, who runs an "early bird" morning class. Kay Hall and Iris Claney shared responsibility for 240 hours of women's fitness classes in 1974, and Betty Watson conducted the slender figure salon. These "Y" features are again available this year.

In addition to the adult volunteers, there are 12 leaders who organize swimming and recreation for youth, as well as the mothers who assist in the YMCA nursery.

Jack Frame, who donates time to "Y" activities, is also a paid co-ordinator of the LIP-sponsored Outreach program held in public and high schools' gymnasium during the week. Assisted by Peter Fleming and Pam Barrett, Mr. Frame is also helped by volunteer service from nine Loyalist College students from the Behavioral Science course, who supervise the Outreach activities as part of their field work.

Although the YMCA is well-staffed at the moment with willing volunteers, there is always a need for interested teen-agers and adults to assist with swimming and sports programs.

Women's Institutes Hold Provincial Convention

The Federated Women's Institute of Ontario met in Toronto last week.

During the meeting new officers were elected. President is Mrs. Herb Maluske, Chesley; secretary treasurer is Mrs. Earl Merden, Rodney. Area vice-presidents are southern, Mrs. Calvin Carmichael, Ilderton; northern, Mrs. Same Koski, Fort Frances and eastern, Mrs. Peter Timmins, Perth.

Mrs. L. E. Drayton, Ottawa, Mrs. Earl Jamison, Oshiwaken and Mrs. Harold Blasing, Neustadt are new conveners.

At the meeting members learned that in 1974 $21,635 had been contributed for the group's specific projects.

Horse Sense

CAMBERLEY, England (CP) — Edward Purver claims to have grown the world's tallest sunflower at his Surrey home and says the success of the plant, measuring 19 feet 2 inches high, is all due to the New Forest ponies. He made a special trip there to collect manure before planting.

Ability Fund March of Dimes Will Blitz Belleville

Belleville's Ability Fund Drive, which helps support the Cheshire Home, begins this year on January 27, the night more than 500 canvassers will "blitz" city homes asking for donations.

The door-to-door canvass last year raised $8,600.

Belleville and district chairman Vera Morphy says a "large" percentage of funds raised locally will be used for local projects like the Cheshire Home and the Quinte Easy Roller.

Trenton area chairman is Joanne Muckle.

The fund drive was first known as the March of Dimes and was the Depression brainchild of comedian Eddie Cantor who wanted to help fight the dreaded poliomyelitis. He reasoned that although most persons could ill-afford to spend money to help others, they might part with a dime or two.

In 1955 the discovery of the Salk vaccine put an end to the dread disease but the new March of Dimes continued, adapting its services to aid all handicapped adults, regardless of disability.

Doug Harley, director of fund — raising, says that in spite of inflation the March of Dimes should remain the same.

"An individual dime doesn't buy much today," he admits, "But if every single one of us — and I include the handicapped — parted with a dime or two, the March of Dimes could continue to provide the essential assistance needed for the disabled adults in this provinces."

For example, appliances for the Cheshire Home were provided by the Ability Fund.

The Ability Fund also supports 10 Ability Centres in the province where handicapped adults are retained to enter the work force or where the severaly handicapped becames part of a work-recreation program. Without this kind of help, according to fund directors, many handicapped people become shut ins "with nothing but time on their hands."

The Ability Fund can also mean a summer holiday at a camp for those who would otherwise have no place to go for a vacation.

Transportation services, a swimming program or the instigation of regular social get-togethers are other projects.

All of these services, provided by the March of Dimes Ability Fund, are extras not available through ordinary channels.

Government now absorb most of the medical and hospital expense of physical disability the pioneering and experimental programs of the New March of Dimes cannot be duplicated by government which must restrict itself to clearly defined needs, according to fund directors. For example, the government will provide a pension for the disabled person but opportunities for activities are left to the initiative of agencies like the March of Dimes.

One of the most important current function of the March of Dimes is to act as an advocate for the disabled to encourage the adoption of building codes which necessitate the inclusion of access for the physically disabled. There are one million handicapped adults in Ontario, according to the Ability Fund News, who would benefit from the adoption of such a building code which would make post offices, city halls, libraries and colleges more easily accessible.

Area Ability Fund worker Jane McNichol adds that even telephone booths and church are often inaccessible to the handicapped.

This year when canvassers ask for funds they'll be providing another service: they'll take a census of the disabled in Belleville.

"If you rarely see a handicapped person in your community, it doesn't mean they don't exist," Mr. Harley says. "It probably indicates that the transportation facilities are inadequate and expensive, that architectural barriers prevent access to public building and shopping centres or that the handicapped have no relatives or friends to help them get around.'

Equal Rights Opponents Get Death Sentence

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Ten men have been sentenced to death for opposing a new law giving women equal rights with men, the government said Sunday.

The convicted men were accused of spreading propaganda against the law at religious ceremonies in mosques. They were charged by the National Security Court with subverting state authority and creating national disunity.

Four were sentenced Sunday. The other six were told Saturday night they would die by the firing squad.

Religious officials previously held that men had more rights than women, including a 2-1 ratio in their favor in inheritance settlements. Last Sunday, President Siad Barre announced the decision of the Supreme Revolutionary Council and the Council of Ministers to equalize rights.

Ann Landers

'Relieved' Should Have Her Problem

Dear Ann Landers: I read the letter sent in by "Relieved" and it blew my mind. If she considers her husband a sex maniac, she should have mine.

"Relieved" complains about three times a week. What would she do if he demanded sex three times a day and more on weekends? I work in Fred's business and he is one of those husbands who insists on having lunch at home every day.

We have a teen-ager in the house and I can't hide the boy in a closet. It's all very embarrassing. Fred is after me morning, noon and night. Is there a solution to this problem?—Tired

Dear Tired: I'm surprised you had enough strength to pick up a pen and write to me. Your husband should see a doctor and get some drugs to tame his libido. Something in his system is working overtime.

No woman should be expected to satisfy such a voracious sexual appetite. "Ready Freddy" needs professional help—and you deserve a rest, dear.

Dear Ann Landers: My aunt took a course in palmistry (it cost her $200). She became fascinated when a woman read her palm and told her several things about her past that were true.

Aunt Belle is especially interested in lifelines. She was told by the palmist that her lifeline is unusually long and that she will probably live to be at least 100. Will you please tell me if anyone has ever done any scientific research on this? Or is it all phony baloney — Ink-Quizzitive

Dear Ink: The only study I am aware of was done by two professors at the University of Washington in Seattle. Drs. M. E. Wilson and L. E. Mather actually measured the lifelines of 51 cadavers. They used computers to calculate the variables, such as body size.

The research of these physicians revealed that there is no connection whatever between longevity and the length of a person's lifeline. Several of their oldest "subjects" had the shortest lifelines. (Sorry about Aunt Belle's $200).

Dear Ann Landers: For years my husband has provided well for his family. Very well, in fact. We have two cars, a vacation home, and all the extras that go with affluence. Add to this lots of love and wonderful kids. It's like a Cinderella story.

In spite of this I feel as if I'm going to explode. My husband's income is not all honestly earned. He has a job that requires out-of-town work, for which he gets paid overtime. The money he collects is far in excess of the time he puts in. In other words, he's padding the sheet. I know of instances when he has collected overtime for "out-of-town" work when he was right at home. He also uses his car for travel and is reimbursed for trips he doesn't make.

I'm living in style but my conscience is giving me hell. I've told him how miserable I am but he chops me off in mid-sentence. I know he won't stop. You're the only one I can turn to. Help me, please.—Afraid

Dear Afraid: You and you alone must decide if you want to continue to catch hell from your conscience or give him the choice: Either he can go straight or continue on his crooked way alone.

Doris Clark

Jilted Wife Needs Backbone

Dear Doris: I am at the point of completely breaking down. My husband has taken up with a girl, made her pregnant, and stays away almost every night.

I beg him to come home because the children and I miss him so much. I just can't accept the fact that our marriage is over. I have to push myself to do even menial tasks.

I know it is wrong, but lately I think what is the point of living!

No Point in Living.

Dear No Point: Now is the time for you to search for your backbone, and when you find that you have one, stretch tall on it and help your husband to realize that you are a person, your children have rights, and you intend to make a good life for them.

If this means a divorce, then you must face that possibility too. I'm not saying there will not be suffering; life deals out depressed times to all of us; but the hurt you feel now will pass.

Begin to act like a self-respecting person and your husband will see better just what he is trying to get away with. A social worker could counsel and support you, and you have a lot to live for.

Dear Doris: For years we have been landscaping a sizeable acreage in the peninsula, which aesthetically has increased the value of the community, and enhanced a scenic drive.

As it comes to the attention of new people, they want to thoughtlessly assume squatter's rights - as though it all just fell from the sky. Even locals choose to ignore the huge and cumulative investment financially, not to mention the blood, sweat and tears which have gone into it. When it was a run-down farm nobody wanted it; nor other run-down ones still in the area.

People who just breed like animals and don't want to be responsible for their offspring - send them here to entertain themselves. Even riding stables making money have sent customers to use our estate as a bridle path. Time and energies wasted, and abuses premeditated as intimidation are UNBELIEVABLE.

Help

Dear Help: There are laws and signs against trespassing.

But why not make friends with the riding stable, and write persons you care about to enjoy and help care for your lovely gardens?

(Doris knows Canadian resources and can guide you to the help you need. Write to her, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

School Absenteeism Related to Sales

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although job absenteeism here has not yet become the problem it has in other areas of the country some interesting patterns are present.

For example, absenteeism in schools seems to be related to big department store sales.

Dr. H. E. McLean of the city health department said many women keep a child out of school to look after the younger children while they go shopping.

He said that in senior grades, where attendance is more or less the choice of the student, absenteeism is also increasing and in some cases teachers are joining students.

Dr. McLean said absenteeism among teachers occurs most often on Fridays and tends to be more prevalent among younger teachers than older, and among men more than women.

He said most of it can be explained by a sense of responsibility or a lack of it, although the toll on teachers produced by mental stress seems to be great.

It is difficult to determine how much of absenteeism is the result of malingering, Dr. McLean said, but it is probably much less than 50 per cent. Malingering was only a problem in dull and uninteresting jobs.

The doctor said people often appear for work when they are so sick they should really be at home. Some of these might be highly dedicated but others simply preferred to be away from a home situation they found miserable.

The problem of absenteeism was raised recently when Vancouver Fire Chief Armand Konig asked the city for an additional 116 men to relieve a shortage.

He said sick leaves account for 8,600 shifts a year, equivalent to 47 full-time firefighters on the force of 728.

But the problem does not weigh as heavily on all business and working concerns.

Brian Wesley, employee benefits supervisor at British Columbia Telephone Co., said the absenteeism rate there is about 3.5 per cent compared with a national average of four per cent.

"The pattern of absenteeism is established in the schools and carries over into careers," said Mr. Wesley.

He said the problem could be reduced by making some jobs more attractive and by dealing with problems as they develop.

Perusing the Menu

Inn on the Bay Tavern in Picton is open six days a week for lunch and dinner and is closed Sundays. The main course offerings on the dinner menu include Prime Rib of Beef, Sirloin Steak, Filet Mignon, Lobster tails, Jaegerschnitzel and Coq au Vin. And if you enquire when you call for reservations at 476-3114, you might be lucky enough to hit the night of Shrimps a la Maison, a house favorite. Whenever you go, however, and whatever you order, dining in this gracious and friendly old mansion will be a delightful experience. Don't forget the number and you'll never forget the place.

Not Just Clearing Stock

Vader's Car Sales at the corner of College and North Front St. are offering new car buyers new cars at good prices, with savings of between $400 and $800, depending on model. These cars are new 74's . . . cars which haven't been sitting around all year waiting to go but 74's which have been recently and specifically ordered because of the savings Vader's can offer new-car buyers. You get all the features and dependability which Datsun stands for from a dealer who always stocks parts. The deal doesn't end when you drive way in your new Datsun, it's the beginning of a great friendship between you and Vader's.

A Household Word

Moira Schuster is a well-known name in home heating service in our area and has been serving the Quinte area for over 80 years. This company is also a distributor for Aquafine Water Refiners. For as little as $6 a month, you can have safe, soft, clean water at your house (and you thought water was water!) So when you call 962-4504 for your Aquafine Refiner, you're going to hear Moira Schuster answering the phone. Then you'll know you really did come to the right place.

Banding Together

So you didn't get a new watch for Christmas, or you did and you love the watch but aren't too fussy about the watch band. The W. Wonnacott and Son Jewellers, 267 Front S., are all ready for you with their extensive selection of watch bracelets, including the renown Speidel watch bracelets. You can choose from dressy or sporty styles, wide or slim, for ladies or gentlemen. But whatever you choose, your purchase will be a qualitative one and with the staff at W. Wonnacott's, a very pleasant experience all-round.

Call About Carpet

I've been telling you bout the new carpet division of Sidney Inn which is located at the rear of the Mutual Life Building, 185 Pinnacle St. Today I'm going to tell you the telephone number to match — 962-5744. There are new carpet selections from which to choose including mill seconds, box ends and full bales, in textures and colors galore. After business hour appointments can be arranged too, if you just want to call that number and arrange one. Now that's not hard is it? And you won't be sorry either!

It Sure Helps

That's how Trenton Optical, 54 Bridge St. E. describes "Mira Klean", a lens cleaner and anti-fog solution which you can use on your own spectacles or the bathroom mirror when you are going to take a shower or bath. (One application will last for a while in your bathroom). Mira Klean isn't a total solution, but after the cold weather of this week and the subsequent fogging antics of our glasses, it certainly is a welcome one. Drop in to Trenton Optical at their convenient location just south of Pinnacle on Bridge St, and start clearing up a few things like your glasses.

Clearing For Spring

Studio 231 and De Kapsters Wig Boutique which both happen to be very conveniently located together at 231 Front St., are having sales of apparel and wigs at very substantial savings. The clothing creed of Studio 231 is fashion flair at reasonable prices and 40% on good fashion is a good deal anyway you look at it. Wig prices have been reduced by 30%. I have a friend who bought one and it's practically changed her whole life! So go where fashion and sales are combined — Studio 231!

Helping You Out

Belleville and area residents seem to have a great love of tropical birds as house pets according to the Sherwoods of the Tropical Garden Pet Shop. During the Christmas season, budgies, finches, canaries, lovebirds, cuchatells and parrots, came and went. The Sherwoods are glad to tell you about the characteristics of these bird varieties and give you suggestions as to what type will suit which environment. And they can order specific types for you too. Just drop in or call them at 962-3322.

Popularity Increasing More

The staff at Wrays Home Furnishers, 306 Front St. inform me that peeks at the Toronto Furniture Show confirm a well-founded suspicion of their own: the increasing popularity of pine and hence, Colonial furniture. Wrays have a complete range of Colonial furniture in their downstairs showroom and invite you to come and visit. New styles are arriving too in living room, dining room and bedroom suites in this style of furniture. If Colonial is your preference, then Wrays is your home furnisher.

Sale at Superior

Superior T.V. at 103 Cannifton Rd. is also having a sale of the T.V. makes they sell — which include Fleetwood, Hatashi and Rogers-Majestic. One portable Fleetwood 12 inch really appealed to me. It comes in orange and cream, perfect for den, cottage, children's room or picnic. It will even run on your cigarette lighter! But if you're not in the market for a good new television, but want your old one fixed, Superior T.V. is also the place to visit or call at 962-7611. They even work till 9:00 p.m. making house calls. Now that's service!

Don't Miss the List

I know it didn't feel like it this week, but Spring is just around the corner — even if it's going to be a long, cold corner. And there you'll be! You want to sell your property this year but yu haven't got around to listing it. If you don't list, you're not going to sell are you? That's where Gord Roblin Real Estate, 117 North Front St. can help. They'll get things going RIGHT NOW! So that the early birds who aren't going to wait till everyone else is buying and selling, are going o have the deed signed and sealed. Get on it. Call 968-6475 today.

The Patio Door

Belleview Glass and Mirror, 354 Pinnacle St. are patio door specialists carrying patio doors with wooden frames, vinyl frames and vinyl-covered aluminum frames, called Vinyl-Slide with sealed glass units. All patio doors have heat-strengthened glass which realy does strengthen. You might remember my discussing this type of glass under the new regulations of the Hazardous Products Act implemented last summer. But because you purchase your patio door from Belleview Glass you know you're always getting a good product — with the service to match.

Strathcona Refinery

Imperial Oil's Strathcona refinery, the largest in Canada, is scheduled to go on stream in the spring of 1975. It is the heart of a $200-million program to restructure Imperial Oil's refinery operations in Canada. (CP Photo)

Refinery Workers Trying to Buy It

CALGARY (CP) — In July, 1973, during the Western Economic Opportunities Conference, workers staged demonstrations to protest plans by Imperial Oil Ltd. to close the company's Calgary refinery.

They said a viable economic opportunity and many jobs would be lost.

Imperial, committed to a 200-million program to restructure its refinery operations in Western Canada, said it would not be possible to continue the Calgary operation after its new Strathcona refinery near Edmonton went into operation.

The workers decided to form a company and buy the refinery. They set up Calgary Refining Co. and elected Bill Dorman, one of the workers, president.

The workers were not alone in their assessment that the refinery, built in 1922 and with a capacity of 22,600 barrels a day, still is economically viable.

Several other parties, including Mohawk Oil Co. Ltd. of Calgary and Federated Co-operatives Ltd. of Saskatoon, were also interested.

Mohawk, which was planning to build a refinery itself in Edmonton, subsequently formed a partnership with the workers. If Calgary Refining is successful in acquiring the refinery, Mohawk will own 60 per cent and the workers 40 per cent.

Mr. Dorman, who has since left the Imperial refinery and now works as a real estate salesman, said of the 130 workers employed at the refinery in July, 1973, 120 expressed interest in becoming shareholders of Calgary Refining.

"We have done a feasibility study which says with a 5-million investment the refinery can be upgraded to meet new-product and environmental-control requirements."

Mr. Dorman said his group apparently now is the only party seriously interested in the refinery.

Federated Co-operatives was interested at one stage, says company president Gordon Sinclair, but after feasibility studies, the co-operative decided to withdraw from bidding and announced a $35-million program to double the capacity of its Regina refinery, now processing 20,000 barrels of oil a day.

The Calgary refinery will be one of the four existing refineries on the Prairies which Imperial will eliminate when the Strathcona refinery is ready.

The new refinery, largest in Canada, will have more capacity—140,000 barrels a day—than the existing refineries in Edmonton, Calgary, Regina and Winnipeg, a company spokesman says.

When it announced its refinery restructuring program in 1971 Imperial said it would be more economical to build a new refinery in Edmonton than to upgrade the existing ones.

Strathcona refinery products will be moved by pipeline to terminals being built in Calgary, Regina and Winnipeg to replace local production. The existing Edmonton refinery will be absorbed into the Strathcona refinery.

The restructuring program will reduce labor demand—the Strathcona refinery will employ 400 workers compared to the current combined employment of 700—but Imperial said none of the workers employed by the company at the time the program was announced would lose their jobs.

"Workers who were hired after the program was announced were told at the time of employment that their jobs would be subject to termination," an Imperial official said. "But workers employed before that date would continue to be employed or transferred to Imperial operations elsewhere.

Become Self-Sufficient

TOKYO (AP) — Peking's official Hsinhu news agency reported that Chinese cities have become self-sufficient in vegetables. In a report monitored in Tokyo, the agency said truck farms on the outskirts of the cities had supplied 5.4 million tons of fresh vegetables to Peking, Shanghai and 26 other cities in the first 10 months of 1974—11 per cent more than in 1973.

APPEALING NUDES

STAFFORD, England (CP) — Nude models have asked Staffordshire county council's education committee to approve travel expenses so they can travel away from their home districts to sit for art classes. They say it is embarrassing to sit nude in front of people they know.

Awarded Damages

EDINBURGH (CP) — An appeal court ordered a riding school to pay £10,000 to Mary Rieley, whose right leg was amputated below the knee after a road accident five years ago. The girl and her pony collided with a truck after they became separated from other riders under instruction by the school.

Federal Control Of Syncrude Out

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is considering only a minority investment position in the Syncrude project to tap the Alberta oil sands, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Wednesday.

He also declined to give a commitment that a Commons committee can study any federal participation, which must be decided by a Jan. 31 deadline, before the government makes up its mind.

T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands), the NDP energy critic, had asked whether the possible participation would ensure a controlling interest. The NDP favors government control of Syncrude.

An Imperial Oil Ltd. spokesman told reporters Wednesday that so far, there appear to be no private-sector offers to provide the $1 billion the consortium says is needed to keep Syncrude alive.

Jack Armstrong, Imperial's chairman and chief executive, said it will be as simple to cancel the project as to close it down for three to six months to attempt to get the needed development capital.

Gas Man Wants Syncrude Made Public

TORONTO (CP) — A retired oil executive suggested Wednesday that the Syncrude oil sands project be taken over and operated as a public utility if private industry cannot or will not do the job.

Bruce Wilson, former president of Union Gas Ltd., said in an interview it is essential that Syncrude proceed because of a threatened oil shortage in Canada in the 1980s.

"If industry doesn't respond, it seems to me that the public utility approach should be studied. This seems to be a logical base for financing a project of that magnitude."

Prefers Loans

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner said Wednesday the government would welcome some private investment of Arab money in housing but would not accept loans to government agencies financing housing.

New Art Centre

OTTAWA (CP) — A new municipal art centre costing more than $2 million will be built east of Parliament Hill near the proposed new National Gallery. Mayor Lorry Greenberg announced Wednesday.

Non-profit Home Funds Not Spent

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal programs for co-operative and non-profit housing are facing serious problems with much of the program budget remaining unspent, says a Canadian Council on Social Development report.

The report, released today, says co-operative and non-profit groups have trouble getting their projects approved by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC), partly because the corporation expects these amateur groups to be as efficient as private developers.

The government should be more involved in helping groups get their projects designed and built, the report suggests. This could be done by establishing some organization to assist non-profit housing.

Non-profit and co-operative groups control only about half of one per cent of dwellings in the country, the report said.

Amendments to the National Housing Act in June, 1973 were designed to stimulate non-profit and co-operative housing by providing funds to help groups make applications and by extending loans at low interest rates—about eight per cent.

But, Mr. Haire said that of $169 million budgeted by CMHC for mortgages to non-profit and co-operative groups in 1974, only $115 million had been spent by mid-November.

In October, about $17 million was diverted to the rental housing program by Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson to bolster the sagging apartment market.

Only 29 per cent of the money spent was for family housing, the rest directed to housing for the elderly.

Kidnapped Girl Makes Her Escape

SOUTH BEND, Indiana (Reuter) — A 17-year-old girl taken hostage by two heavily-armed gunmen Tuesday night escaped apparently unharmed early today just three blocks from police headquarters here.

Loucindy Sherman was found by detectives at an intersection at 2:45 a.m. after police had received a telephone call as to her whereabouts.

She was taken to police headquarters for questioning.

Earlier, authorities had identified one of her abductors as David Roy Winters, 23. He was named in a federal kidnapping warrant. The second man was not named in the warrant because positive identity was not established, police said.

The gunmen still were at large. Thep had droppd from sight after criss-crossing northern Indiana in an apparently stolen car.

The girl was one of four persons taken hostage by two gunmen who fled a downtown department store Tuesday night after police interrupted a holdup. The other three gained their freedom earlier.

More Corn Plantings Suggested

OTTAWA (CP) — Eastern Ontario farmers could become self-sufficient in livestock feeds if they would increase the planting of corn, says the head of the Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology.

John Curtis told delegates attending a meeting of the Eastern Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement Association Tuesday that current corn acreage should be doubled to 500,000 acres.

Starts Draft

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Max Saltsman, New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Waterloo-Cambridge, said Wednesday he is starting a campaign to draft Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer as federal party leader.

The new NDP leader will be elected in July when party delegates meet in Winnipeg.

Trout Vanish

KEMPTVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Pollution caused by the rapid development of vacation cottages has been blamed for the disappearance of lake trout in 19 eastern Ontario lakes.

A survey by the Ontario ministry of natural resources also says the number of lake trout in 30 other lakes has dropped sharply.

Fish Donated

TORONTO (CP) — About 1,200 people showed up at the Regent Park housing development parking lot Wednesday as the Salvation Army distributed 10 tons of silver hake, a cod-like whitefish donated by a local fish wholesaler.

The portions were uneven and the fish wouldn't sell, so the wholesaler gave the hake to the Salvation Army.

Farmers Request Farms Be Saved

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Petitions bearing 19,044 names and demanding completion of construction of Highway 402 linking Sarnia and London were presented Wednesday to the Ontario cabinet.

Transportation Minister John Rhodes said: "There's no question that there's a high priority need to finish Highway 402 to London," but added that opposition because of expropriation valuable farmland and from environmentalists posed the two main problems.

The cabinet also heard appeals from rural municipal officials and farmers' groups to "save our farms."

The National Farmers' Union, Local 341, challenged the government to implement a land-use policy to prohibit use of good agricultural land for any other purpose than food production.

Andrew Kittmer of the union said 26 acres of land are lost every hour to development and called for legislation to keep agricultural land in production.

The Ontario Bean Producers' Marketing Board told cabinet members that if the government decides to establish another nuclear generating station on southern Lake Huron, ozone fallout may damage up to 80 per cent of the bean production.

Interest Conflict Seen

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative Sinclair Stevens said Wednesday that information disclosed by Justice Minister Otto Lang is further proof that the prime minister's wife should not accept gifts such as a recent trip to Japan.

Mrs. Trudeau went to Japan as a guest of Y. K. Pao, a wealthy shipbuilder, and launched a huge oil tanker.

The information tabled in the Commons Wednesday by Mr. Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, shows the board paid World-Wide Shipping Ltd. more than $500,000 compensation for delayed grain shipments between December, 1973 and December, 1974.

Mr. Pao is a director and major shareholder of World-Wide, which operates one of the largest tanker and cargo fleets in the world.

Transportation PCs' Target

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives picked a new political target Wednesday, drawing bead on government transportation policies as the Commons resumed work after a four week recess.

The issue was largely ignored before Christmas as opposition MPs focused on other subjects such as inflation and conflict of interest.

They won't ignore these issues in the weeks ahead, but Conservative members decided at a warm-up caucus Wednesday to give transportation increased attention.

In the first question period of the resumed session, they attacked the government for allowing a temporary freeze on rail freight rates to expire during the recess.

The railways applied for a 25-per-cent rate increase when the freeze was lifted and the Canadian Transport Commission approved half their request effective Jan. 1 with the rest effective March 1.

Talks Halt

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiations between the Royal Canadian Mint and the Public Service Alliance, representing 550 striking workers, broke off again Wednesday.

Courts Accused of Using Children's Aid as Alternative to Training Schools

By HARRY MULHALL

Family courts are using Children's Aid Society (CAS) facilities as an alternative to Ontario government training schools, Bruce Kerr, director of Hastings County Family and Children's Services said Wednesday.

Such unexpected placements of problem children is putting pressure on CAS budgets. Local municipalities also are sharing the expense, he told Hastings County council.

Use by the courts of CAS facilities rather than government placement centres is a province-wide practice, he said.

Whether or not it reflects on training school programs is a "matter of personal opinion" said Mr. Kerr. "Certainly, it is the subject of debate."

Such placements transfer to CAS budgets and local municipalities "the costs which hitherto were borne in full by other departments of government," said Mr. Kerr.

Courts also are placing children with behavior problems in private institutions — and assessing the costs against the local CAS or municipality.

Rates charged by such homes range from $25 to $40 a day.

"One can imagine the effect even one such unplanned placement can have on an already tight CAS budget," he said.

Government funding of such institutions also needs "immediate reveiew," said Mr. Kerr.

Private institutions approved by the health ministry are paid 100 per cent of daily operating costs.

Those approved by the community and social services ministry receive 80 per cent.

When institutions not on government approval lists are sent placements by the courts the costs are recovered from municipalities or the local CAS.

The Hastings CAS recently appealed a court decision which, if upheld, would have cost $10,000 for maintenance of one child, said Mr. Kerr. The decision has been returned for review.

The CAS did not receive approval of its 1974 budget until late September. Although $21,000 was pared from the estimates, the agency has no "valid reason for complaint".

However, the provincial government should develop a system of speedier budget approval.

The "lengthy delay' cost time, energy — and interest charges on interim financing, he said.

Trucker Charged

TWEED — A Tweed are man has been charged wi careless driving following a accident Wednesday about p.m. on the Hawkins Bay Rd. 3½ miles north of Tweed.

Charged is Patrick Quinn, 18, of RR 3, Tweed. Police said the truck he was driving was in collision with a car driven by Walter Byer of RR 3, Tweed. Damage to the Byer car was $800 and $500 to the Quinn pick-up.

Roads Deficit Reported

Hastings County's roads and bridges committee ended 1974 with a six per cent deficit.

Final expenditures for the year totalled $1,638,500 — $84,000 over its budget, committee chairman Reeve Cecil Woods, Madoc Township, reported to county council Wednesday.

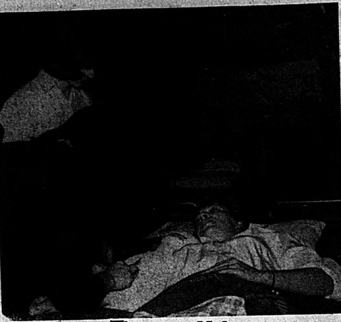
Car Thief Nabbed

City police have charged George Lewis, 17, of no fixed address, with theft over $200 after an incident earlier this week in which one car was traded in on another although both cars were reported stolen.

Police said on Monday a man went into B and D Motors on 348 Front St. and asked to test-drive a Volvo. He didn't bother returning.

Tuesday, police said a man answering the same description drove into Elliott Motors on 366 N. Front St. and asked to test-drive a late model Astre. He traded in a Volvo for the Astre.

Police said Wednesday Lewis was arrested in Gananoque.



Time to Help

The need for blood is always urgent for the Red Cross and community support is vital to the success of any donor clinic. At the Belleville Jaycee Blood Donor Clinic at the Masonic Temple, Wednesday, Mayor Robin Jeffrey donates blood assisted by Jan Gregory, foreground, and Mirjana Mileta. The clinic runs today from 1:45 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and again from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

New Drug Plan Becoming Costly for Nursing Homes

Ontario's new program granting free drugs to pensioners on low incomes is having side effects on municipal homes for the aged, Hastings County council was told Wednesday.

To date, counties have been able to buy many drugs in bulk quantities — thus more cheaply — and have them dispensed by a nurse as prescribed by the county home physician. This is possible since many residents are on the same drugs.

Implementing the new regulations requires coping with a flood of individual prescriptions, new storage facilities and an increased possibility of error in issuing the drugs, council was told from several sources.

At Hastings Manor, the county home in Belleville, the number of prescriptions is up about 300 per cent, county administrator Carl Bateman said. Some 275 residents require more than three prescriptions a year — an estimated average total of 1,050.

The increase in the number of bottles and containers stored for distribution also increases the possibility of "human error" in issuing the dxrugs, the administrator at the county's Centennial Manor in Bancroft reported, said Mr. Bateman.

Both resolutions protested the new program being mandatory in county homes and sought the support of Hastings. Council agreed.

The new program, for those drawing guaranteed income supplements was introduced by the community and social services ministry Jan. 1.

Standards Abolished

The Quinte and District Real Estate Association Wednesday passed a motion unanimously calling for eradication of minimum fees charged for sales commissions. The move was explained by past president Gerry Joyce as a step to comply with anticipated federal approval of the Combines Act.

Lot Size Concerns County Councillors

Hastings County Council has been urged to emphasize its stance to the provincial government on minimum land standards for rural housing.

The county and housing ministry officials already are at odds over minimum requirements in the Hastings official plan which permit building on one-acre lots. Council has been told provincial officials want a 25-acre minimum.

Tuesday, Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, said he believes legislation is pending that would reduce the requirement to about five acres.

Wednesday, a county planning board report told council it had recommended a delegation be sent the ministry to explain the background of the plan's rural policies.

Committee member Reeve Felix Browne, Bangor-Tick-low-McClure Township, stressed the need for discussion with the ministry.

"I strongly feel a brief must be presented to the ministry," he said. "I also urge you to do it before an election."

Lottery Tickets Popular

A group of Aluminum Star Products employees are playing high stakes in the lottery ticket game.

The 19 members of the lottery group have 71 Olympic tickets for the Feb. 16 draw and 160 Belleville Yardmen tickets for the January draw. The group pays for the tickets through a weekly payroll deduction.

Thurlow Township Councillor George Beer said "we won $100 in the last Olympic draw but re-invested it in the next draw."

"We're just aiming for the big stuff," said the councillor.

"I'm just wondering what will happen if the fellows win the big stuff and try to buy the boss out," said Councillor Beer. "But then, the boss is in the draw too."

Sewers Approved

City council this week passed the needed bylaw authorizing construction of a trunk storm sewer in northeast Belleville. The trunk will run 1,700 feet north from the Moira River beween College St. and the Canadian National Railway. Cost to the city is estimated at $474,600.

Price Rise Feared

Fixed Commissions May Soon End

Prominent city realtor Gerry Joyce said Wednesday approval of the federal government's proposed Combines Act may escalate home prices.

Mr. Joyce told a meeting of the Quinte and District Real Estate Association the act, if passed, will outlaw standard fee structures within various associations, including realtors.

Mr. Joyce said the act has received first and second readings and that he believes it will be passed and that standard commission rates will be made illegal.

At present, the minimum commission for a new home sale is four per cent, for a re-sale five per cent and for a home on multiple listing service the commission to the broker is six per cent. With the passage of the act, this standard set out in the association's bylaws will have to be erased.

Bill Lowry, regional vice-president, speaking at a Quinte association meeting Wednesday, said "now realtors without the minimum standards will be able to charge whatever they want," thereby affecting the price of the house.

Mr. Joyce said it has been the trend in the United States and in British Columbia where minimum rates have been eradicated that "commission rates have gone up."

"From what I've heard, the Quinte area realtors intend staying with the same rate," said Mr. Joyce.

Asked about the possibility of sky-rocketing commissions, "it just depends whether the realtor wants to stay in business,' said Mr. Bennett.

In preparation for passage of the combines act, the Quinte association unanimously approved a motion to erase all mention of fee schedules from the association's regulations.

Downtown Control Law To Get Legal Scrutiny

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

City officials were cautioned Wednesday not to pass a downtown development control bylaw provided by the provincial government until it has been interpreted by a lawyer.

The recommendation was made by Bert Kenny, planning director of the Quinte Planning Board at a meeting of Belleville's subordinate planning advisory committee.

Mr. Kenny's staff was asked to research the idea of a controlling bylaw for the downtown section following earlier submission of a brief to the committee by the city's industrial commission calling for such control.

Mr. Kenny reported Wednesday night, "there is enough ambiguity in the sample document as to what powers council would have downtown that a legal opinion is worthwhile."

According to provincial planners, city council would not have the right to request downtown businessmen to provide parking facilities.

Mr. Kenny said he believes the sample document provided by the province empowers council to request parking.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey, after listening to a lengthy report of the options open to council in the sample bylaw, succeeded with a motion to refer the document to legal advisors.

Under the general terms of a downtown control bylaw, council would have much of the same control over dwntown commercial development as it now has in subdivision development.

Council would conceivably have power to request particular facing of new buildings, how far back the building would locate on the property and what landscaping the developer should provide.

No action will be taken on the document until legal interpretation is available.

Conflict of Interest Limits Two Aldermen

Possible conflict of interest charges stemming from discussion of downtown re-development silenced city aldermen Ben Corke and Jack Ireland at a meeting of Belleville's subordinate planning advisory committee meeting Wednesday.

Both aldermen were warned by Mayor Robin Jeffrey to abstain from discussion of a proposed downtown development control bylaw saying to one "I don't want to see you end up in court over this."

"I suggest these two men do not participate until they have seen their lawyers," said Mayor Jeffrey.

Under discussion was a bylaw that — if passed — would put wide control of downtown development in council's hands.

Ald. Corke and Ald. Ireland both own property and run businesses in the downtown section. Ald. Corke said he believes there would be a possible conflict if he subsequently has to sign an agreement as a merchant.

Both aldermen accepted the mayor's advice and, left the committee room.

The two aldermen are considered the experienced backbone of the planning committee and the mayor said, "I'd hate to lose them.'

"Conflict of interest just never occurred to me ... I never gave it any thought," said Ald. Ireland.

Interest Charges Costly

Proposed amendments to the Ontario Municipal Act could save Hastings County taxpayers a "hefty chunk" of public money, says county administrator Carl Bateman. The new bill would permit municipalities to pay their county rates — their share in operation costs Hastings government — in instalments.

At present, due date for the rates is Dec. 20. Although early payments are rewarded with premiums, most rates are not paid before the deadline, said Mr. Bateman. This means the county, has to borrow cash — which means interest charges.

In 1974, interest totalled $76,600, he said.

"That's a pretty hefty chunk of expenditure that has to be shared by the taxpayers of this county," said the administrator.

Implementation of the new process requires agreement of a majority of municipalities representing two-thirds of the equalized assessment'

Other proposed amendments to the Act would:

— Return of county rates to an equalized assessment basis. This was the traditional method used until all assessments in the province were frozen four years for re-assessment of property values.

— Authorize local municipalities to request county council to issue debentures for them. Cost of borrowing could be cheaper since the county would have a higher credit rating.

Rezoning Requests Draw Criticism

Rezoning applications from Rollins Construction and Belleville General Hospital were referred to planning staff for further investigation by Belleville's subordinate planning advisory committee Wednesday.

A third request for re-zoning of land to permit construction of a fourplex living unit was also referred for staff comment.

The Rollins application was to permit construction of a 39-unit apartment building on the south side of Bridge St. near the intersection of Bridge and Highland Ave.

Local residents at the public hearing protested the plan, saying the street is already over-taxed with traffic — particularly from the highrise apartment centre across the street.

In the hospital application, two homes on the east side of First St. would be re-zoned allowing construction of parking facilities. Local residents argued that such development would depreciate area real estate values. Residents asked that approval be withheld until long-range hospital plans are available.

In the third application to permit the construction of a fourplex dwelling adjacent to Stewart Warner on MacDonald Ave., protesters said the project was already under way and that the property should have been rezoned prior to construction.

The planning staff is expected to consider the public input and provide some recommendations for city council in the near future.

Display Planned

Volunteers and their organizations will be recognized in April at the Central Volunteer Bureau's Information Mart at the Four Seasons. The display will make the public aware of voluntary organizations, their purpose and their contribution in meeting the needs of citizens in the area, according to Ruth Burrows,di rector of the Central Volunteer Bureau.

Northern Earnings Up

Northern Electric Co. Ltd. said today its consolidated earnings for 1974 are estimated to be $2.05 a share, compared with $1.35 a share in 1973 based on the average number of shares outstanding during each year, 26,164,054 shares and 23,670,833 shares, respectively.

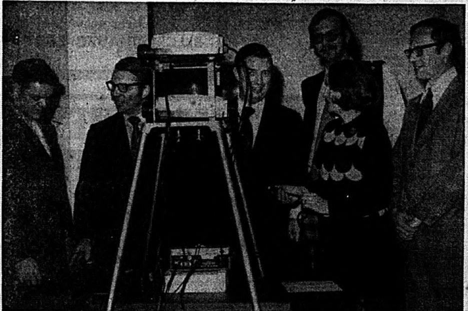
346 Donors Give Blood

The first day of the Belleville Jaycees Blood Donor Clinic at the Masonic Temple Wednesday resulted in a total of 346 pints being collected for the Red Cross.

Harold Tompkins, Jaycee chairman of the blood donor committee, said he was satisfied with the results and especially pleased that many of the donors at Wednesday's clinic were new ones.

"We figure we had in the range of 150 new donors the first day. We've also had quite a few who hadn't donated in years, said Mr. Tompkins.

For those wishing to donate blood today the hours are from 1.45 p.m. to 4.30 p.m. and again in the evening from 6.30 p.m. to 8 p.m. The location is the Masonic Temple on 132 Foster St. off Bridge St.



Orientation for Trustees

Trustees with the Hastings County Board of Education have been attending orientation sessions at the board office this month to acquaint them with the operation of the school system. Six of the trustees new to the board were among those at Wednesday's meeting. They are Ralph Swan, Robert Ord, Ed Paquet, Rick Williams, Eloise Burr and Frazer Rose.

Caps and Scouts Keep Flyers Ahead

In the last eight games, the Flyers scored over two goals only once, and only one of the lines that led it to the Cup last year is intact as coach Fred Shero shuffles things nightly trying to rediscover the scoring touch.

To put it bluntly, the Flyers are not playing well. And only their 5-0-1 record against the two expansion teams—Washington Capitals and Kansas City Scouts—has kept them ahead of last year's record-tying 50 victories.

Philadelphia at one stage was 15 points ahead of the Rangers, a lead that was cut to six and now is back up to nine. But New York has played two fewer games.

The Rangers were wracked with inuries the first half of the season, but managed to keep the Flyers in sight and hold six points over Atlanta Flames.

The Flames, in third place, only two points ahead of the New York Islanders, are a strong club and the recent acquisition of defenceman Barry Gibbs from Minnesota North Stars is bound to help it.

The NHL's most improved team almost has to be the Islanders, playing in the only division in which all the teams are playing better than .500 hockey.

The Islanders have the youngest team in hockey, with two lines on which none of the players is over 23 years old. They've been given a big lift by Clark Gillies, the team's No. 1 amateur draft pick last June.

They also have Billy Harris, their No. 1 pick two years ago, and Denis Potvin, last year's top selection, and recently got J. D. Parise and Jude Drouin from Minnesota.

The Flyers still have to be favorites for first place but will have to keep piling up points to stay ahead. Unless, that is, they suddenly rediscover the play that made them the first expansion team to win the Stanley Cup.

Smooth Sailing? Not for Hawks

CHICAGO (AP) — When the National Hockey League went through its expansion realignment for the present season, Chicago Black Hawks were expected to clinch their race in the Smythe Division by Christmas.

After all, the previous season Hawks had compiled 105 points while all they had to beat out were St. Louis Blues, who had 64 points the previous season, Minnesota North Stars with 63, Vancouver Canucks 59 and the newly formed Kansas City Scouts.

Christmas, and the halfway mark passed, with the Hawks still looking for a way to catch the surprising Canucks, who at one stage had a 16-point lead over Chicago.

Injuries, suspensions and the inability to get rolling have kept the Hawks at bay, and they just might not win their division.

"We are going to have to win on the road," said coach Billy Reay

While the Hawks who still figure to win the Conn Smithe Division of the Clarence Campbell Conference, have gone downhill Vancouver got off to a fast start.

They came into Chicago for a key game in mid-January, and the Hawks managed to pull out a 2-1 victory.

"We have two games against them left in our building, that will tell the story"

The Canucks have put together a balanced scoring attack with a fair defence and smart goaltending by Gary Smith.

Oddliefson suffered a cracked jaw by Chicago's Keith Magnuson, who was suspended for three games for striking his opponent with illegal aids. He had a cast on his arm.

Injuries to Magnuson, a five-game suspension of Jim Pappin for bumping an official and Bill White's back injury all have been costly for the Hawks.

While the Vancouver and Chicago battle continues, the Blues, who got off to a bad start, could sneak in.

St. Louis has kept within a point or two of the Black Hawks and not too far off the pace as they began collecting points and victories in December.

Neither Minnesota nor Kansas City figure to be a factor in the race. Vancouver, Chicago and St. Louis will make the playoffs but final positioning is important.

Wrigley Tournament

Unbeaten Clubs In Traffic Jam

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Yorkton Parkland, the Saskatchewan representative, stood a good chance of moving into championship contention in two games today at the Canadian midget hockey tournament.

Yorkton ran its record to 3-0 with a 4-1 victory Wednesday over winless Sydney, (N.S.) Lgionaires and today goes against another winless club, Thunder Bay (Ont.) Miners.

A win against Thunder Bay would give Yorkton a tie with idle Oshawa atop Division A. However, Barrie (Ont.) Co-op, the other unbeaten club in the division, was to meet Yorkton in a later game. Barrie has a 2-0 record.

Meanwhile, a showdown for the Division B lead shaped up in the match between Fort Twins, 3-0, and defending champion erdun (Que.) Leafs, 2-0.

The top teams in each division of the round-robin tournament advance to Sunday's championship final while second-place teams meet in a consolation final.

In other games today, Thunder Bay has a second match against Quesnel (B.C.) Macks, Corner Brook (Nfld.) Knights face Sydney and Dalhousie (N.B.) Legionaires meet Edmonton Canadians.

In Wednesday's other action, Fort-Garry-Fort Rouge beat Charlottetown 7-0, Oshawa defeated Thunder Bay 6-4, Quesnel beat Corner Brook 3-1, Edmonton defeated South Ottawa Canadians 3-1 and Barrie beat Sydney 7-1.

Centre Jim McFetridge scored three goals and assisted on another to lead the Fort Garry-Fort Rouge victory while Jaay Rodgers recorded the shutout in the Twins' nets.

Defenceman Bruno Rogger's two goals led Quesnll to its first win in three starts.

3-goal Third Sinks Whitby

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Brantford Foresters scored three goals in the third period to defeat Whitby McDonalds 5-4 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game Wednesday.

Whitby took a 2-0 lead in the first period and led 4-2 at the end of the second.

Jim Cochrane paced Brantford with two goals. Bill Simpell, Bill Lastic and Jim Lebar added one each.

Lebar's goal at 4:40 of the third period broke a 4-4 tie.

Pete Vipend scored two goals for Whitby and Gord McCosh and Doug Tate had one each.

Whitby outshot Brantford 35-29. A crowd of 202, the smallest of the season, was on hand.

Seals' New Coach Opens with Loss

Penguins' Owner Wants to Stay Put

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pittsburgh Penguins, insisting they will not move to Seattle, took advantage of a California team that lost its coach and beat the Seals 7-5 in the only National Hockey League action Wednesday night.

Before Wednesday's game in Pittsburgh, the Seals announced in Oakland that coach Marshall Johnston had been fired and that Bill McCreary, the league-owned club's director of hockey operations, will coach the Seals for the remainder of the season.

Meanwhile, Tad Potter, chief owner of the Penguins, attempted to put a damper on a league proposal to move his club to Seattle.

"The Penguins will not leave Pittsburgh," said Potter. "Any rumors that such a move is being contemplated are untrue."

He was commenting on a proposal announced at league meetings in Montreal on Tuesday that Seattle and Denver, in line for expansion franchises in 1976-77, might instead take over the financially-troubled California and Pittsburgh clubs.

Potter admitted the Penguins owe the league about $500,000 in back assessments and advances and that the club is trying to attract new investors.

The Penguins, laboring with high player salaries and low attendance, have received a "million-dollar commitment" from Pittsburgh interests to help the club, said Potter.

The Seals, under McCreary's coaching, never managed to take the lead in Wednesday's game although they pressed the Penguins throughout.

Jean Pronovost scored twice for the Penguins, who outshot the Seals 48-26 before a crowd of 7,730.

Chuck Arnason, Vic Hadfield, Barry Wilkins, Bob Kelly and Ron Schock also scored for Pittsburgh. Al MacAdam scored twice for the Seals while Stan Weir, Dave Hrechkosy and Bob Stewart added single goals.

The win was Pittsburgh's 18th this season against 17 losses and 10 ties, tht first time the club has been better than .500 this season.

Rumors had circulated that Johnston would lose his job and the 33-year-old former Seals' defenceman said he was not surprised when he was fired.

"They told me Tuesday night that we had lost our last six games, or something like that, and they felt there was more talent on the team than I was getting out of it," said Johnston.

"I went into the job knowing the security of pro coaches is not the best, but I've been doing the best I could, and I haven't anything to hang my head for."

A Rookie at 29 Sparks Phoenix

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Don Borgeson, after kicking around the minor leagues for eight years, appears to be skating himself to a full-time job with the World Hockey Association's Phoenix Roadrunners.

Borgeson, a five-foot-11 left winger from North Battleford, Sask., scored three goals Wednesday night to carry the Roadrunners to an 8-5 victory over Chicago Cougars.

Borgeson's first goal of the game and 14th of the season pulled Phoenix into a 4-4 tie midway in the second period after Chicago had gone ahead.

Then, after John Gray's goal midway in the third period gave the Roadrunners a 6-5 lead, Borgeson scored two more to clinch the victory.

Borgeson, 29, is a rookie in the WHA after eight years in the American, Central, Eastern, and Western International leagues.

Murray Keogan chipped in with two goals for Phoenix, which pulled to within eight points of the leading Houston Aeros in the Western Division.

The expansion Roadrunners have a 21-18-6 record but drew only 5,128 fans.

At St. Paul, Minn., a crowd of 6,660 saw the Fighting Saints' 20th loss in 41 games, leaving them in fourth place in the West.

The win for Vancouver, on the other hand, moved them up to fourth in the Canadian Division, leaving Winnipeg alone in the cellar.

Ron Chipperfield and Hugh Harris each had a goal and an assist while goalie Don McLeod made 34 saves to lead the Blazers to victory.

Minnesota's Mike Walton returned to action after a groin injury but left the game in the second period after suffering a three-stitch cut over his left eye.

At Winnipeg, league scoring leader Bobby Hull got his 39th goal to open the scoring but Indianapolis railied with a second-period goal by Brian McDonald. Bob Sicinski's breakaway goal midway in the third period broke the tie for the Racers and Nick Harbaruk scored an empty-net goal in the final minute to clinch the victory.

Tonight, Cleveland Crusaders visit Quebec Nordiques, Chicago is at Indianapolis and Vancouver meets the Mariners in San Diego.

Toronto Toros' game against the Stags in Michigan has been postponed pending the outcome of league attempts to find a new home for the financially-troubled Stags.

Alderman Wally Dever officially opened the 1975 Metro Junior B All-star game when he dropped the puck between East team captain, Jim Richardson, of Belleville (right) and Brian Cleaver, of Wexford, the West team captain. Dever was representing the city and the Recreation and Arena Committee.

1600 Watch Bassin's All-stars Win

East's Defence Stymies Western Scorers

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

While the West had all the league's top goal-scorers, it didn't do them any good. The East put together a solid all-round effort and came up with a 9-4 win in the 20th Annual Metro Junior B All-star game at the Memorial Arena Wednesday night.

"We came up flat," said West coach Rick Hay, of the Bramalea Blues, "they did everything well and we did nothing the way we should have."

Pickering coach Sherry Bassin said he and his Eastern team had the game planned. "We had an idea what they were going to do so we sort of planned things out ahead of time," said the Pickering Panther coach.

Whatever Bassin and his crew figured was going to happen they certainly weren't far wrong in their assumptions. The West was just outplayed in all aspects of the game of hockey.

What the East came up with was a particularly strong defensive display, combined with a unified offensive output. Kevin Owen and Dave West, of Pickering, Jake Ayotte and Larry Gibson, of Peterborough, Dave Taylor, of Belleville, and Mario Giallonardo, of Markham, all deserve honorable mention for the jobs they did at the East blueline.

All six of the East defencemen stood and knocked oncoming West all-star rushers on their high-scoring laurels. They took no preference as to who the player was. Many a time the three Bramalea stars Doug Crawford, Dean Hartwell and Steve Beasly were either ridden out of the play or driven off the puck as they rushed across the East blueline.

Giallonardo probably handed out the stiffest check of the night, sending a West attacker to his knees at centre ice. That was followed by a tough crack from Ayotte. His check was a stiff one, but had to take the back seat to Giallonardo's.

When the East defencemen weren't picking off on-coming attackers like flies, or busting up any meandering West passing plays, they were lugging the puck out of their own end. The six stalwarts did some very fancy footwork on many occasions and, for never having played with many of the forwards, they made some very accurate passes.

To say the West came up flat is possibly an understatement. They had no defence at all. Their passes were ill-timed and inaccurate and their highspeed rushes were unco-ordinated.

They started out the first period on a blitz. It paid off. After just 32 seconds they scored. Hartwell put one in from his Bramalea linemates Crawford and Beasly. That, however, was as far in command as the West went.

Pickering's Steve Falkner bounced back with a pair of goals at 5:20 and 6:47 and Jim Richardson deflected in Chuck Druocher's blueline drive at 8:45 to put the East in front 3-1.

St. Michael's, Loris Mazzutti made it 4-2 at 15:10 and that's how the period ended.

Take 3

In the second period, Kingston's Kip Acton and Cam MacGregor scored to make it 5-2 before starting West netminder, Barry Oakes, from Bramalea, was replaced by Wexford's Bruce Knaggs. At the same time the East starting goalie, Pickering's Jim Metz, was taken out and Peterborough's Rob Duncan replaced him.

Falkner made the score 6-2 with his third of the night at 12:15 of the middle period. The West came back on a goal by St. Mike's John Stornic at 13:18 to make it 6-3.

Before the second period was over the score was 7-3 as the East got another one from Pickering's Cam Small.

With 3:25 gone in the final 20 minutes the West made a comeback drive with a goal from Mazzutti, his second of the night.

Small replied with his second of the night at 12:04 and at 14:36 Jeff Rorabeck, of Oshawa, rounded out the score at 9-4.

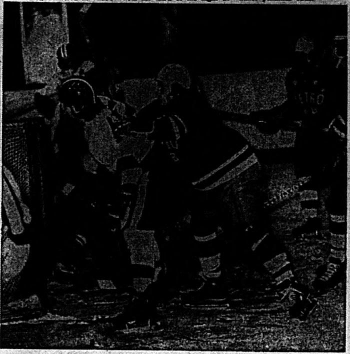
Top Notch

Many people considered the officiating at the 20th Annual Metro Junior B All-star game to be the best they'd seen in a long time.

The reason for the excellence was the fact that all three of the officials do minor-pro games and the threesome have to be good because they are sanctioned by the National Hockey League.

The three officials, John Brown, Gregg Madill and Bruce Garside, were supplied by the NHL.



Clear the Track

West Division All-star defenceman Bill Metcalf, from Wexford Warriors, shoves East team forward Cam MacGregor, of Kingston, out of harm's way wednesday night at the Memorial Arena. Metcalf was one of the few West team players who used his body to protect his team's goalies in the game. Here, Bruce Knaggs, of Wexford, is the netminder making the save and receiving the protection.

Men, The Time is Now

One could easily have come away from last night's Bay of Quinte Soccer Association (BQSA) Annual General Meeting with the impression that there was a real danger the league will not operate this year.

Attempts to elect an executive for 1975 failed miserably.

Only about 20 persons showed up for the meeting and none of them showed any inclination to stand for office.

In fact, nominations were hard to come by.

Two men were nominated for president and both declined the nomination.

There were two nominations for vice-president. And again, nether man would stand.

At that point, Trenton Minor Soccer Association executive member Jim Carruthers, who was handling election proceedings, realized the futility of going any further. He gave up.

Outgoing president Peter Crowle, agreeing to try it again one more time "in about two weeks" challenged those in attendance to "get the lead out or you won't be playing in a soccer league here this year".

"Go home and do some soul searching," advised Crowle.

"In two weeks' time if we have another turnout like tonight, I'll wash my hands of it," he said.

Crowle is disappointed.

"There are 150 players registerd with the BQSA," he observed, "and we can't turn out four people to run the league."

I am convinced it's simply a case of the soccer blokes lacking a sense of urgency when it comes to planning for a new season.

Crowle tried to impress his listeners with the fact that there is a need for urgency when he reminded them that it will soon be time to look after such items as registering with the Ontario Soccer Association.

The men nominated for the position of president found it necessary to decline because they are, to put it bluntly, too damn busy with other commitments.

Tony Venditta, manager of the Cobourg Tony's Soccer Club, recently opened a pizza parlor in Port Hope. That, together with his Cobourg Operation, and duties with his own club, made it impossible for him to accept the nomination.

Belleville's John O'Neill, already involved in the game from the minor level to senior, had to say "no".

But both men told me later that should the league be in danger of folding, they may reconsider.

"I hate to start anything I can't give 100 per cent to," explained Venditta, "but I won't see the league fold."

Certainly, men who are busy with other interests but still have time to serve the BQSA as team managers and in other capacities, should not be put on the spot and asked to take positions on the executive.

As I said before, soccer enthusiasts in this area must realize that there is a reason for urgency. April is no time to start planning. The time is now.

Anyway, they'll try again in two weeks.

Pickering Star MVP

Dave Falkner was named the Most Valubale Player of the 1975 Metro Junior B All-star game. Falkner, a right-winger with Pickering Panthers, did some solid fore-checking and scored three goals and added a pair of assists to earn the coveted Perc Toppin Trophy.

Falkner currently ranks seventh in the league's scoring statictics with 38 goals and 17 assists for 55 points. His 38 goals ties him for top spot in that category.

Support from Fans Swells Two Funds

Belleville Police Chief, Douglas Crosbie, and Belleville Fire Chief, Leo Culhane, were just two of the dignitaries on hand for Wednesday night's Metro Junior B All-star game at the Memorial Arena.

The two escorted the Ontario representative for the Crippled Children's Society "Timmy" — who happens to be Belleville's Billy Lynch — onto the ice to accept part of the gate receipts on behalf of his organization.

The contribution is made every year to the OSCC from the all-star game gate receipts. Last season the society received about $450. This time around, thanks to the people of Belleville who came out and the All-star game gate received about $1,000.

Almost 1,600 fans showed up to the game.

The other half of the gate receipts go to the Charlie Conacher Research Fund. This is a contribution made on behalf of the Sports Broadcasters and Sportswriters Association. Jack Devine was on hand to accept the donation of about $1,000.

Richardson Injured

Jim Richardson, high scoring right winger of the Belleville Bobcats, is expected to be out of the lineup of the next three weeks.

Richardson incurred a minor shoulder separation near the end of the first period of the 20th Annual Metro Junior B All-star game. This was his second consecutive selection to the East All-star squad. He scored a goal just minutes before the accident occurred.

"It was a good clean check," he said after it was all over, "just one of those freak accidents."

Richardson's accident will leave him out of action until the second week of the Metro Junior B playoffs. Belleville has just seven games remaining in the regular schedule.

Cook Haunts Former Mates

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bob Cook returned to haunt his old Baltimore team-mates Wednesday night, scoring three goals to lead New Haven Nighthawks to a 7-2 win over the Clippers in an American Hockey League game.

Cook, who scored 19 for the Clippers last season, scored two of his goals Wednesday in a 17-second span in the second period.

In Wednesday's other AHL games, Richmond Robins downed Hershey Bears and Rochester Americans downed Nova Scotia Voyageurs, both by 5-2 scores.

Oshawa In Front

OSHAWA — Failing to capitalize on numerous powerplay opportunities led to Belleville's Shell Juveniles' 4-0 Eastern Ontario AAA playoff loss here last night.

The Shells get a chance to even the best-of-five series with first-place Oshawa Saturday night in the 9 p.m. fourth game at the Dick Ellis Rink.

If a fifth game is necessary, it will be played Sunday in Oshawa.

Green Team Cools Reds

In Quinte Women's Basketball League action Wednesday night, Green retained first place by upending the hot Red squad 51-39. Red had been on a winning streak before meeting up with Green.

In the other league game, White dumped Blue 45-12.

Green got 18 points from Lynn Brealey and 14 from Patti Clapp. Carol Mott was next with 13.

Ann Lietaer was tops for Red with 13 points.

Donna Patterson and Carol Northey each dropped in 14 points for White and Karen Rouse got 11. Gabi Cornellier and Janet Whelan were tops for Blue with four points each.

All-star Coaches Compare Notes

Pickering Panther coach, Sherry Bassin, and Bramalea Blues coach Rick Hay are the keenest of adversaries at the worst of times. Wednesday night however, for the 20th Annual Metro Junior B All-star game they were showing the wear and tear of the regular season.

SHERRY BASSIN

Nevertheless, Bassin guided his East Division All-star squad to a 9-4 victory.

"We figured they were going to try to work the puck up the middle," said East coach Bassin, "so I had my centres forecheck for a while and had my wingers play man-on-man with their wingers."

The move left the centre ice path blocked off and cut off any open areas along the boards.

"They cut off the middle for the early part of the game," said West coach Hay, "so we started dumping the puck into their zone."

That's where the top grade of defenceman paid off for the East. While the West were dumping the puck in and chasing it, the East defencemen were lugging the puck out and head-manning it to the rushing forwards.

Countless times in the contest the West players were caught flatfooted simply because they couldn't get back to back check in time to stop the East forwards.

"Their defence was good," said Hay.

"Our defence really did it for us," said Bassin, "they were fantastic."

RICK HAY

BCI Sweeps Three

Larry Wilson continued to lead the Belleville Collegiate (BCI) attack as the big Red and Black machine rolled over Prince Edward Collegiate of Picton 74-29. Wilson not only scored 24 of his senior team's points, but also led in the rebounding department with 13.

In other games in the Bay of Quinte Boy's Basketball League, the BCI juniors downed Picton 45-15 and in the midget contest the home crew trounced PECI 66-29.

In the midget contest, Mike Wright got 19 points and Chris Niblett got 14 to top the scorers' list. Dwight Begley was next for the BCI squad with 10 points.

Jeff Jones replied with 17 points for the visitors.

Bobcat Boosters Organize

Even though there are only six games left in the regular schedule, the Bobcat Booster Club is looking to make a comeback.

"We feel now that the interest is back with the Bobcats," said one of last year's organizers, Arley Kerwin, "especially since they've started winning again."

Mrs. Kerwin is hoping to get any and all interested parties out to next Wednesday's meeting.

"We'll be meeting at the Memorial Arena at 7.30 p.m.," she said, "and everyone is welcome."

Regardless of the outcome of next week's meeting the good old Belleville Bobcat Booster Club buttons will be on sale from both McKnight's Variety, on Front Street, and Mrs. Kerwin. The buttons read "GO CATS GO".

Tuesday night Mrs. Kerwin and Bob Carey spent some time hanging Booster Club signs around the Memorial.

The club is basically concerned with getting out of town buses arranged for playoff games. The meeting will also involve the election of officers.

Barriage Upsets Picton

Though they couldn't beat Trenton on the weekend, Mel Barriage did manage to beat second place Picton 3-2 in Quinte Women's Hockey League action Tuesday night. Trenton is in last place in the four team loop and Belleville is now one point out of the number two spot. Stirling is tops.

Sue Morton scored twice to lead the locals' attack and Joyce McFarlane added the third. Judy Pettingill and Wendy Cooper replied for Picton.

Kelsey Rink Beaten

TORONTO (Special) — Betty Kelsey's Quinte Curling Club rink from Belleville lost twice here Wednesday in Southern Ontario Ladies' Curling Association playoff competition.

Lorraine Johns of Toronto defeated Kelsey's foursome 13-5, and the Belleville rink dropped a 1-5 decision to Corrine Kilmer of St. Catharines.

Rinks skipped by Joan Mathers of Toronto and Shirley MacDonald of Chatham remained undefeated Wednesday. The two meet today to determine the winner of the top half of the draw in the double knockout competition.

CHILDREN ARE WELCOME

In fact, children are needed to make this house a happy home. It was built for a large family and it's ideal for the youngsters. Consider these features : 4 bedrooms, 1½ baths, main floor family room, full basement. 9% mortgage runs for 25 years. Only 15 months old. Close to schools, recreation, bus, shopping. Compare these advantages and price of $47,900, against any listing in the entire West Hill area.

HOW TO GET ALL YOU PAY FOR

If you want full value for every dollar, look at this property at 84 Village Drive. Side split featuring 3 bedrooms, living room, dining room, kitchen. Carpeted rec room with bar complete with patio and privacy fence. 8¾% mortgage makes this a very inviting new listing. Attractively priced at $43,900.00.

INSIDE LOOKING OUT

What a view ! You'll feel like you own the world. Let us show you this up-to-date high ranch with lots of exciting features in the town of Trenton, on Parkside Drive. Good sized kitchen, living room, dining room, 3 bedrooms, 4-pc. bath, finished rec room and paved drive to single attached garage.

WILLING TO DO SOME HOME WORK ?

It's a good grade of house, but it needs paint and a few small repairs. Well worth it. 1½-storey brick and aluminum on half acre lot two miles from Bloomfield. Large kitchen with pantry. King size living room with natural pine floors. 3 bedrooms, 4-pc. bath, new FAO heating. This restful tree-shaded home will be your cosy retreat on dead-end road. Asking $24,500. You can own this home for $5,000.00 down and vendor will hold mortgage.

Terms and Conditions — Each item will be sold without warranty on an "As Is - Where Is" basis. At no time shall any claim be allowed against the Ministry with respect to any material or equipment.

Vehicles will be sold without licence plates. In order to obtain plates the buyer must have the prescribed inspection carried out by a licensed Motor Vehicle Inspection Station and a Safety Standards Certificate issued. Vehicles cannot be removed from Ministry property until paid for in full and then only under the following conditions: (a) with a Dealer's Transit Licence Plate (b) with an Out-of-Province Licence Plate (c) using proper towing or car transporter.

The Ministry will not be responsible for any damage or accident involving a vehicle following the acceptance of the vehicle by the new owner or his agent.

The successful bidder will be required to load and/or transport his purchase at his own expense.

Amount of $100.00 or less, being the full bid price must be paid at the time of sale. A deposit of $100.00 on each item sold over $100.00 must be paid at time of sale. This deposit will be held by the Ministry as security for the due performance of the contract of sale and as part payment of the purchase price. Failure to comply will result in the item being re-auctioned.

NOTE: Buyers may, before the start of sale, deposit with the cashier an amount equal to or greater than the amount that is deemed sufficient to cover deposits or full payments.

Each successful bidder will be required to pay to the Minstry the bid price and The Ontario Retail Sales Tax will be based on the total of the bid price and the Federal Sales Tax.

Within five (5) working days after the date of the sale, the successful bidder must pay in full the balance owing for his purchase and remove it from Ministry property. Failure to complete payment within the five working days, the deposit will be forfeited and the item held for resale. All cheques, money orders, or bank drafts must be made payable to the "Treasurer of Ontario". All cheques must be certified.

Items may be inspected at the above location from 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. on January 27th, 28th, 29th and Thursday, January 30th, 1975 until time of sale.

Deputy Chief Scout Thinks Decline in Movement Halted

OTTAWA (CP) — By re-emphasizing the fundamentals of the movement, scouting can reverse its recent membership decline and go on to new strengths.

That's the view of Lt.-Gen. William Carr, Canada's deputy chief scout.

The Boy Scouts of Canada, the movement's English-speaking section, has lost members steadily since it reached a peak of 288,000 in 1965. By the end of 1974, this figure had declined more than 26 per cent, to 212,000.

But scout officials see reason for optimism in the fact that the 1974 drop was only 1.5 per cent from 1973 figures.

"I am not preoccupied with numbers but rather with the relevance and quality of our programs," said Gen. Carr. "Then, automatically, the numbers will come."

He said loss of membership can be related in part to a general decline in the number of young people eligible to participate in boy scout programs after the end of the post-war baby boom. There are scout programs for all from the age of five to 24.

Gen. Carr is deputy chief of defence staff and one of the top military men in the country. But his real passion is the scouting movement in which he has participated for 40 years as a scout, scout leader and scoutmaster.

He assumed his present position in the movement about 18 months ago. The Chief Scout of Canada is Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger.

Gen. Carr said the movement began to lose members in the mid-1960s because it strayed away from its guiding principles.

"In our attempt to keep up with the times we tended to over-sophisticate our programs."

The movement began to use jargon that more properly belonged in a business organization, referring to establishment of goals, measurement of success and similar terms.

At the same time there was a tendency to "over-democratize" the movement. The traditional role of leaders was undermined, resulting in lower morale among adult volunteers.

"Youth wants leaders. They know they need leaders."

After a period of intense self-examination, the organization has also decided to redouble its emphasis on outdoor programs.

Gen. Carr cited increased attendance at summer camps and weekend camps in 1974 as evidence of renewed interest.

But there was a growing recognition that the attitude of scouts to the outdoors would have to change.

In its report to the November meeting of the Boy Scouts of Canada national council, the program committee said: "In recent years we have been coming under increasing criticism by outside authorities; the phrase 'behave like scouts' often beng used to describe destructive camping practices."

Gen. Carr agreed that scouts will have to change their approach. Live trees should no longer be cut, grease pits no longer dug and all garbage should be taken from campsites.

Again he said, it's just a matter of returning to the fundamentals of the movement. He quoted its founder, Lord Baden-Powell: "When you leave a campsite, leave nothing but your thanks."

He said scouting must become more adaptable in its approach to boys in urbanized settings. There are pilot programs in cities like Toronto aimed at the special needs of youth in ethnic communities and in high-rise apartment buildings.

But scouts have long since learned to adapt their programs to the special needs of different areas, the deputy chief scout added.

In the Arctic, where about 45 per cent of eligible youths are scout members, it was found that awards for campfire and woodcraft skills were not practical in the barren environment.

So the movement introduced awards for interpretation skills, dog-team driving and snow-house building.

Gen. Carr said be is optimistic about the movement's future. He was enthusiastic about the success of the Beaver program for children five to seven years old. Begun as an experiment in Winnipeg in 1971, the program was adopted by the national council as an official program in Uovember.

He also looked forward to the national jamboree in 1977. Gen. Carr said planning has begun for the event, which he hopes will attract 1,000 boy scouts from across the country.

A thousand Canadian scouts are expected to travel to Norway next July for the 14th world jamboree, sponsored by scouts in the Scandinavian countries.

Canadian boys attending the jamboree, called Norjamb, will spend three weeks abroad, which includes five days of home hospitality with Scandinavian families, specal tours, and eight days at the jamboree itself.

Plan Session

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the Ontario legislature will return Monday to Queen's Park for a short wrapup to the fourth session of the 29th legislature, it was announced Wednesday.

Roderick Lewis, clerk of the assembly, said Wednesday that members were being informed of the resumption.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Friday, Jan. 24

Aries (March 21-April 19) You'll be getting good news you've been hoping for. It will come in an unusual, indirect manner, from left field.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Conditions you're not even aware of at present will have a favorable effect upon your position and income when they surface.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20) Your ideas and actions will motivate those you'll be associating with today. Zero-in on worthwhile targets.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You will find that individuals will be far more co-operative today than yesterday. Needed aid will be volunteered.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) A kindness you'll perform will later prove to be of even more benefit to you than it was to her.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something important will be achieved today. Though you'll receive most of the credit you won't have pulled it off alone.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You'll do well with projects you can promote personally. If you have something of value to offer, get out and talk it up.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Conduct important business affairs as early in the day as possible. Though you'll come out favorably, they could take longer than you think.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're lucky in partnership matters now. Through a unique chain of circumstances you'll wind up with some extra profit.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't hide your light under a bushel at work. Tell the boss about ways you see to save time and money.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It would be a mistake to pass up social invitations today. There's a pleasant encounter in store for you with some one new.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) A situation you've been dubious about will be suddenly finalized to your liking. Yo'll see how foolish it was to worry.

VISITORS UNWELCOME

LONDON (CP) — Earl Jermyn, 20, son of the Marquess of Bristol, has been fined £20 ($46) for stealing four "no parking" signs. He used them to keep people from parking outside his residence in the fashionable Dolphin Square area of London.

Thawing in Sun Dangerous Way

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter-in-law thaws her poultry in the sun. I say this is dangerous. She also thaws her beef the same way.

We also argue about eggs. She says they don't have to be refrigerated. I would appreciate your views.—Mrs. F.H.

Thawing poultry or beef in the sun will soften the outside but it might take some time for the inside to thaw. Meanwhile, bacteria can be having a field day in the thawed portion. From the freezer to the refrigerator, then to the room temperature is the better and safer route for any meat.

Eggs should be kept cool in a refrigerator and preferably covered. Under refrigeration eggs will keep their taste and quality for several weeks. At room temperature they can lose more quality in a day than in a week under refrigeration.

I'm also told that eggs left uncovered can pick up odd flavors from surrounding foods in or out of the refrigerator.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 61 and have angina pectoris. My doctor tells me there is no restriction in regard to diet or exercise, and the only medication, if needed, is nitroglycerine.

Is this possible?—M.A.C.

This is a question I can answer both yes and no to. And here's why.

You have angina and that means you are not A-ok. The diagnosis itself means that there is insufficient oxygen for your heart's need. This is due to inadequacy of blood flow in part of your circulatory system. You found that out when you had your first angina attack. At that moment the heart muscle became starved for oxygen.

I assume your angina is quite mild or your doctor would have warned of potential future attacks caused by over-exertion. However, you may have misinterpreted what your doctor told you about diet. To be sure, if you are a naturally thin person who eats sensibly, then there is no need for diet, unless to reduce the blood cholesterol level, which can be a factor in angina.

But as to exercise, I would go about it with sensible caution. You should exercise very carefully until you find at just what point you are near to overdrawing on your heart's oxygen supply. If your exercise is going to be strenuous, be prepared to stop short of the point of angina pain. In that way, you will sooner or later be able to set your own pace of living safely with your angina.

As for medication, nitroglycerine is standard. In your case, which appears to be a mild one, the nitroglycerine will serve well. But it need not be used in only an emergency atmosphere. You might put a tablet under your tongue just prior to a long walk or strenuous exercise.

Until you learn just what "unrestricted exercise" means in your case it is better to be safe than sorry.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you comment on the effects of the northern climate upon osteoarthritis? I am seriously afflicted with it at age 33.—H.N.

The northern climate would not influence osteoarthritis. The chief causes of it are, depending on which joints are involved, heredity, type of work and often overweight.

With rheumatoid arthritis, a warm climate is beneficial, manly because of the comfort afforded, although the disease is just as prevalent in Florida as it is in Minnesota.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

It didn't take South more than 10 seconds to chuck his contract out the window. He grabbed his ace of spades, led the three of trumps and rose with dummy's jack after West followed with the five spot. It did take him quite a while to play the rest of the hand, but since he had no way to avoid the loss of two trumps, a spade and a diamond, all that followed was wasted effort.

South blamed bad luck. In one respect it was bad luck. A 4-0 trump break occurs just about 10 per cent of the time.

South's bad play was that he failed to guard against the actual 4-0 break. Give East all four trumps and South would have been helpless.

South could have guarded against all four in the West hand by the simple expedient of leading his queen of trumps. East would have shown out and later on South would have been able to lead through West's 10-9-5 and pick up the suit.

South would still have had some slight problems, but there were any number of ways to avoid the loss of more than one diamond trick.

Theatre Seeks Funds

STRATFORD-ON-AVON (CP) — The Royal Shakespeare Theatre has launched an international appeal for £1 million ($2.3 million) for urgent repairs to the 43-year-old building. Sir George Farmer, chairman of the board of governors, said licensing authorities have demanded installation of a new ventilation and heating system.

VICTIM CHEWED OUT

LEEDS, England (CP) — When Terance O'Keefe lost all his top teeth in an auto accident, nearby Bradford city council admitted blame and offered £750 ($1,725) compensation. But O'Keefe, saying he no longer could chew gum, refused and went to court. The judge awarded him only £300, saying "he's a healthy young man of 26—he's not a delicate flower."

Writers Honor Brown Bomber

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Louis has been named The Man of the Half Century by the United States Boxing Writers Association.

The Brown Bomber, who won the world heavyweight crown in 1937 and held it for 12 years, won over Jack Dempsey and Muhammad Ali in a poll commemorating the 50th anniversary of the writers' group.

The period covers 1925 to 1975.

Louis, 61, received 28 first-place votes and 144 points. Dempsey was second with 18 first-place votes and 96 points, followed by Ali, the current champion, with 14 firsts and 90 points.

Following, in order, came Sugar Ray Robinson, the late Nat Fleischer (publisher of Ring Magazine), Rocky Marciano and Henry Armstrong.

Portland Wastes Walton's Effort

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bill Walton is getting used to playing in the National Basketball Association but isn't getting used to losing.

The centre for Portland Trail Blazers had his best game in the NBA Wednesday night, but wasn't happy with it because of the final results.

"We lost," was Walton's only answer to a reporter's question about his 25-point, 11-rebound 96-94 loss to Detroit Pistons.

Centre Bob Lanier sank a nine-foot throw with seven seconds left to give Detroit its victory. Portland had battled back from a 79-70 third-quarter deficit mostly on the shooting of Walton.

Lanier finished with 25 points and Curtis Rowe also added 25—his best output of the season. Dave Bing scored 22 for Detroit.

In other NBA games, Washington Bullets stopped Kansas City-Omaha Kings 97-88 and Boston Celtics beat New Orleans Jazz 110-102.

In the American Basketball Association, Kentucky Colonels whipped Memphis Sounds 114-91, Indiana Pacers trimmed Denver Nuggets 120-110, and the Spirits of St. Louis beat San Diego Conquistadors 129-124 in overtime.

Aston Villa In Final

LONDON (CP) — For the third successive year, manager Ron Saunders has taken a club to the English League Cup soccer final.

His latest team, Aston Villa, defeated Fourth Division Chester 3-2 Wednesday to advance against Norwich, which defeated Manchester United of the Second Division 1-0 in the other semi-final.

Two years ago, Saunders was in charge of a Norwich club which reached the final. In 1974, he was successful with Manchester City.

Aston Villa, held to a 2-2 tie in the first leg of the semi-final, appeared to be on the way to an easy victory in the semi-final contest when Tom Leonard scored goals in the 19th and 27th minutes.

But Stuart Mason and John James tied the score for Chester before Brian Little got the winning goal 10 minutes from the end.

Colin Suggett scored the only goal which gave Norwich a 3-2 aggregate in its second-leg contest with Manchester United.

Aston Villa now meets Norwich in the final, which involves Second Division teams, at Wembley Stadium on March 1.

Weiskopf Cleared

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf was cleared Wednesday of charges that he failed to exert his best effort in the second round of last week's Dean Martin-Tucson Open golf tournament.

The sometimes temperamental star—twice subject to disciplinary action for similar offences—last week was accused by Tucson tournament director Biff Baker of failing to play in a professional manner.

The offence is a violation of the by-laws of the Tournament Players Division (TPD) of the Professional Golfers Association.

Weiskopf failed to qualify for the final two rounds of the Tucson tournament. He played his last nine holes in 41 strokes, twice taking a score of seven on a hole, and had a 148 total for two rounds.

TPD commissioner Deane Beman said in a news release that "the evidence in this case supports Weiskopf's contention that his play, though erratic, represents his best efforts under existing playing conditions."

British Board Favors Bugner

LONDON (AP) — The British Boxing Board of Control urged the World Boxing Council Wednesday not to recognize the scheduled world heavyweight title fight between Muhammad Ali and Chuck Wepner.

In a statement, the board said it had sent a cable to the WBC asking the ruling body to say it "will be no party" to the fight scheduled for Cleveland on March 24. The board thinks Britain's European champion, Joe Bugner, should meet Ali for the title.

Wepner, a 33-year-old liquor salesman from Bayonne, N.J., is unranked in world lists. In 1970, he was stopped by Bugner in three rounds, because of cuts.

Bugner is listed fourth in heavyweight rankings and the Hungarian-born Briton went the distance, but lost on points, to Ali in Las Vegas in 1973.

Wepner, labelled The Bayonne Bleeder, has a guaranteed purse of $100,000 for the fight. It will be Ali's first defence of the title he won last October in Zaire by knocking out George Foreman.

Mass Murder Suspect Slain

Police Bullets Fell R. Blass in Chalet

MONTREAL (CP) — Richard Blaas, a 28-year-old escaped convict known as the "Cat" or "Weasel" because of numerous escapes from the jaws of death, died in a hail of police bullets early today.

Blass, who escaped from the maximum-security wing of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary last October, had been a suspect in a double murder at a north-end Montreal nightclub last October and the slaying of 13 persons at the same club earlier this week.

Acting on a tip, police surrounded a four-room, Swiss-type chalet where Blass was hiding out in Val David, a Laurentians ski area 60 miles north of here, a police spokesman said.

Heavily-armed detectives from Quebec Provincial Police homicide-and holdup squads backed up by Montreal policemen, moved into position at about 4:30 a.m. EST and called upon Blass to surrender.

QPP Sgt.-Det. Albert Lisacek, who led the raid, said 15 to 20 officers burst in on Blass in the bedroom and cut him down with automatic weapons as he reached for his gun. Initial police reports indicated Blass had fired off a few shots before being hit himself.

Police said a man and two women in the chalet with Blass were taken into custody.

Police said Blass was hit while trying to reach an arsenal of weapons he had stored in his bedroom, including two sawed-off shotguns, revolvers, pistols and gas masks.

Blass was serving 15 years for attempted murder, armed robbery, assaulting a police officer and car theft when he escaped prison last October with four other convicts.

Three of his companions have since been recaptured, a fourth, Jean-Paul Mercier was shot and killed by police following an attempted holdup last November.

laude Girouard, Crown prosecutor at the trial of two women convicted last October as accomplices in the escape from St. Vincent de Paul, called the jail break "the biggest escape of the century" and described Blass as one "of Canada's most dangerous criminals."

He received his sobriquet "Cat" for his brushes with both police and the underworld.

He was ambushed at least four times by underworld gunmen, the last time six years ago when assailants lurking in a nearby St. Michel garage, opened fire on him and a friend. He was felled by four bullets and at one point lay near death.

In January, 1969, Blass and three others were arrested after a 90-mile-an-hour chase from a holdup in which they exchanged 40 shots with police.

In October of that year, Blass and eight other convicts escaped from a police van taking them to the courthouse. He was recaptured hours later.

Last June 19, he escaped prison with four others after grabbing three prison guards as hostages. He was recaptured three days later while sleeping in a Montreal apartment.

During his subsequent trial on charges of escaping lawful custody, Blass told the presiding judge there was no prison which could hold him.

Earlier this month, heavily-armed police surrounded a house in nearby Laval hoping to find Blass. They burst through the front door only to find that he had slipped away a short time before.

Special Tax Deal Will End For Time, Reader's Digest

OTTAWA (CP) — The government proposed pulling the tax rug from under Time and Reader's Digest Thursday, producing different responses from the two publications.

Time Canada Ltd. president Stephen LaRue announced hours later that the decision will "cause us to cease" the Canadian edition of Time which features about 10 per cent Canadian content.

Reader's Digest was more optimistic. Ralph Hancox, the monthly magazine' vice-president, said he hoped the government would reconsider.

The long-simmering issue came to a head in the Commons when State Secretary Hugh Faulkner announced an end, effective Jan. 1, 1976, to special tax concessions accorded Canadian advertisers using the two magazines.

On the same date, he said, similar privileges will end for Canadian advertisers using United States radio and television stations along the 4,000-mile international border.

In essence, the government will withdraw the right of Canadian advertisers to deduct from income taxes the money they now spend on advertising in all foreign periodicals a d broadcasts.

The privilege of doing so, in the case of Time and Reader's Digest was granted in the early 1960s by the Progressive Conservative government of John Diefenbaker. The exemption did not apply to other periodicals.

Mr. Faulkner said Thursday that he hopes the decision will lead to creation of a new Canadian news magazine, the idea being that advertising dollars spent on Time and Reader's Digest would go to a new magazines.

Response came quickly from Maclean's editor Peter Newman, an outspoken nationalist, who said the prospective increase in domestic advertising revenue might result in a weekly edition of the now-monthly Maclean's.

Robert Page, chairman of the Committee for an Independent Canada, hailed the announcement as the turning point for the long suffering periodical publishing industry in Canada. Pierre Camu, president of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, said he was delighted.

Commons opposition spokesmen were more cautious.

Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe) said the Jan. 1, 1976, deadline is good because it allows all parties concerned time to examine the full implications.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) and Andre Fortin (SC—Lotbiniere) called the move long overdue but said it should have been accompanied by incentives to ensure magazine publishing improvements at home.

Publishers Conferring

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner is expected to unveil the next phase of the government's publishing policy at a two-day conference beginning here today on the state of English-language publishing.

He is expected to outline details of a proposed $1.5-million program to help publishers improve promotion and distribution of Canadian books. He has said that the program, first promised during the July election campaign, will help reverse foreign domination of the domestic publishing industry.

New Shells Developed

OTTAWA (CP) — A new type of artillery ammunition developed by a former McGill University professor has caught the eye of the defence department and several foreign governments.

A defence department spokesman said Thursday the government is watching closely experiments by Space Research (Quebec) Corp. of Montreal to vastly increase the range of ammunition for howitzers and other field guns.

The streamlined ammunition idea was conceived by Dr. Jerry Bull, a scientist who some years ago headed a McGill University space research project using an old navy gun to launch projectiles into the upper atmosphere.

The Dutch and United States governments are among several countries which have shown interest in the extended range ammunition project, the defence department spokesman said.

Montreal Must Pay Part of Games Cost

QUEBEC (CP) — Despite Mayor Jean Drapeau's promise that the 1976 Olympic Games "won't cost Montreal taxpayers one cent," the city will have to bear part of the $250 million forecast deficit, Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said Thursday.

The provincial government will pay only part of the deficit and Montreal will have to assume some of the responsibility, the premier said.

Rapidly mounting costs—from an original $310 million to $600-$644 million—will result in a minimum deficit of $209 million.

"Mayor Drapeau can justify spending city money for some of these facilities—after all these facilities will generate revenues for some time to come," the Mr. Bourassa said.

A Quebec legislature committee looking into costs of Games facilities adjourned Thursday after three days of hearings. When hearings reopen Tuesday, committee members will hear reports from the 1976 Olympic Organizing Committee (COJO) and city consultants.

Postmen Start Talks; Strike Is Said Likely

OTTAWA (CP) — Contract talks between the treasury board and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) are to begin today, but there are already indications of a strike unless the thorny question of technological change is settled.

Jean-Claude Parrot, national vice-president and a member of the union's five-man bargaining team, said the post office's $90-million automation program must be negotiated if labor peace is to be maintained.

"Otherwise there will be no agreement and automation will not work," he said.

The union represents 20,000 inside workers at the post office who are most affected by the automation program which includes the introduction of postal-coding and sorting machinery.

However, under federal collective bargaining laws which apply to the employees, technological change and job classification are non-negotiable items.

Mr. Parrot said wage demands—which the union has declined to reveal—are another big issue with the union. However, the negotiating team would not sell job security for a temporary wage increase.

The workers' last contract, revoked in October when the Council of Postal Unions was decertified as the bargaining agent, began in March, 1973.

The 16,000 - member Letter Carriers' Union of Canada, bargaining separately for the first time in this round, said last week that they would take steps toward a walkout after one month of face-to-face talks.

Request for Federal Aid For Games Is Said Likely

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that Quebec has not requested additional federal aid for the 1976 Montreal Olympics, but there are other indications such a request is expected.

And one ministerial aide said: "They'd be damn fools if they didn't make a request. If you've got something going that's going to benefit all Canadians, you'd be a fool not to."

Mr. Trudeau's remark in the Commons came about the same time as Victor Goldbloom, Quebec municipal affairs minister, said in Quebec City Ottawa must reconsider its refusal to grant special assistance to the Games.

Fields Still Like Cline

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — George and Donna Field, whose eldest son Robert was held hostage for 34 hours by a gunman, say they know the man so well they once considered adopting him and still would welcome him to their home.

The man, Donald Wayne Cline, 22, was captured early Thursday after seeking refuge in a London townhouse. Bobby, 12, had been released unharmed shortly before.

Cline was remanded Thursday on a charge of armed robbery and will appear today for a bail hearing in Woodstock, Ont.

Police say he also may be charged with two counts of attempted murder of policemen, kidnapping and probably being unlawfully at large.

The drama began Tuesday when Cline, who escaped from prison last October, took four of the Field' children hostage in their farmhouse in nearby Thamesford.

He traded the three youngest children for $10,000 ransom and a getaway car before leading police on an 11-hour chase to Toronto and to London while holding 12-year-old Bobby captive.

"I'm sorry Wayne got caught. I didn't want him to go to jail or anything," Bobby said.

"At least if he was shot he wouldn't have to go through what he'll have to face now."

CN Puts Its Losses Due to Engineers' Walkout at 'Millions'

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Canadian National Railways engineers based in Belleville are responsible for "major finanacial losses" through lost passenger and freight business during an illegal strike, a top ranking CN spokesman in Toronto said.

John Noel, senior public relations officer in Toronto said today "the losses will run into several millions of dollars".

"The company is looking into several options open to it for legal action against those who have withdrawn their services," said Mr. Noel.

According to a CN source today, every engineer in Belleville called in "sick" Thursday night — bringing to a standstill most trains operating between Toronto and Montreal, the heart of the CN's passenger service.

"That's our best passenger line and we're losing all the money," said Mr. Noel.

The CN spokesman said transcontinental travel has also been cancelled due to sporadic disruptions across Canada.

Only two trains are expected to run between Toronto and Montreal at noon today. They will be staffed by supervisory personnel.

"The disruption is jeopardizing CN revenues in Toronto of more than $1-million a day," said Mr. Noel. "Grievances should be settled at the bargaining table and not by walking off the job."

Mr. Noel said CN is considering taking engineers to court.

In a prepared company release, Mr. Noel said, "the jobs of 'other union employees will be affected".

He said "no trains — no work."

Some employees directly connected to train movement in their jobs will receive layoff notices today.

The union met in Toronto Thursday to discuss the situation but no union comment was available today. Union sources indicate a 10 percent cost of living bonus is at the crux of engineers unrest.

Florists Haven't Escaped Inflation

Saying it with flowers, along with everything else, is more expensive these days. But the conversation goes on, according to Belleville - area florists.

Five years ago a dozen roses cost anywhere from $5.50 to $10 for short stems and small blossoms. The price today starts at $7.50 to $14 and can go as high as $20 for a dozen long-stemmed American Beauties, with large, well-formed blossoms.

Potted chrysanthemums, another staple of the florist trade, have gone from a minimum of $1.75 five years ago to $3.25 today. Larger plants in decorative pots can go as high as $8 to $10.

Delivery charges have been hit by inflation too. Five years ago delivery was free anywhere in the area. Today it is, too — sometimes. But most florists charge for out-of-town trips unless they happen to be going that way anyway, and one has instituted a 50-cent in-town charge for saying it with flowers.

Eastern College Studies Loyalist

Officials of Holland College of Applied Arts and Technology in Prince Edward Island toured Loyalist College this week and conferred with administrators to gain an insight into the over all system at Loyalist.

The group, on a fact-finding tour of colleges in eastern Ontario, led by Holland president, Don Glendenning, met with Loyalist President Herb Young, Paul King, dean of faculty and academic services, and Ed Buckley, director of retraining.

Remainder of the visiting delegation included four members of Holland's board of governors — Betty Howatt, a housewife who with her husband runs a family farm, Elizabeth Ferguson, a student board member, Dr. Tom Connor, representative of the PEI department of development, and George Wright, vice-president of a food processing company.

Mr. Glendenning explained in an interview Holland embarks on these annual trips to study "what other colleges are doing". Other stops on this year's itinerary are St. Lawrence College campuses in Brockville and Kingston, and the agricultural college in Kemptville.

"Any ideas we pick up we might put in our own program," commented Mr. Glendenning. "We are always looking for new ideas."

He noted Loyalist was chosen this year "because it serves a populaton area similar to ours," and due to the composition of the program system.

Mr. Glendenning said Holland College, now six years old, has an average full-time enrolment of close to 700 students. Its major campus is in Charlottetown, but there are a few people taking office studies at Summerside, 40 miles away.

Cruise Program Loses One Ship

The school cruise business has become a victim of the energy crisis.

Nevasa, one of the two ships used by the P and O passenger division for school cruises has been withdrawn from service because of escalating costs.

The withdrawal of the ship will not affect Med. 75, the Mediterranean cruise slated for Hastings County students in March.

The group from here had been booked aboard Uganda, the ship the company intends to continue to operate. Uganda will undertake her full school program throughout 1975.

In his letter notifying schools of the withdrawal of Nevasa, the educational cruise manager of P and O said costs have increased in many aspects of ship operation and the price of fuel has quadrupled.

"The much higher cost of transatlantic air travel has also affected the support from Canadian schools," he said.

Applications are now available for Med 76. The cruise will include three or four days in a European city, followed by a 13-15 day cruise to five or six Mediterranean countries. Cost is expected to be about $7.0.

When Lloyd Jones, Centennial Secondary School teacher first began conducting Hastings county students on the Mediterranean cruises, the cost was just under $400.

Artist Gives Lecture

"A painting should be an experience of some sort and not just a mechanized project. A painting should reveal feeling, sensitivity, awareness and a communication with people."

This is the advice Plainfield artisan Peter Coviello gave to members of the Belleville Art Association during their first meeting of the year at Corby Library Wednesday.

Mr. Coviello, a self-acclaimed potter after undergoing periods as a painter and photographer juried the annual show of the Association in November along with Toby Anderson of St. Lawrence College in Kingston. Mr. Coviello attended the Royal Academy of Art in England and came to Canada in 1968, teaching at Sheridan College in Oakville before moving here in 1970.

Police Honor Dead Comrade

MARYSVILLE — Representatives from police forces in Belleville, Trenton, Madoc and Picton were among those attending the funeral here Thursday for Ontario Provincial Police Constable Robert McCutcheon and his wife, Patricia.

CConstable McCutcheon, 35 and his wife, Patricia, 34, residents of Haileybury in Northern Ontario and two other persons were killed Saturday when two snowmobiles plunged into Lake Temiskaming near New Liskeard.

Constable McCutcheon was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert McCutcheon of Napanee. His wife, the former Patricia Brennan war the daughter of Fred Brennan of Marysville.

Taking part in the funeral at Holy Name of Mary Church were such local police officials as Belleville Chief Douglas Crosbie, Trenton Chief David Saunders, Superintendent with Belleville OPP detachment, G.M. Keast and officers from Madoc, Picton, Bancroft, Sharbot Lake and Napanee, among others.

OPP. Commissioner Harold Graham came from Toronto for the funeral as did other officers from general headquarters there.

Members from the Madoc and Belleville detachment were among those from various detachments forming the 12-man guard of honor as well as making up part of 16 bearers in the funeral.

Flowers, Too

Cut flowers and plants are no exception as rising wages and material costs add to the inflationary spiral. Floral aranger Sherree Semark shows a potted chrysanthemum that would have cost about a dollar less five years ago than it does today. Another florists' staple, a dozen roses, has also gone up by about 40 per cent, as have delivery charges levied by some florists.

Club for Deaf Offers Service for Handicapped

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

Man is by nature a social animal. And an important part of that trait involves communication with others.

But what about those cut off from communication through deafness? It is difficult enough for the deaf to communicate with hearing people but what about communicating on a social basis with other deaf people?

To help deaf people in this area socialize with each other, a club was set up in December called the Quinte Club of the Deaf.

Organized by Louise Tigwell Ford, a sign language interpreter for the deaf and Rev. Sidney Bates, the club has 30 members. Membership is open to both deaf and hearing people. Mr. Bates is with the Bay of Quinte Conference, ministry for the deaf.

Mrs. Ford reports the reasons for establishing such a club in this area. "Coming from the United States two years ago, I became aware of the limited social opportunity available to the deaf in the Quinte area.

"Eventually I became aware of the larger clubs and the smaller ones such as in Kingston and Peterborough. However, my friends and I felt these were not enough to fulfill the needs of deaf people in the Quinte area. We found there was little opportunity to meet other deaf people and get together with them,' said Mrs. Ford. herself the child of deaf parents.

"With the help of Rev. Bates, who works with the deaf, social nights were organized at OSD (now Sir James Whitney School). We were able to meet more deaf people and develop some communication with them.

"Together we discussed the merits of establishing a club where we could meet regularly," said Mrs. Ford.

She said that the first meeting was held at Sir James Whitney in December with a subsequent meeting held to adopt bylaws and elect officers. The officers were sworn in at the Jan. 18 meeting.

Mrs. Ford outlined the objectives of the club as follows: To provide a social organization; to provide an athletic outlet, to act as a supportive group and to develop good relationships between hearing and deaf people in the Quinte area.

Mrs. Ford said the club can aid in the problem of communication between deaf and hearing people.

An example would be appearing in court. With our club's combined deaf and hearing membership we could provide interpreters to help in such a situation.

"Another way the club can help is the counselling that can be provided for families with deaf children," said Mrs. Ford.

She said clinics may later be set up to counsel parents of the deaf who also have problems adapting to parenthood with a deaf child.

"And to help close the communication gap between deaf and hearing people, the club will teach its associates sign language. This will not only help for communication within the club but for those intending to work with the deaf, ouside the club," said Mrs. Ford.

Jorge Morel Duo Concert Entrances Sizeable Crowd

By EUGENE LANG

The popular duo of Jorge Morel, guitarist and Ralph Dorsey, percussion, made their second appearance before a sizeable audience in the collegiate auditorium Thursday evening as the middle attraction of this season's three presentations by the local Community Concert Association.

The program, entertaining throughout, was made up of works mostly by Spanish and Latin American composers who seem to tend toward the guitar in their musical output. All were of a dance nature, particularly of Brazilian and Argentianian leanings and gave the soloist ample opportunity to display his unlimited technique and sympathetic responsiveness to this genre.

One of the finest offerings was a rewarding interpretation of a Sonatina by Torroba, this being given a lyrical and expresive performance. A set of variations on a Theme of Handel (in reality the Air et varie from the Fifth Harpsichord Suite in E major, eroroneously known as The Harmonious Blacksmith) by Giuliani demonstrated the soloists agility on his stringed instrument. We could mention here that both the above mentioned selections were unnecesrarily interrupted by SAPS (Society for Applause to Perturb the Soloist) an ample clutch of same being present to demonstrate their nescience.

The Rossini Tarantella was given a seamless rendition owing to an uneven tempo — this type of dance requires an even beat throughout. Mr. Morel's own compositions were interesting in content, adding a note of personalization to the concert.

The percussionist, Ralph Dorsey, exhibited a pair of virtuosic hands at the drums in the selections that he accompanied Mr. Morel. His manual feats are vividly eye catching, although at one time in a long lick at the gourds one could close one's eyes and imagine background sounds for a Tarzan movie.

To rounds of applause the Duo gave freely with three encores, all novel in content, sending their hearers home with an evening of delightful musical entertainment behind them.

Talks Planned

Trenton Growth Needs Land

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Councillor Ron Price is spearheading a move to set up semi-official talks with Murray and Sidney Townships to discuss more land for industry in Trenton.

The councillor elaborated Thursday on a plan he first suggested to council earlier this week.

He suggeste dthe industrial committee of town council set up exploratory meeting wtih Trenton's neighboring municipalities.

"I'm sure that they want to work with us," Mr. Price said. Some indication has been received, that the councils of Murray and Sidney have wondered why Trenton has not talked with them, he said.

Basically, said Mr. Price, the talks would be geared to "feel them out: what is available from them, and what do they want in return".

His suggestion is partly motivated by a change in the makeup of the industrial committee this year.

Ronald Price

Prior to 1975, the committee consisted of 10 members among whom sat one representative of council.

This year, the committee is composed of two councillors, the mayor and clerk-administrator Aubrey Sharp.

In an advisory capacity will be a sub-committee of a still unknown number of Trenton business leaders.

Such a committee, beefed up significantly by the presence of council members, "makes it a little more powerful" says the councillor.

The committee could not guarantee any deals on behalf of council, he says, but its very make-up should lend weight to any proposals that are worked out with the townships that are subsequently brought to Trenton's full council.

Talks conducted by such an industrial committee would also end the previous practice by which report of any progress would have to go to council.

"Let's get talking, and make proposals back and forth and then bring them to council."

He said he feels his suggestion has the backing of other councillors.

When he opened his campaign to start such talks Monday, he received little opposition from fellow councillors. Only Mayor Robert Patrick questioned the suggestion, saying the town has not yet decided whether it will look east or west in its search for more land.

Both Mr. Price and F. J. P. Aziz, members of the industrial committee, lean towards Murray township for room to expand.

Mr. Aziz said Thursday the committee will likely decide this coming Monday what, if any, its approach will be.

He says some opposition may be encountered to what he considers is a "very important step" for Trenton.

Pete Aziz

Mayor Patrick was unavailable for comment Thursday.

Mr. Price said Thursday that if any proposals for annexation are worked out he does not anticipate any opposition from the province.

His understanding is that "if we applied for annexation, they wouldn't let us, but if we worked something out together (with the townships) then it's fine with them."

No firm decision on Trenton's affiliation has been made at Queen's Park. A study of government restructuring in Northumberland County is currently under way, but Trenton has not been formally included, although its position within a county structure is being considered.

Lawyer Questions Life Of Proposed Lagoon

STIRLING — The existing Stirling sewage lagoon was designed for 20 years, Hastings Federation of Agricultue president Ivan May told an Ontario Municipal Board hearing here Thursday, and "it has petered out in 13 years."

Hearing chairman A.B. Ball said "I hope anybody spending half a million dollars won't make a mistake the second time." The hearing was held to set the mill rate for new sewers, and to hear support for an additional lagoon for sewage treatment, or objections to it.

Consulting engineer Peter Anderson of Greer, Galloway and Assoc., said he believes the present sewer system, which covers only part of the village, is being infiltrated with ground water. He said there have been reports of poor constuction practices. The hearing chairman said the village had the means to detect water from roofs and property drainage being run illegally into the sewage system and should do so.

John C. Miller solicitor for Stirling, said the project was needed. Besides providing sewage service for many homes already built, he said it would open up new areas for development.

"Mud Creek would be cleaned up and it would be better for farmers downstream," he said. "It's not a case of one guy operating his own little show. It's the ministry of the environment operating all across the province."

Clarence Chard, whose land on which the lagoon is proposed to be placed upon, had lawyer Rod Follwell represent him at the hearing. Mr. Chard is opposed to the project.

"There is no doubt that Mud Creek has been out of hand for five years. Nothing has happened to it, and the ministry has allowed an unsanitary system to operate. They have known for 2½ years the system was out of hand," Mr. Follwell said.

Mr. Follwell said that the engineering report made two years ago proposed 90 day retention of sewage in the lagoon before discharge, but a new study suggested 180 day retention without telling why. "This is part of the preliminary objection," he said.

Mr. Follwell moved on to costs of the sewage pipes to be laid. He pointed out that pipe had gone up 33 percent, and that the consulting engineer for Stirling had said the cost of pipe had not gone up. He suggested a further engineering report plus an assesment of the costs of a proper filtation plant. "I am dubious as to the cost esimates," he said. "There is nothing whatever in the report of the water flow in Mud Creek.

"The first encounter Mr. Chard had with any officials was a survey crew," the lawyer told the hearing. "It was all cold and mechanical. There was a lack of humaness. It was a case of the big guy, the government, waking all over the little guy. All of the landowners are here today and they just found out what is happening."

Milk Production Declines

WELLINGTON — The total number of dairy producers in Prince Edward County has dropped by 30 per cent in the last four years, observes T.R.c Hilliard Ontario deputy-minister of agriculture and food.

"On the other hand, total milk production has declined by only 6.6 per cent," he told members ofthe Prince Edward County milk committee here Thursday.

In 1970, only 72 producers, or about 16 per cent were in the fluid pool. By 1974, this number had increased to 110 producers or 22 per cent of the total producers in the county.

Figures stated by Mr. Hilliard show Prince Edward recorded a total of 452 producers in group one and two pools in 1970 and 316 producers in 1974.

Production in 1970 was 8,910,313 pounds and in 1974, 8,319,553 pounds.

"We are concerned with this 30 per cent decline in producers' numbers, however, we are most appreciative of the remaining producers who have expanded their dairy operations and who have also increased milk production per cow," said Mr. Hilliard.

He added provincial statistics reflect similar declines in other areas and leaders in the dairy industry are forecasting a continued decline in the number of dairy farms throughout Ontario.

"This is especially true when we consider the urban sprawl engulfing some of our prime agricultural lands in the metroploitan Toronto, Ottawa and Niagara areas to name a few," he added.

Stirling Lagoon Subject of Hearing

..By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — A proposed addition to the Stirling sewage treatment lagoon ran into strong opposition from farmers Thursday during an Ontario Municipal oBard hearing here.

Mr. A.B. Ball, OMB Chairman for the hearing, criticized the ministry of the environment and other public officials for not telling local farmers what was going on and how much compensation would be given for their land.

The OMB hearing was held to set the mill rate for sewers to be laid in Stirling and to hear arguments for and against the lagoon extension.

So many persons attended, the hearing had to be moved from the municipal offices to the community hall, where it started at 10 a.m. and ended over eight hours later. Mr. Ball went back to Toronto to study all the evidence presented, and did not make any decisions.

Bruce Taylor of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture said he was converned about bacterial contamination of Mud Creek, which drains the present lagoon, running into Rawdon Creek and thence the Trent River. He said he was worried about cattle drinking the water.

Barry Burn of the ministry of the environment said "The solution is to chlorinate. We don't usually do this, but it depends upon the project."

Alec McCurdy, past president of the Hastings Federation of Agriculture said the present lagoon backs up Mud Creek, flooding farmland, and wondered why farmers couldn't be compensated for loss of their land.

"A filtration plant is the only solution," Mr. McCurdy said.

Clarence Chard told the hearing that half of his 50-acre farm would be taken up by the lagoon. He also expressed concern about the possibility of typhoid fever.

John Sager of RR4, Stirling, whose farm is at the receiving end of Mud Creek said the creek was too low to physically drain the lagoon properly, and he was opposed to it. He told Mr. Ball that he had never been approached by officials about ditching the creek.

"At what point in time do you tell property owners what you are planning," the hearing chairman said to officials. "People here don't know what is going on or how much compensation they will get. After all, you are here to serve the public."

Roy Irven of RR4, Stirling, told the hearing that his 165 acres of land just east of Mr. Chard's farm was fairly flat and he said that a drainage ditch around the lagoon wouldn't work, and that the lagoon had already backed up a swamp at Chard's and it was choice land.

Mr. Ball noted that the proposed system was designed for a population of 2,000. As an engineer, he said "I know quite a bit about this, and there is nothing wrong with the design, but who knows what is going to happen in 20 years?"

Ivan May, president of the Hastings Federation of Agriculture said that 500 school children a day come into Stirling, and wondered if that was taken into consideration. Mr. Ball said that when he read through all the studies he would look for the answer.

Mr. Ball said it was "sloppy housekeeping" that Mud Creek was not kept cleaned out to prevent flooding of adjacent farmland.

It is proposed that the lagoon be drained twice a year, in the spring and fall, to avoid fouling the Trent River for recreation purposes in the summertime.

Talks Still Off

TRENTON — The arbitration board formed to settle the dispute over the 1974 contract between the town and its firemen has yet to hold its first meeting.

A tentative date had been set for Monday, Jan. 27. However, the meeting was cancelled when one board member indicated he was unavailable.

The 10-man local of the International Association of Fire Fighters have been working at their 1973 wage rates since the beginning of last year. Contract talks with the town failed to produce a settlement. By early summer, they were broken off in favor of arbitration proceedings.

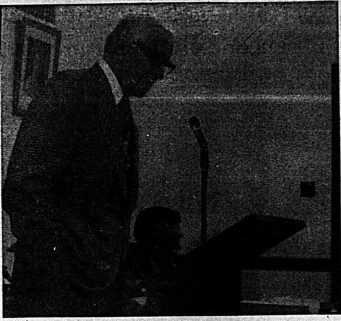
The 1975 one-year contract proposals, submitted to the town recently, cannot be discussed until a settlement over the 1974 contract is reached.

Deficit Reported

MADOC — Madoc's municipal employees will get an approximate 15 per cent across-the-board pay increase this year.

The village council authorized the increases for everyone from the clerk-treasurer down, during its inaugural meeting.

At the same meeting, Clerk Tom Burnside reported that the village spent away over the 1974 budget estimates. But, noted the clerk, the village took in far more revenue that it had anticipated. At one time, he said, it looked as through the village may have ended up with a $26,000 deficit. Mr. Burnside concluded, however, that the auditors claim the added revenues should offset the increased expenditures somewhat, so "it may not be so serious".



Milk Producers Gather

T. R. Hilliard, deputy minister of agriculutre and foods discusses the dairy industry with farmers at the annual meeting of the Prince Edward County Milk Committee at Wellington Consolidated School.

Regional Approach Urged For Better Milk Production

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

WELLINGTON — Ontario does not lack dairy programs but the province does lack coordinated or packaged programs for the dairy farmer based on the specific needs of individual producers says T.R. Hilliard, deputy-minister of the ministry of agriculture and food.

Mr. Hilliard, in Wellington Thursday to address the annual meeting of the Prince Edward County Milk Committee, told farmers problems confronting individual producers differ, based on the diverse geographic make-up of Ontario, and diary programs should be regionalized.

"I wonder how many dairy farmers throughout the province at the "grass roots" level realize that at least six branches within the ministry administer dairy program available to individual producers upon individual request?" he asked.

He noted the branches are milk industry, livestock, extension, veterinary services, soils and crops and colleges of agricultural technology.

"To identify regional needs, dairy program advisory groups from industry and the ministry should be integrated into regional dairy teams, regardless of their branch affiliation, to carry the programs directly to the individual producer, keeping in mind that participation on the part of any producer is voluntary and not compulsory," he said.

Mr. Hilliard remarked once specific dairy problems are pinpointed by geographic regions and individual producers dairy teams should offer specialists to individual diary farmer.

"In some instances a producer's problem may necessitate assistance from only one member of the dairy team. In other instances, such as the producer just entering the dairy industry, of which there are many, the services of every team member may be required for a short period," he added.

The deputy-minister said ministry programs must be delivered by the field staff who is in closest contact with the producer.

Only close communications between the producer and field staff will identify the needs of the individual producer and enable the ministry to design a systems program to provide the greatest benefits to each farmer.

Mr. Hilliard said a team approach concept has been initiated in 16 southwestern counties and six eastern counties during 1974. It is too early, however, to release detailed reports concerning acceptance and benefits derived by the individual producers in each of the 22 counties where the new concept is operating.

The committee, who designed and now is monitoring this program, includes representatives from the Ontario ministry of agriculture and food, the Ontario Milk Marketing Board and private industries. Each is contributing funds to cover costs not normally available through ministry grants.

Mr. Hilliard said as of Jan. 1,1975 61 producers were enrolled in the project. Producers who discontinue will be replaced to maintain the enrolment at 60.

Brucellosis Concern Among Area Farmers

WELLINGTON — Both the Ontario and federal ministries of agriculture and food have issued statements recommending vaccination of cattle against Brucellosis provincial deputy-minister T. R. Hilliard told Prince Edward dairy farmers Thursday.

Secretary of the Prince Edward County Milk Committee Kenneth Wright said all milk producers are greatly concerned with the question of "vaccinate or quit?".

"It becomes a concern of ours if Brucellosis spreads across the province and increases," noted Mr. Hilliard.

He added both provincial and federal ministries have recommended vaccination.

Tht ddeputy-minister said, nationally, Canada should have a herd where Brucellosis is "completely eradicated".

"The vaccine is a live vaccine," he observed.

Mr. Hilliard said reactors should be weeded out of herds by slaughter and as the disease is stamped out, vaccination eventually would become unnecessary.

He told Prince Edward farmers the largest number of infected herds today is in Carleton County.

In an interview following the farmer Kenneth Wright said six herds have been reported quarantined in Prince Edward. Possibly only one or two animals in each herd has Brucellosis, he added.

The dairy farmer said the disease causes contagious abortion in cattle and, if transmitted to human beings, undulent fever.

If a cow is vaccinated it builds an immunity but on any test for the disease, tests positive.

Mr. Wright says some countries will not permit farmers here to export vaccinated cows.

Also, some cows never build up immunity following vaccination and only spread the disease to other animals.

Mr. Hilliard suggested compensation for farmers may be required "if we follow the national way" regarding vaccination.

"It's a ticklish question and a difficult one," he said.

Fire Chief Named

MADOC — Former village councillor Robert Kirkwood has been named new fire chief for the local volunteer fire department. Mr. Kirkwood had been deputy fire chief previous to this new appointment.

The newly-appointed deputy is a local businessman, Clayton Martin, who joined the department in 1963 and has taken considerable training since that time.

Both appointments were announced at last week's inaugural meeting of the Madoc village council.

Durham St. Gets Repair

MADOC — Reconstruction of Durham St. (Highway 62) south of old Highway No. 7, has been tentatively approved by provincial officials.

Madoc council learned of the tentative approval in a letter from D. B. Thomas, of the ministry of transportation and communications.

"We have recently started the preliminary design procedure for the reconstruction of Durham St (62) South of Old Highway No. 7," the letter stated. "Until all information has been gathered, we will not be in a position to make a definite recommendation."

"However, at the present time, we have made a tentative recommendation to completely reconstruct the highway with part emphasis on drainage improvement," the letter concluded.

Cash Taken From Store

CHERRY VALLEY — The Picton detachment of the Ontaro Provincial Police is investigating the theft of a cash box containing $1,950 in cash and cheques from the Valli Dari Bar in Cherry Valley. The store is operated by David Leavitt.

Community services officer Donald Watt sal dthere was no sign of of forced entry and the box is believed to have been taken between 9:45 a.m. and 10 p.m. Thursday.

Doing with Less

.. Some time ago it was suggested here in this corner that cuts of a thousand or more dollars from the earnings of cabinet ministers would never be missed, and that such cuts would help curb inflation.

Since then Parliament has been trying to increase the earnings of MPs still further, so that any suggestion of less money can scarcely be deemed popular in Ottawa.

Yet public opinion is strongly against any such increase and we see that, even if the federal government wants more for itself, the Ontario legislature for one is talking in terms of less. At least it is being discussed, and that is to the good.

A five per cent cut in pay at the provincial cabinet level would mean a saving of $52,000 to the province. And, as we have suggested, it would probably never be missed by the individuals concerned. At the same time there are plenty of programs for the public good that could benefit from release of such money.

Consider those less fortunate — the young Brampton man, say, who lived with his wife and 10-month old baby in their car since being forced out of their apartment for not paying the rent. In addition to this inhuman situation, the young man, only 20, is due for sentencing shortly on a charge of fraud. Let's hope in such circumstances that justice will be tempered with mercy.

There is so much need and much of it gets swept under the rug. Such as the young people without jobs, in some situations perhaps not covered by unemployment insurance, with small children to compound their problems. This in the Canada of the seventies . . . in this land so many like to call "fortunate."

Let's think again . . . and act.

Oshawa's Image

The city of Oshawa is to Toronto as Canada is to the United States. It has problems of identity.

As the man in a Toronto restaurant said to a female companion: "Oshawa —Oh, that's all part of Toronto."

Ears burning at a nearby table was The Oshawa Times' Jim Wilkes, who recounted the incident in a column headed, "More to City than Cars."

Well Oshawa certainly is no small potatoes. Sort of locked away there, off 401, not too prepossessing at a distance, but interesting when you get into the downtown heart, and drive around its suburbs and shopping centres. With a population of something like 100,000, things have to be happening.

Wilkes speaks of the city's sports connection: the Wrigley midget hockey tournament for instance at the fine Civic Auditorium facility this week; and the Oshawa Tony's who took top honors in last summer's National Fastball Championship in B.C. The city is to host this year's event, but before then the Tony's head for New Zealand for the international meet next month.

So what else is there about Oshawa, besides cars, ethnic dancers perhaps, and that rather dour, but undoubtedly misleading look of the place as 401 draws its traffic relentlessly past to the heady attractions of that other spot farther west?

Art? Oshawa has the Robert McLaughlin Gallery, named after the great man of cars and philantrophist not long departed from us.

Artist William Ronald, a big swarthy man of 48, has the work of 25 years on show at the gallery until Feb. 23 when it will begin a lengthy cross-country tour. It is the first organized by the gallery to tour.

And if Ronald's works are provocative and absorbing, they palled briefly at the opening. All eyes were on the artist's two companions, a pair of gloriously-costumed and beautiful Oriental dancers from a Toronto night spot. There is nothing like a little pizzazz . . . and Oshawa had it that night.

Any lessons here for Belleville? Say exhibitions of art by employees of the city's various plants, along the lines of one by GM employees in Oshawa recently. And a little pizzazz William Howard style thrown in?

Moscow Peered Over Jewish Immigration Issue

Lend-Lease Agreement Nullified by U.S. and the Soviets

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Canadians who constantly criticize our trade policy because it won't put politics before trade, (should we do business with "fascist" Brazilian generals or "Communist" Castro Cubans), must look at the current U.S. Trade Act to see what a mess politics before trade can create.

That 1972 agreement guaranteeing the Americans final repayment of her Second World War Lend-Lease loans to Russia, and the Russian access to U.S. Export-Import Bank loans, has been nullified by both nations.

With so many advantages to both, so many loose ends tied up, what brought about its demise?

It was the inclusion by Congress of the so-called Jackson amendment, (among other penalties for foreign trading partners), which turned off the Russians.

That amendment made the free emigration of Jews from the Soviet Union a part of the trade act.

Further other clauses in the trade act eliminate Venezuela and Ecuador in the Western Hemisphere from certain low tariff privileges because they are members of OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Again Congress passed another discriminatory piece of legislation in a trade act which was supposed to be inherently free of such restrictions.

The implications of belonging to OPEC while doing business with America through an enlightened trade bill, is that OPEC is the agency which has set staggeringly high oil prices since the end of 1973 with resultant increases in the cost of fuels needed to manufacture and process in the American economy. So, why should nations party to large oil price increases also be given tariff advantages?

The barring of these Latin countries from the appropriate advantages in the U.S. trade act are serious enough that they, and possibly other Latin American nations out of sympathy against this new form of U.S. pressure, will not attend a vital conference of foreign ministers of the Latin American states later this year.

To return to the larger problem of the termination of the trade agreement between the U.S.S.R. and the U.S., one must indicate no sympathy for the Russian containment of Jewish or other nationals for that matter, who wish to abandon their straight-jacketed society.

But what has this to do with complex, and in many cases too-long delayed trade matters? And here we can return to the Canadian point-of-view, expressed on occasion by successive trade and industry ministers, for an answer.

If we were to stop doing business with Brazil because its government of colonels and generals torture leftwing prisoners, with Egypt because of strong Jewish pressures, conversely with Israel because we have a growing Arab lobby in Canada, with India because Mrs. Gandhi deceived us in making a nuclear bomb, with Franco's "fascist" Spain or Mao's "Communist" China, who would we trade with?

There are occasions when we must draw the line and do so. In the mid-1950s, the St. Laurent government stopped proposed shipments of F-86 jet fighters built in Montreal for Israel because the 1956 Arab-Israeli war was clearly about to begin.

And since 1965, we have shared the world boycott of trading with racist Rhodesia.

But trade we must, even more so than the Americans. Self-interest is a fact-of-life.

Columnist's Wife Reacted Swiftly When Fire Threatened their Home

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA— If you can stand a little more of it ... herewith Episode Two, and guaranteed the final chapter of the Untowering Inferno, the Night-That - Timbers - Smoking - Behind - The - Old - Oval - Fireplace - Caused - Up - To - $4,000 - Damage - To - Our - 65-Year - Old - Home.

Odd how differently people react to emergencies.

After the shock of discovering that the upstairs hall, bedrooms and bath were dimmed by a light haze of smoke, my wife, Margaret, took instant charge.

"Call the fire department, at once!" she snapped, as I stood there straining to see any traces of smoke, and seeing wisps curling up under the mantle and around a wall cornerpost, but not really believing it.

"Take down the paintings," she directed, "open the front door for the firemen, and move the car!"

There was time to open the door, but not move the car from the lane, for in the maybe three minutes it took to call the fire department, remove the pictures and open the door, the firewagons and police cars were out in the street, and firemen, with axes, crowbars, hoses, tarps, pails and lamps were charging in.

The Fire Department doesn't loiter.

Firemen spread the tarps over the rugs and furniture, and on the word of the chief that the smoke was coming from behind the fireplace, demolished it, brick by brick, and dismantled the wall.

Our half-blind, staggering 15-year-old Cairn terrier, Beau, was shambling around through the dust of old brick and mortar, sniffing at the feet of the busy firemen.

Marg snatched him up out from under the big rubber boots, and ran with him next door.

Three hours later when the smoke had thinned and the dust settled, I went back to the neighbors to pick up the old dog.

Having made himself at home, he was asleep on their living room rug, and rumbled a grumble at having to go back where he belonged.

After carrying Beau to safety, Marg transported, in turn, next door, her purse, our income tax files, the mailing list for this column, and a Tom Roberts painting of the Peace Tower, as seen from the foot of the Parliament Hill escarpment, with herself, in a pink raincoat, and Beau on an invisible lead, tiny figures in the foreground.

Meanwhile the firemen with their axes, saws, picks and crowbars, it appeared to my horrified eyes, were simply wrecking the room.

"Better," I murmured in senseless desperation, "to let the old place burn down in peace and dignity than to rip it apart brick-by-timber."

The chief understood.

"I know how you feel," he sympathized, "but we've got to do this if we're going to get at the fire. And you'll find it's not as bad as it looks now."

Nor was it.

For strong and vigorous men who put their backs into their swinging strokes of the axe and their shattering blows of the crowbars, they were amazingly careful. Even gentle.

The fireplace was in a corner on an inside wall of two rooms.

Off the other side of what turned out to be stout double walls of the living room, in an immediately adjoining sunroom, they very carefully removed some old Russell prints of the old west of early Montana days that my father had collected.

They even took down the hanging plants, one a huge 10-year-old staghorn fern.

And placing it expertly on its back, they didn't so much as disturb a single delicate frond.

As they smashed their way through the fireplace and into the wall, they exclaimed over the size of the studs.

"They don't cut them like that any more," observed the chief. "One of those would make two of today's matchstick two-by-fours."

The wall boarding was inch-and-a-half, foot-wide, red pine planks, straight, tight, solid.

"This is inside," said the chief, "and if they made inner walls this thick — best insulation you could get — what must the outer walls be like?"

Finally they were done.

They carefully lifted their tarps and carried them outside, leaving not a spot on the rug or furniture. They swept up, and after we had vacuumed, you'd never know there had been a fire — except for the black and brown gap staring out of what had been fireplace and wall, and the lingering smell of old woodsmoke.

Registered Retirement Programs Must be Weighed with Inflation

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Registered retirement savings plans can be a mixed blessing, as you have probably discovered if you have ever used this tax-trimming technique.

The blessing is that an RRSP allows you to escape current tax on part of your current earnings. (You have to pay the tax at some future time, when you take your money out of the plan).

But in most RRSPs, your money is invested in common stocks or bonds, and their market value has been declining.

In all probability, any such plan that was started in the 1973 tax year would today be worth less than the original investment.

It's worth remembering, though, that RRSPs are normally bought for the long term, with retirement in mind, and that short-term declines have to be expected.

And, at the risk of sounding like Pollyana, let's add that a new RRSP investment made today will buy much more than the same amount would have purchased at this time last year or in 1973, when market prices were higher.

Because of the element of risk involved in any long-term investment, it's important to make a sound choice of an RRSP vehicle.

The rules are that you may invest up to $4,000 of each year's earned income (depending upon the amount you earn, whether you belong to a pension plan and whether you are self-employed) in an RRSP, and escape the tax that would otherwise be payable on it.

At some future time, before turning 71, you either cash in your RRSP or buy an annuity with it. That's when you pay the deferred tax—normally at a lower percentage than the rate you pay during your working years.

(Some people have been known to carry prudence too far, however, by practising too much self-denial during their working years and find that their assets upon retirement at 65 will yield a taxable income that's larger than ever).

The law gives you 60 days after the year-end—until March 1 this year, or Feb. 29 on a leap year—to invest in an RRSP and deduct the amount from the previous year's earned income.

Since so many Canadians invest heavily in RRSPs as the deadline approaches in late February, stock prices are usually abnormally high then, and you therefore receive less for your money.

So it's a good idea to estimate how much you will be eligible to invest, and then invest most of it before February—even if your income-tax calculations are still incomplete.

Bank loans for this purpose are easy to obtain and the bank interest charges are a deductible expense.

But if you have an aversion to going into debt (or deeper debt), the chartered banks are offering special RRSP deposit accounts. You simply deposit regularly—say, every pay-day—and your investment will earn compound interest at approximately the current rate for term deposits.

Many people, however, would look for greater growth potential when they put aside money for retirement. They should insist on checking the investment performances of any RRSP investment outlet and steer clear of the below-average funds.

Further Curbs on Smoking in U.S.

Peter C. Stuart
in
The Christian Science Monitor

Tough "no smoking" laws are clearing the air for nonsmokers in a growing number of U.S. cities and states.

The laws, which outlaw smoking in a variety of public places from elevators to public meetings, are believed to be among the most stringent ever enacted.

Here in the nation's capital, the City Council has banned smoking in elevators and larger retail stores (those with 20 or more employees or accommodations for 200 or more customers). Violators can be fined up to $300 or jailed for up to 10 days.

The aim is twofold: fire prevention, with a "parallel benefit to the general public health."

The Washington prohibition follows a three-week-old New York City ban on smoking in elevators, supermarkets, college classrooms, lacking nonsmoking sections and other public places. The penalties are even tougher: up to $1,000 in fines or one year in jail.

Similar "no smoking" measures are under consideration in Los Angeles.

The states, too are increasingly active on behalf of nonsmokers.

Arizona and Nebraska have barred smoking in elevators and all but designated areas of concert halls, museums and hospitals.

Connecticut has outlawed the practice at all public meetings throughout the state.

Oregon has made it illegal to smoke at public meetings of state bodies.

Nationally, a new push is expected when the new Congress convenes to boost federal taxes on cigarettes to retard smoking.

Rep. Edward I. Koch (D) of New York, advocate of a two-cent-per-pack hike in taxes, says it would "discourage cigarette smoking" and raise nearly $600 million a year for research into diseases linked to smoking.

Such new militance among non-smokers is traced, in part to a growing realization that they constitute a majority. An estimated 158 million of the 210 million Americans do not smoke - more than three-quarters of the population.

Canadian 'Champagne' — Why Not?

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Last year, as you probably have read, Ontario had a record grape crop.

Conditions were right and the vines produced copiously.

Most significant, 25 per cent of the production was in new-variety grapes, speciality grapes designed for our wine-making industry to enable it to produce wines of a quality that will be of a standard to compete on world markets.

And our native wine industry is starting to do just this, despite the fact that through our old Canadian inferiority complex we tend to run them down at home.

Several of our wines, though through limited supplies of speciality grapes they are still in small production, have received the acclaim of being excellent.

Behind this wine development in Ontario, and it really is a very promising development, there is one uniquely Canadian contretemps that is throwing up road-blocks.

Our most acceptable wine by international standards has been our champagne-type sparkling white.

While not given the recognition of the finest champagnes, it has been received as a good champagne.

But now there is the possibility we will not be able to call it "champagne."

A while ago the French government protested to Ottawa that the only wines that could be labelled as "champagne" were those that originated in that particular section of France.

To back up its claim it cited an old treaty between the countries, which Canada had signed but France never had.

And at first our federal government went along.

It was agreeing that we could no longer label our champagne as "champagne," even though the label spelled this out as "Canadian" champagne.

There naturally were protests and Ottawa agreed to reconsider. Which it is still doing.

And well it might.

For the United States, Australia and South Africa are all producing "champagnes" without protest.

But France chose Canada to pick on. Perhaps our product is too good?

An article by a Maple Leaf writer has been published extolling the heroic stand of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment on the Lamone river in Italy when the Naviglio bridgehead was held by remnants of the regiment along with members of the Carletons - against 13 furious onslaughts by the enemy.

A total of 3,354,104 pounds of cheese was manufactured in Prince Edward County last year. This is 223,243 fewer pounds than last year. Price is fixed at 20 cents a pound plus four cents in government bonuses.

The food and allied industries will launch their War Savings Stamp campaign with the slogan "Friday is Stamp Day" and will direct its personnel to emphasize the purchase of War Savings Stamps on the six Fridays the campaign will run.

Sheik Listens to his Subjects

Sudbury Star

It did conjure up some wildly improbable visions, that story in the paper the other day ... the one from Dubai, one of those tiny Persian Gulf states growing rich beyond anything they had ever dreamed of because of the international oil situation. This was not a story of the new-found wealth and what is happening to it in the realm of Sheik Rashed Bin Said Al Maktum. It told instead of the centuries-old custom of majlis, which translates roughly into "the place of sitting."

Majlis brings together the ruler and his subjects in a way unknown in western-style democracy, and it brings them penurious pedlar, the same today as it did in the days long before the riches beneath the shifting sands were discovered. Accessibility is the name of the game. The man at the bottom can speak to the man at the top without going through his MP, a battery of secretaries and who knows how many assorted dignitaries.

"The ambassador from Bangladesh fidgets impatiently," the story from Dubai related, "while the sheik listens gravely to a barefoot subject complaining about some dead goats. The matter is settled with smiles."

Ah, the simplicity of it all. The down-to-earth air about the whole thing. Our vision shifts to Ottawa, where no oil lies deep beneath the shifting snow, though the land ruled by Sheik Pierre does not lack that commodity. It is a matter of some dispute with lesser princelings far to the west.

"A group of senators, impatient lest they be detained beyond their lunch hour, exchange muttered comment while the prime minister listens with furrowed brow while an elderly supplicant explains that his worries of survival have not been removed by the additional 87 cents he receives each week in his pension. There are a few words and a handshake as they part smiling."

"Three civil servants, exasperated by the fact that 4 p.m. will slide past before they can gain an audience, watch as the prime minister bends a sympathetic ear to a son of the soil who says that he too, has had a lot of eggs go bad. The parting is amicable, with cheerful waves."

"A cabinet minister, a document for signature in hand, drums his fingers on the arm of his chair while the prime minister heeds the request of another humble taxpayer that he be permitted to partake of food in the parliamentary restaurant. He is shown the way."

The stuff of which dreams are made But alas, it is as Rudyard Kipling put in his Ballad of east and West: "Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."

No Choice

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

If city council is successful in meeting the deadline for the Home Grant, city homeowners had better stock up on their painting equipment.

It is quite obvious from the information to date that in addition to health and safety being looked into we are all going to be told when to paint our homes. It's no good thinking we will be able to paint them the color we want. Only one color is permissable in Belleville - royal blue. So buy all you can.

Five Firms Said Lead Polluters

TORONTO (CP) — Louis Shenfeld, an official of the ministry of the environment, identified five companies Thursday that the province considers the worst lead polluters in the Metropolitan Toronto area. He was testifying before the Ontario environmental hearing board.

Mr. Shenfeld, supervisor of air quality and meteorology for the ministry's air resources branch, said the area's heaviest concentrations of lead pollution are near Tonolli Co. of Canada Ltd. and ESB Canada Ltd. in Mississauga, just west of Toronto.

Next-worst is Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd., followed by Canada Metal Co. Ltd. Both companies are in Toronto.

The ministry official said Eltra Canada Ltd.'s Prestolite battery plant in Toronto causes tht least pollution among the five companies cited.

Mr. Shenfeld said the Prestolite plant continues to meet provincial air-quality criteria because of pollution-abatement efforts started there last February.

Doggie Bags Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — Stoop and scoop?

That's what Ald. John Sewell wants the city's dog owners to do.

The exercise, he told a meeting of the parks and recreation committee of city council Thursday, is simple—the owner follows his dog outdoors with a small trowel, box or bag and is ready for a quick clean-up job if the animal fouls a path or sidewalk.

The committee, however, recommended only that dogs be banned from certain children's playgrounds.

Named Deputy

OTTAWA (CP) — Sylvia Ostry, Canada's chief statistician, has been appointed deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs, Prime Minister Trudeau's office announced Thursday.

Mrs. Ostry, 47, will assume her new position Feb. 19, replacing Michael Pitfield, recently appointed Privy Council clerk.

She becomes the first woman to hold a deputy minister's position, although as head of Statistics Canada she was considered to be at the deputy minister level.

Tax High

TORONTO (CP) — Bruno Rubess, president of Volkswagen Canada Ltd., said Thursday that Canadians are paying a higher import tax on foreign cars than residents of any other major western country.

Sales Up

DETROIT (AP) — The depressed United States auto industry reported a significant increase in sales during mid-January as it used cash rebates on selected new models to lure customers. But employment in the industry remained down.

Wants Check

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's three major steel companies should be monitored continuously to prevent excessive profits, Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) said Thursday night.

Plan Survey

OTTAWA (CP) — Surveyers from Statistics Canada will be knocking on doors of nearly 14,000 households between next week and mid-March to find out how families spent their money in 1974.

The survey of family spending patterns is done about every two years and when there is a significant shift in these patterns the survey is used as the basis for adjusting weights of components of the consumer price index.

Rate Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) reduced its mortgage lending rate Thursday to 10¾ per cent from 11¼ per cent for loans to house buyers under the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP).

CIA Spies Alleged Operating in Canada

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig said Thursday he has seen a list containing the names of at least seven spies from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) of the United States who have worked in Canada.

Mr. Hurtig said in an interview the persons have worked as attaches at the U.S. embassy in Ottawa. He said the list will be made public today but he did not know who would release the information.

Mr. Hurtig, founder of the Committee for an Independent Canada, told a committee chapter in Toronto Wednesday that at least 50 spies from the CIA have worked in Canada with the full knowledge and co-operation of the RCMP.

He told the committee the CIA also has field officers working as attaches and consul-generals in Toronto, Calgary and Vancouver.

Mr. Hurtig said a Canadian security organization—the police and security planning and analysis group—knows about the operations and they "open their files" to the CIA.

"They're probably not known to the CIA head in Ottawa," he said, adding that the spies have infiltrated into "industry, the media and other sensitive areas."

He said Col. Robin Bourne, assistant deputy minister in charge of the security group which is under the federal solicitor - general's department, "regularly makes his most secret files available to the CIA."

Mr. Hurtig would not reveal the source of his information in an interview later but he said it came from a friend with a high-level contact inside the police and security group.

Dairy Farmers Want Cost-of-living Bonus

MONTREAL (CP) — The Dairy Farmers of Canada adopted Thursday a policy statement which would give dairy producers a cost-of-living system based on current farm costs and target levels of returns to investment, labor and management.

Dairy farmers also called for immediate government action in supporting their request for a returns increase to $10.60 per hundred pounds of milk, after requesting the increase three months ago.

Canadian dairy farmers now receive $9.41 per hundred pounds.

The proposals were accepted by dairy farmers from across the country at the end of their three-day annual meeting.

The statement, to be presented to the board of directors today, said preliminary calculations indicate returns for the 1975 dairy year, beginning April 1, will be in the neghborhood of $11.50 per hundred pounds of milk manufactured.

Included in the milk price cost-of-living system would be a provision to establish returns for cream producers.

The farmers expressed their dissatisfaction with Canada's cheese export and imports calling for a ban on imported cheeses from Common Earket countries whose policies exclude importing Canadian cheddar cheese.

Cheese subsidies "should be raised near to levels equivalent to butter and powder (skim milk powder) support.'

As far as compensation for slaughtered cattle is concerned dairy producers said that although there have been some upward adjustments, compensation continues to be "dangerously inadequate and unfair.

Foreign Ownership Cuts Canadian Research Work

TORONTO (CP) — High levels of foreign ownership have resulted in "substantial underdevelopment" of Canadian research, technology and industrial design potential, says an Ontario legislature committee on economic and cultural nationalism in a report released Thursday.

The final report on economic nationalism includes 129 recommendations to the Ontario and federal governments, designed to stem what the 11-man committee sees as a likely increase in foreign ownership and control of Canadian industry "in the absence of new policy."

The bulk of the findings and recommendations of the select committee's three-year review have been made public in seven earlier reports.

Ban on Strap Is Ended

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The London board of education voted Thursday to reinstate the strap in the city's public elementary schools, ending a ban on corporal punishment which has been in effect since early 1972.

The board instructed a committee of administrators and representatives of two elementary school federations and the principals' and vice-principals' associations to prepare guidelines for use of the strap.

The guidelines will be presented to the board for approval and the strap is expected to be back in use within two weeks. There are about 30,000 children in the schools.

The board heard submissions from 10 members of the public and only two—a retired teacher and Sam Warren, president of the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation—supported the strap's return. . .

Province-wide Bargaining For Hospital Workers Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Province-wide bargaining for Ontario's 113,000 public hospital workers was recommended in two gov-released Thursday.

The proposal, made by the four-member hospital inquiry commission formed last January by the ministry of labor, would end step-by-step negotiations between individual hospital representatives and staff.

A health ministry committee, headed by Dr. John Deutsch, former principal of Queen's University, also urged bargaining on a province-wide or regional basis.

The hospital inquiry commission, headed by D. L. Johnston, dean of law at the University of Western Ontario, suggests quick implementation of province-wide bargaining for nurses and paramedical employees. Service workers "should engage in the interim step of regional bargaining."

Labor Minister John MacBeth told a news conference that the first step would be to set up a job evaluation system as outlined in the report. Discussions had begun with hospital representatives to determine who should represent them at the bargaining table.

The labor minister said proposals of the November report were only recently before the cabinet, but I would hope the machinery could be established within three to four weeks."

The 61-page report stressed the "urgent need to bring an orderly bargaining and dispute settlement process to the hospital industry," plagued last year by threatened illegal walkouts by workers in 13 Toronto-area hospitals.

Wages paid to other categories of public hospital workers and to other similarly-occupied industrial workers were among criteria the commission suggests arbitrators use in reaching settlements.

Neither government guidelines nor ability to pay should be used as criteria, the report said. Spending ceilings were part of any publicly-financed operation but should not be declared publicly "because it is not consistent with bargaining in good faith."

However, the health ministry committee's report recommended separate budget constraints on hospitals for wages and all other expenses, avoiding situations in which wage settlements become "a local struggle within the hospital."

Health Minister Frank Miller told the news conference that as an example, the ministry might allow 12-per-cent increases in wages and six per cent for all other costs.

The committee, in a review of hospital costs from 1965 to 1974, found that costs have increased because facilities and services expanded more quickly than the population and health care became increasingly sophisticated. As well, there was a lack of "sufficiently effective incentives to reduce unit costs", and a tendency to use more costly facilities.

Mr. Miller said all issues raised by both reports were under review "in the development of health strategy."

Splitting Competition Bill For Quick Action Is Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislative dawdling has made a good case for splitting the government's competition bill and taking quick, separate action against foreign interference in Canadian trade, Liberal Herb Gray said Thursday.

"Definitely a case can be made for separate presentation" of the bill's sections that deal with the application of foreign laws in Canada, said Mr. Gray, minister responsible for the competition policy until being dropped from the cabinet last summer.

"If it were possible to get the whole bill through in a matter of weeks, this would be preferable. But obviously, this is not going to happen."

The Windsor West MP and former corporate affairs minister said in an interview the government's reluctance to push the bill in this Parliament lends weight to a plan by Robert Stanbury (L — York — Scarborough) for separate action on sections of the bill dealing with the foreign laws.

Mr. Stanbury, who lost his revenue portfolio in the same shuffle that ousted Mr. Gray, said Thursday he will introduce a private member's bill today to get quick action on the relevant sections.

Approval of the sections would strike directly at a United States trading ban, affecting U.S. subsidiaries in Canada, which has threatened some export dals with Cuba and othr Communist countries.

In Winnipeg, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said he has started talks with U.S. authorities aimed at ending the interference. A change in U.S. attitude on exports to countries such as Cuba was needed to go along with the proposed legislation.

Mr. Gray said the government's apparent reluctance to tackle the U.S. on the issue is not acceptable.

"It's no answer for Canadian authorities to say they're waiting for an American decision," he said in reference to a proposed office equipment deal with Cuba. A U.S. subsidiary in Toronto is awaiting a U.S. ruling on the proposed $500,000 sale.

"That's contrary to Canadian sovereignty and that's why it's urgent to have laws to block such intrusion by a foreign authority."

The sections on foreign law were "one reason why I pressed for making the competition bill law as quickly as possible in the last Parliament," Mr. Gray said.

The bill got second reading, approval in principle, before dying with the fall of the then-minority Liberal government.

With the reintroduced bill now at committee stage, which often involves lengthy study, Mr. Gray said splitting away the relevent sections appears to be the only way to get speedy action to enforce Canadian sovereignty.

The sections Mr. Stanbury wants enacted quickly would forbid any company operating in Canada from implementing any foreign law or directive that would hurt Canadian trade.

A similar suggestion he made earlier in the week got Commons applause from many opposition members and some Liberals. But private member's bills, such as the one he is proposing, rarely get approval.

Approval of the provisions, either inside or outside the competition bill, likely would place some U.S. businessmen in a tight spot.

If they permitted their Canadian subsidiaries to sell to countries banned as trade partners by U.S. law, they would break two American laws. Continuing the ban would run them afoul of the pending Canadian legislation which, like the U.S. laws, will provide fines and jail terms as penalties.

Mr.MacEachen appeard to allude to this in his Winnipeg speech, noting that in addition to the planned Canadian laws, a change is needed "in U.S. law and practice so that Canadian companies will be able to pursue normal export business in a manner consistent with Canadian law and policy."

The most recent episode in a series of controversies over the U.S. trading with the enemy laws arose when the office equipment deal was jeopardized. The proposed sale involved the Cole division of Litton Business Equipment Ltd., a subsidiary of a U.S. company.

The U.S. parent has applied for an exemption from the U.S. ban to allow the sale by the Toronto-based company to go through.

In Trouble

MONTREAL (CP) — Le Jour, a daily newspaper committed editorially to the independence of Quebec, says it is in financial difficulties after 11 months of operations and is appealing to the public for $100,000.

Canadian Arms Used in Vietnam

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says it has obtained United States defence department documents that contradict Canada's official position that it never has supplied the Americans materials for the Vietnam war.

The newspaper says the documents confirm that although Canada maintains a ban on export of arms and military equipment to areas involved in warfare, the country has ignored shipments of Canadian-produced material to Vietnam by the U.S.

The U.S. buys military equipment and supplies in Canada through the defence production sharing agreement.

The newspaper says the confirmation of indirect Canadian involvement in the war is contained in computer printouts of all prime contract awards made in Canada by the U.S. department of defence.

Copies of the documents for the U.S. fiscal years of 1972, 1973 and 1974, the newspaper says, show the tapering off of war-related purchases coincided with the winding down of the U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

The newspaper says one column of the printout tells whether each contract in excess of $200,000 is used "for actions in support of Southeast Asia" or elsewhere.

Almost all purchases designated in support of Southeast Asia were handled for the U.S. defence department by the Canadian Commercial Corp., a Crown agency established to handle government-to-government purchases, the newspaper says.

Interest Rate Again Reduced

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A surprise move Thursday by the Bank of Montreal may well indicate another round of reductions in interest rates shortly.

The bank announced it is lowering its prime lending rate to 9¾ from 10½ per cent effective Feb. 1.

It is less than two weeks since the Bank of Montreal, together with other Canadian banks, lowered their prime rates to 10½ per cent from 11.

Their move followed a signal Jan. 13 from the Bank of Canada which lowered its lending rate on seldom-made loans to retail banks by a ½ point to 8¼ per cent.

The prime rate is that charged to a bank's most credit-worthy customers. All other commercial rates are scaled upwards from the prime.

The bank said its action reflected a national and international trend to lower interest rates.

In the United States, the prime rate has been dropping steadily since the beginning of the year and another drop by major American banks is anticipated in the next day or so.

Chaplains Saw Jail Beatings

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Paul Callahan said Thursday that during the eight years he has been chaplain at Toronto jail, formerly Don Jail, he stumbled on to beatings of prisoners by guards on three occasions.

Father Callahan told the royal commission investigating allegations of guard brutality at the jail that there were other cases he did not see.

"I don't usually see people getting beaten up because they (the guards) know I'll report it."

The priest said the first time he saw guards beating a prisoner was about four years ago when he used a key to an elevator and surprised two guards holding the man while another punched him.

The next time was in 1973 when a prisoner was kept in solitary confinement and, a day after his arrival he had bruises on his neck and contusions on his face.

Father Callahan said later that summer of 1973 a man was being held on a charge of murder. A guard opened a door allowing the priest to see as he hit the man on the side of the face.

He recalled the guard saying "I'm sorry, I didn't know you were there."

Graham Brown, a Yale University divinity student, who was assistant student chaplain last summer, also testified Thursday he saw two guards hit and kick Gordon Courts, who had already been subdued by other guards.

"There were a number of guards, four, maybe five, subduing Mr. Courts," Mr. Brown said. "At that point someone came from the right and aimed a couple of kicks at his head."

Last Monday, Mr. Courts told Judge Barry Shapiro, commissioner, he was punched, kicked and thrown down a flight of stairs by three or four guards last July 26.

The inquiry continues.

Youth Hero

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Coroner Dr. Bruce Penton says James Martin, 18, died while making a valiant attempt to save two young children in a fire Jan. 14.

The description was included in an official report Thursday by the coroner, who is investigating the fire which killed four persons.

Dr. Penton said Mr. Martin carried Clifford Byers, 3, and his three-month-old brother, Lloyd, to another floor "in a vain attempt to reach a window and escape."

Quinte Women

Cathy Drouillard, Mayor's Secretary

Mayors may come and mayors may go, but Cathy Drouillard stays, and is just about indispensable.

Mrs. Drouillard has been working at City Hall since 1961, a job she began shortly after she graduated from Quinte Secondary School. She started out as a clerk-stenographer in the offices of the city clerk and city manager, and then worked as a secretary for the city clerk, until 1967. For one year she was work for both the city clerk and McLean Haig, then mayor of Belleville.

Although she left the city briefly she returned, and was soon asked back to city hall by Jack Ellis, who was mayor at that time. Since then she has been secretary for following mayor, Russell Scott and the present mayor, Robin Jeffrey.

With the assistance of Ann Gray and Merle Simpson, who are secretaries in other departments, Mrs. Drouillard manages the daily affairs of the mayor's office.

"Mrs. Simpson has been here longer and was really helpful in getting things organized here," she says.

And being very well organized is essential in this job.

In her head or at her fingertips Cathy Drouillard must have quick access to scores of names, phone numbers, and bits of information. She has to remember who's who and who's where and when, and for how long.

"I'm a note-taker," she explains. "I write everything down, absolutely everything. That way I can feel more certian I've got the information I need."

The notes that she makes during phone conversations, and her "reminder" notes, are all clipped with an enormous clothes peg at one side of her desk.

Besides these notes, Mrs. Drouillard keeps three appointment books up-to-date, one for herself, and one for the Mayor.

Much of her time is spent keeping tabs on what's happening, arranging details of meetings, preparing for council meetings, phoning officials to remind them of meetings, or to get information, or to pass along complaints.

Fielding complaints and dealing with citizens' problems is another aspect of the job that keeps Mrs. Drouillard busy. She admits that her years handling the kind of calls that a mayor's office receives have taught her both patience and tact.

"All the mayors I've worked for have felt that this office should help the public as much as it can," she says.

Although each mayor has been different, her job flows in an established routine, since the work a mayor does remains pretty well the same. And working for a female mayor is no different than for a male mayor, she says.

"This job is so varied, it includes everything from taking dictation to sewing on buttons, helping make coffee to wrapping gifts to be presented by the Mayor," she say.

There are other duties as well, such as reading and filing correspondence, doing research, keeping track of records and information files, preparing material for the Mayor's public speeches and council meetings.

IT'S FOR THE BIRDS

"Birds can bring you more joy than the wealth of the Indies." — F. M. Chapman.

It's a snowy, sunless afternoon.

Even so, without benefit of sun or clock, one knows the exact time.

How? Why?

The hour has arrived. The hour the birds daily gather, hover, flutter, crowd about the bird-feeder, outside our window. As by magic, they appear promptly on time.

It is a daily, anticipated show. A daily pleasure to watch these tiny, feathered, creatures enjoy food placed in the feeder by gentle, faithful hands of one who cares, who loves them.

As a sparrow and a chickadee fly to a nearby branch for a brief chat, in fantasy, the sparrow says:

"It's great—free meals like this. Ever feel we're sponging?"

"Far from it," says the chickadee, "Look what we birds do for humans."

"Got a f'r instance?"

"How's this? Any one of us chickadees can destroy 137,750 eggs of the cankerworm moth within a month."

"Wow!" gasps the sparrow.

(Which reveals how helpful birds really are and proves a statistic or two. For the United States Department of Agriculture readily admits that the value of birds in destroying insect pests is $350,000,000, annually.)

"People are really kind and thoughtful. Grease poles of bird-houses to keep cats, racoons and snakes away. Put strands of ribbon outside of picture windows where they flutter in the breeze and warn us from smashing into the glass.

"But," concludes the chickadee, "best of all, people now ban DDT! That pesticide caused the death of many members of our bird world..."

The sparrow flits about chirping excitedly that banning DDT is the best news yet, leaving one wondering if such wise, knowledgeable birds are aware of their great benefactress. She, who wrote a book, entitled, "SILENT SPRING", which shook the world ... from a disbelieving one concerning the danger of the pesticide DDT to one, grateful, upon finally learning and realizing the truth of its poison.

Her name was Rachel Carson.

If you would know more about this remarkable woman, who not only saved our birds but all Mankind — do read "Some Are Born Great" by Adele Rogers St. Johns, published by Doubleday.

You will become engrossed in it. You will find it at our Corby Library.

Celebration Theme At Annual Meeting

"Let's Celebrate" was the theme of the 13th annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial United Church Women, held Thursday at Bridge Street United Church.

Observing the 50th anniversary of Church Union this year, the UCW's day-long program reflected the mood of celebration, which led to the "Great Parade", a procession through the church by the 300 women present for the occasion.

The program opened with a call to worship by Jeanne Williams of Marmora UCW, presbyterial president. Kay Summers and Barbara Nelles welcomed the attending women on behalf of Bridge Street UCW.

After a worship service conducted by Julie Benvie, Jean Whetlam brought greetings from the Bay of Quinte Conference UCW of which she is president.

Anna Carman and Myrtle Derry presented a program about communications. Following this, Alfreda Bates introduced the day's guest speaker Rev. Margaret Errey, a United Church minister from the conference offices in Kingston.

The purpose of Rev. Errey's presentation was to encourage individual Bible study. The UCW members were given mimeographed sheets covering four areas of personal development in Bible study, using the method of reconciliation as the means of better communication and participation in the church's mission.

A noon dinner followed Rev. Errey's program, at which the speakers were Mr. and Mrs. Don Genge, managers of the United Church camp, Quin-Mo-Lac.

Marilyn Fox sang a solo during the worship service and offering dedication after the Great Parade.

The minutes of the 12th annual meeting were read at the afternoon business meeting, and reports were heard from several of the church groups represented. After discussion regarding new business and plans for next year's meeting, the program committee and Deaconess May Sanders presented a sketch called "Let's Celebrate".

Mrs. Williams addressed the UCW members, and was thanked by Olive Payton.

Election and installation of this year's executive officers was carried out by Rev. Robert Sherwin, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery.

Guess Who Came To My House

Guess who came to my house this morning and cleaned my carpets, chesterfield and velvet loveseat? Yep . . . ServiceMaster. Not only did I pick the right company, but I also picked the right time too, because ServiceMaster is giving a discount on all carpet and furniture cleaning until the end of the month. And if you're going to do the cleaning yourself but want the help of the great range of ServiceMaster home claning products, you can get a 10% discount now too. Just come to the retail outlet at 179 Pinnacle St. at the rear of the former Zentronics location. Then we'll all have nice clean houses.

Hats Off Four Seasons

I bet a few of you could guess what the Four Seasons Hotel manager Mike Broadhurst was doing this Wednesday. He was participating in a Swim-A-Thon at the new heated pool at the Four Seasons on Jarvis St in Toronto. (You can have your own Swim-A-Thon at the local Four Seasons between you and yourself, because this pool is all-season too!) At this writing, how Mike was doing wasn't known, but he figured if he did 10 laps in 5 minutes he would be pretty pleased. And so would the Multiple Scerosis Association to which all the pledges will go. Good show Mike, I'm sure.

Seeing The Sale

I trotted up to Jean Smith's West Wind Boutique on the weekend to look at what she had on sale and look at her spring and cruisewear line. I can't say which I liked best. But if you want a good quality winter coat, pant suit, dress or blouses, you'll find them at Jean's — all good quality at good savings. All Hathaway and Viyella blouses are 20% reduced as are men's sweaters, should a man in your life have a birthday coming up, not to mention next year's Christmas gift list for you real early birds. See Jean's. Next week I'll dazzle you with spring and cruisewear.

Knows What He's Doing

Hud Marcotte, who operates Holiday Car and Truck Rentals at 11 West Moira St., has himself 22 years experience in long distance trucking, so he really knows about and understands the concerns of anyone in this business or any business which requires truck or heavy equipment usage. If you have a specific problem in this area, emergency or routine, Hud can provide you with customized service on commercial truck rentals and long-term leasing. His hours are 3:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., weekdays and 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Saturdays. Let experience help you get the job done. Call Holiday at 962-1184.

They Don't Make "Em" . . .

Unfortunately, the old saying about "not making them as they used to" has a lot of basis in truth today. But we are also a very impatient society at times, particularly when it comes to our vacuum cleaners. We need a vacuum — one that does the job and is in working order. Sometimes when either of these points are missing, we may throw up our hands in despair and buy a new one. Gibbs and Son, 37 Albion St. are vacuum repair specialists. And the machines they can't improve upon are few and far between. And they repair any make and model. So don't be impatient — and a spendthrift. Take your vacuum to Gibbs and Son. They'll take care of the rest.

All That Vitamin C

Murray Atkinson of Murray's Food Market on Front St. says that now is the best time to get the best of the citrus fruits both in price and quality. From now until the end of February will be the best time all year for delicious and nutritious oranges and grapefruit. And of course dear Murray is going to take care that you receive the best in citrus products at the best price. Isn't that right? And in the true tradition of practising as one preaches, the next time you see Murray ask him how his Vitamin C intake is.

The Right Touch

If there is a wedding or wedding anniversary in your circle of friends or relatives this year, then a visit to the Cameron Art Gallery, 1½ miles west of Rednersville on the Rednersville Rd., should solve your gift problem. An oil or water color by one of the three Camerons can be chosen to suit any home or taste. Or if you're uncertain about someone else's preference, you can pay for the gift and have the recipient come and choose themselves. The gallery is open on weekends from 10 a.m. til 9 p.m. but appointments can be easily made during the week by calling Mrs. Cameron at 962-1606. Because of Mrs Cameron's busy teaching schedule, mornings are the best time to call.

More Than Lights

Last week I told you that Ruddy Electric's Consumer Division, 291 Coleman St. sells a lot more than interior and exterior house lights. They also sell: door chimes, range hoods, Moffat appliances, built-in oven units, Inglis coin-operated washers and dryers for commercial operations, Jena-Air systems, Philco-Ford and Wetinghouse televisions and stereos, snow throwers and baseboard heaters. This last three items, plus the lamps, of course, are now being cleared to make way for new stock. Oh, I nearly forgot. If you're chandelier-hunting, Ruddy recently received a new shipment of Schonbek chandeliers. Now haven't you learned a lot about Ruddy?

The Truth About Cupboards

Highland Home Improvement Centre at 257 North Front St. (go through the laundromat and down stairs) have some very firm opinions about kitchen cabinets. And they deal only with the best available. Their kitchen cabinets come in a variety of styles and finishes, all which you can see right on the spot; the doors are all solid birch, not chip core; the shelves and sides are solid birch plywood; the shelves are adjustable to three different levels; the interiors are lacquered and all have backs on them. You'll not find these features on every kitchen cabinet you look at, But you'll find them all with kitchen cabinets you buy from Highland. Go and see for yourself.

Ann Landers

'Friend' Should Get This Message

Dear Ann Landers: I don't expect you to print my letter, but just writing it will be marvellous therapy for me. It's to my "friend," and to all the people like her who confuse "friendship" with just plain cloddishness, or to put it bluntly, unbelievable guts.

Dear You Know Who You Are: When I answered the door wearing rubber gloves with a toilet brush in my hand, you asked if I was busy. I said yes, but you walked in anyway and chirped: "Put some coffee on, will you? My maid is cleaning from top to bottom today and I can't stand the way she does things. She makes me nervous."

And then as you drank my coffee (which you pronounced "too weak"), you informed me that my walls should be painted darker color because "the dirt shows." You also told me I should have bought "better" carpeting because the cheap stuff looks OK in the store but after a few months it "mats."

Then you told me I look so much better with makeup I should never be without it. (To clean toilets?!!!)

Stay in your own house, "friend." I'd tell you to your face, but I haven't got the guts. Besides, our husbands are golf buddies and I don't want to make waves. So please go somewhere else if your maid makes you nervous. You make ME sick.—Had It

Dear Had: Here's your letter, and you'd better expect "waves" because the details are unmistakable. "Friend" will certainly know you mean her.

I cheerfully accept the blame or the thanks—for whatever happens after this letter appears in print—and I hope you are prepared for the consequences.

Dear Ann Landers: Ten months ago my husband told me he was leaving me and our three children for another woman. I said: "All right, Jim, if that's what you want, go ahead."

Four days later he came back home, said he loved only me, and begged to be forgiven. I agreed, provided he behaved himself. He swore he would.

The following week, the little tramp (twice divorced by husbands who caught her in adultery) tried to kill herself. Jim became panicky and moved back with her.

Our children have started to suck their thumbs and wet their beds. They have nightmares regularly. I am a nervous wreck. Jim says he wants to come home but if he leaves the tramp again she will kill herself and it will be on his conscience forever. Please help me.—Nyack, N.Y.

Dear Nyack: What conscience? Tell "Bullfeathers" he owes you and his children more than he owes the tramp. If he refuses to come home where he belongs, see a lawyer and make it legal.

Dear Ann Landers: That New-Look Bride who plans to Xerox her thank-you notes and distribute them at her wedding (rolled up and tied with a yellow ribbon) was enough to make me write my first letter to a newspaper.

Too bad the unsuspecting guests don't have access to a crystal ball. They could then present the clod with a rolled-up message tied with a red ribbon saying, "Since you will be too busy to write me a thank-you note I will be too busy to shop for you. So let's just shake hands and say, 'Congratulations'." Sign me—Glad I'm Not Invited

Dear Glad: You and at least 500 others.

Machismo Losing Ground to Feminism

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Machismo, the Latin concept of manliness that has long kept women in the kitchen and the bedroom, is losing ground to feminism. But you can still get shot for saying so.

Although there is practically no organized women's lib movement, an Associated Press survey discloses great advances for women over recent years in almost every country of Latin America.

At the same time, attitudes and customs dating back far longer than the European conquest leave little doubt that complete equality will take generations.

In Argentina the president is a woman, but no mother can take her children out of the country without permission from the father.

Mexican President Luis Echeverria's plan for constitution reform to give women equal rights is running into opposition from men who measure their status in the number of mistresses they keep.

The Chilean housewives who banged empty pots and pans in protest to help topple President Salvador Allende last year still cannot leave Chile without notarized permission from their spouses.

One-half of all medical and economics students at Rio de Janeiro University are women but Brazilian women are barred from working in many places which are considered "unhealthy."

"This is a period of transition," said Martha Mercader, a writer and publisher of the daily newspaper La Calle in Buenos Aires.

"The legal discrimination is changing, but more important is the attitude of people. The old in age or spirit still think in machismo terms. But not the young. Teen-agers hardly know about it."

She added a thought often repeated by Latin women seeking equal opportunities and rights:

"But in no way do I think men and women are the same—thank God."

Feminists are finding that heavy doses of consciousness-raising are necessary to achieve dynamism.

Argentine liberationists came out with a monthly magazine called Person, which asserted:" It is only natural a woman should aim her rebellion against the male, marriage and maternity, in the same way that the first acts of working class resistance were against the bosses."

The daily La Prensa retorted that the magazine was an unwitting tool of Communist subversion.

Machismo — literally "maleness" in the animal kingdom—involves a complicated set of values which vary from place to place. In simplistic terms it requires that men be manly and that they order around their women at will.

In rural areas throughout Latin America, impugning a man's masculinity can be grounds for a belt in the nose—or much worse. In Colombia a man might be acquitted of killing his wife and her lover if he found them unmistakeably compromised. If the situation were reversed, a woman would probably be jailed for many years.

In Paraguay there is no legal discrimination against women but they do not figure in the top levels of public life.

One Venezuelan sociologist observed that 53 per cent of all children there are born to unwed mothers. He explained: "Some men think they are more manly when they leave a woman pregnant and run out on her."

The system is more formalized in remote parts of Peru where some Inca men still follow the ancient, if illegal, practice of "servinacuy." A man is allowed a year's home trial with a prospective bride before he decides whether to marry her.

Much of Latin American machismo comes from the Indian cultures which were flourishing when the Spanish and Portuguese first arrived. The Incas used their women like their llamas, for the heavy work. Mexican tribes occasionally pitched women into pits and offered up their hearts in sacrifices to the gods.

The Hispanic overlay added new dimensions to male supremacy and the two forms of machismo melded over the centuries.

Since machismo calls for protection of the "weaker sex," many Latin American labor codes forbid women to work nights. They give up to four months' maternity leave and other benefits.

But the general effect, women complain, is that no one wants to hire them. Although laws may prescribe equal payment for the same jobs, it doesn't always work that way.

"My husband works in the same factory as me doing almost the same work, yet he makes almost double my salary, and I've been here longer," said Sonia Espinoza, 29, a Chilean textile employee.

Women have made their greatest advances in fields requiring qualitative competition like law, medicine and science. In Colombia, 30 per cent of the judges are women.

The Brazilian city of Fortaleza, a capital of machismo, has a demure 28-year-old blonde as police chief. She commands 31 veteran cops and, an expert shot, she gives undisputed orders. "I competed for this job against 53 men and found no discrimination based on sex," said the chief, Margarida Maria Carvalho.

For feminists in Latin America the major key has been the pill. Family responsibilities have long kept women at home, whatever their capabilities in other fields.

"The freedom from worrying about pregnancy is one of the greatest of revolutions," said Mrs. Mercader, the Argentine writer.

Colombians had the choice of voting for a woman in presidential elections last year. The candidate, Maria Eugenia Rojas de Moreno, came in third but the winner, Alfonso Lopez Michelsen, is firmly against machismo.

Latin American history is rich in heroines such as Chile's Paula Jaraquemada who chased off Spanish troopers by hurling hot coals at them. There were women colonels and guerrilla leaders 150 years ago.

Eva Peron, the fiery first wife of Juan D. Peron, died of cancer in 1952 at the height of her popularity, and she is still remembered as a saint by millions of Argentines.

She obtained the vote for women in Argentina in 1950. Twenty four years later the woman Peron married after Eva died, Maria Estela Martinez (Isabel), became president.

Schools Should Teach Useful Living Skills

Many are the criticisms of our educational system across the country. It has been suggested that we don't give our children practical ideas about how to live after they get into the adult world.

For instance, all the math courses in the world are not of much use if you don't understand how to budget your pay cheque. Biology is fascinating, but as far as we can see, it does not cover basic nutrition, health, first aid, and an understanding of sexual functioning. Not well enough, anyway.

And how about some elementary psychology to help us adjust to the people we bump up against, clash with, or find otherwise unreasonable - from our point of view?

It might just lower divorce statistics and welfare roles if we stressed compulsory courses on preparation for marriage, home management, and simple consumer economics.

It is not good enough just to inform our children. Education ought to teach them how to live as secure, understanding individuals.

Dear Doris: At the nursing home where I work the head cook dislikes the elderly people and forever makes un-Christian remarks about them. She frankly says it is a nuisance to cook anything for special diets. She treats the residents as if they were dogs.

She resents kitchen staff and nurses and doesn't hesitate to say so.

Now our union has an agreement that if an employee turns 65, she must retire or quit that month. It is rumored that this head cook will be 65 this year. Is there any way we could get her age for sure without going to management?

Frantic.

Dear Frantic: A group of you could talk to the union steward, who would probably have access to membership records.

And if the union insists that employees retire at 65, you may be sure that no difference will be made for such a person.

However, I would also suggest that all of the rest of you resolve to pull together in good-natured harmony and make up for her bad temper. If the residents where you are understand that most of the workers care about them and are friendly, even the cook might become aware that her rudeness and uncaring attitude is not running the show.

Dear Doris: My daughter tells me she and her boy friend are going to live together. They plan to get married later. She tells me that living together first is the only way they can get to know each other and save their money.

But how about their reputations and self-respect?

I know times have changed, but God didn't change.

Help Me.

Dear Help Me: Many parents nowadays share your heartache. All too often the girl who lives with her boy friend ends up feeling "used" and frustrated. Let your daughter know that you don't condone her decision, but that you still love her and want to be her friend.

Stick to your moral convictions, but keep an open, loving heart for your daughter.

Dick and Jane Still Running — Now Into Each Other's Arms

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dick and Jane of storybook fame are running into each other's arms in a new sex manual for children which features explicit terms.

"Sex is what all people (and all animals and fish and birds and insects) do to make more of themselves," the primer says in its introduction. "It is a very ancient invention ....

"Sex has, however, received a lot of bad publicity, or no publicity at all. This seems strange since it is perhaps the most intense and pleasurable of human activities."

The 48-page manual, called The Child's Garden of Sex, was designed for supplementary use in junior high schools and will be published next month by the non-profit Zephyros Educational Exchange.

"No regular textbook publisher seemed to want to take on this taboo subject," said Jane Speiser, co-ordinator of the book. "Besides, we wanted to make sure that this large gap in classroom biology was filled with some humor and beauty and was erotically sound."

Miss Speiser said she expects the book to circulate mostly in private schools through Zephyros's network "of about 20,000 contacts, from convents in Nebraska to the lower East Side in New York."

"But school boards being what they are, we don't expect it to be adopted as an official text anytime soon," she said.

Motherhood Deserves Recognition

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Women will be free from oppression only when society values reproduction as highly as production of goods, British author Juliet Mitchell said Monday.

She said at a lecture at Queen's University that women were repressed as society made child care their responsibility while men assumed control of society through control of the means of production.

The author of Psychoanalysis and Women and of Women's Estate said women should be able to have both a family and a career. She said most women seek not a career but a job in order to survive.

"For most women there is no choice between being a mother or a lawyer," she said, "You have to go out and get a job as a typist and you likely get pregnant."

The rise of capitalism and the middle class led to a division between family and production, she said. Women were confined to the family with no direct role in production.

Women's participation in witchcraft and religion during the 1400s was the creation of predominantly female groups against a society and church dominated by men, she said.

Desire Not Ego Wanted at College

If you plan to take a Loyalist College-sponsored extension division course merely to fill some spare time or to have a good time with your neighbors, forget it. That goes against the grain of community education.

Hal Butterill, director of college extension, pointed out in an interview this week the courses are designed for students to achieve a skill so it will benefit them in their daily personal lives or employment.

"It's fulfillment," he commented. "They learn something they haven't learned before.'

Extension classes are not social gatherings, although they do provide an opportunity for people to communicate more often. "We're in the education business, not to satisfy someone's ego," remarked Mr. Butterill.

But most potential students are genuinely concerned. Laurie Cameron, college supervisor of community education, notes, "there hasn't been a week that I've been here that some person or group hasn't asked for a course to cover a particular problem."

County Council Divides Workload

Hastings County Council this week, approved memberships on its various committees and district boards for 1975.

The committees and reeves appointed (with chairman named first) were:

..Roads and Bridges — Gordon Wilman, Leonard Walsh, Ray Shortt, Cecil Woods, George Wood.

..Homes for the Aged — Glen Myers, Ken Wilson, Arthur McMunn, Calvin White.

..Finance — James Pollock, George Lyons, Douglas Lunch, Jack Reynolds, Ross Sprackett, Garnet Denyes.

..ARDA-Tourism — S.J. Carr, Frank Graham, James Haddow, James Pollaock, Leonard Walsh, Kenneth Wilson.

..Personnel — Kenneth Smith, Horace Casey, Calvin White, Ross Sprackett.

..Planning — Felix Browne, Calvin White (vice-chairman), Horace Casey, Cecil Woods, T.C. Barton, Carman Mikel, Richie Wells, Frank Robbins.

Warden William McCrea sits on all committees.

Joint Boards:

Social services — Ray Shortt, Jack McKenzie, Russell Hawley.

..Belleville General Hospital — George Lyons, Harleigh Hamilton, Ken Smith, William McCrea.

..Health board — Jack McKenzie, J.R. Reynolds, Barbara Allen;

. Belleville and District Employment — James Haddow, Glen Meyers, Ritchie Wells.

Funding Request Rejected

City council this week turned down a request for financial assistance from a a high school group planning a public social awareness program.

The one-day schedule of seminars, exhibits and films is planned for April 23 by Moira Secondary School's Level 5, Contemporary English class.

The class asked for council's support but a motion for a $200 grant by Ald. Jean Smith was defeated. Council voted the letter be received.

Louis Returns To Cosy Grill

Louis is back. Back to his familiar spot running the Cosy Grill downtown. And just to show everyone how pleased he is with the situation he's inviting all his opening day customers to a free coffee when the restaurant re-opens the last week in January.

Louis Tsichlas has been in the restaurant business in Belleville since 1950. He began by operating the Vienna Grill on Front St., then opened the Cosy Grill in 1957. He has run that place continuously until he sold it last summer.

Now he is back and is glad about the whole thing. "I like people. I like talking to people, especially about sports," said Louis. He said he enjoys talking about hockey, particularly the Montreal Canadiens.

"Every time Montreal wins a game, I treat my friends in the restaurant to a coffee," he said.

When Lousi' old customers do come in when the Cosy re-opens, they may have trouble recognizing it.

"I spent $8,000 to $10,000 fixing it up," he said. "I put in a new broiler, new fan, new frier. I fixed up the floors and the ceiling and put new wallpaper on the walls," he said. "In fact, you might say it was almost a complete renovation."

Louis says he is looking forward to seeing his old customers who stop in his restaruant for everything from a steak dinner to a take-out coffee. They range from downtown merchants to lawyers to the cop on the beat.

"I try to keep everybody happy," said Louis. "If you don't do that you have, trouble," he said.

Suspension Guidelines Outlined

Guidelines governing suspension from school have been revised by the Hastings-Prince Edward county separate school board.

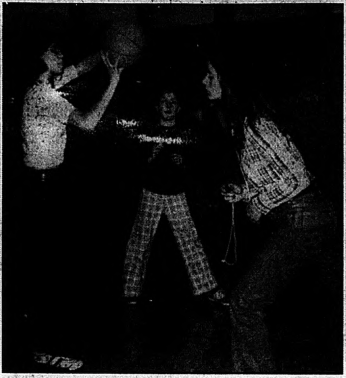
Although supsension as punishment is used very rarely, it is necessary at times for the good of the school and the pupil, said superintendent E. J. Neville.

From now on, a pupil suspended for the first time will be out of school for only three days.

For the second or further occasions of suspension, the period will not exceed five days.

Student Named To Orchestra

A Bayside Secondary School student, Caroline Miller, was chosen last year to participate in the Ontario Youth Orchestra in London, Ont. She is a percussion player. The Intelligencer reported that five students chosen this year for the youth orchestra and choir were the first to be chosen from this area.



Non-stop Action

Total Involvement is the rule when the basketball game rips up and down the gymnasium floor Tuesday evenings while 30 junior girls participate in the YMCA Outreach program held at Hillcrest Public School. Referees for this game were three Loyalist College students from the Behavioral Science course, volunteering to help as part of their fieldwork.

YMCA Outreach Program Popular with City Youth

By ISABEL HUGGAN

Staff Reporter

Outreach, the YMCA program for kids, is well underway in schools across the city.

Five evenings a week, boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 16 have the opportunity to join in free recreational activites.

Funded by a Local Initiatives Grant, (LIP), the program is co-ordinated by the YMCA, and takes place in school gymnasiums provided, without cost, by the Hastings County Board of Education.

Supervising adults include three recreation workers paid by the LIP grant — Jack Frame, Peter Fleming and Pam Barrett — and several volunteer students from Loyalist College's Behavioral Science course, who assist with the program as part of their required field work.

Activities depend on the need and number of young people who turn out. An ordinary evening consists of basketball and volleyball game, floor hockey and table tennis, supplemented by gymnastics. Cards and games such as crokinole are also available.

"We have a real need for more equipment,' says Jack Frame, who arranges the Outreach program.

"We could use games of any kind, but are especially hoping to get some old but usable table hockey games. We only have a little money for equipment expenses, so we have to depend on donations."

Not only does Outreach need more equipment, it needs more space. The response has been so great, that in some cases there are too many teenagers for one school gymnasium.

"For example, our teen night at the West Hill Outreach centre, held in Prince Charles Public School, is attended by nearly 90 kids on Friday evenings. That's, just too many for the space and number of supervisors we have," says Mr. Frame.

"We're negotiating right now for another school gym to take the over flow."

Other Outreach centres are also having success. The Hillcrest program has between 25 and 35 senior boys and junior boys and girls, on three different evenings. The Quinte Outreach centre, at Quinte Secondary School, attracts well over 50 junior boys and girls one night a week.

Probably the most popular program of all is the Saturday Outreach at the YMCA itself, during which there is free swimming for kids from 2.30 p.m. to 3.30 p.m. The rest of the day, the 'Y's other recreational facilities are available, with leaders supervising games and use of equipment.

"It's hard to say how many come out on a Saturday, since the idea of the day-long program is to encourage kids to drop in informally," explains Mr. Frame. "But it is clearly a success.'

Hoping that Outreach will continue to grow, Mr. Frame says there is already a need for more volunteer supervisors. Anyone interested or skilled in any sports or crafts would be most welcome at the 'Y'.

The LIP grant, for approximately $9,000 will run out in June, from which point Outreach hopes to continue through funding from the city, the 'Y' and other sources. Then, as now, the program will be dependent upon volunteer assistance in order to provide a full range of supervised activities.

"Our Loyalist helpers are just tremendous,' says Mr. Frame. "We also have a top-notch referee, Peter Ramsay of the Cheshire Home, who volunteers a lot of time to help us with games like basketball.

"Peter's on crutches, but that doesn't slow him down. He really works hard for us, and is terrific with the kids.

"I just hope we can get some more assistance like his."

Slow Sales Force Domtar to Shut Down Bancroft Chip Mill

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Correspondent

BANCROFT — An announcement made by Clarke Rollins MPP Hastings may have come too late for north Hastings County lumbermen and bush operators.

Mr. Rollins announced Thursday that th Crown dues paid on spruce, jackpine, balsam and hemlock will be reduced by $1 per green ton effective immediately.

These species of trees which hav been damaged by spruce budworm are used for production of chips by mills such as Domtar Woodlands at Bird's Creek, about four miles north of here.

However, Ben Burtchael, manager of the Domtar plant, said today that the plant will be closing tonight for an "indefinite" period of time.

"We are having a problem getting rid of the woodchips. There's a backlog of paper and we have to stop until the paper mills pick up the slack," he said.

Mr. Burtchael, however, said "Clarke has really done his part. But the economy of the country is the cause of this".

The pallet mill which is also at Domtar Woodland is at a dead standstill also, he said.

Domtar has been laying off some workers for the past month or so. However, tonight the remaining 17 employees will be laid off and a skeleton maintenance crew of seven will look after the premises.

Meantime, local timber operators have not shown enthusiasm for the announced reduction. They seem to feel the provincial government should have made even more reductions in Crown dues.

"The dues on saw logs (good lumber) should come down to do any good for us. They raised the Crown dues in the spring and all they did was to meet the price of lumber coming down," said Lloyd Jan, of L'Amable.

In spring of 1974, provincial treasurer John White announced that "the Crown dues for cutting timber on Crown land will be doubled immediately".

Other area timbermen agree with Mr. Jan.

"They should have gone further and lowered those dues on good saw logs. I'm very disappointed in Domtar. Where are we going to sell the spruce and balsam now?" said Peter Freymond, of Bancroft.

Ross Sprackett, lumberman and reeve of Tudor—Cashel Township, said Thursday: "The dues have been unreasonable. It's ridiculous. We can't sell the lumber and we're lucky if we make a cent let alone any profit."

A spokesman for Domtar Canada, Donald Canning of Montreal, indicated today that he had no idea how long the shutdown would last.

"During December and January we have had shutdowns at many of our Ontario paper mills, so the shutdown at the Bancroft plant is just part of a chain reaction," he said.

The Bancroft chip mill, which Domtar took over about 15 months ago, supplies chips to the company's own fine paper mills.

Mr. Canning also said he was unaware of th concessions announced Thursday by the provincial ministry of natural resources concerning a reduction in Crown dues.

Rising Transit Deficit May Mean Fare Boost

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Public transit systems are becoming too costly for the provincial government to continue subsidizing and the passenger standing in line is the first to be affected.

Ontario transportation minister John Rhodes said this week, in view of the staggering increase in costs, the provincially-imposed fare freeze may have to be lifted.

Marylea Burtt, chairman of Belleville's transit commission, warned several months ago, "If we don't reduce labor and expenses and passenger fares don't increase, we'll have to abolish the service."

Mrs. Burtt has said an adult pays 25 cents for a ride which costs the transit commission 60 cents to provide. Last year, 1.2 million passengers were carried by the service travelling 421,000 miles. Commission statistics show operating losses at 30 cents a mile.

The Belleville commission has been faced with operating losses during the last 14 years. Mrs. Burtt told The Intelligencer Friday, "We had a large deficit this year and next year's will be sky high again."

She predicts the commission's deficit will increase by $50,000 this year and will reach a quarter of a million dollars by the following year.

Mr. Rhodes based the need for the fare freeze revision on deficits such as this.

The provincial government subsidizes 50 percent of public transit system deficits.

In 1971, the province picked up $4.8 million — a total which climbed to $35 million this last year.

"When I see the bills piling up from our public transit subsidies, I can only say that we are going to have to take a very serious look at ending the freeze," said the minister at an open cabinet meeting in London this week.

"While increasing the passenger fare might provide part of the answer to reducing operating deficits, I wouldn't be a bit surprised if the province cut down the subsidy," leaving the municipality with the major financial responsibility, said Mrs. Burtt.

For the transit commission to run on a "break even" basis requiring no subsidy, fares would have to be as expensive as taxi fares, said Mrs. Burtt. "And let's face it . . . who'd ride the bus then?"

Mr. Rhodes suggested the responsibility of setting fares would be left in the hands of the municipality — as it was prior to the fare freeze imposed more than a year ago.

Mrs. Burtt said the commission will get in touch with provincial authorities for more explanation on the minister's statements before any action is taken locally.

Duffy Stresses Need For Emergency Plan

Angus Duffy, Quinte Area Emergency Measures co-ordinator, in his annual report makes a strong point of urging municipalities in the area to take advantage of the disaster plan service his organization offers.

"The law and common sense dictate that each municipality should have an emergency plan to cope with disaster, should it strike," said Col. Duffy.

"To date," Col. Duffy said, "only 14 of the 39 municipalities in the Quinte area have an emergency plan. This isn't good enough."

The emergency measures co-ordinator reported six municipalities had begun on emergency plans in 1974. They are Stirling, Deseronto, Madoc, Ameliasburg Wellington and Bloomfield. The plans for Stirling, Deseronto and Madoc were completed and adopted under municipal bylaws in 1974.

Col. Duffy, in his report, emphasized that his organization is prepared to produce an emergency plan for any municipality in the area at no cost. "All that is required is that the authority of council and the necessary advice and support be supplied to make sure it is the best plan possible".

Blood Clinics A Success

The best blood donor clinic ever held in Belleville. This was how a two-day clinic sponsored by the city's Jaycees and a one - day Loyalist College clinic was described by the blood donor clinic chairman for the local Red Cross branch, Merritt Hackett.

Altogether, close to 1,000 pints of blood were donated by area residents during the three days. Of the 1,076 donors who showed up, a total of 986 pints of blood were donated.

Breaking down the figures, it was shown that Wednesday's clinic at the Masonic Temple brough in 352 pints of blood.

Thursday's Jaycee clinic, also at the Masonic Temple, saw a total of 474 pints of blood given during the afternoon and evening clinics.

At Loyalist, 163 pints of blood were donated Tuesday.

The evening clinic on Thursday was scheduled to end at 8 p.m. but donors were still coming in up to an hour later and it wasn't until 10 p.m. that the last donor left the hall.

Election Slated

The Navy League of Canada, Belleville branch will hold their annual election of executives Jan. 27 at 8 p.m. in the Sea Cadet building on Front St. S. As volunteers are important to the existence of the league, all persons are invited to attend. The league in Belleville is supported by the United Community Services and the Belleville Yardmen.

Sidney Proposes New Addresses

It may soon be easier to find your way around Sidney Township.

Township council Thursday night authorized Quinte Planning Board staff to begin work on drawings outlining address information similar to municipal systems.

If the project goes through successfully, township residents will no longer refer to lot and concession numbers but to a conventional urban address listing number and name of street.

The work was prompted this week by post office and Bell Telephone requests. Both bodies were represented at the meeting Thursday.

The general plan for township address system will be based on a central north-south roadway, dividing east and westerly street extensions. The house number would directly correspond to its distance from the central north-south roadway.

A pilot plan will be drawn for the Montrose subdivision for council's discussion purposes and the principal — once accepted — will be applied to the entire township.

Bayside Setup Blend Of New and Old Systems

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Continuous education from kindergarten to the end of high school is an ideal touted in school circles, but at Bayside it's a physical reality.

The old school farm, obtained for school purposes in 1821 by three Sidney Township farmers now boasts seven buildings accommodating 1,800 pupils from kindergarten to Grade 13.

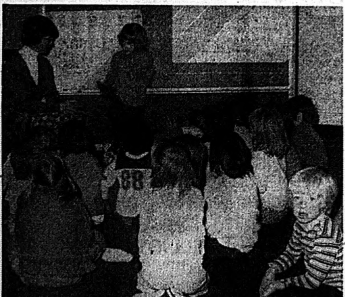
Bayside Public School occupied the property for many years before Bayside Seondary was built. Now there are four portable classrooms, an annex (the oldest school on the site) the elementary school and the secondary school. The elementary school section has 742 pupils.

Bayside Secondary is one of the few high schools in the province with a kindergarten operation in a high scool. It was squeezed out of the elementary school building by the volume of enrolment and found a home in one of the secondary school classrooms. The result has been more than satisfactory, says the teacher, Barbara Refausse.

She has 11 boys and 11 girls in her class from 9 to 11:30 a.m. One of the high school students comes in at the beginning and end of the class to help the little ones struggle out of and into snowsuits. At Hallowe'en, students in the home economics class gave the youngsters a party and members of the photography class took advantage of the opportunity to practice child photography.

"This campus offers great potential for integration," says Arnold Hall, principal of Bayside Public School.

Facilities are shared between the two schools. Grade 7 and 8 students use Bayside Secondary for home economics and shop classes. Because the high school is on the semester system Grade 8 students can be promoted in mid-year. Six have started high school with the beginning of Bayside's second semester this week. Two public school students are on "partial promotion" taking some courses at the Grade 9 level while continuing with their Grade 8 work.



Listen Closely

From the City for Merit

Students Honored

City Remembers Special Olympics

Some special young people are making it necessary for the city's honors and awards committee to rewrite its rules.

The committee is responsible for dispensing civic recognition to athletes and sports groups which distinguish themselves in major events.

The committee's annual presentation of plaques is the city's officoal gesture of recognition that such involvement also broaden attention for the hometown.

Thus the committee, formed several years ago, awards athletes who return with honors from provincial, national and international events.

But a different kinds of national sports event last June also brought recognition for the city — the Canadian Special Olympics at Winnipeg.

Some 21 student at the William R. Kirk school for the retrainable retarded travelled west to participate — and return with 16 medals.

Thursday, committee members went to the school to award the young athetes an honors plaque.

Actually, said Ald. Arthur Keegan, chairman of the committee's athletic group, such a special event does not quite fall within his committee terms of reference.

But the school's achievement was so outstanding its merit had to be recognized.

As a result, he said, the terms of reference would be rewritten to recognize special groups.

The committee is holding its annual awards night banquet Jan. 29, when 46 plaques will be distributed among top city athletes and organizations.

But, it was decided to make the William R. Kirk presentation a separate event — so all the school could participate.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey showed up to award the plaque to the winning athlete while their schoolmates watched and applauded.

"It's a wonderful tribute to this school that this presentation can be made this morning," said the mayor.

"You have been good ambassadors for our city," added Ald. Keegan.

Industrial Milk Price Raised

Federal minister of agriculture Eugene Whelan announced in the house of commons today the price of industrial milk will rise to $10.02 a hundred weight from the $9.41 level.

Hastings MP Jack Ellis reported from the house today the increase will mean higher prices for several dairy products, including butter.

The government announced also that powdered milk will be subsidized for the consumer. The increase in industrial milk prices would force the price of powdered milk higher without such a subsidy, said Mr. Ellis.

Loyalist Lunch Honors Poet

The Latin proverb at the top of the Robbie Burns luncheon menu in Club 213 at Loyalist College Thursday read "Tenni musam meditamur avena" or in English, "We cultivate literature on a little oatmeal."

And so one proceeded to choose from an array of special Scottish dishes as the hotel administration students gave a celebration in honor of Scottish poet Robbie Burns, complete with pipers, kilts and whisky.

The menu included Scotch eggs, loch fyne herring in oatmeal, cock-a-leekie soup, haggis 'n neeps, spiced tay salmon, veal flory, entrecote balmoral, skirlie tomatoes, chapit tatties, cranberry tart, Scotch trifle, blairgowrie flummery, oven scones, and bannocks 'n butter.

"This type of food is unusual" remarked course instructor Ed Gould, who, along with his waiters, wore a kilt. Mr. Gould, as a Scotsman, was right at home during the affair.

Students in Club 213, which is known as the college dining room but is primarily a classroom, prepare exclusive and exotic food throughout their course, and welcome these special occasions. "It's a break from the usual routine," noted Mr. Gould.

He described the hours of preparation required. "We've been working on this since last week," he said.

The students spent several hours in studies of Scottish recipes, because all food was to be made at the college. "And it is authentic, I assure you," pointed out Mr. Gould.

Among the special guests was C. C. (Bud) Munroe of Foxboro, president of Clan Munroe Association of Canada, who provided the kilts. He was recently appointed by his Scottish chief, Capt. Patrick Munroe Foulis.

Mr. Munroe was accompanied by the two pipers, Laura McPhee, 15, from Cobourg, and Barbara Stillman, 17; of Brighton, both members of the Cobourg Royal Canadian Legion Pipe Band and North American champions in Grade Four piping. They will perform at Loyalist's open house later this year.

Dairy Robbed

A break-in at Reid's Dairy Co. Ltd. at 17 Parker St. sometime Thursday night netted thieves $100 in cash.

City police said today the intruders gained access by climbing the rear roof, forcing a window which led into a washroom, giving them access to upstairs offices.

The police spokesman said filing cabinets were opened, a panel ripped off a wall, and offices ransacked. In addition, a sink in the washroom was found broken, believed to have occurred when the thieves entered.

The incident took place between 7 p.m. Thursday and 5 a.m. Friday.

Green Gets 12 Months

A 25-year-old Belleville man was sentenced to 12 months in jail when he appeared before Judge J.L. Clendenning in provincial court Thursday on a charge of a ssault.

Robert Kenneth Green was found guilty of assaulting Nelson H. Allen 60 of 42½ Bridge St. E. Evidence disclosed that Mr. Allen was beaten to the extent that he required hospital care for almost two weeks.

Court was told the incident occurred on Dec. 21 at Mr. Allen's Bridge St. apartment sometime between 7 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. It was revealed that both men had been drinking.

City police constables Bob Cooper and Ken Gutoski were called to the scene at about 7:45 p.m. evidence disclosed.

Among Mr. Allen's injuries were a broken nose, rib injuries and bruises and cuts.

Mr. Green, besides serving the 12-month term for the conviction, also has five months yet to serve on a revoked parole for an unrelated charge. He had pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault.

Barbara Stillman of Brighton, a 17-year-old student at Eastern Northumberland Secondary School who plans to attend Loyalist College next year, displays her talents on the bagpipes at the college prior to the hotel administration program's special Scottish luncheon in honor of poet Robbie Burns in Club 213. Miss Stillman is a member of the Cobourg Royal Canadian Legion Pipe Band.

Fast Exit in Playoffs, Oshawa Tourney Power

SLICES — Oshawa Parkway, the team making such a hit in the Wrigley Midget Hockey Tournament at Oshawa this week, didn't fare very well in Ontario Minor Hockey Association AAA playoffs.

Parkway went out 3-1 in a best of five series with Peterborough.

No doubt the Oshawa club put far more importance on the National Tournament than OMHA playoffs.

After all, the winner in the Wrigley event earns a trip to the Soviet Union for a series of exhibition games.

The Peterborough squad is waiting for a winner between Kingston and Belleville Lions.

Finding themselves in a do or die situation in Kingston, Tuesday, Lions responded by preventing a sweep of the series by the Limestone City representative.

Coach Robb Burrowes' scrappy squad posted its first win of the series, a convincing 6-2 decision, to get right back in the running. Kingston leads the best of five set 2-1.

Commenting on the team's performance in the 6-2 win, club manager Gerry Murphy summed up with "We put it all together, getting strong efforts from goalie Mark Meehan, the defence, and the forwards".

"Up until Tuesday, we didn't seem to be able to come up with solid, all around production from every player in any one game.

"But it looks like we've arrived," observed Murphy.

Lions get a chance to square the set at 2-2 when they hook up with Kingston at Dick Ellis Rink, Saturday, at 6.45 p.m.

Cosmo DeClerq, publicity man for the Trenton Minor Soccer Association, comes up with a pleasant thought.

"Spring is not that far away," he emphasizes while prompting volunteers to make their services available as coaches at the Atom and Bantam level.

Persons wishing to help with the coaching of these teams should contact John Andrews, 475-1596; Stan Smit, 475-2614, or Graham Baine, 392-5553.

"Working with young soccer players is very rewarding', offers DeClerq.

Pick up overset from Jan. 22.

Here's a new one for you.

An event billed as a "five-pin bowling presidents' recognition celebration" is in the works.

Russ Ruttan, president of the Saturday night Canadian Order of Foresters League, is one of the organizers of the ambitious program.

Presidents of the 38 five-pin leagues in the city will be honored at a dinner and dance to be staged in the Armouries, March 8.

Only 16 tickets are available for each of the 38 leagues and the ducats are reported to be going like the proverbial hot cake, already.

Let's see now, 16 multiplied by 38 brings a total of 608. Add to that figure a number of others who will be in attendance, and the crowd grows to about 650.

It's a novel idea and promises to provide a good night out for all concerned. As well as spilling the pins, bowlers invariably enjoy themselves when it comes time for a get together.

Evelyn Bryant and others in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association are doing an excellent job supplying us with house league results.

There is one problem that is cropping up from time to time.

We need first as well as last names of goal scorers and goalies who turn in shutouts.

And please, when you include standings, give us a complete rundown, wins, losses, ties and points. Some have been submitting points only.

How about it?

Sport Briefs

CHRIS, JIMMY LEAD

NEW YORK (AP) — Tennis stars Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert of the United States were that sport's top money winners for 1974. Connors earned $281,309, falling $11,408 short of the men's record set by Australian Rod Laver in 1971. Miss Evert won $261,460 and broke the women's mark of $204,400, set in 1971 by Margaret Court of Australia. Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, winner of the Canadian Open, was second with $274,327. Billie Jean King ranked second among the women with $173,225.

EXPOS SIGN SEVEN

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos announced Thursday they have signed seven more players listed on their National League major league roster for the 1975 season. Signed were righthander Don DeMola, infielders Pepe Frias and Rudy Kinard, and outfielders Pepe Mingual, Warren Cromartie, Tony Scott and Ellis Valentine.

Belleville netminder Bruce Clark accepts a $75-pair of Wilson hockey gloves from Bob Bailey. Clark received the gloves as an award for selling the most tickets for the 20th Annual Metro Junior B hockey game, Wednesday night. He sold almost 150 tickets. Bailey was representing Tilson Sports Equipment Canada Ltd., which donated the gloves as the prize.

Lions Looking To Close Gap

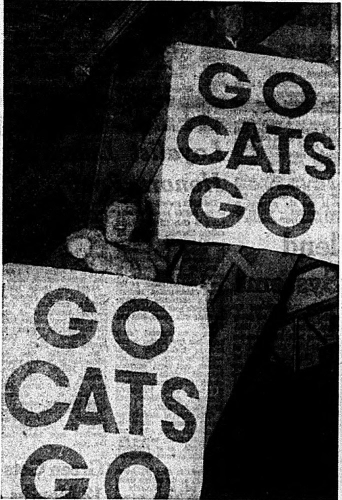
When the Belleville Bobcats take to the Memorial Arena ice tonight at 9 to take on the Peterborough Lions, local fans might see them peeking over their shoulders. That's exactly where the Lions are in relation to the Cats.

Belleville currently holds down fourth spot in Metro Junior B East division standings. The Cats are two points back of Kingston Voyageurs, but just four points behind Belleville is Peteborough.

The Lions have 29 points on 13 wins and three ties. The Bobcats have 33 points on 15 wins and three ties. Peterborough will be looking to better themselves in the standings before the end of the season. Conceivably the Lions could move as high as third place.

Most of the teams in the league still have seven or eight games left and with only six points separating third and fifth place, anything could happen.

On the other hand, Belleville will be looking to take advantage of their game in hand over Kingston. The Voyageurs have played 32 games to the Cat's 31. If the locals win, it would give them a tie for that all important third place in the standings. With the season closing soon, third place would allow Belleville home game advantage in the opening playoff series.



Boosting the Cats

The Bobcat Booster Club is making a comeback. Tuesday night and Wednesday day afternoon, Bob Carey and Arley Kerwin were hanging the Bobcat signs up around the Memorial Arena. The first club meeting is Wednesday night and any interested parties are invited to attend. Membership to the club is $1 and that entitled members to travel on the Booster's out of town buses at a reduced rate. It also has many other advantages. The meeting will be held in the Memorial Arena at 7:30 p.m.

St. Lawrence Comes on Strong

Lancers Fade in Second Half

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

KINGSTON — Kim MacKenzie and Mick Dowling, with a little bit of help from the remaining players on the St. Lawrence College men's basketball team, tooka 76-58 victory over the Loyalist Lancers here in Ontario Colleges Athletics Association play on Thursday.

MacKenzie and Dowling combined to score 60 points as the Lancers were unable to contain the two giants, especially on the rebound.s

MacKenzie was the big gun for the winners, netting 35 points with Dowling picking up 25. The other 16 points were divided equally among four other players.

The score at half time was tied up at 29-29 with the teams trading baskets and the lead, numerous times in the 20 minutes.

"We weren't rebounding well in our own end and they missed some easy lay ups," said Lancer coach Rob Stinson between periods.

The height advantage that the home team enjoyed proved to be their biggest asset accounting for much of their staying power in the Loyalist end.

It also proved to be a plus in their own end as the ability to clear off the rebounds, sending three and four players down the court on fast breaks to keep the Lancers off balance for the second half of the contest.

"We really came up flat in the last half. We threw the ball away a lot," offered Stinson.

To date, Kingston has lost only one game and currently holds down second place behind Algonquin College of Ottawa, the only team to beat St. Lawrence.

In the last 20 minutes, Lancers tried to slow the action down and play their own style of game but the tactic backfired as the winners continually intercepted passes and had time to set up a box defence to keep out the visitors.

The Loyalist scoring was divided quite evenly as Dave Culmer led the losers with 18 points, Jim Sutton sunk 13 points and Bill Kyle hooped nine.

Peter Scott and Bill Balfour had seven and six points respectively to round out the major scoring for the Lancers.

The Lancers will travel to Lindsay on Saturday in hopes of regaining lost footing when they will take on the last place Sir Sanford Fleming College in a return match. In the last meeting between the two clubs at Loyalist, the Lancers came up with an impressive victory for their second win in a row.

Belvedere And Reid's Post Wins

After battling through a scoreless first period, Reid's and Stinson made up for lost time in the second and third. Between the two clubs they counted 10 goals on the night.

Reid's came out on top 7-3. In the other Quinte Hockey League contest Thursday night, Cornerstone Builders downed Belvedere Hotel 4-1.

Moe Hunter and Jim Lucas scored twice and added an assist to top the Dairymen's attack. Singles went to Al Ray, Carl Boomhour and Bob Revoy.

Andy Prudden, Bill Goodfellow and John Clark replied for Stinson.

Most Valuable Player

Steve Falkner, Pickering Panthers highscoring right winger, was selected as the Most Valuable Player in the 20th Annual Metro Junior B All-star game. Falkner scored three of the East squad's nine goals and drew two assists to earn the selection. Jack Minaker, secretary of the Metro Junior B League and manager of the Markham Royals, was on hand to present Falkner with the Perc Toppin Trophy.

Clippers Leave AHL

Shift to Baltimore, Stags Become Blades

BALTIMORE (AP) — After two earlier attempts failed, a financially troubled World Hockey Association team has finally landed in Baltimore.

WHA and city officials said Thursday the league will shift Michigan Stags from Detroit to Baltimore, where they will become the Blades.

In Detroit, the Stags were plagued by poor crowds and high operating expenses in Detroit.

The team will play its first game as the Blades in Cleveland Saturday, Murphy said. Three road games later, they will play their Baltimore opener Feb. 2 against Houston Aeros.

The Blades replace Baltimore Clippers, an American Hockey League club that represented the city for 13 years, Zanvyl Krieger, the Clippers' board chairman, announced earlier Thursday that the AHL club had folded.

The Clippers often drew fewer than 4,000 fans for home games in the 10,000-plus seat Civic Centre this season.

WHA president Dennis Murphy said the league was talking to several private groups who might operate the Blades next season. He said a new ownership group should be ready by the end of the current campaign.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the AHL said league officials would meet today and discuss the remainder of the schedule. The last time a team dropped out of the AHL in midseason, the spokesman said, the entire AHL schedule for the remainder of that year was revised.

The Clippers' refusal to relinquish their exlusive rights to the Civic Centre ice had blocked two earlier attempts to bring WHA teams to the city.

WHA officials tried unsuccessfully last season to switch New York Golden Blades to Baltimore. That team, which had begun its first year as New York Raiders, was later moved to Cherry Hill, N.J., renamed the Jersey Knights, then eventually wound up in San Diego this year, as the Mariners.

Earlier this season, reports circulated that Chicago Cougars, having money problems, were Baltimore-bound. But again the Clippers refused to give up ice rights and the deal fell through.

That hurdle for the Blades was cleared last week, however, when the city canceled $80,000 in payments owed by the Clippers for use of the Civic Centre during the 1974-75 season. In return, the Clippers gave up their exclusive ice rights.

League officials said terms of their agreement included a payment to the city of $500 for use of the Civic Centre for each of 17 remaining home games, with the city returning to the team half of its 40 per cent gross of arena concession sales.

Ticket prices for Blades' home games will range from $4 to $6.50, with season blocks for the rest of the season going for $100.

Clippers' ticket ranged from $2.50 to $5.50.

Hull Still Flying

Oilers Clobber Cellar Dwellers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The heavy ice at the Coliseum in Edmonton failed to slow down two of the smallest Oilers in a World Hockey Association game Thursday night.

Rookie Mike Rogers and Ron Climie combined with Blair MacDonald, their slightly larger linemate, to score six goals in a 7-3 win over Winnipeg Jets before a crowd of 10,802.

The ice, not properly prepared after a recent appearance by a skating troupe, didn't stop the speedy players from roaming freely in front of Winnipeg goalie Joe Daley.

MacDonald, who weighs 180 pounds, had three goals, Rogers, 160, two and Climie, 165, one. Each player had five points.

Bobby Hull scored twice for the Jets, raising his season total to 41.

The loss left Winnipeg in the cellar of the five-team Canadian Division while the third-place Oilers moved within four points of second-place Toronto Toros.

In other games, Indianapolis Racers upset Chicago Cougars Cleveland Crusaders stopped Quebec Nordiques 5-3, and San Diego Mariners trounced Vancouver Blazers 6-1.

Two goals each by Jim Harrison and Al McDonough paced the Crusaders before a Quebec crowd of 10,147, snapping a nine-game Nordique winning streak.

Cleveland goaltender Bob Whidden stopped 41 of 44 Quebec drives.

Jim Johnson scored two goals for the Racers, who beat the Cougars for the first time in four games.

Defenceman Kevin Morrison picked up four assists for the Mariners, who haye won seven of their last nine games. They ended a three-game Vancouver winning streak.

Oshawa Remains Unbeaten

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Organizers of this year's Canadian midget hockey tournament see an improvement in two areas over last year's event—attendance and more evenly-matched teams.

Attendance during the first three days of the tournament has increased by 3,027 over last year. A total of 8,923 fans have attended the games at Civic Auditorium, compared with 5,896 for the first three days of 1974.

Last year, Verdun Maple Leafs were clearly the tournament powerhouse, winning the tournament and outclassing the other teams in their division.

But other teams — namely Yorkton, Sask., Oshawa, and Edmonton Canadians — may give the young Quebecers a tough time of a repeat championship.

In Division 1, unbeaten Oshawa holds a one-point edge over Yorkton, having accumulated eight points in four games. Yorkton has played five games and holds a one-point lead over Barrie, Ont. Co-op.

Oshawa is a surprise thus far in the tournament, entering only as the host team, while other teams won provincial championships to qualify.

In Division 2, Verdun has six points in three games and has allowed only three goals in that stretch. Edmonton has six points in four games, as does Fort Garry—Fort Rouge, Man.

The first-place teams in each division will play for the championship, while second-place finishers in each division will be relegated to the consolation final. Teams in Division 1 play six games leading up to the championship, while teams in Division 2—with one less team—play five.

In games Thursday, Thunder Bay, Ont., Miners shut out Quesnel, B.C., Macks 3-0, Barrie defeated Yorkton 4-2, Verdun topped Fort Garry-Fort Rouge Twins 4-1, Thunder Bay and Yorkton played to a 2-2 tie, Edmonton shut out Dalhousie, N.B. Legionaires 7-0, and Sydney, N.S. Legionaires recorded their first victory of the tournament, a 3-2 win over Corner Brook, Nfld. Knights.

Orr's Aim $5 Million Says Alan Eagleson

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says defenceman Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins will demand a five-year hockey contract worth $5 million.

Sports editor Jim Vipond reports that Alan Eagleson, Orr's lawyer, says he can't imagine his client playing for any team other than the National Hockey League Bruins.

The Star says it has learned that New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association have offered Orr a $1-million signing bonus and a salary of $300,000 a year.

"I called Bobby and he has not been talking to New England Whalers," Eagleson told Vipond Thursday night. "His WHA rights are held by Minnesota Fighting Saints."

Orr's contract expires at the end of this season.

"Bobby has another year to go and then he'll become the highest-paid player in hockey, as he should," Eagleson told Vipond. "We want $5-million over five years and we'll get it."

SIGN BUCHANAN

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Racers announced Thursday the signing of former Edmonton centre Ron Buchanan, who quit the Oilers four weeks ago. General manager Jim Browitt said the World Hockey Association club gave up defenceman Murray Kennet and a player to be named later for the 30-year-old Buchanan, who scored 37 goals and had 44 assists in his first WHA season with Cleveland Crusaders in 1972.

Kings Crush Leafs 8-0 To Hang On in First

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

After years of struggling for public acceptence, Los Angeles Kings finally are filling their Forum for National Hockey League games.

The Kings responded to the third sellout in a row Thursday night by defeating Toronto Maple Leafs 8-0 in the 16,000-seat arena.

The win enabled the Kings to maintain a one-point lead over Montreal Canadiens in the NHL's Norris Division. Montreal beat Minnesota North Stars 7-0.

The winning margin was the biggest of the year for the Kings, who have won eight of their last nine games.

Before their current string of sellouts, the Kings had filled the Forum on only five other occasions since they joined the league in 1967-68.

The Kings are averaging 12,237 fans a game for their 21 home games, up 1,500 a game from last season and 5,000 a game from their first year.

The improved crowds could be a product of the team's winning record, but coach Bob Pulford says it is the other way around—the crowds are responsible for the wins.

"It may sound surprising but the change in our type and number of fans is a significant factor in the change with our team," said Pulford.

Goalie Rogie Vachon picked up his fourth shutout of the year and lowered his goals-against average to 1.90. Whitey Widing scored three Los Angeles goals.

In other games, Kansas City Scouts surprised Boston Bruins 3-2, New York Rangers downed Atlanta Flames 5-2, Chicago Black Hawks topped New York Islanders 3-1, Philadelphia Flyers trimmed St. Louis Blues 7-2, Vancouver Canucks edged Washington Capitals 3-2, and Buffalo Sabres whipped Detroit Red Wings 5-1.

Ken Dryden registered his second shutout and Glenn Sather scored two goals as the Canadiens handed the North Stars their 10th loss in a row.

Peter Mahovlich and Guy Lafleur each had a goal and two assists for Montreal.

The Scouts gave coach Bep Guidolin his first win against the Bruins, who he led to the Stanley Cup finals last season. Boston won the earlier games 8-2 and 6-2.

Ted Irvine snapped a 2-2 tie with his 12th goal of the season early in the third period for the Rangers, who now have won 11 and tied one in their last 13 games. The Rangers outshot Atlanta 57-24.

Pit Martin assisted on Phil Russell's goal and scored one himself in the second period for the Black Hawks, who remained three points behind the Smythe Division-leading Canucks.

Buyers Interested

OAKLAND (AP) — Munson Campbell, president of California Golden Seals, said Thursday a San Francisco Bay-area group has shown a strong interest in buying the National Hockey League club.

Earlier this week, reports from Montreal said the Seals' franchise, which the league purchased from Charles Finley, might be transferred to Seattle or Denver when the NHL expands to those cities, possibly next season.

Petes Clip Black Hawks' Wings 7-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One unbeaten streak was extended to eight games while another was snapped at six in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A play Thursday.

Sudbury Wolves got two-goal efforts from three players in dumping Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 9-1, while St. Catharines Black Hawks, outshot 42-21, dropped a 7-2 decision to Peterborough Petes.

At Sudbury, the Wolves gained their fifth win in their last eight games as Ron Duguay, Ritchie Hansen and John Walker each scored twice. Dave Farrish, Bob Russell and Paul Crowley got the other goals.

Tony Cuomo spoiled Jim Bedard's shut-out bid with a goal for the Sault at 14:47 of the third period.

The Wolves, who have tied the other three games during te span, led 1-0 after the first period, adding four more in the second to take a 5-0 advantage into the final period.

Sudbury outshot the Sault 46-30 before a crowd of 2,500.

At Peterborough, centre Red Laurence scored twice as the Petes ended the Black Hawk string of six consecutive wins.

Rick Adduono and Gary McAdam replied for the Black Hawks, who trailed 2-1 at the end of the first period as the Petes connected on a pair of power-play efforts. Adduono tied the game arly in the second period before Laurence and Cassolato fired goals two min- Peterborough ahead 5-3 before the period ended.

In tonight's action, Kitchener Rangers entertain Hamilton Fincups, the Black Hawks meet the '67s in Ottawa, London Knights play host to Oshawa Generals and the Pets tangle with the Canadians in Kingston.

Reavis Guilty

PITTSBURGH (AP) — David Reavis, reserve tackle for Pittsburgh Steelers, pleaded guilty in federal court Thursday to selling $25,000 worth of pep pills in Arizona. William Knox, a U.S. district judge, fined the 24-League player $2,500 and put him on three years probation.

Hawks Get 3-3 Tie

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — New Haven Nighthawks and Richmond Robins played to a 3-3 tie in the only American Hockey League game Thursday night.

New Haven's Alin Langlais jammed the puck by Richmond goalie John Adams to tie the game with 28 seconds to play. Both teams were scoreless in overtime play.

New Haven rallied during the final 36 minutes of play after trailing the Robins 3-0.

Royals Top Draveurs

CORNWALL (CP) — Cornwall Royals took a 3-1 first-period lead and went on to defeat Trois-Rivieres Draveurs 5-2 in the only Quebec Major Junior Hockey League game Thursday night.

Spitfires Win

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Windsor Spitfires defeated Welland Sabres 5-2 in the only Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League game Thursday behind the two-goal effort of Colin Thompson.

Hugh Mitchell, Mark Smith and Bruce Boyd got the other goals.

Reed Thrives On Hard Work

TORONTO (CP) — Almost every time George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders touches the football, he adds to his record of most rushing yards in a career or the greatest number of touchdowns rushing.

GEORGE REED

Not only did the 35-year-old fullback lead the Canadian Football League with 1,447 yards in the 1974 season, he also carried the ball more than anyone in the league.

His 288 carries were two more than that of rushing runner-up Roy Bell of Edmonton Eskimos who carried the ball for 1,341 yards. Only in 1967, when Reed cerried 302 times, has he rushed more often. And only twice, in 1965 with 1,768 yards and 1967 with 1,471, did he rush for more yards.

The Western Conference had four of the five 1,000-yard rushers, Lou Harris of British Columbia Lions carrying 222 times for 1,239 yards for third place and Monroe Eley of B.C. rushing 191 times for 1,176.

Steve Ferrughelli of the Grey Cup champion Montreal Alouettes was the only other member of the select group, carrying 228 times for 1,134 yards, although Andy Hopkins of Hamilton Tiger-Cats was fairly close with 943 yards on 232 carries.

The performance of Harris and Eley marks the first time in 10 years that one team has produced two 1,000-yard rushers. Reed and Ed Buchanan did it for Saskatchewan in 1964.

Reed rushed for more than 100 yards in nine games in 1974, giving him a career total of 57, one behind the pro football record of 58 set by Jimmy Brown of the National Football League Cleveland Browns.

Reed's five touchdowns enabled him to equal Brown's career total of 126, and his 123 TDs rushing put him well ahead of Brown's 106.

For a Change, Miller Trailing

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller was in an unfamiliar position—trailing the leaders—after Thursday's opening round in the $185,000 Bing Crosby golf tournament.

He was five strokes behind Hubert Green and Larry Ziegler who had 66s. Miller had a 71.

It was the first time in this season's nine rounds that Miller had failed to lead or share the lead. It was his first round in the 70s.

The record-setting winner of the Phoenix and Tucson opens had to work hard to salvage his one-under-par.

"I'm OK," said Miller. "I kept my subpar string intact. I want to see how long I can keep it going."

Jack Nicklaus also had a 71.

Miller, Nicklaus and Green all played Cypress Point, the shortest and probably the easiest of the three par-72 courses being used. Ziegler was at Spyglass Hill.

Two strokes back of the leaders were Ross Randall, Andy North and veteran Gene Littler, tied at 68. Randall and North played Cypress, Littler was at Spyglass.

A 69 by Cesar Sanudo was the low score at Pebble Beach, the seaside court that will serve as the site for the final round Sunday. Sanudo was tied with Jerry McGee, at Cypress Point, and Tom Watson, at Spyglass. They all shift courses for the second and third rounds.

Nines of 36 and 37 put Toronto's George Knudson seven strokes behind the leaders with a total of 73 while Ben Kern of London, Ont., shot a 76.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin blew to a 77 at Spyglass. Tom Weiskopf had a 75 on the same courst. Bruce Crampton had an 80. Billy Casper shot a 74.

PGA king Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player are not competing.

Girl's Story Warrants Drug Investigation

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal investigator said Thursday that an investigation is warranted despite a refusal by Roxie Ann Rice to corroborate that she was a courier of drugs for professional football and basketball players.

Thomas Maher, administrator of the federal Drug Enforce- said the DEA considered Miss Rice's story "authentic" and her account to police warrants "a full-scale investigation".

Major Charles Wren, assistant chief of detectives, advised the 19-year-old St. Louis girl not to back up the story.

"In the absence of an attorney, I felt I must take a protective role in her case," he said.

He also said she refused to take a lie detector test or talk to several persons in the National Football League who recall incidents related in a 39-page intra-departmental police memo, which Maj. Wren has refused to confirm exists. Miss Rice was arrested Jan. 4 on charges of defrauding an innkeeper and fraudulently using a credit card. She is still in jail.

The reports, leaked to the news media Tuesday, were based on Miss Rice's statement to St. Louis police and agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

The memo quoted her as saying she was recruited to transport briefcases containing what she believed were narcotics to players in many NFL cities.

Most NFL team spokesmen have declined comment on the investigation, but Detroit coach Rick Forzano said he had met Miss Rice. He said she called him in early December, asking for press credentials to a Lions game.

When informed that Miss Rice had named eight of his players as clients, Forzano replied: "I can't believe that."

The memo said Miss Rice also attended games of the ABA's Spirits of St. Louis and actually delivered drugs to two Spirits players at Long Beach, N.Y. Team officials have declined comment.

Lumber Kings Fall 5-4

OTTAWA (CP) — Rockland Nationals pulled a Central Junior Hockey League upset Thursday, defeating leading Pembroke Lumber Kings 5-4.

The win moved the Nationals into a tie with Nepean Raiders in the six team league, six points behind Smiths Falls Bears and nine behind the Kings.

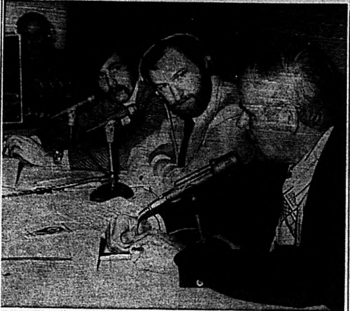
After 1-1 and 2-2 ties at the period breaks, the Kings dropped behind 5-3 in the third period before getting their final goal at 16:51.

Rick Minnie, Bob Norris, Bob Bingley and Terry Bozak scored for Pembroke, outshot 43-31 on the game.

Games tonight have Nepean at Smiths Falls and Gloucester Rangers in Brockville against the Warriors.



Talking Baseball

The two-day blood donor clinic this week run by the city's Jaycees offered even more than the thought of helping someone else. Sports fans had a chance to meet and talk with Montreal Expos pitcher, Steve Rogers, left. Rogers and Expos radio commentator Russ Taylor, right, appeared with CJBQ's Milt Johnson on his open line show.

Program to Improve Canadian Ski Jumpers

TORONTO (CP) — Canada has never been a power in ski-jumping, a sport long dominated by Scandinavians, but the development of a facility that will permit jumpers to polish their skills winter and summer may help change that.

Mt. Norway in the Thunder Bay area of northwestern Ontario, site of the Canadian championships Jan. 30-Feb. 2, is already described as the largest ski-jumping hill in the world.

Ron Richards, ski-jumping chairman for the Canadian Ski Association, who has played a major role in development of the hill, says the 90-metre hill allows jumps of up to 120 metres compared with a maximum of 100 metres on most such hills.

The Ontario government has spent $467,000 on construction of the 90-and 70-metre hills on Mt. Norway, and the jumps are operated by a government-controlled company known as Thunder Bay Ski Jump Ltd.

Richards says that with snow-making equipment and the warm-weather installation of plastic matting on the in-run and landing areas, it will be possible to jump the year round.

More important to the future of Canadian ski-jumping, however, is the development program Richards started in 1974. It now operates with a base of some 200 young jumpers from Quebec city to Vancouvr, 100 of whom have qualified for championship competition in age-class classificatons.

Competitions for the peewees, 10 and under; midgets, 12 and under; juveniles, 15 and under, and junior B, 19 and under, will be held Jan. 31 on Mt. McKay, a facility near Mt. Norway that was redesigned last fall.

The junior A, senior 70-metre and veteran, 32 andover, 70-metre jumps will be run Feb. 1 on Mt. Norway, as will the senior 90-metre Feb. 2.

The ski association dipped into its budget to sponsor last year's championships in Revelstoke, B.C. This year, with Shell Oil sponsoring the competition, it can use funds provided by the O'Keefe Sports Foundation for junior programs.

Shooter Fifth

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Norm Beckett of Ancaster, Ont., was the top scorer for visiting Canadian riflemen Thursday, collecting 149 points out of a possible 150 in the first stage of an aggregate shooting match.

Elected to Hall of Fame

Kiner Gives Credit To Hank Greenberg

NEW YORK (AP) — "The primary reason I'm here," said Ralph Kiner following his election into baseball's Hall of Fame, "is Hank Greenberg.

"When he came over to Pittsburgh in 1947, he taught me how to be serious about baseball."

The deal that brought Greenberg—who was voted into the Hall in 1956—to Pittsburgh was a unique occurrence in the game's history; the joining of home run champions.

The veteran Greenberg had led the American League in homers for the fourth time with 44 for Detroit Tigers in 1946. Kiner was the National League's home run king with 23 for Pittsburgh in 1946, his rookie season.

"He was not really serious about baseball at that time," Greenberg recalled Thursday following the announcement that the Baseball Writers Association of America had elected Kiner into the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., giving him only one vote more than required.

"The Pirates were a last-place club, and a lot of the guys on the team were there just to have a good time," Greenberg said. "Ralph was young and impressionable then, and he fell into that climate and environment.

"I tried to convince him that he could be a great ballplayer and not just an ordinary one. He had the swing, the quick wrists and a good stance at the plate."

Greenburg spoke up when the Pirates' management decided to send Ralph back to the minor leagues early in the 1947 season, when he was in a woeful slump.

"I went to Frank McKinney, the owner, and Roy Hamey, the general manager, and tried to convince them that Ralph had great potential," said Greenberg. "I asked them how could they send a guy who led the National League in home runs the previous year to the minors when they were a last-place club."

McKinney and Hamey relented and Kiner went on to complete one of the greatest seasons in his 10-year major league career.

Kiner, a right-handed batter, hit 48 of his 51 homers that season after the middle of June. His best home run year was 1949, when he hit 54.

"I hit 16 home runs in the last month of the season and my only disappointment was in not hitting 56, which would have tied Hack Wilson's National League record."

Kiner, now 52 and a broadcaster for New York Mets, remained with the Pirates until the middle of the 1953 season.

He then was traded to the Chicago Cubs, and later was dealt to Cleveland, finishing his major league career with the Indians in 1955.

During his career, he hit 369 homers, an average of nearly 37 per year. Only seven other Hall of Famers have hit more, including Babe Ruth, Jimmy Foxx, Mickey Mantle, Ted Williams, Mel Ott, Lou Gehrig and Stan Musial.

Wiggin To Coach Chiefs

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Paul Wiggin, defensive line coach for San Francisco '49ers, signed a three-year contract Thursday as head coach of Kansas City Chiefs.

Wiggin succeeds Hank Stram, the Chiefs' first and only other head coach. Stram was fired Dec. 27 by Lamara Hunt, owner of the National Football League club.

Wiggin, 40, declined to discuss terms of his contract.

He said he sees the need for a rebuilding process with the Chiefs "but I don't know how deep it will need to be."

Wiggin, who played in two Pro Bowls when he was with Cleveland Browns, said his top priority will be to change the mind of middle linebacker Willie Lanier about retiring. He said the Lanier problem is more important than the quarterback situation.

The Chiefs have four quarterbacks, but most of the signal calling was performed last year by veteran Len Dawson.

Wiggin played 11 years in the NFL as a defensive end with Cleveland and has been a '49ers coach for the last seven seasons.

Stram was fired with seven years remaining on his 10-year contract after the Chiefs fell to their worst record ever in 1974, 5-9. The Chiefs said they will continue to make payments on Stram's contract, estimated to pay $100,000 a year.

RUSH — John and Ellan (nee Ash) are very proud to announce the arrival of their daughter Tracey Ellen on Monday, January 20, 1975, 7 lbs. 8¼ oz. at the Belleville General Hospital. A sister for Michael. Special thanks to Drs. Brearly and Birchard.

IN MEMORIAM

YOUNG — In loving memory of our dear mother Marjorie who was suddenly called away one year ago today, Jan. 19, 1974 and of our dear and loving Dad Richard who followed so soon after on January 24, 1974.

It's very lonely here without you Mom and Dad,
For we miss you both very much.
Life just isn't the same since you have gone away.
They say time heals our hearts and helps us to forget,
But no one else on earth will ever take your place.
—Lovingly remembered by all the family.

Getting Tough

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese justice ministry plans to get tougher about the entry of foreign entertainers into the country. The ministry said some people who have visas listing themselves as entertainers have been taking jobs that Japanese want and others are working as bar girls and prostitutes.

Canadian Controversy Book Series Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians often are accused of being apathetic, of avoiding just about anything that smacks of controversy, including politics. Robert Jackson, a political science professor at Carleton University, is betting an embryonic literary career on changing Canadians' minds.

He is general editor of a 10-book series called Canadian Controversy, first volume of which has been published by Macmillan of Canada.

The series has been described in a Carleton University newspaper article as an "ambitious gamble in Canadian publishing, an attempt to assemble a set of books about national concerns."

Its success, however, rests squarely on the wallets and interest of the book-buying public.

"We'd like it to be . . . a series which can be used for teaching purposes but, at the same time, which appeals to the general public," said Mr. Jackson, adding that he would like to see the series become Canada's answer to the internationally-acclaimed Penguin paperback series from England.

These, he said, are beautifully written "and we hope that this series will have the same readability."

The Canadian controversy series is nowhere near the Penguin series in scope. All the planned titles fall within the political science sphere. But if they prove successful, it will branch out.

The first volume, of which Mr. Jackson is senior author, is titled The Canadian Legislative System: Politicians and Policy-Making. It was written with the help of Michael Atkinson, a Carleton graduate student and costs $10 in hardcover and $3.95 in paperback.

"It is about Canadian political institutions and their reform, a task which has been tried on a piecemeal basis, often with conflicting results," explained Mr. Jackson.

He conceded there are difficulties in a field where doctrines and beliefs can be as varied and as numerous as the number of people involved.

He said he would like to see the piecemeal approach abandoned in favor of a more ambitious program of political reform, but is hardly optimistic.

"If we knew what we wanted a parliamentary system to achieve, the discussions of reforms would be easy."

"But since there are no accepted standards, there's no way of evaluating the results. We need a comprehensive knowledge of goals. Then, for instance, we can discuss conflict of interest and know where it fits in with other issues—raising MPs' salaries and so on."

While Mr. Jackson may have some reservations about the feasibility or even the acceptability of his ideas, there apparently is no cause for reservation about the series' success.

Two days after the first book was released, it became required reading in courses at Peterborough, Ont., and Dalhousie University in Halifax.

This, combined with the revelation that Privy Council President Mitchell Sharp is reading it, bodes well for the series.

Mr. Jackson expressed confidence that 10,000 copies will be sold, although he has been told he would be doing well at 5,000.

Polar Bears Thrive

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet scientists say the polar bear will not become extinct. Tass reports that Soviet scientists estimate the current population of the country's polar bears at 12,000 to 20,000. The Russians banned hunting or capture of the animals in 1956.

Mini Sub Sets Record

Pisces V, the latest in the series of miniature submarines owned by Britain's P and O Intersubs and built in Canada by the company's partner, International Hydrodynamics, has established several new records during operations on the new Cantat telephone cable linking the UK with Canada. The sub attained a record working depth of 4,800 feet. Pisces V was involved in the 1973 rescue of the trapped Pisces III. Britian now has the world's largest fleet of mini subs for commercial use.(CP Photo)

So 15,000 Horses Didn't Pollute?

In Those Good Old Days 12-hour Work Day Was Red

NEW YORK (AP) — The good old days were terrible, says Otto Bettmann, social historian and founder of the Bettmann Archive.

With illustrations from the archive's collection of old prints and photographs to make his points, Bettmann argues in a new book that nostalgia has warped people's view of the past.

Among other things, he notes:

—There were three million horses in American cities at the turn of the century. The 15,000 horses in Rochester, N.Y., produced enough manure to cover an acre of ground with a layer 175 feet deep.

—In 1890, the police commissioner of New York said there were 40,000 prostitutes in the city.

State Assemblyman Teddy Roosevelt branded as "communistic" the demand of streetcar drivers for a 12-hour work day. They were working 16-hour days for $12 a week.

—In the 1880s, close to 40 per cent of American farmers owned neither house nor land. They were tenant farmers. About 50 per cent of the income of city families went for food.

—On Feb. 22, 1898, F. B. Baker, a black man, was lynched at Lake City, S.C. He had accepted the job of postmaster.

—Only 20 per cent of the students in the teacher-training schools of the 1890s had high school diplomas. In 1903, only 18 U.S. cities had public playgrounds of any sort. In 1905, a sanitary engineer in Glasgow coined the word smog to describe the condition of the air.

"It is a mechanism of our psyche to forget all the bad things that happened in the old days," said Bettmann. "We look at the little trimmings of the time but not the essential cruelties and hardships."

Bettmann, 71, came to the United States from his native Germany in 1935 with two steamer trunks full of old pictures. There now are three million items in the archive's picture library, including a substantal collecton of old-time Americana.

His book deals with what has been called America's gilded age, the era from the end of the Civil War to the beginning of the First World War. It is titled, The Good Old Days—They Were Terrible!

It is, said Bettmann, "a personal attempt to redeem our times from the aspersions cast upon them by nostalgic comparisons."

The Gay Nineties were gay, said Bettmann, but only for the privileged few. It was also a time when a sweatshop seamstress made $7 for an 84-hour week, when locusts obliterated the entire harvest of the Dakotas in a single day and when thousands of families lived in tarpaper boxes on the Pennsylvania coalfields.

In this gilded age, children made up one-third of the labor force in mills, heroin was sold as cough medicine and teaching jobs in Philadelphia were obtaned by payment of $120 to the local political bosses.

"Even if we cast but a cursory glance at the not-so-good old days and bring them into alignment with our own, we will find much to be grateful for," Bettman said.

For almost every complaint of the modern day, Bettmann offers anecdotes and statistics to show how much worse things were in the good old days.

If teachers complain now of unruly students, they might consider the fate of Etta Barstow. A schoolteacher in anton, Mass., Miss Barstow kept four boys after school on Oct. 8, 1870. They stoned her to death.

And if traffic is a hazard now, consider the report of the National Safety Council. The horse-associated fatality rate of the last century was 10 times as great as the motor vehicle fatality rate of modern times.

"We are, in a way, a little spoiled now," said Bettmann.

"In the olden days, people did not expect much. They thought hardship was part of life. Now people want everything absolutely perfect, painless and instant."

Distemper Attacks Skunks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Centre for Short-Lived Phenomena has bad news for raccoons and skunks.

The harbinger of these grim tidings is part of the Smithsonian Institution, and it obviously hopes they will indeed be short-lived.

An outbreak of canine distemper is spreading rapidly among coons and skunks in Massachusetts, the centre reports. First cases of the viral disease were spotted in March, and by August it was reported to have afflicted many raccoons in the Boston area. Since then affected animals have been found in other parts of the state and the disease has been found in dogs in the Beverly area.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Saturday, Jan. 25

Aries (March 21-April 19) Most pressures today will come from family-related matters. They can be lessened if you keep your temper in check.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Measure severity of your words, lest you say some harsh things to a subordinate that will leave a poor, lasting imprint.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Keep your guard up today in all your commercial dealings or you may be the victim of a rip-off. Examine closely any purchases.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Things will not go as smoothly as you hoped today. Try not to make your displeasure too visible. Smile even if it hurts.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't resurrect an old, volatile issue on which you and another don't see eye-to-eye. Sparks will fly if you do.

Virgo (Aug. 2-Sept. 22) This is not a good day to become too involved with friends financially or businesswise. Keep your social interests apart.

Libra (Sept. 3-Oct. 2) Try not to set goals for yourself today beyond your reach. It will only frustrate you if they aren't attained.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll run into considerable resistance if you try to impose your views on others. Allow all to think for themselves.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) An old problem will make its presence felt again in an area where you share a vested interest. Be wary.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Decisions, based on spiteful motivations or the desire to get even with one you've felt has wronged you, will backfire.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's wonderful to be co-operative and to help others, but don't be a patsy and let another pawn her tasks off on you.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone you'll be meeting socially will come on quite impressively. If you'll look closely you'll see this person is mostly facade.

Milk Leg Caused By Blood Clots

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor said I have a milk leg and it will never get any better. He said there is nothing to be done for it.

Is this true? Do you know anything I can do for it? It swells up and I can hardly stand or walk. Please give me some advice.—V.S.

Milk leg is an old term for thrombophlebitis. I guess the term milk leg came about because it was encountered with some frequency among new mothers. Others say it came into usage because of the characteristic milky tone of the legs of the patients.

But it is thrombophlebitis, a condition that gained prominence not too long ago when former President Nixon came down with it. Thrombophlebitis means inflammation of a vein with clot formation.

I presume your case is long-standing and not of recent occurrence. If recent, blood thinner (anticoagulants), rest and supportive hose or bandages can be used, with some relief possible.

The extensive swelling and pain that comes with activity is caused by a long-standing disturbance of circulation. Blood is not flowing up from the leg to the extent that it should because of the clot formation.

Your doctor is correct. Little can be done at this stage to dissolve the clot. It is too late for anticoagulant therapy. Sometimes, the affected vein can be tied off to prevent extension of the clot.

Elastic or other supportive hose and local heat may help relieve discomfort. The leg should be elevated as much as possible to promote the best circulation possible. I cannot suggest much beyond this without more information than your letter provides.

No, but they might show a non-alignment of a vertebra which might be putting pressure on a nerve root emerging at that point. From this a pinched nerve can be inferred.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like some information on "lightning streak" in the eye. The eye specialist I went to let on like it wasn't serious, but I would like to know more about it, its cause and seriousness.—H.L.H.

Glaucoma, an increase in eyeball pressure, is the commonest cause of this. I trust your doctor checked your eye fluid pressure.
the recurrence.

If not, it should be checked. Disturbance in circulation to the eye can be another cause of your symptom. It may be part of a migraine attack. Both conditions are serious, especially if not given prompt treatment.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you possibly tell me why a youngster of eight would have warts? She has had them burned out and now is having a special salve put on.

They keep recurring. Is there anything we can do for her, such as special diet or vitamins? She's such a dear little girl, and I hate to see her suffer with them.—Mrs. A.S.

As a matter of fact, children are more prone to having warts than are adults.

Warts are caused by a virus. The "burning out" (cauterization) gets rid of the bump but apparently not all of the virus deeper under the skin. Hence the recurrence.

She should eventually develop a natural resistance to the virus. Rubbing the warts with the prescribed salve is often effective in a few weeks.

Canadians Save At Record Pace

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians continue to save at a near-record pace, says the Canadian Bankers' Association (CBA).

CBA figures showed personal savings deposits, the largest category of deposits with the chartered banks, were up more than 21 per cent in 1974 to a year-end record $29.4 billion.

The increase was the second-largest of the post-war period, exceeded only by the 23-per-cent rise in 1973.

Fixed-term deposits, offering the highest rates of interest, grew at a pace almost double the growth of personal savings deposits, the CBA said. At $12.1 billion, these were up nearly 12 per cent.

Personal non-chequing deposits, with somewhat lower interest rates, rose more than 23 per cent to $11.2 billion.

Since 1964, personal savings deposits at the chartered banks, the country's major savings institutions through almost 6,900 branches, had more than tripled.

West, an ordinary, good bridge player, led the king of diamonds.

This gave him a look at dummy and that look told him to shift to the king of clubs.

South, a cheerful, careless player rose with dummy's ace and went after trumps.

West took his ace and led the five of clubs. East won with the jack and led a third club whereupon East's nine of trumps became the setting trick.

A little thought would have kept South out of trouble. There was no hurry about taking that ace of clubs. He could have waited for the second club lead. After that play there would be no way for West to score his nine of trumps. South would have won the rubber instead of winding up in the soup.

As is the case with most bridge games no one mentioned that South had thrown away the rubber. West explained to us later that he had kept quiet because he wasn't proud of his double or his opening that king of clubs and beaten the hand irrespective of how South played.

Auto Club Opposes Seat-belt Use Law

OTTAWA (CP) — The Dominion Automobile Association (DAA) is opposed to mandatory seat-belt laws even though widespread use of seat belts might significantly reduce the number of highway deaths.

DAA president R. W. Trollope has called on the Ontario government to increase its efforts to promote voluntary use of seat belts rather than make their use compulsory.

"A substantial number of people would rather not wear seat belts and in a democracy a person should be able to make his own decisions," Mr. Trollope said at the association's annual meeting.

"It would be as difficult to enforce mandatory seat-belt wearing laws as it was to enforce prohibition."

The DAA presented a brief opposing mandatory use of seat belts after the Ontario government announced last year it was considering such legislation.

Mr. Trollope said the government decided to drop the idea as a result of the DAA's and other briefs.

Only Nova Scotia has passed legislation making it compulsory to buckle up but the law has not been put into effect.

Showbiz Briefs

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Hungarian-born actress Zsa Zsa Gabor was wed Tuesday night to John (Jack) Ryan, a wealthy inventor who supervised development of the Barbie Doll. It was her sixth marriage.

Miss Gabor, 55, wore a white pleated, floor-length gown in the ceremony at a suite in Caesars Palace. It was the second marriage for Ryan, 48, who once headed the research division of Mattel Toys, Barbie's developer.

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Roy Shipstad, who helped found the travelling Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies, died Monday following a lengthy illness. He was 64.

He, his brother, Eddie, and their boyhood friend, Oscar Johnson, parlayed a love of ice skating into a travelling ice show which was to draw raves, and 100 million spectators.

David Janssen stars as the independent and somewhat eccentric Harry Orwell, a former Los Angeles policeman forced into early retirement by a bullet. Injured, but not crippled, he continues to be an active, complex individual.

Preparations Under Way

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Casting, design, and other preparations for the 1975 Stratford Festival are further advanced than ever before for a new season, says William Hutt, director of the Festival Theatre stage.

Hutt, who starred in last season's long-run production of Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid, will direct George Bernard Shaw's Saint Joan, starring Pat Galloway. It is the festival's first venture into the works of the Irish playwright on the main stage.

Robin Phillips, new artistic director of the festival, is directing two productions by Shakespeare for the Avon Theatre—The Comedy of Errors and The Two Gentlemen of Verona. He will direct Shakespeare's Measure for Measure and Bertold Brecht's rumpets and Drums for the Festival Theatre.

David Jones will direct Shakespeare's Twelfth Night in the Festival Theatre and John Wood will direct Arthur Miller's The Crucible later in the season at the Avon.

THE CLINCHER!
New 12 month unlimited mileage warranty

It's going to take better care of the people who buy our cars.

For the first 12 months of use, any Chrysler Canada Ltd. dealer will fix without charge for parts and labor, any part of our 1975 passenger cars we supply (except tires, which are covered by the people who make them) which proves defective in normal use, regardless of mileage.

Special policies and programs include the replacement of selected items such as brake linings, shock absorbers, tail-pipes and mufflers should they wear out in normal use during the first twelve months. Participating dealers will supply a loaner free of charge.

The warranty period for police cars and taxis is twelve months or twelve thousand miles whichever occurs first.

Visit Motorland for complete details.

Movies of the Week

SATURDAY

- Play Misty For Me (1971) — A thriller with Clint Eastwood as a California disc jockey who finds that being too poppular isn't all it's cut out to be. Jessica Walters plays the role of Eastwood's ardent fan with a dangerous bent. — (6) (9) — 8 p.m. — Also on Monday at 9 p.m. on Channel 3.
- The Scalphunters (1968) — Filmed in Mexico, this movie stars Burt Lancaster and Ossie Davis in a frank approach to race relations and a tongue-in-cheek look at the Old West. — (8) — 9 p.m.
- Strangers On A Train (1951) — Alfred Hitchcock fans will love this movie dealing with a young man trapped in a strange murder pact. Farley Granger, Robert Walker — (4) — 11:30 p.m.

SUNDAY

- Wild Is The Wind (1957) — The movie may be close to 20 years old but it's still an interesting film with Anthony Quinn, Anna Mangnani, and Anthony Franciosa — (8) — 2 p.m.
- Charley — Cliff Robertson won an Oscar for his portrayal of a retarded man who is reborn as a genius, but at a painful emotional price. With Clair Bloom — (13) — 8:30 p.m.

MONDAY

- The Purple Mask (1955) — Tony Curtis began his career playing swashbuckling heroic roles and this film is one example. — (12) — 1 p.m.
- The Boston Strangler (1968) — Tony Curtis again in a vastly different role, that of Albert DeSalvo, who was alleged to be The Boston Strangler. A fine supporting cast including Henry Fonda and George Kennedy. — (13) — 9 p.m.

TUESDAY

- The Sky's The Limit (1943) — Fred Astaire in a musical from the days of the Second World War. — (11) — 12:45 p.m.
- The Daughters of Joshua Cabe Return (1975) — A sequel to the 1972 TV-movie, The Daughters of Joshua Cabe, this 1975-TV movie deals with a prostitute, a jailbird and a pickpocket who enter an agreement with a homesteader to pose as his daughters.

WEDNESDAY

- Dracula's Daughter (1936) — If you say the original Dracula with Bela Lugosi, you may want to see this follow-up which finds his daughter in London. — (11) — 12:45 p.m.
- Modesty Blaise (1966) — This English film with Monica Vitti in the title role is an example of movies from the middle 1960s complete with secret agents, arty photography and camp humor. — (3) — 6:30 p.m.

THURSDAY

- The List of Adrian Messenger (1963) — A film with cameo appearances by five superstars including Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas and Tony Curtis. George C. Scott holds the action together. — (11) — 12:45 p.m.
- House of Usher (1960) — Edgar Allan Poe and Vincent Price are a winning movie combination and with Roger Corman directing this film is a must-see for horror-movie buffs. — (3) — 6:30 p.m.

Bergman Film Backed

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Twenty major directors protested Tuesday against a decision making Ingmar Bergman's film, Scenes From a Marriage, ineligible for an Academy Award nomination.

Among those signing a letter of protest were several directors whose own films may be nominated for awards this year. They include Italy's Federico Fellini, Francis Ford Coppola, Peter Bogdanovich, Billy Wilder and Bob Fosse.

The Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences declared Scenes From a Marriage ineligible because it was shown on Swedish television last year and re-edited for the screen.

On Tour

Belleville audiences were enthusiastic in their appreciation of the Canadian Opera Touring Company's production of La Boheme on Tuesday night. Principal cellist, Alan Stellings arrivs at Centennial Secondary School with his sticker-festooned instrument case.

Cagney Case Rebuffed

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Retired film actor James Cagney was rebuffed Tuesday by a Manhattan Supreme Court justice who refused to grant a requested injunction barring the publication and distribution of Cagney's unauthorized biography.

In addition, Cagney was given permission to return to court if the defendants failed to comply with the early trial order.

In seeking the injunction earlier this month, Cagney charged that the book, Cagney: A Biography, was full of inaccuracies, falsities and invented dialogue.

Ballet Career Intense

WINNIPEG (CP) — A young man with tights strode gracefully into the reception area and with the ease of an accomplished dancer, flung an empty soft drink cup into a trash can, holding his arm outstretched as if a symbolic movement had just been performed.

He turned and resumed his conversation with his fellow dancers, punctuating his words with demonstrative dance movements.

The simple act of getting rid of unwanted trash would seem a routine enough chore, even for a ballet dancer. Yet it perhaps indicates the total involvement an aspiring dancer must have to fulfil his dream of earning a living with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet. For the students enrolled in the scholarship program at the ballet, dancing is not only a means of self-expression and fulfilment, it is a total and all-encompassing way of life.

In Studio A, fragile-looking women are led through a series of gruelling routines on wooden parallel bars. A classical melody provides the tempo as the dancers bend themselves into seemingly impossible positions.

In another studio, an instructor is annoyed with the students for failing to become totally absorbed with a series of mundane exercises and simple dances.

"I have the feeling," she says slowly, "that some of you aren't feeling the things I'm telling you. You must feel what you're doing in class. If you can't do exercises without feeling strained, you might as well not do them."

It is an austere, fundamentalist philosophy, but one which has yielded exceptional results at the world-renowned Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

The Ballet has achieved world-wide recognition for its wide repertoire and boldly innovative interpretations. Recently-defected Soviet ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov thought highly enough of the company to perform with Gelsey Kirkland of the American Ballet Theatre on the same program. The company has danced in all corners of the globe throughout its 35-year history, including Australia, Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union, Britain and Brazil.

Romper Room

Games, books, animals and filmed visits to interesting places are just some of the delights waiting for preschoolers weekdays on Romper Room. Teacher-hostess, Miss Betty Thompson, and her assistant Mr. Do-Bee, have toured Eastern Ontario, Disneyworld in Florida, and parts of Germany and share their exciting experiences with young viewers.

Berton Produces Series

Belleville tevevision viewers for the past year have enjoyed watching programs on the country's newest network, Global.

Programs are received here over cable Channel 3. Upcoming specials on the new program My Country produced by Pierre Berton will deal with such personalities as Laura Secord, the Dionne Quintuplets and Robert Service.

The program is seen here each Sunday at 7 p.m. On Jan. 26, The Strange Case of Brother Twelve, the bizarre story of a mysterious cult in British Columbia, ruled with an iron hand by an equally mysterious dictator.

On Feb. 2, The Mysterious Safari of Charles Bedaux, the tale of a baffling safari across the B.C. wilds that cost $250,000 was headed by a man later accused of treason.

The program on Feb. 9 deals with Percy Williams: The Reluctant Sprinter while on Feb. 16 is shown. The Revenge of Mina Hubbard, story of a young and fragile widow who tried to restore the good name of her husband she believed to have been maligned.

Other future shows will deal with The Man Who Invented Dan McGrew about writer Robert Service on Mar. 2 and a program on Laura Secord presented on Mar. 16.

Sick Engineers Facing Writs

News Briefs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt predicts that the United States soon will recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

Robarts in Ring?

TORONTO (CP) — John Roberts, former Ontario premier, says he is not discounting the possibility he may some day contest the leadership of the federal Progressive Conservative party.

Lewis Not Interested

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis made it clear Friday he has no intention of seeking the leadership of the federal arm of the New Democratic Party. The leader of the Ontario NDP said he finds it difficult enough to combine his existing job with family responsibilities. "Not in a thousand years," he said, when asked whether he would contest the race for the federal leadership next July.

Prisoner Stabbed

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Provincial Police are continuing their investigation today into the stabbing death Friday of an unidentified prisoner at the Millhaven penitentiary near here. It is the second death of a convict at the maximum security institution in 18 days.

Minimum Going Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Friday the government intends to increase the federal minimum wage of $2.20 an hour.

Police Plan Nest-egg

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial police say they plan to set up a bankroll available 24 hours a day for emergencies. The idea grew out of this week's demand by Donald Wayne Cline for a $10,000 ransom for the release of four children held as hostages in a farmhouse at Thamesford, Ont.

Canadian National Railways has begun serving writs on 2,000 engineers it claims are striking illegally as rail services remained dislocated today.

But this morning it was not certain how many — if any — of the writs were Belleville-bound.

J. R. Histed, chairman of a grievance committee in the Belleville local of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers said that, up to early today, he had not heard of any writ being served in the area.

"I would imagine if somebody got one I would be the first to know about it," he said.

John Noel, CN information officer, said from Toronto this morning the writs were being served on "those employees who have walked off their jobs."

Care was being taken that writs would not be issued to those who had legitimately booked off sick, he said.

In Belleville, 98 of 136 engineers expected to work Thursday had booked off "sick." CN sources said. By Friday, Robert Burns, Rideau area manager in the city, said not one engineer showed up for work.

There has been no change in the situation today which continues to see "very serious interruption" of normal operations between Toronto and Montreal — the CN's prime passenger line, Mr. Noel said.

A Belleville rail yard official today said "only the odd train", manned by supervisory personnel, was running out of Belleville. A passenger train was expected each way between Montreal and Toronto today — and "possibly again this evening." he said.

The cutback in rail services has caused "a pretty heavy increase" in bus travel out of the Belleville area, a Voyageur Colonial office worker said today. Extra buses have been required on both east and west passenger services.

The dislocation of rail services prompted a question in the Commons Friday from Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, to Labor Minister John Munro.

Mr. Munro said he has no diea when an agreement may be reached between the railroad and locomotive engineers off the job.

Back home Friday night, Mr. Ellis said restoration of normal rail services is urgently needed.

"I'm not involved with the rights or wrongs of the dispute," he said, "but there has to be some kind of action taken."

"With the economy the way it is now we can't afford to have train holdups — we can't afford to have more people out of work," said Mr. Ellis.

In the writs—also being served on the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers—the railway is seeking compensation for an undisclosed loss resulting from the walkouts which began Wednesday night.

GO Transit commuter service in the Toronto area was reduced, carrying only two-thirds of the normal number of rush-hour patrons.

Auto Layoffs Up 20,000 Next Week

DETROIT (AP) — Layoffs in the United States auto industry will increase by 20,000 next week, to about 248,000, as U.S. auto-makers maintain a slow production pace to match the continued sales slump.

Despite an improvement in sales in mid-January, the industry still has more than a third of its 687,000 hourly employees off the job. About 185,000 are on indefinite furlough.

Sharply reduced sales this model year have left dealers with a record 100-day car supply.

Rescuers at Work

Rescue workers help an unidentified man, his head wrapped in bandages, toward a waiting ambulance outside the Anglers and Tarpon club, where a bomb blast killed three persons and injured 40 others Friday. In background, is historic Fraunces Tavern, at first believed to be the site of the New York explosion.

Tavern Blast Kills Four

NEW YORK (AP) — The explosion of a powerful fragmentation bomb that damaged historic Fraunces Tavern killed four persons and injured at least 42 others.

A Puerto Rican nationalist group that has been linked with other terrorism here claimed responsibility for the blast in the city's crowded financial district.

The bomb had been planted in the Anglers and Tarpon Club adjacent to the tavern. The dead, including one man who was decapitated, apparently were lunchtime patrons at the club.

Built in 1719, Fraunces Tavern was the scene Dec. 4, 1783, of George Washington's tearful farewell to officers who served under him in the American Revolution. It is about 400 yards from the New York Stock Exchange.

The blast sent glass fragments flying into the street. Diners in the 60th floor cafeteria of the nearby Chase Manhattan Bank building said the structure shook.

Fifteen minutes after the explosion, an unidentified telephone caller told The Associated Press it was the work of the FALN, a band of nationalist Puerto Rican terrorists. FALN stands for Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional Puertorrquena (Armed Forces of the Puerto Rican Nation).

'Crock of Hypocrisy'

Lewis Decries Cabinet Pay Cut

TORONTO (CP) — A proposed pay cut to be taken by the 26 members of the Ontario cabinet is a "crock of hypocritical nonsense" which should not be taken seriously, NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said Friday.

"It is an irrelevant, token gesture," the provincial leader said, adding that he would take a pay cut only if the government brings forth legislation requiring him to do so.

"The cabinet is laughing up its silken sleeve," he said of the publicity generated by cabinet's decision Wednesday to take a cut of five per cent on members' salaries.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon followed suit Thursday by sending a cheque for $2,000 to the Ontario treasurer, indicating his desire to join what Premier William Davis says is the government's attempt to provide leadership in quelling the psychology of inflation.

"Mr. Nixon has paid his dues—he now has a $2,000 membership to the Progressive Conservative party," said Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Lewis receives an annual salary of $29,000 as leader of the minority NDP. Mr. Nixon receives $43,500 as leader of the official opposition and Mr. Davis gets $52,000 as head of the government.

A cabinet minister with portfolio receiver $40,500 and two cabinet ministers without portfolio receive $20,000 each.

Mr. Lewis, Mr. Nixon, Mr. Davis and cabinet ministers with portfolio receive an expense allowance of $6,000. The two cabinet ministers without portfolio have an expense allowance of $3,000.

Mr. Lewis said the proposed cabinet pay cuts represent a Conservative attempt to offset results of a recent poll showing its popularity had slipped badly since the last provincial election, as well as an attempt to embarrass the federal government which recently announced a 33-per-cent pay raise for ministers.

Eggs, Butter, Pepsi Blows to Pocketbook

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for the Ontario Egg Marketing Board said Friday that egg prices in the province will increase between two and three cents a dozen next week.

In other consumer developments Friday, the federal government said the support price paid to dairy farmers for industrial milk will be increased thus raising butter prices by five cents a pound. Pepsi Cola Canada Ltd. also announced a 20-per-cent increase on all its products in Toronto.

The egg board spokesman said Ontario prices are being increased in retail stores to reflect higher prices at the producer level.

The price of eggs dropped seven to eight cents a dozen about two weeks ago in a move designed to help stem the flow of cheaper eggs into Ontario from the United States and Quebec.

"The market has now strengthened and so prices are going up," the spokesman said. "But the Ontario egg producer is still losing about five cents a dozen."

The current average price for a dozen Grade A eggs in Toronto is 87 cents for extra large, 80 cents for large, 76 cents for medium and 66 cents for small.

The new producer's price for Grade A eggs will be 64 cents a dozen for extra large, 60 cents for large, 54 cents for medium and 46 cents for small, the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, A. C. Goetz, vice-president of government and corporate affairs for Pepsi, said the 20-per-cent increase was due to the increased cost of sugar and increases in basic packaging costs of such things as glass and tin.

The students served 125 people, all of whom required reservations." We could have served twice that," noted Mr. Gould. The dining classroom was booked within 36 hours after the announcement was made last week, he said.

Charlotte Whitton Dead at 78

OTTAWA (CP) — Charlotte Whitton, the 78-year-old controversial former mayor of Ottawa, died in hospital here early today.

The fiery neo-suffragette who won national fame as mayor of the city was admitted to hospital Jan. 5 following a heart attack. It was the second time in two years that Miss Whitton had been in hospital.

She was born in Renfrew, Ont., March 8, 1896, to a family that included, by her own description, "some of the blackest Irishmen" who ever worked the Ottawa River log drives.

In both public and private life Miss Whitton was a fighter. "Whatever women do they must do twice as well as men to be considered half as good," she once told a group of women during a mayoralty campaign, quickly adding "luckily, it's not difficult."

The robust former mayor was not one to stand on diplomatic niceties during her lengthy political career.

On one occasion, as mayor of Ottawa, she met the Lord Mayor of London—both wearing their official robes and chains of office—at an official function. Miss Whitton was also wearng a rose.

When the foreign visitor leaned over, sniffed the rose on her evening gown and asked, "if I smell your rose will you blush?" the Ottawa mayor caustically replied "If I pull your chain will you flush?"

Charlotte Whitton

She first gained public office in 1950 by winning a city controller seat in Ottawa. She became mayor nine months later with the death of then mayor Grenville Goodwin, and was elected mayor in 1952 and 1954, with 3,923 and 10,000 vote pluralities respectively.

She left the mayor's chair in 1956, but returned to politics in 1960 winning the first of two more terms as mayor.

In the interim she remained active, seeking a seat in the House of Commons in 1958.

She won the Progressive Conservative nomination in Ottawa West that year—a Liberal stronghold—but ended 1,426 votes short of victory.

Miss Whitton lost the mayoralty election in 1964 but returned as an alderman in 1966, a position she retained in each subsequent election, until leaving the position because of illness in 1972.

Fuel Conservation Measure

Motorboat Tax Hike Under Attack

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to authorize higher taxes on motorboats and private aircraft came under attack from all sides of the Commons Friday.

Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats, joined by Liberal Hugh Anderson, called the taxes discriminatory measures likely to increase unemployment and hamper transportation, especially in the North.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield criticized the government for introducing isolated measures designed to conserve fuel before bringing forth an over-all energy conservation program.

The 10-per-cent tax on motorboats with engines over 20 horsepower and the 12-per-cent levy on private aircraft took effect with the Nov. 18 budget but need Parliament's approval to become law.

Mr. Stanfield, claiming it is difficult to vote on isolated measures, said that lighting and heating of government offices make it obvious the government is not seriously trying to conserve energy.

Finance Minister John Turner retorted that "a start has to be made somewhere."

Mr. Anderson, reading letters from constituents in his Comox-Alberni riding, said he protests "very strongly on their behalf" about the taxes which are "harmful to Canadians and Canadian industry."

Stan Darling (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said the boat tax would cause unemployment in his vacation-area constituency that would outweight any advantage from the $30-million revenue it is supposed to generate.

A $600 surtax on a $6,000 pleasure boat that can be used for only three or four months was unfair when compared with the surtax of only $200 on a Cadillac that can be used all year.

Several MPs said the levy on private aircraft is unnecessary and likely to make transportation in isolated regions more difficult.

Don Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) said the tax "so far has spread confusion and fear throughout the industry and has caused an immediate plunge in the sales of new aircraft."

Officers Installed

By JOAN MOORE,
Publicity Chairman

Officers for 1975 of the Army, Navy, Air Force (ANAF) Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 have been elected and installed. They are:

W. J. Ford, president; Al Burns, first vice-president; Reg Featherstone, second vice-president; George Christopher, secretary; Mel Richards, treasurer; Jack Asselstine, sports chairman; Larry Lynch, entertainment chairman; Jack Clarke, bar chairman; Hammy Doidge, house chairman; Don Blaind, membership chairman; Ted Dunlop, sick visiting chairman and Joan Moore, publicity chairman.

Membership chairman Don Blaind reminds members who have not paid their 1975 dues that Jan. 31 is the deadline. After that date new application must be made, which means that some associate members could miss out under the quota system. New key cards will be in operation Feb. 1.

House dart league action continues hot and heavy, with a home-and-home series with the Legion house league coming up Jan. 29 and Feb. 5.

The Dukes suffleboard team, perennial winners of the Belleville and district title, are getting some stiff competition this year. But, with three weeks to go in the schedule, they're right up there in the standings.

President Bill Ford is the club's representative to the Ontario Command quarterly meeting in Kitchener the weekend of Jan. 24 and 25.

Trenton Domtar Plant Production Cut Back

TRENTON — The work-week will be cut from seven to five days and between 10 and 15 workers at Domtar Packaging Ltd. will be laid off as the company faces a slump in demand for its cardboard medium paper, according to plant manager Frank MacKenzie.

Mr. MacKenzie said Friday both measures are temporary, but he did not say when the plant would swing back into normal production routines.

The maximum of 15 employees represents 11.5 per cent of the division's 130 workers.

At present, said the manager, the company and executive of Local 1470 of the Canadian Paper Workers union are working out final details of the layoff procedures.

The new routine will become effective Sunday, Feb. 2 when the plant will shut down. Layoffs will begin the following Monday.

"The last man hired will be the first laid off," said Mr. MacKenzie. When the company brings back its workers, the last man laid off will be brought back first.

Domtar was forced to take the measures because its market was "degenerating at a more rapid pace than we anticipated," said the manager.

It was hoped a 13-day shutdown over the holiday season in December and early January could forestall such action.

Normally, the plant closes down for four days.

"We hoped that taking the nine extra days could forestall the reduction in the working week."

Domtar's customers were shipped paper from high inventories at the plant. Production at customers' plants did not pick up as had been hoped and it forced Domtar to shorten its work-week and cut back on its own production.

Electronic Devices Give Precision Timing

MONTREAL — Fractions of seconds and inches often are all that stand in the way of an athlete who's devoted his life to reach an Olympic pinnacle.

At the 1976 Games, officials will be aided in their decisions by more than 200 sophisticated electronic timekeeping and measuring devices.

Andre Robidoux, director of timing and measuring for the Organizing Committee of the 1976 Olympic Games (COJO—for Comite Organisateur des Jeux Olympiques), is coordinating installation of the electronic equipment with Swiss Timing, a consortium of Swiss companies which includes Omega and Longines.

Swiss Timing is supplying equipment and portable scoreboards for all Olympic sports except yachting. The company will also provide about 60 technicians to assist Olympic officials in operating the equipment during the Games.

Robidoux, 30, a former physical education teacher who has a masters degree in business administration, says COJO decided to use equipment and methods which proved reliable at the 1972 Munich Games.

The only problem at Munich, he says, occurred during a basketball game between the United States and the Soviet Union when someone pushed a wrong button.

The game, won by the Soviet Union, was unsuccessfully protested by the American team which claimed the game had been shortened by three seconds because of the human error.

Electronic equipment was first used on a small scale at the 1968 Games in Mexico City.

Robidoux says electronic devices are more accurate because studies have shown that manually-operated ones can be inaccurate by as much as seven-tenths of a second.

Most of the electronic equipment is used for timing track and swimming events.

For swimming events, a starter's pistol is wired electronically to a timing device. When fired, the pistol activates the timer.

If a swimmer jumps the gun, a false start will be flashed to the starter because the podiums which the swimmers dive off register pressure on them. Pressure below a certain level at the time the pistol is fired causes the false start signal.

At the ends of the pool are pads" which must be touched by swimmers at the end of each lap of a race. The pads record intermediate and finishing times which are shown on scoreboards.

In a close finish, judges can study video tape which is activated at the start of a race.

Robidoux says video tape is essential in making judgements because swimming events are sometimes won by the length of a fingernail. "In fact," he says, "some coaches tell their swimmers not to cut their nails for months before a race."

For track events, a photo-finish system similar to that in horse racing is used to record times and declare winners in close races.

Two highly sophisticated cameras on each side of the track at the finish line are connected to timers. As in swimming, an electronic pistol activates the timers.

The cameras record runners crossing the finish line. A negative is then automatically developed by the camera in 28 seconds. It is studied by judges on a special viewing screen.

The negative also gives a printout of times graduated in hundredths of seconds to give precise elapsed times.

In close races, the chest area is used to determine which runner reached the finish line first.

Robidoux admits that generously endowed female athletes can have an advantage over smaller busted girls. However, he says, the added weight factor may erase any advantage.

Measurements of distances in field events such as discus, javelin and hammer is done by triangulation — a mathematical process of calculating distances by using angles.

The only field event in which a tape measure is used is the shot put because the shorter tosses make triangulation difficult to compute accurately.

In other sports — mostly team events — common timing methods are used.

Despite the space-age technology which will be used at the '76 Games, Robidoux says that man will "still be the boss" — a judge can overrule a machine.

Provincial Waste Plan Timely for Belleville

Provincial government plans for regional waste disposal planst may be co-incidentally timed for the Belleville area.

The province plans its waste processing program — including a plant at Kingston — for operation between 1980-85, city manager Wilbur Purcell notes.

Also, he told city council Monday:

— The city's present garbage disposal contract runs out at the end of 1979.

— The recent study for the Joint Waste Management Committee in Hastings County, places life expectance at the city's Aiken Road dump up to 1981.

All indications point to 1980 as the target date for Belleville to consider waste disposal problems.

The county study would begin involving Belleville around that time in what the survey terms a south-central Hastings disposal site.

But this stage of the study could now be eliminated by the province's waste processing plans, reported Mr. Purcell.

He suggested council recommend to the area waste management committee that it further investigate the provincial proposals.

Meantime, Mayor Robin Jeffrey said it is possible the usefulness of the city's present dumping grounds could be extended by its use for construction of a ski hill.

Title Changed

E. J. Neville, superintendent of separate schools and chief executive officer of the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board, has had his title changed. Under the new Education Act 1975, he becomes director of education, a title he share with Eric Runacres, chief executive officer of the Hastings pubic school board. The change brings to public and separate school board top administrators the same title. Del O'Sullivan, Mr. Neville's second-in-command, now will be a superintendent of separate schools.

Are Parents Helpful ?

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Just how worthwhile is parental involvement in school programs and procedures?

The separate school board here has set up an elaborate series of committees, comprising trustees, parents and teachers to get community participation in the school.

But, warned an educational administrator in Belleville recently, participatory democracy may be a threat to schools.

Dr. Tom Williams, chairman of the department of educational administration at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, says the needs of children can get lost in the process of parental participation.

Going back some years, he explains it this way:

The years before 1950 were the era of the great man in education, when school districts were dominated by one man who set the pattern. Egerton Ryerson, father of Ontario education was one of these. Older Bellevillians will recall another who dominated this district, inspector H. J. Clarke.

The end of the Second World War brought the era of the professional, when the bureaucrats of education — inspectors and superintendents — dominated the scene. They used a team approach to decide upon programs and advise trustees on policy.

In the 1960s people suddenly awakened and decided they had a right to a say about their fate. Participatory democracy was the rallying cry. In theory it was great — it softened the harshness and imperiousness of bureaucracy, where bureaucracy had become heedless of the people it was designed to serve.

But too often, participation, when put into practice, became a monster.

"Under participatory democracy you compromise quality to get acceptability," says Dr. Williams.

The reaction boards hear from parents, ratepayers, and "interested citizen" writers of letters-to-the-editor, tends to be emotional and devoid of reasoning and knowledge of the realities of the situation.

Elected representatives of the people become mere consultants, echoing every whim of their constituants. Trustees of this type consult with their constituants, and become instructed delegates to the board, not representatives. So, on any given topic, you have 14 to 17 different emotionally-based opinions instead of a few reasoning trustees working toward a compromise.

"Interest groups are determining the organization of the schools," says Dr. Williams. He implies that the needs of children in the classroom are being overlooked.

We're not saying that has happened here. But, says Dr. Williams, it's going on in other places. The situation will continue for another five years, he estimates, before the pendulum swings back toward tighter, centralized controls. And the controlling will be done by the provincial government, he predicts.

More Cash Crop Farming Means Better Land Use

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Rporter

An increase in cash-crop farming has sprouted as a significent factor in Hastings County agriculture.

So much so, it has affected land availability, county council was told this week.

"It would be a fair statement that there is no good land left to rent in Hastings County," Douglas Tipper, provincial government agricultural representative in the county reported.

"This is partly due to increased production of livestock feeds and now the return of the cash crops of peas and corn," he said.

He gave this illustration of the expansion in cash crops:

In 1974, Baxter Canning of Bloomfield established some test-plot growers. In 1974, 400 acres were under contract to the canners. The 1975 objective is about 1,000 acres.

"Hopefully, these things will provide the proper mix of crop production to make the best use of land in Hastings County," said Mr. Tipper.

TAE TTO CASH CROP

Elsewhere on the county's farm front, he noted these factors:

— Dairy: Loans written in 1974 under the province's industrial milk production incentive program amounted to more than $1 million. The amount of loans to date — including inflationary factors, is about $200,000 for 70 applicants.

Meantime, at the north end of the county — where the majority of cream shippers are located — there are indications of growing interest among producers to enter the bulk milk business. Two already have done so and others are working toward the change. This is significant since the investment involved can triple income.

—Beef: The situation has been "topsy turvy" because of various situations. Rising prices saw dairy berders expanding steers and marketing fewer calves. Many people owning land began raising speculatively, heifers in the last three years. Meantime, world crop productions produced a demand that made its grain sales as profitable for food as for feeding livestock. Oddly, the quality cattle feeding the demand remained at a good level.

But despite speculation, certain cattle classes in the long run always reflect a price relative to quality. Hence, "it will be a strong possibility that the beef business will be straightening itself out by the fall of this year."

—Swing: The only significant change concerning producers has been an increase in the marketing of sows. Its significance will not be apparent until fall when more detailed facts are known on herd populations.

Meantime, rising land prices continued to inhibit use of ARD programs in farm expansion in the county during the year. There are now about 70 county farmers involved with ARD — a number that has remained relatively constant.

Standards Bylaw Becoming Thorn

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Council found itself inadvertently watching its own superstructure crumble before its eyes this week as individual councillors picked holes in Trenton's new minimum housing standards bylaw.

Still worse, they also discovered that somewhere, someone had forgotten, or neglected, to build the foundation.

Council's week-old baby had been conceived neglectfully.

Ironically, that fact did not come to light directly through the bogey of public opposition or pressure. It came from within the council chamber.

Councillors concluded the bylaw was unenforceable. At face value, that seems simple and logical enough to expect. The bylaw had only been passed the previous week. The machinery of enforcement had not been set up.

Prompted by that initial public reation, councillors proceeded to pick at the bylaw's flesh. In so doing, they discovered fewer supporting bones than they apparently had first assumed it had.

No provision had been made for the method it would be enforced — by complaint only, through systematic inspection of houses in Trenton.

Precisely what mechanism would be used, and how it would be applied by the town was unknown.

What emerged did little towards adding points to the town's search for the trophy of public favor.

Council simply did not know how the bylaw would be implemented. It was agreed to search the wisdom of more experienced municipalities for such knowledge.

Amid the doubts and the obvious lack of previous research, came the startling suggestion from one councillor that the bylaw be scrapped in favor of a clause by clause review and a second presentation to council.

Such a suggestion, made after the unquestioned "aye comes a little late. The bylaw is on the books.

However, his comment does seem justifiably made in light of the apparent confusion councillors showed during discussion of the bylaw. Ironically, council's lack of action in researching its own legislation has led to its own inability to act now.

Circumstances have placed it in a position in which a councillor suggests a week-old bylaw be rescinded. Repealing a grey-beard bylaw is understandable. It may no longer be applicable. But this bylaw has still to show the roots of a beard.

It cannot but raise the question: How well and how thoroughly did and does council look before it leaps.

Here is a council, elected to guide the town's development, caught in the very mechanism used to guide the town.

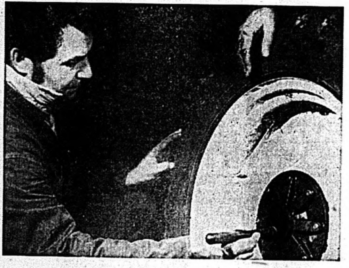
Shortages Show Need

Current shortages scares and crises have finally driven home the importance of the farmer, says Douglas Tipper, provincial government agricultural representative in Hastings County.

Such shortages have evolved at a time when there are less farmers in Canada but there has been no loss in production, he told Hastings County council this week.

This gives farm producers "some position of strength" in maintenance and development of their business, he said.

"It emphasizes the importance of the development of good supply management systems," said Mr. Tipper.



Ounce of Prevention

After the fall harvest workout, a lot of farm machinery could stand a careful going over and repairs, if needed. A thorough cleaning, some grease and a weld here or there are all part of a farm machinery maintenance program. By replacing worn or damaged parts and by making sure all is in good working order before the critical planting and harvesting seasons, farmers can cut back on in-field losses caused by down time. CENTURY
ONT

Mark of Distinction

Thanks to the efforts of the Junior Farmer's Association of Ontario a new edition of the Century Farm sign is appearing across the province. Revival of the Century Farm project grew from the need to replace the original signs issued to mark Canada's centennial in 1967. Farms that have been operated by the same family for 100 years or more qualify for the designation. Application can be made through local Junior Farmers or county ministry of agriculture and food offices.

1974 Apple Losses Result In New Crop Insurance

The 1974 apple harvest saw many crops severely reduced in quality by the September frost. Covering this loss to a farmer's income is just one of the changes in the insurance plan for apples offered by the crop insurance commission, Ontario ministry of agriculture and food.

Under the revised apple plan, a quality factor is applied to the yield to count if the quality is reduced because of hail, severe windstorm or freeze. In the past, freeze injury was not included. The quality factor is determined by establishing the relationship of juice price to tree-run price at time of harvest. This mean that is a grower has a high yield but it is severely graded down because of poor quality, he may still have a claim after the quality factor is applied.

Two new price options are being offered to permit growers to cover the increasing costs of producing a crop of apples. Now growers may insure their crop at three cents, four cents, five cents or six cents a pound, depending on what level of costs they wish to cover.

Under the crop insurance plan for apples, a grower is guaranteed a certain percentage of his own average farm yeild. If his actual yield (reduced for quality if necessary) is less than his guarantee, he is paid for the difference at the price option of his choice.

All new applications or renewals of existing apple contracts, with a $50 premium deposit, must be made by Dec. 20 for the 1974-75 crop year. For further information growers should contact The Crop Insurance Commission of Ontario, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1B7 (Phone 416-965-1811).

Picton Library Treat to Visit

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Picton public library, once a strictly "hush-hush" operation today offers readers services much more essential than absolute silence.

Re-vamped on the outside as a Centennial project in 1967, the library also has undergone internal change to create an active centre where borrower and lender discuss what's under cover in audible voices.

Opened in 1907, the Picton library today offers more than 30,000 books to its readers and borrowing restrictions have been changed for the better.

Today, the avid reader can borrow up to six books for a three-week period in the adult library. In the children's library youngsters can take out up to four books for two weeks. One renewal may be made and, for convenience, renewals may be made by telephone.

Each Saturday morning the children's library becomes a Main Street Sesame Street with a story hour, films, puppet shows and finger plays. Many pre-schoolers use the library regularly.

The adult library also has special features such as recent new displays of foreign language books and a fine arts book collection.

The shelves are filled with up-to-date volumes of fiction and non-fiction.

The librarians, today, do not patrol the aisles frowning at the borrower who speaks aloud.

Instead, they offer a friendly greeting to each bookworm and place emphasis on making the borrower feel at home instead of like an intruder in a mausoleum.

The library also provides a wide selection of films and film strips for rent by service clubs, individuals and organizations.

Library hours are much more flexible than in past years.

Today the library is open three mornings weekly and every afternoon except Wednesday. It is also open three nights a week from seven til nine.

Picton's library through extended hours and introduction of new policies has become a lively community centre welcoming the reader.

Membership is open free of charge to residents of Picton, Sophiasburg, Hillier, North Marysbur, Hallowell and Athol. Residents of other Prince Edward municipalities may join by paying a $4 membership fee.

Fifteen years ago the library was a solemn place with rather strict rules to govern borrowing.

Its new image has placed it in a new role as a busy centre where solemnity has no place. Rules have been relaxed to permit the borrower maximum privileges. The public library certainly has become a peoples' building.

Alberta Farmers Like the Life

EDMONTON (CP) — Most Alberta farmers believe agriculture still is the greatest way to live even though the rural lifestyle has changed dramatically in the last 20 years.

The agriculture department, in a news release, said there are not as many rural families now "yet they're just as influential, proportionately speaking."

Following a long period when the self-image of farmers declined, today there is a resurgence of values with most farm families saying they have the best of both worlds.

"We have the clean air, beauty and a natural life, along with many benefits of urban living."

At the same time, farm families work with government to improve farm economics and with social scientists to understand and improve new lifestyles, the release said.

"Many children in urban communities see relatively little of their fathers and do not know or appreciate what their fathers do for a living.

"Farm kids see their father constantly, his managerial, technical and social skills."

The department said farm children are like "junior partners in a business enterprise" and management and decision-making skills, "important to the development of a mature individual," are learned early and in a practical way.

Gardening Column

Petunia Seed $1,200 per Oz.

It seems one reader feels I started this column with motives as pure as the driven snow, but somehow — drifted. He was expecting, as originally promised, some discussion on indoor light gardening. And he's going to get it. But as I also stated, since it was at that time too early to undertake seed germination, we would talk for a bit about the place of foliage plants in indoor light gardening. And so we did. And now we're ready to begin on the principles of indoor light gardening.

The secret of this rewarding hobby is a very simple one. All you do is come as close as possible to taking over the role of Mother Nature.

Seed germination comes first with the realization that not all seeds have the same germination requirements. Some like it warm. Some like it cool. Some like it light. Some like it dark. And then you have to provide them, according to species, with the proper requirements of light, moisture and temperature, to the transplating stage.

And then the digging out of those seemingly fragile seedlings, with your ten thumbs, with the certainty that you'll kill them all. But you won't And you'll enter the next stage of raising them from 4 leaved seedlings to healthy young plants, ready for the cold frame.

Oh you'll make mistakes. You'll find the light intensity requirement for one type of plant is not really enough for another. And that one species takes an awfully lot longer to come to maturity than another. And that you planted far too much seed, so that you wonder what in the world you're going to do with all your babies — short of infanticide.

Which raises the question — is it all worth it? And the answer — absolutely!

Because there is no experience in gardening that quite approaches the parental pride sponsored by a gardenful of flowers, that you first viewed as seed in the palm of your hand, no larger than specks of ground pepper. Such as petunia seed. Infinitesimal miracles, with all the marvels of growth — roots, stems, leaves, flowers, colour, reproductive organs — and whatever makes a petunia a petunia — genetically programmed into each of those miniscule specks.

Which brings up another point — the cost of seed. If you wonder why one box of bedded plants cost as much as they do, consider this.

A few years ago, a petunia grower in California sold his jet aircraft to another grower. The price — one pound of hybrid petunia seed. Now if you have any doubts, pick up a commercial seed catalogue and look at the current price of some fairly common hybrid grandiflora petunias — $240 for one-half ounce of seed. And that's not expensive. There are rare petunia seeds that sell from $900 to $1,200 an ounce.

But don't be concerned. If you attempted to plant a half-ounce packet of petunia seed, you'd end up with enough plants not just for your garden, but for every garden within a mile radius. The smallest packet available will provide all you'll ever need.

Next week we'll get started on indoor light gardening from seed. And we'll start with what is undoubtedly the most important aspect of all — light — reviewing properties, quality, durations and what have you.

Livestock Payments May Be Broadened

The provincial government is readying a new remedy for that recurring irritation of rural local governments — livestock predation.

Legislation now is being prepared to amend present government measures which now compensate for farm stock killed only by wolves, Hastings County council was told this week.

The new bill will share payment with local governments for farm animals lost either to dogs or wolves, said Reeve Shortt of Stirling.

The present compensation bill has been a source of complaint from rural councillors since it replaced the wolf bounty three years ago.

The bill pays for livestock killed only by wolves — not dogs — a compensation process which called for conservation officers to definitely establish the identity of the predator.

In Marmora-Lake Township dissatisfaction was such the municipality decided to pay its own wolf bounty.

Support for province-wide restoration of the bounty was sought this week in a resolution from Peterborough County.

Hastings councillors took no action on the motion, but several took the opportunity to air disenchantment with the compensation legislation.

The Heavy Hand

Canada's Immigration people at major places of entry have been acting with special zeal of late. It is as if the country were being besieged — and it is, after a fashion — by marauding hordes, giving rise to a "shoot first and ask questions later" mentality in Immigration.

Complaints of rudeness and cavalier treatment keep cropping up; a young woman from New Zealand for one — her father a native of Halifax — who said recently that she was rudely treated in Montreal. And a young man from Sri Lanka, ushered out of Canada in three days because a guarantor letter from relatives here was dated inadvertently a year previous. He had come from London and had hoped to stay long enough to look around for job prospects, a vital adjunct to Canadian residency these days.

Then there was the case in recent days of Kenyan track and field star Ben Jipcho, detained overnight by Immigration after his arrival from London for a track event in Montreal.

Held initially at Gander he was taken to Halifax, where he spent the night in a hotel room guarded by two police officers, prior to an immediate deportation hearing.

Jipcho had his passport and health certificate, but compounding the whole fiasco, and typical of what can happsn to the most innocent of air travellers, other documentation that could help prove the reasons for his presence in Canada were in his baggage which had been flown on to Montreal.

Eventually things were straightened out and Jipcho was offered apologies. For their part Immigration pleaded occasional mistakes in the course of handling 37 million people a year. Jipcho, they say, had only a passport, $21 in cash, a one-way ticket, and nothing to prove he was going to a track meet (it was in his baggage).

Jipcho was politic about the whole matter, saying he would like to leave the matter at that, that he could make statements of opinion about Canada's immigration policies, but that he was a government employee and his superiors did not take too kindly to employees who made a big fuss when they travelled. (Compare this, incidentally, with the letter elsewhere on this page that suggests an "ugly Canadian" imag is evolving among our ciiizens touring abroad).

He did say however that "this sort of thing has never happened to me anywhere in the world before this."

Yes, mistakes do occur, but we get the feeling, putting together this and several other incidents, that Immigration could adopt a better attitude toward arriving visitors and immigrants alike. To treat them as little better as criminals gives a very bad impression and does little for the image of Canada abroad. A little more of the "winning friends and influencing people" approach and less of the cold face of bureaucracy would make everyone feel better.

Industrial Revolution Rolls On

Japan Good Example of Technology Changing Tradition

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The role of technology in changing or altering traditional societies is one of the major phenomenons of the Industrial Revolution, a development still under way, which never ceases to arouse and disturb.

In recent world history the most spectacular example of the relations between the two has been the Japanese emergency from feudalism in the 1870s to world economic power status in exactly a century.

The cautious yet totally accurate comment, "Japan is modern but not Western," nearly says it all where the relationship between an entrenched and complex society and the disturbing inroads of the new technology are concerned.

Medieval Japan represented by the Meiji dynasty of emperors of the late 1870s had a class and organizational structure ideal for the infusion of early capitalism, the gearing of a feudal population soon to become a work force within the strict rules of the game of nineteenth century capitalism.

If modern Japanese capitalism still looks old-fashioned and oppressive to us, it is not so much the style of capitalism which is responsible, but the lingering paternalism within it from pre-industrial Japan.

Workers and managers employed all their lives by the same conglomerate company, are merely transferring lifelong concepts of loyalty to an institution from a political to an economic one.

This perhaps explains why Japanese multi-national firms appear solid and well-organized at the same time Japanese political system is in jeopardy from bad leadership or party squabbles.

So far there have been no nation-wide strikes in Japan, like the country-wide student riots of the late 1960s against various aspects of public policy especially in foreign affairs.

Events are changing in Japan, it is true, and the working force is becoming mobile in the sense we understand it in the West.

But the Meiji emergence of a century ago remains the major classic example of the merger, mainly peaceful, between culture and technology in modern times.

In the early process of the identical experience is Iran under an enlightened and politically despotic Shah-in-Shah. In Iran's case a forced-draft change ordered internally by him, and not externally as was Japan's case, is under way.

And since the change has been ordered in the late Twentieth Century instead of the late Nineteenth, the attempt to merge a very old culture and modern technology has different hazards for the Iranians.

We have seen in the West and in Japan that the sophistications of industrialization have produced many uncertainties, a never-satiated consumer population, the mania for expensive baubles, in the case of Iran, a monstrously large military establishment.

Japan since the Second World War has avoided the latter, chiefly because of peace treaty restrictions which prevented the rise of a new Japanese military power.

Iran's Shah can take a page or two from the years of Imperial Japanese history of the 1930s when the presence of a huge military to help expand the commercial interests of the empire was disastrous, compared to the post-1946 phase when none was needed nor wanted for Japan's real success as a world industrial state.

City Ratepayer Finds Garbage Collection Problem

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Like policemen, the garbage collector's lot is not a happy one. Like policemen, garbage collectors, for the most part are well paid. More to the point — they are paid by the taxpayer.

Each garbage collection day brings its miscellany of assorted bins, cans and boxes containing the waste of our affluent society. Well disciplined as we are, we present our offerings at the proper time in the appropriate containers placed readily accessible for the garbage man.

It does not seem an impossible task for the garbage man to heave the contents into the mouth of the monster that devours the offerings.

Yet, whether by way of indifference, zeal, or lack of training too many items find their way on the roadside, left to be blown all over the street or onto other people's property.

Surely it's not too much trouble to stand an empty garbage can upright and, when lids are provided, to replace same. To date I have lost two garbage can lids blown off into the unknown because it was too much trouble to replace them. By the same token, rolling garbage cans are a danger to traffic. I do not take kindly to tidying up after the garbage man has been.

Let's do the job right men — the honor of the garbage collecting fraternity is at stake.

Let Rest Of World Starve !

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

About the starving people in underdeveloped countries around the world! Let them starve. Why should we literally waste millions of dollars worth of food and supplies on hopeless vegetables around the world when we have people at home eating dogfood or worse?

We are fortunate to live in Canada and they are unfortunate to live in famine but that is fate and that's tough! How many people really care enough to really help?

Next time you're sitting in your $40,000 dollar home and feeling "bad" about starving people — think about selling your home and sending them the money. It's time we all started thinking about our own country before worrying about others.

Sympathizes With Escapee

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Those two articles concerning Barry Forsyth, the escaped convict made me laugh because the stories are so sick.

If these people "seized by instant terror" had given the poor guy some supper there might not have been a shooting that night. Why should six people be terrorized by one unarmed or armed man? They could have been nice enough to him to make him feel good for awhile or they could have overpowered him if they had any guts.

The sick part is our law system which gives a guy 29 years for armed robbery and can't understand why the man would shoot anyone. With that kind of law it seems a convict might feel better by shooting an enforcer of it.

Labor Council Objects to Ellis

The following letter has been addressed to Hastings MP Jack Ellis

Dear Sir:

This Council would like to take this opportunity to express its shock and concern over your reported intention of introducing a private member's bill in the Commons to shift Christmas Day around to suit businesses in this country.

It was the unanimous opinion of the delegates to this Council that to introduce your Bill to move Christmas around would be a very un-Christian act not worthy of you or any member of the House of Commons.

We feel that rather than making Christmas even more commercialized by playing into the hands of business, you might better be thinking of ways to bring the true meaning of Christmas back to the forefront of Christmas activities.

Thank you for your attention.

Questions Land of Free

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

One encyclopedia defines a national anthem as a musical composition officially chosen as representative of the spirit of a country. The national anthem of the United States of America closes with the words, "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

At a White House reception given by the wife of the then U.S. president, Lyndon Johnson in 1968, the black entertainer, Miss Eartha Kitt, took the occasion to speak out against the U.S. involvement in Viet Nam. Subsequent to this she was reportedly the target of a C.I.A. investigation and most of her nightclub, hotel and television talk-show appearances were cancelled and she was not asked back. To make a living since then she has had to work mostly abroad.

One thing seems certain from Miss Kitt's experience, if one has the audacity to be free in the "free" U.S.A., one must be prepared to be really brave.

Canadian Tourists Acquire 'Ugly Label

Letter to the advice column of The Globe and Mail

My husband and I have just returned from a trip south, travelling with a group of Candians on a package deal, and we came home feeling ashamed of the behavior of our countrymen. A few years ago we felt proud to be Canadians wherever we went - they were always considerate and kind, courteous and fairly refined. In those days the loud bumptious ones were Americans - and so they earned the reputation, the Ugly American.

Over the past couple of years it seems to me the roles have been reversed. Now it's the Ugly Canadians, and wherever we travelled we found Americans patient, friendly, helpful, extremely willing to be of assistance, full of jokes and good humored and yet not too pushy.

We saw Canadians bragging about how much better things are in their country, how the U.S. merchandise is inferior, the inconveniences more idiotic.

Bay Street Broker Also Band Leader, Black Belt Holder

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Question: What do these three careers have in common?

—A successful Bay Street stockbroker for 20 years.

—The popular leader of one of Canada's best known dance bands.

—A karate instructor who holds the black belt, highest ranking in that martial art.

Answer: Frank Bogart is the broker, band leader and self-defence expert.

For Bogart, when conditions in the stock market are right, the whirr of the Toronto Stock Exchange ticker makes a music of its own, as pleasing as a Chopin nocturne in E flat.

And the same piano-playing hands that guide a 15-piece orchestra through an evening of dance music may, the next night, be chopping a block of wood at a demonstration of karate.

It was the late Frank Leslie, a colorful stand-out in Toronto's good, grey financial community, who first urged maestro Frank Bogart to become a stockbroker.

(Leslie loved music, and would hire name bands such as those of Count Basie and the late Duke Ellington to play for the big staff parties he held annually for the employees of his brokerage firm and his huge Muskoka summer resort, north of Toronto.

Leslie's suggestion, made about 20 years ago, came at a period when Bogart briefly had some extra time on his hands, having just completed a season with his orchestra in the Royal York Hotel's Imperial Room—then the pinnacle of success for a Canadian dance band.

He took a qualifying course of study, joined Leslie's brokerage firm, soon became a partner, and remained with it until it closed its doors in late 1974.

Along with several other partners and employees of the Leslie firm, Bogart was then invited to join another TSE member-firm, Hector M. Chisholm and Co.

If Bogart's past record is any guide to the future, he could be with his new brokerage firm for a long time indeed.

In two fields noted for their job mobility, Bogart's careers have demonstrated remarkable staying power. His 20 years with the same brokerage firm is surpassed by his long-playing record of 32 years as the musical director at Toronto's Granite Club, interrupted only by his one-year stint at the Royal York.

Bogart took his band into the Granite Club in late 1940 for one season, then returned a few years later to begin the engagement that has lasted 32 years—probably a record.

Like such popular New York-based band leaders as Lester Lanin and Meyer Davis, Bogart for the past 15 years has had several small orchestras playing under his name.

Tonight, for instance, you would find him seated at the piano, leading a seven-man group at the Granite Club. Three other Bogart groups will be providing music elsewhere in the club, a fourth playing for dancing at the O'Keefe Centre, and perhaps three others at wedding receptions or other private functions — all led by musicians who have worked with Bogart for many years and reflect his individual style.

But on Monday morning, you would find him seated at his desk, equally as happy discussing stock-market trends.

"People who buy good stocks now will, by next fall, be very glad they did," he believes.

Then on nights when his orchestra is not booked, Bogart might be found instructing young people in karate, an Oriental self-dence system in which he has achieved the coveted black belt—a distintion that he shares with another band leader, drummer Buddy Rich, and with singer Elvis Presley.

"I find it very stimulating, both physically and mentally. I think it's an excellent sport for people of all ages."

Karate. Music. Stocks. Anything else?

Oh yes. Bogart is also a vice-president and director of KDF Industries Ltd. and Superchek Ltd., affiliated five-year-old Montreal - based manufacturers of collapseible plastix boxes that may displace paper bags at the supermarket check-out counter.

How Do You Frisk Somebody Wearing Kilt?

Brockville Recorder and Times

We can imagine it was with more than passing interest that many of Canada's "Old Sweats" would have read about the problem they're having at airports these days.

When the hijacking of airliners became a threat to the safety of passengers and crew, airlines began employing security guards who frisked passengers to determine if they were carrying weapons. Later electronic devices came into play to detect the presence of metal objects in a person's clothing or bags. In many countries, however, security men still use the hand search of a person's clothing. It is a neck-to-ankles search and people with flowing robes have to submit to it just as the man in a business suit does.

A problem has cropped up recently, however. At the airport in Copenhagen, Denmark, they've been wondering how to go about frisking a Scottish judge who passes that way frequently. He always wears kilts. And after searching the upper portion of his body, the guards have been pondering the best way to check the rest of him. They have been simply shaking the folds of his kilt.

A Scottish airport security man has pointed out to the Danes that a well-dressed Scot "could conceal at least half a dozen hand grenades under his kilt ... and no one would ever know unless a proper check was made". If in doubt, they ask the man to step into the change room and remove his kilt.

There is another solution however, one offered by a sergeant in a former Canadian highland regiment. He said it was quite simple to ensure no kilted soldier was affecting forbidden undergarments. In order to detect the defector the sergeant attached an oversized dentist's mirror to the toe of his number 10s. In some other instances, he would place a large illuminated mirror, face upward, under a metal grill over which the soldiers walked for inspection.

As the sergeant pointed out, and highlanders will aver, there's a great sense of decency required and expected when it comes to checking a man's kilts.

Canada's Mennonites Observe Movement's 450th Anniversary

Written for CP
By LESLIE K. TARR

Canada's 175,000 Mennonites this week observed the 450th anniversary of the birth of their movement. Since that day—Jan. 21, 1525—their story has frequently been one of intense persecution and enforced wanderings.

Mennonites trace their origin to the Anabaptist movement of the 16th century. The Anabaptists have been described as the "third force" of the Reformation period. The two major protagonists in that mighty religious upheaval—the Roman Catholics and Protestants—shared a hatred for the Anabaptists, regarding them as religious and social radicals.

The radicals contended that the Reformers had not gone far enough in their reaction against the Catholic church. They called for a thorough restoration of the church and faith which they saw in the New Testament.

Specificaly they insisted on a voluntary church membership composed of those who had personally professed their faith in Christ and who were baptized after that decision to follow Him as Lord of their lives.

That sounds innocent enough to 20th-century ears, but, in the 16th century, it struck at the very root of the church-state arrangement.

The name Aanabaptist, indicated they had been baptized again—a reference to their contention that their followers must be baptized following belief, even though they had been baptized as infants.

The Anabaptists were rejecting the concept of a state church in which one was a member by virtue of citizenship. Both the Catholics and Lutherans accepted that view. The Anabaptists contended that the real followers of Christ were those who made that commitment for themselves and lived by it.

The great Swiss reformer Ulrich Zwingli tried to argue the young Anabaptists out of their position. Then, in January, 1525, the Senate of Zurich ruled that any parents who delayed the baptism of their infants more than eight days should be exiled.

The young men who led the movement met on the evening of Jan. 21 and, after deliberation and prayer, took a decisive and defiant step. One of them, George Blaurock, a former priest, asked the 27-year-old leader, Conrad Grebel, to baptize him. Grebel consented, and then Blaurock, in turn, baptized Grebel and the others. The Anabaptist or Mennonite movement was born.

A fundamental tenet of the new faith was that, under no conditions, should a Christian bear arms or take another human life. That non-resistance (or pacificism, as it is sometimes inadequately designated, still is cherished by the Mennonites.

Anabaptist evangelism flourished and converts were baptized, received into local church fellowships and instructed to follow a simple life-style and be flesh-and-blood followers of Christ. They were to be obedient citizens, harm no one and coerce no one in religion.

Their reward was to have the fury of Europe descend upon them. The Diet of Spires in 1529 enunciated the policy of the Empire toward the Anabaptists:

"Every Anabaptist and unbaptized person of either sex should be put to death."

Some states of Europe actually organized a special police unit—"the Anabaptist hunters."

Few Anabaptist leaders were permitted to die natural deaths. One who did was Menno Simons, a former priest, who led the group in the Netherlands. In tribute to his leadership, the movement came to be known as the Mennonites.

To this day, the Mennonites hold to the basic tenets of the 16th-century Anabaptists — an emphasis on Christianity as discipleship involving a radical life-style.

The Mennonites migrated across Central Europe, the Balkans and Russia. In the early 18th century, the first group came to the United States, where they settled in Pennsylvania. The Amish settlements there are in that tradition.

The first Mennonites settled in Ontario in 1786 following the American Revolution. They came in their Conestoga wagons from Pennsylvania and settled in the Niagara, Kitchener, and Markham areas. Today their rural churches, with an adjacent graveyard, are a part of the scenery. In addition, their influence is evident in urban Kitchener, St. Catharines, and Waterloo.

The extensive settlement in southern Manitoba got under way 100 years ago. Today their descendants are prominent in the political, educational, and economic life of that province.

Their stand against bearing arms has brought antagonism in times of war. Mennonites originally settled in Canada with the express understanding that they would be exempt from military service. When patriotic fervor reached its fever pitch in the two world wars, some Mennonites were subjected to pressure and persecution.

Some groups of Mennonites left Canada but the majority of the settlers and their descendants remained in this country where they exercise an influence in excess of their numbers.

The major groups in Canada are the Conference of Mennonites in Canada, Mennonite Brethren Church, Mennonite Church Canada, Evangelical Mennonite Church, Evangelical Mennonite Brethren, the Old Order Mennonite and the Amish. The last two groups were in the news in recent years in their insistence that they should be exempted from the Canada Pension Plan.

Two groups whose Mennonite heritage is not immediately evident in their names are the Brethren in Christ and the Missionary Church.

In 1920, Mennonites of the United States and Canada formed a co-operative world relief and emergency agency, the Mennonite Central Committee (MCC). Young church volunteers serve the MCC in many of the hot spots and poor countries of the world.

Canadian Mennonites maintain the "peace testimony" and consistently speak against war and work for re- that position, they oppose capital punishment.

To mark their anniversary, Canadian Mennonites have the first over-all history of the movement in this country. The book, Mennonites in Canada (published by Macmillan of Canada) is written by Frank H. Epp, president of Conrad Grebel College in Waterloo.

Bishop of Huron Says Food Lost at Parley

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — Right Rev. David Ragg, bishop of Huron, Tuesday told two service clubs that the greatest frustration he has experienced since returning from the world food conference in Rome is getting Canadians to feel concerned about the world food situation.

"There is more in Owen Sound garbage cans then some of those countries have to eat in a month," he said.

He said that during the food conference 12 persons were starving to death every hour and that figure has now doubled.

"Major cures are possible," he said.

Canadians can make certain that the government continues to think of itself as part of the global community, the bishop said. They can ask for range-fed beef instead of grain-fed cattle that eat 10 pounds of grain to produce one pound of meat.

In Ontario, people can fight to keep agricultural land for farming. He said this land is disappearing at the rate of 43 acres an hour.

Bishop Ragg criticized power development in Ontario. "The expansion of the hydro system is playing havoc with the little bit of agricultural land we've got," he said.

Entire Gospel Is Presented In Story of Prodigal Son

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

A leading theologian once suggested that the entire Gospel was presented by Jesus in the Prodigal story. This parable (Luke 15:11-32) is a matchless drama.

The first act may be called "The Virtue of Sin: The Story of the Younger Son." His journey represents our quest for freedom.

We meet a youth who desires independence. "Father, give me the share of property that falls to me." This is a request to become a self, to become a man with the right to choose. And so he did. Yet what a contemporary picture! Unbridled liberty becomes licence. We become our own gods.

The scene changes. "He squandered ..." "He began to be in want.' Is there a more vivid portrayal of human experience? We were not really cast for the role of deity. Aldous Huxley wrote, "On the level of the absence of God, men destroy what they have built, destroy as they build, build with materials of destruction.'

But the younger son "came to himself." This was the virtue of his sin. "Father, I have sinned ..." This is a vital part of salvation: to come to oneself, to recognize the misuse of freedom. Often the need has to be acute before genuine confession is made. John Wesley would likely have exercised an ordinary ministry in the 17th century.

The second act may be called "The Sin of Virtue: The Story of the Elder Son." His sins were not those of personal immorality. He contracted no disease. However, it could not be said that he hurt nobody except himself.

The elder son was self-righteous and self-centred. Sins of the spirit are worse than sins of the flesh, according to Jesus, teller of this timeless story. For instance, one can hear the elder son speaking as group after group takes its stand for another slice from the fatted calf of Canada's uncertain economy.

The third act may be called "The Prodigal Father." He was prodigal, lavish, most generous over the freedom bestowed on his sons. The elder son received forgiving love because he did not see as yet the value of reconciliation. The younger son received forgiving love because he had come to see.

The drama about God and man has reached its climax. Or has it? The curtain does not fall. The production continues. You and I are among the players!

Ann Landers

'Ridiculous' Parties Express Love, Joy

Dear Ann Landers: A giant raspberry to Turned Off, who thinks birthday parties for one- and two-year-olds are ridiculous. Sure it's dumb to invite people you haven't seen since the wedding, but such a celebration is wonderful for close friends and relatives who have been following the child's growth and development since birth.

In these days when the family circle is being murdered, it's a treat to get together and celebrate a child's birthday. Even if the kid doesn't know what's going on, he at least senses the love and festive aura that surround him, and these days that's a big plus.—Please Invite Me To Yours

Dear Please: I'm for any happy get-together that gives people a chance to express love and concern for one another. Lord knows there are enough of the other kind.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son's wife divorced him a year ago because he was a lazy, irresponsible slob. She never saw a dime of his paycheque and had to go to work full-time to feed and clothe herself and the darling little boy they adopted.

My husband never accepted the adopted child as a real grandson. Since the divorce he ignores the boy completely. We have a fight every time I mention visiting the child. My husband says: "He's not ours by blood or anything else."

I love the boy dearly and want to include him in our will. My husband insists that our only "real" grandchild is our daughter's son.

I have no income of my own and my husband keeps track of every penny. He said, "Write to Ann Landers. She'll agree with me." Do you?—Sad Granny

Dear Granny: Your husband has rattled the wrong cage. I'm with you.

That adopted grandson deserves to be loved and treated in exactly the same manner as your daughter's child.

If Lord Bountiful won't give you any money for extras, you can bake cookies, cakes, pies, etc., for your little grandson. This will mean much more than any store-bought gift, if you bring them with loving hands and a warm heart.

About the will—chances are that you'll outlive the cuss—which could put a significant crimp in his plans!

Dear Ann Landers: Am I sick or am I a normal mother? When my 17-year-old daughter has a problem with a boyfriend and cries from being disappointed or hurt, I cry, too. (Not in front of her. I go where she can't see me).

When she is happy about something wonderful that has happened, I'm right there with her on cloud nine.

I was popular when I was a teen-ager, so I don't have to relive my youth through my daughter. My own marriage is a good one so I'm not escaping from a reality by fantasizing. Am I crackers or what?—Canadian Candor

Dear C.C.: It's normal for a parent to empathize with a child. You'd be crackers if you didn't. But to shed tears over her little disappointments and hurts is a bit much. Either you aren't busy enough or you are identifying in a way that is unhealthy. Check the umbilical cord and see if perhaps it isn't a little too short.

Doris Clark

Loneliness Conquered By Retirement Club

Dear Doris: The boredom a big city disease. People refactor in retirees is largely tiring in small communities have more other-people contacts than do the bg city people. There are some suicides in this city of many suicides that haven't a valid reason; often no economic distress, or health problems; just inability to communicate with others — who are just as lonely, and just as unmotivated.

So — I present one simple approach that can be smoothed off, or fitted — or dropped if it doesn't work. As follows:

THE BUNDLE — is a group of 10 lonely retirees in any one city. Each member gets a large card which has the number of every member in the Bundle — plus spaces after each name for ticking off after phone calls. Each Bundle member must call at least two other members every day — and each Bundle member should be available for calls from other members, even at late hours. This idea gives a gentle nudge of motivation — and involvement — to people not knowing who to talk to, but wanting that talk — and needing it.

THE STACK — is composed of 10 bundles. At the Stack level, some common interest items can be fed to the Bundles. The Stack leader can arrange interesting topics and activities.

THE BOOM — is 10 stacks. At this level we have to have a coordinator, and that suggests another bureaucrat, which I don't like; but, one does need the functionaire, oui?

It shouldn't be too hard to get sponsorship for such an effort, private — like a big paper — or a big broadcaster, but may be best for a service club, or group of women. Good vehicle for such activity, yet so little investment of money.

Bob Ludwig, Vancouver.

Dear Bob: Loneliness ranks high in the pile of retiree problems. There have been variations of the telephone chain idea for some time. Yours is ambitious, and it might just work if the right organizer got going at it.

Let's hear comments from readers and news about anything being done where they are, to combat the loneliness of many older people.

(Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, is a graduate of McGill, Toronto and McMaster Universities, and has broad experience in social work. If you would like help with your problems, write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Back to Work Without Regret

NEW YORK (AP) — Millington F. McCloy, an executive of a personnel-search firm, worked late on a Friday, had her baby on Saturday and was on the phone from her hospital bed with her clients on Monday. About two monts later, she was back in her Park Avenue office and little Daniel was at home with a baby sitter.

Dr. Patricia Winstead-Fry got her PhD two weeks before her baby was born and resumed her teaching duties at New York University when daughter Sara was 11 days old.

Whether dedicated to career, forced by economic necessity, or compelled by restlessness, more and more new mothers are returning to work within weeks of their baby's arrival, leaving the joys and duties of child care to someone else.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that in March, 1974, there were 7.97 million mothers in the United States with children under the age of 3, and 32.4 per cent of them had returned to the labor force, up from 30.2 per cent in 1973 and 21.8 per cent in 1964.

Despite continuing debate about a mother's role and importance in successful infant rearing and many company policies allowing up to one year maternity leave, these women have willingly and in some cases eagerly opted to push pencils instead of baby carriages.

Though private, professional baby-sitters are expensive, the mothers say it's worth $80 or more a week to keep up with their careers as well as to ease any lingering anxieties about their baby's welfare.

Some mothers working in lower-paying jobs have no choice but to place their children in day-care centres. However, there are hardly enough such facilities available.

Dr. Winstead-Fry, 34, has hired a sitter to care for Sara and resumed her private psychotherapy practice and the family development course she teaches at the nursing department of NYU. Her husband Bob is a concert manager.

"As long as I have consistent care for the baby, it's far better not to have me around the house. I've had a few guilt trips about leaving her but now I'm getting used to it. I've always wanted to work at something all my life and this is the only way to do it."

Dr. Sharon Weinberg, 27, who teaches educational statistics at NYU, hired a professional nurse for $85 a week and was back in the classroom less than two weeks after Allison was born.

"I could feel my mind deteriorating with all that baby talk when I was home," said Dr. Weinberg. "When you've invested so much time in your schooling, it goes counter to everything not to handle both worlds at once. Now that I'm back at work, I can operate on the mental level I've been used to and still enjoy my baby."

Government Programs: Rhetoric or Reform?

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons paid tribute Wednesday to International Women's Year amid accusations that the government is more interested in rhetoric than reforming laws affecting womens' rights.

Ed Broadbent, New Democrat parliamentary leader, was jeered by Liberal MPs when he questioned the government's sincerity in endorsing the aims of women's year organizers.

The United Nations has designated 1975 International Women's Year. Programs to promote the status of women are planned around the world.

Mr. Broadbent said too much time has been spent on speeches, conferences, investigative commissions, and slick advertising campaigns in support of women's rights. Needed now were legislative changes backing the principles that politicians have endorsed.

All party leaders, including Prime Minister Trudeau, endorsed women's year objectives as the Commons re-opened after a one-month Christmas recess.

Mr. Trudeau, asking all Canadians to work for true equality between men and women, said the government will contribute substantially to women's year.

One bill is already before Parliament to remove six inequalities in eight federal statutes and another will be introduced to establish a federal commission on human rights, he said. But the most fundamental changes must come in individual attitudes, he added.

"Real freedom of opportunity for women will come only when society recognizes that women have the same right to pursue whatever goals they may individually choose."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said substantial progress has been made but women still must be "abler, smarter and more industrious" than men to succeed in many jobs.

He was applauded good-naturedly by Liberal members when he said the nine women in the 264-seat Commons had to be "a good deal abler . . . than I to get here."

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette said Parliament is better for having women MPs but more should be elected.

"Representation by women raises the standard of parliamentary democracy in Canada."

Mr. Broadbent urged women to "keep the heat on" politicians. No group had ever won liberation by relying on the efforts of others.

He called for legislation to end sex discrimination in the job market, establish 24-hour child-care centres, enforce equal pay for equal work, guarantee collective bargaining for domestic and part-time workers, ensure equal educational opportunities for male and female students, eliminate sex stereotyping in text books, outlaw sex exploitation in advertising, give men and women equal pension rights, remove abortion from the criminal code, and establish sex education and birth control centres.

If the government is serious, it should start by introducing legislation in these 10 areas, he said.

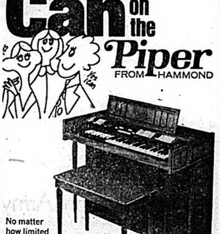
Yes YOU Can on the Piper FROM HAMMOND



No matter how limited your musical background may be, you CAN make music on the Piper Autochord.
The Piper was designed for non-musicians and musical dropouts. It has just one keyboard and no pedals. With the Piper's automatic bass and chords, there's nothing for your left hand to do but hang on. Your right hand plays the melody while you read the numbered color coded Piper music. You teach yourself 300 Piperized songs.

Kids Can Watch This Artist at Work

The sixth grade class at Harmony Public School is turning popsicle sticks into looms. The same kids designed a table runner for the staff room. Other students are weaving bookmarks and using macrame techniques to create hangings and belts.

Their inspiration to explore textiles comes from a new resident of the school, Alma Gaasenbeck.

A weaver, Mrs. Gaasenbeck is artist-in-residence at Harmony School near Foxboro for the next two months, and has set up her loom and other weaving equipment in a studio-like corner of the school's main corridor.

Whole classes come for a demonstration some times and other moments are filled with curious questions from students just passing by to have a look. Sometimes Mrs. Gaasenbeck goes into a class room for a demonstration or discussion.

In fact, there's a lot of discussion as well as a lot of weaving going on because Mrs. Gaasenbeck wants the kids to do more than passively observe without understanding.

A public school teacher for nine years before she turned to full-time weaving, Mrs. Gaasenbeck is involving all areas of educational interest in her work at the loom.

Primitive man's revolutionary move from animal skins to rudely woven garments was one topic; another was natural and synthetic fibres and their relative properties and origins.

"The kids were just amazed that a worm could make a fibre," Mrs. Gaasenbeck says, "and they all agreed that natural fibres are warmer than synthetics."

The class making a table runner for the teachers' staff room designed the color scheme and then made the calculations necessary to figure out how many threads would be needed.

"There we have social studies, art and mathematics all involved in weaving," Mrs. Gaasenbeck points out.

Even local history became a topic of conversation when a display case and weaving books brought up the weaving of Catherine White who, in 1794, wove a coverlet in Sidney Township called Indian Plains.

The language of the loom is important to understanding of the technique and the children play games from day to day to see if they remember the names: warp, cloth beam beddles, reed.

The emphasis in the program — a project of the Ontario government and the Ontario Arts Council in conjunction with the schools — is on the artist who actually carries out several projects while in the schools.

Most people only get to see the end result of an artists' work: the artist-in-residene program allows school children to see work in progress.

Mrs. Gaasenbeck adds that she hopes her stay at Harmony will also give the children a basic education in textiles.

Alma Gaasenbeck gives Wendy Gerow a hand in making a weaving warp. Debbie Swart and Linda Street watch.

Inspection And Beef Grading

Now that one supermarket — IGA — is offering Grade C beef for sale, it might be wise to understand the difference between meat inspection and meat grading and what meat grades mean.

To start, grading is done only to inspected meat but not all inspected meat is graded.

Inspection and approval of meat begins while the animal is still alive and continues through the packing process, concluding only when the meat leaves the packing plant.

There are 225 meat packing plants licenced in Ontario, many which serve the needs of the local community by providing custom-kill services for farmers and urban customers, and cutting, wrapping and fast-freezing for the home freezer trade.

The inspection and approval, conducted by the province, ensure a wholesome product handled in a sanitary manner and properly cooled. The federal government conducts a similar procedure and meat is then stamped Canada Approved.

Grading, on the other hand, is a federal program which deals with carcass quality. Grades (such as A1, B2, C, etc,) refer to age, carcass conformation, finish, fat-to-lean ratio, weight and several other measurable indicators.

The number of physically disabled adults grows annually and more and more people find they have to lend a helping hand to a handicapped relative, friend or neighbour.

The March of Dimes — Ability Fund — has just published a handy booklet called What You've Wanted to Know About Helping the Handicapped — But Were Afraid to Ask.

This pocket-sized guide answers questions about dress, toiletry, feeding, how to put a wheel chair in a car and "how to overcome your embarrassment."

James Good, community development director for the organization, says that the book will help volunteer overcome their fear and apprehension so that they will work with, rather than for, the handicapped.

"More and more opportunities for participation in community activities are becoming available for physically disabled adults," he says, "Paradoxically, the adult with a handicap depends more and more on volunteer assistance to take advantage of these new possibilities. Often the lack of family, for example, can put someone into an institution whereas with a little outside help, the individiual could live at home."

The booklet is available from the March of Dimes, 12 Overlea Blvd., Toronto, Ont.

The rate of inflation in food-buying seems to depend on what you're buying.

The Purchasing Management Association of Canada, Eastern Ontario District, has been conducting a food price comparison in six area cities; a comparison between April 1974 prices and January prices indicates an increase of 5.34 per cent in that period.

Other sources would indicate a much higher increase in that period reflecting, perhaps, a more general buying list.

Belleville prices for the items include April '74 prices and January prices: canned soup, 15 cents, 21 cents; detergent, $2.05, $2.35; furniture polish, $1.52, $1.99 Crackers, 59 cents, 69 cents; potatoes — good news — down to 79 cents for 10 pounds from $1.28; chicken legs — more good news — down to 88 cents per pound from $1.14; milk, $1.03, $1.33; ground chuck, $1.28, 88 cents per pound; boneless round steak, $1.68, $2.26 and eggs, 92 cents per dozen, 87 cents.

Christian Women Hold Meeting

The 95th annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association was held January 20.

This organization was the first service club and welfare association to operate in the city of Belleville.

During their early years they built the original Belleville General Hospital, which they operated until 1948 when they presented it as an out-right gift, to the city, retaining only the right to appoint two members to the Board of Governors.

For many years, in co-operation with the city, they maintained a home for elderly indigents. This was phased out when the city and county reached an agreement to use the county facilities.

At the present time the Association operates a non-profit residence for senior women on Highland Avenue. They also administered an annual grant from the estate of the late Senator Harry Corby and assist various charitable organizations in the city.

During the 95 years there have been only 25 Presidents, the current president is Mrs. J.E. Marsh. The vice-president is Mrs. R.M. Midlane; secretary Mrs. C.D. Hitchon; treasurers Mrs. E. Hickey and Mrs. W.G. Slack; custodians Mrs. A.E. Purdy and Mrs. W.G. Slack. Other members of the Association are representatives of various churches in the city.

Christmas projects were the gift of a cooked chicken to each of the 50 participants in the Meals on Wheels program, gifts to some residents at Hastings Manor and fuel to recommended needy families.

People and Events

BELLEVILLE BPWC

The Business and Professional Women's Club met recently at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel, for their annual Civic night meeting.

Guest speaker for the evening was Constable Linda (Salsbury) Smith from the City Police Department. Constable Smith grew up in this area and then went to McMaster University where she took a B.A. degree in history. She came back to Belleville in 1972.

Constable Smith is one of two policewomen on this City's force. She says the Metro Toronto has about 70 women on staff, but Ottawa, does not hire women at all.

Her job in Belleville includes general patrol duty with special interests in juvenile crime and rape cases. Constable Smith says that women have proved themselves to be most effective in police work and that although the public has reacted slowly, it is beginning to accept women as authority figures, capable of giving out tickets and making arrests.

The policy regarding marriage and child rearing has changed since women were originally allowed on the force. At one time, a police woman could not marry. Today equal rights legislation has made condition more favorable for women.

Oil Sands Development Too Rich for Ontario

EDMONTON (CP) — The Syncrude oil sands consortium will have to look beyond any Ontario government investment to ensure the survival of the troubled $2-billion project.

In a news conference following a meeting between government officials from Ontario and Alberta, Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough said his province "is not the saviour of this thing by ourselves or even a large new participant, if there is participation."

The Ontario government "has not closed any doors" either way on whether to invest in Syncrude but Mr. McKeough said "we're not in the same league as the other participants".

Asked if Ontario would pick up the 30-per-cent Syncrude share left when Atlantic Richfield pulled out of the consortium, Mr. McKeough, Ontario's energy minister until seven weeks ago, said: "Good Lord, no."

He indicated Ontario did not have extra funds beyond the $100 million already set aside for energy matters, which would be 10 per cent of the $1 billlion Syncrude says it needs.

Meanwhile, Don Getty, Alberta intergovernmental affairs minister, said he has talked to the Syncrude consortium about extending its Jan. 31 deadline for finding the new money.

Premier Peter Lougheed told Roy Wilson (SC—Calgary Bow) in the legislature he did not think the deadline for finding additional partners, tax concessions and production guarantees was "the ultimatum or deadline . . . ."

"There is a technical-legal problem that has a Jan. 31-Feb. 4 date on it. That problem relates to Atlantic Richfield's default . . . and the question of maintaining the liability of Atlantic Richfield.

"We would hope the corporations involved in terms of their public responsibilities would not find themselves floundering on technical-legal difficulties," Mr. Lougheed said.

Bombardier Takes Over Train Firm

MONTREAL (CP) — J. Armand Bombardier Ltd. announced Friday it has acquired majority control of MLW-Worthington Ltd. by purchasing 59.4 per cent of the Montreal company's stock from the parent firm, Studebaker - Worthington Inc. of Harrison N.J.

MLW - Worthington officials would neither confirm nor deny the acquisition.

A Bombardier spokesman said the snowmobile manufacturer, based in Valcourt, Que., reached agreement Thursday with Studebaker and purchased 475,200 shares at $21 a share for a price of $9,979,200.

The acquisition is part of a previously announced plan to obtain all outstanding shares at $21 a share of MLW-Worthington, a locomotive manufacturer.

TO BUILD CARS

Although Bombardier is noted mainly for snowmobiles, it has diversified into other products and recently was awarded a multi-million-dollar contract to build cars for the Montreal subway.

MLW-Worthington's locomotives are in use in several countries and the company was involved last year in a controversial transaction to ship locomotives to Cuba.

In the first nine months of 1974, MLW-Worthington earned $1.02 a share, down slightly from the previous year. Assets at the end of 1973 exceeded $36 million, with working capital of more than $16.9 million.

Control Complete

ALGIERS (Reuter) — Saudi Arabia and the four U.S. oil companies with shares in the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco) have agreed to terms for complete Saudi takeover of the company, the world's largest single producer of oil, sources said Friday.

Business in Brief

REDUCES MORTGAGE RATE

TORONTO (CP) — National Trust announced Friday a reduction in its prime residential mortgage rate to 11 per cent from 11¼ per cent, effective immediately. Conventional mortgage rates for prime residential property are currently around 11½ per cent, but recently interest rates at all levels have been dropping.

REDUCE U.S. RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada announced Friday it will reduce its U.S. dollar base lending rate to 10 per cent from 10½ per cent effective Monday. The rate is the minimum at which the bank is prepared to lend U.S. funds in Canada.

GM ANNOUNCES SHUTDOWN

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. Friday announced a one-week shutdown of parts of its Oshawa and St. Catharines plants, effective Monday. GM said rail service disruptions caused a shortage of parts and forced the shutdown, previously planned for February, to be moved forward. Affected will be GM's Oshawa truck plant and assembly line for full-sized Chevrolet and Pontiac passenger cars, and one shift at the St. Catharines plant.

AMC TO LAY OFF WORKERS

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — The American Motors (Canada) Ltd. plant will close Monday for two weeks, affecting about 1,000 workers, the company announced Friday. The shutdown follows a one-week layoff affecting about 1,300 workers which ended Jan. 13. Plant spokesman John Milne said all 1,000 workers will return to work Feb. 10 when the plant re-opens.

ANNOUNCES FEB. LAYOFF

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — About 550 workers at Long Sault Fabrics and its yarn plant will be laid off for the week starting Feb. 2 and another 30 workers might be off for an additional week, officials said Friday. The union and company blamed cheap imports for the slowdown in business at plants in Ontario and Quebec. The employees are members of Locals 468 and 469, United Textile Workers of America.

FUNERAL QUESTION WE ARE OFTEN ASKED

JOHN R. BUSH

R. DOUGLAS RUSHNELL

Q. A reader writes asking: IF A PERSON PAYS FOR THEIR FUNERAL EXPENSES IN ADVANCE, 10 years later at the time of death could the Funeral Director then ask for more money saying expenses have gone up?

A. We cannot speak for other Funeral Directors, however, our policy is to deposit the funds in a separate "Trust Account" for the prearranged funeral. The interest on this account will normally cover any increase in cost. If the amount in trust at the time of death is more than the cost of the prearranged Funeral the excess is refunded to the estate. If it is less no extra charge, as one of the purposes of prearranging a funeral is to cover the cost of inflation.

I don't want to be pitied for what I can't do. I just want the chance to show you what I can do.

It's only natural to feel pity for the disabled. But it's the last thing they want from you. And it's the last thing you should give.

A disabled person, like anyone else, wants the chance to show the world what he can do. A chance to achieve and create most of all provide for himself.

For the most part, the biggest handicap for the disabled person is getting the necessaary specialized training he required to achieve his goal. And that's where we come in.

Every year, the Rehabilitation Foundation through special training and educational programs provides thousands of disabled persons with the ability to go out and work. To provide for themselves and to enjoy the feeling of accomplishment that is so important to them.

Industrial Milk Subsidy Increase to Boost Consumer Prices

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

An increase in indirect federal subsidies to producers of industrial milk, will see a price increase in such dairy products as cheese, butter and ice cream, Jack Ellis MP Hasting said Friday night.

At the same time, food producers must be assured sufficient money to stay in business, he warned.

Meantime, a leading district cheesemaker said the increase — announced Friday by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan — should stimulate production of more milk badly needed by cheese factories.

The change applies only to industrial milk and will not affect consumer prices for fluid milk.

It increases the government's "target support price" to $10.02 a hundredweight from $9.41, and is aimed at offsetting rising farm costs.

In effect the government guarantees farmers a minimum price for their milk. This subsidy is paid to producers at the end of the year if their average price is below the government established minimum.

Mr. Whelan said the increased revenue to producers will be achieved by raising the support price of butter five cents a pound to 90 cents and the support price of skim-milk powder by five cents a pound to 59 cents.

But the price of skim-milk powder to the consumer will be absorbed by the federal government through an increase in the consumer subsidy.

"In view of the importance of skim milk as a staple food, the subsidy on skim-milk powder sold in consumer packs will be increased to 29 cents a pound from the present 24 cents," he said.

Aside from the protection for skim milk purchasers, the higher subsidy will mean increased consumer prices, for other dairy products, said Mr. Ellis.

"But it's important to make sure the farmer gets enough money to stay in business. It would be far worse not to have these foods," he said.

He noted in 1973 Canada had to import 21 million pounds of butter. Butter supplies now are scarcer, he said.

Inflation has eroded the value of the increase since it was first promised by the government several months ago, said Mr. Ellis.

"But, hopefully, it'll be enough to stop some of the reduction in dairy farms," he said.

Meantime, Foxboro cheesemaker Ted Foley felt they "should boost" industrial milk needed by the cheese industry.

His factory — recently absorbed by the British Cow and Gate group — has been operating on supplies far below the supply quota permitted by provincial production regulations.

Industrial milk producers have only been supplying 69 per cent of the 45 million lbs. permitted the factory.

At present the Foxboro operation uses 96,000 lbs. of milk daily. Expansion later this year — a sequel to the takeover — will require 280,000 lbs.

"So we could use a lot more milk," said Mr. Foley.

An Ideal in Dock

Bill Grimshaw surveys project that will keep him busy for months in Belleville harbor. His ideal is to convert old tugboat into sailing ship and make training cruises for young people with social and personal problems to work out.

Converted Tugboat Dedicated to Youth

Warmed by an ideal, Bill Grimshaw will spend most of the winter working on Belleville's waterfront.

Results of his cold-weather workmanship hopefully will be something of a social agency under sail.

Right now, Mr. Grimshaw is laboring alone to convert a 75-year-old tugbout, moored in Belleville harbor.

Out of the stripped-down steel shell he plans shaping a barquentine — a three-masted sailing vessel — which will become a cruise ship for groups of young people.

They'll not only be working aboard ship but working out personal and social problems.

What Mr. Grimshaw is fashioning is an imaginative alternative to the streets which, he says, have an almost inevitable ending for those drifting from home. The street spells drugs, addiction.

"Where are kids to go today?" he queries, as he surveys the peeling 81-foot deck length of the Helen S. "Within three weeks to a month on the street they have themselves hooked."

The 42-year-old Torontonian, an electrician by trade, figures youth work is his vocation — the only difference is he hasn't the papers to prove he's formally qualified, he says.

But he's had the experience — both of young people, and starting a project from scratch.

Several years ago he went into the bush, bought a hunting camp in the Parry Sound area. Young people away from home began to drift in. Eventually, he built the camp into a lodge and social centre that became a rendezvous for troubled youth.

It also became the place, said Mr. Grimshaw, where he got to know what "the kids were going through, how their minds worked."

He sold the lodge some time ago, bought a sloop and taught himself to sail. The experience also gave him his current inspiration — a sailing social centre for troubled youth.

He found the Helen S. — owned by a Bellevillian — when his sloop tied up in Picton last summer. After the deal, the old tugbout — designed, he says, with lines like that of a schooner — was towed to Belleville several weeks ago.

Since he's handy with most trades, he figures he can do most of the converting himself, bringing supplies from Toronto. The whole project will cost about $40,000 — much of it from the sale of his sloop.

When ready — the Helen S. may take her first cruise by motor in summer — there'll be a crew of four with 14-18 young people along for a training cruise lasting several weeks at a time.

The students sailors will be referred through contact with various social agencies, says Mr. Grimshaw.

He believes his idea has a chance of success where other youth projects have failed.

For one thing: "If you're on land you're not really removing them from anything. It's very hard to pioneer in this age. You have to have them for a certain length of time — and a boat they just can't get off and walk away."

There's the common denominator of work: "You simply can't tell anybody to do something you're not doing, or ready to do, yourself. But a ship is a living thing and it depends on all the people on it."

There's also challange: "Instead of becoming a junkie or hooked on drugs they have a chance to bring themselves along and pit themselves against nature."

Next Week Ability Fund

This was YMCA Week.

Next week will be Ability Fund Week.

Music Week in Belleville is Feb. 24-28 — marking the annual Rotary Music Festival.

To make it official, each week has to be proclaimed by city council.

Publishing such notices — a common custom in helping promote community causes or appeals — cost $350 for all proclamations during 1974, says Mayor Robin Jeffrey.

CN Crash Inquest Set for March 11

NAPANEE — The inquest into the deaths of two Canadian National Railway engineers from Belleville in the Dec. 20 train collision near here will be held March 11.

Coroner Dr. J. D. Alkenbrack said here Friday the hearing "will" probably last several days" and will be held by the Ontario government's supervising coroner Dr. H. B. Cotnam.

Killed were Ray Mortimore, engineer of a westbound passenger train and Keith Boyle, engineer of an eastbound freight. The trains collided head-on 12 miles east of here.

Two City Playgrounds To Be Cut this Summer

There will be fewer summer playgrounds in Belleville next summer.

The playgrounds — once the core of city-planned leisure programs for the young — are losing ground in the over-all scheme of recreation services.

This year, Belleville's recreation department plans to drop two play centres from its summer program schedule — down to 23 from 25.

Which playgrounds will be deleted will depend upon a study of needs and responses in city neighborhoods, says recreation director Clifford Belch.

"But our evaluation to date has indicated two less playgrounds are needed in the city," said Mr. Belch Friday.

Mr. Belch admitted to a "certain lack of interest" being shown in summer playgrounds, although "traditional playground programs" still appeal to young people.

There are two major trends contributing to the change, he indicated:

(1) Natural population patters — The age cycle now has reached a point where there are more teenagers, fewer youngsters in lower age brackets. Playground programs are operated for children aged 5-11 years.

(2) Recreation diversity — In recent years the demand for recreation services has become increasingly diversified, creating a broader range of programs — and choices. Cultural activities have "come on strong." Even boys now participate in ceramics, arts, needlework courses. Swimming, tennis, camping, gymnastics are among other projects swelling the range of summer facilities operated by the department in recent years.

Meantime, an over-all examination of the recreation philosophy involving playgrounds also is in the offing, said Mr. Belch.

This year's slight reduction in numbers is a "small adjustment" to the playgrounds schedule — to be followed later by "more stringent evaluation" of future programming, said the director.

Otherwise, the lineup of proposed recreation projects for the coming summer — to employ about 70 students as supervisors — remains virtually intact.

The proposed budget for such projects — covering everything from wading pools to community schools leisure courses — is up about 10 per cent. Most of this is due to inflation — notably higher pay scales, said Mr. Belch.

One renewed program will specifically satisfy west Belleville neighborhoods. The big swimming pool at Sir James Whitney school for the deaf again will be available. Opened in the summer of 1973, the facility was out of operation last summer for maintenance.

The weekly camping experiences in outdoor living will be cut from seven to six weeks. This recognizes the fact, said Mr. Belch, that most young people prefer to "do their own thing" for the first week of school holidays.

The camps are held at the H. R. Frink Conservation Area, near the Moira River at Plainfield.

The summer programs budget — adopted this week by the recreation-arena committee for forwarding to council — estimates total cost at $62,137. This is up almost $5,700 over the 1974 budget, although actual expenditures last year finally totalled $47,000. One big contributor to the difference was cancellation of the swimming program at Sir James Whitney for which $5,800 had been budgeted.

Close to nine per cent of the 1975 increase is caused by an increase in the minimum wage rate affecting a number of the students involved as supervisors in the programs, said Mr. Belch.

Since the estimates were drafted, the minimum wage rates have been scheduled for another increase — from $2.25 to $2.40 an hour by May.

However, the director hoped there would be sufficient flexibility in the estimates to meet further wage scale changes.

Planning Board To Appeal Levy

The Quinte Planning Board will make a presentation to the February resources meeting of the Ontario cabinet appealing the double planning levy affecting three members of the board.

The townships of Sidney and Thurlow and the village of Frankford contribute to the Hastings County official plan though they receive no planning benefits from the document.

The three municipalities are also obliged by the provincial government to belong to the Quinte Planning Board — the body that is currently creating the trio's official plans.

It has long been a bone of contention that these three would have to pay twice for a job done once.

The board instructed its chairman, Trenton mayor Robert Patrick to contact the provincial government concerning the double levy but, said Belleville mayor Robin Jeffrey, "no satisfactory answer has been received."

"In fact, we've received no answer at all," said Bert Kenny, the board's planning director.

The nine ministers meeting in Belleville will be asked to comment.

Five Injured In Collision

Four Frankford area youths and a Stirling man were taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital with injuries suffered in a one-car accident at 6 a.m. today on Highway 2 near Bayside Secondary School.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said John Alderson, 19, of 187 Edwards St. in Stirling was driving westbound when his 1971-model car went out of control and rolled over several times across a ditch, over a front lawn and through a fence. The car was a write-off.

Investigating officer Constable Robert Jackson said the four passengers were Gerald Wilbert Schwager, 15, and Gary L. Maybee, 16, both of RR 1, Frankford, Glenn Ashby, 16, and Clayton Harry McMurter, 16, both of RR 2, Frankford.

All five occupants suffered assorted injuries but Trenton hospital officials were unable to release details by press time today.

Industry Growth Record in 1974

The past year of Belleville's industrial growth was termed "exceptional" by industrial commission chairman Bruce Nickson Friday.

"It was a year of incredible growth ... a year that will be difficult to match," said Mr. Nickson, acclaimed this week as commission chairman for a second term.

During the past year $7 million in new industrial building value has been recorded — nearly doubling the performance of the previous three years combined.

By the time all of the industries come onto "full stream," they will generate $2 million in employee salaries annually over 300 jobs and bring a municipal tax revenue of about $325,000.

Mr. Nickson said it is difficult to attempt to forecast the coming year's performance other than saying, "our files — both active and hot — are as busy as normal."

Bush Workers May Keep Jobs

BANCROFT — North Hastings bush operators and lumbermen who will be affected by the closing yesterday of the Bancroft Domtar Woodlands chip mill may have a chance to sell their chip lumber to one or two other area mills

The G. W. Martin Co. in Harcourt and Gulick Forest Products Co. in Palmer Rapids are hoping to be able to take up some of the slack for the local operators.

Grenville Martin, president of the Harcourt company, said on Friday that "we hope to be able to help out some of the Domtar contractors.

"We certainly won't be able to buy it all," said Mr. Martin, "However, we hope to be able to take enough to keep some of those men working."

Mr. Martin also indicated that his company was "buying at a reduced quantity now" since he had about eight months' supplies stockpiled already.

In Palmer Rapids, Len Gulick said that a lot of Bancroft wood is already being delivered to his chipping operation.

Gulick Forest Products can, according to its owner, handle 25 to 30 loads of chip wood daily since the company's own men are maintained cutting its own timber rights in the bush.

According to Mr. Gulick, the company has a full year contract for 1975 to supply chip to the Consolidated Bathurst Paper Co.

"We've had no indication from Consolidated Bathurst that they'll be slowing down their production," said Mr. Gulick. "However, our contract is considerably smaller than it was in 1974."

Because of the quantity of chip lumber coming into the Gulick mill and being stockpiled, Mr. Gulick feels that "we may have to reduce production somewhat this winter".

The Bancroft Domtar chip mill was shut down yesterday for an indefinite period because of an excess inventory of paper being held in the warehouses.

The re-opening of the Bancroft mill will be dependent on a new demand for chips from the Domtar paper mills.

Break-ins Reported

City police are investigating three break-ins that occurred sometime Thursday night and were not reported until Friday.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said today thieves entered the Voyageur bus terminal on Dundas St. E. after 1 a.m. Friday and took $500 in cash from a cash register and cash box in the office.

The thieves entered the terminal through the main door and used garbage cans to stand upon in the lobby to remove tiles from the ceiling to gain access over the office wall.

A tape deck, 12 tapes, a gear shift knob and a carton of cigarettes valued at $176 were reported stolen from a car at 357 Victoria Ave. Thursday night.

And the Coca-Cola plant was broken into that same night via a window near the rear loading platform, netting thieves $2 in nickels. Damage to the window was estimated at $15. A cash box containing vouchers was damaged, but nothing taken from it, said Chief Crosbie.

Small Fire Only Call

City firemen had one minor call in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today, at the Quinte Hotel to clear smoke from a combination closet-back room on the first floor at 11.24 p.m. Friday.

A department spokesman said employees extinguished a small blaze before firemen arrived. Only minor damage resulted.

$1,100 Damage In Collision

TWEED — No one was injured in a two-car collision on Highway 37 north of here that caused $1,100 damage to the two vehicles Friday.

Provincial police said a vehicle driven by Pierre Salois, 22, of 26 Robertson Lane, Belleville, was struck from the rear by a car driven by Douglas Williamson, 23, of RR 3 Belleville.

The Williamson vehicle was in the process of passing the other northbound car when it slid on the icy road into five guideposts and careened back onto the roadway striking the Salois vehicle, police said.

Funding Hope

Fred Bemis, industrial commissioner and vice-president of Quinte Hastings Recreational Trail is among organizers of lottery aimed at making money for the outdoors resource. Sale of tickets — distributed Friday — will hopefully raise about about $6,000 net for the trail.

Recreation Trail Lottery Launched

The Quinte-Hastings Recreational Trail Friday launched a lottery it hopes will raise a sizeable sum for its empty treasury.

The first batch of 10,000 $1 tickets was distributed throughout the Belleville area Friday for a draw March 19 on prizes in sports equipment valued at more than $3,000.

Trial directors decided on a lottery last week as a means of raising a lump sum of money as quickly as possible.

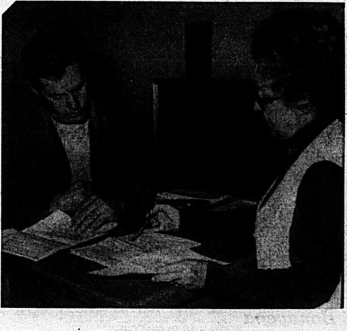
"We're very hopeful it will give us additional funds we need to provide resources for the trail," said Fred Bemis, city industrial commissioner and vice-president of the board of volunteers in charge of the 250-mile outdoor route spanning Prince Edward and Hastings counties. An additional 350 miles of snowmobile trails was taken over by the organization this month.

The trail has been plagued by shortage of funds since it was finished in 1973. At their first meeting this year directors found they only had $26 left from 1974.

Hopefully, said Mr. Bemis, the lottery may raise around $6,000 when all expenses — including prizes — are paid.

First prize is a $1,800 snowmobile; second is a $1,000 trail bike; third, a cross-country ski package; fourth, hiking equipment.

If the lottery is successful, said Mr. Bemis, the trail organization may run a second draw next summer.



Tax Information

Dave Potter of Brighton has some details of his income tax return clarified by Muriel Thorne, an assessing clerk with the information division of Revenue Canada Taxation in the federal building at 11 Station St. The audit division moved to the Royal Bank building on Applewood Dr. Friday, but the information service remains with an expanded counter service.

Taxation Office Split

The audit division of Revenue Canada Taxation moved Friday from its second-floor location in the federal building on Station St. to spacious new quarters in the Royal Bank Building on Applewood Dr.

Laura Gundesen, public relations officer, said the move involved about 50 employees in the division which performs audits on books and records from individuals to small businesses and large corporations

She emphasized all information services to taxpayers will remain on the first floor of the federal building where expanded counter space will now be available for public inquiries.

Essentially, the information service will move to the front counter. The extra room will allow information employees, who number about 110, more space in which to work.

The information telephone number remains the same at 962-3611. In addition, for long distance calls, the toll-free Zenith number 04000 is now open.

Oiler Goalie Stops Aeros

Brown Earns Praise From the Old Master

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goaltender Ken Brown won Jacques Plante's approval Friday night.

The Thunder Bay, Ont., native stopped 47 shots to help Edmonton Oilers win 7-5 over Houston Aeros in a World Hockey Association game.

"Nobody could play better than that," said Plante after Brown had stopped 35 of 36 shots in the first two periods.

Plante, 46, dean of WHA goalies, said hard work was the key to the success of Brown, who shares goaltending chores with Plante and Chris Worthy.

"He's always asking, always trying to learn," said Plante. "He's got a great attitude and, I don't know why, he always plays well against Houston."

Brown began his professional career in the farm system of Chicago Black Hawks. He first played for the Oilers in 1972-73, but was with Winston-Salem Polar Twins of the Southern Hockey League.

The Edmonton defence collapsed in the third period and he needed several good saves to enable the Oilers to move within two points of second-place Toronto Toros in the Canadian Division.

Edmonton's Blair MacDonald, who scored three goals against Winnipeg Jets Thursday night, added two more against the Aeros.

In other games, Vancouver Blazers edged Winnipeg 4-3, Minnesota Fighting Saints topped Toronto 7-5 and Phoenix Roadrunners stopped New England Whalers 4-1.

Giveaways by the Jets in their own end enabled Vancouver to first overcome a two-goal Winnipeg lead in the third period and then score the winner in overtime. Butch Deadmarsh scored the winner for the Blazers.

The Saints moved to within one point of third-place San Diego Mariners with their win against the Toros.

Wayne Connelly broke a six-game scoring slump with two goals, including the winner, and an assist for Saints. A third-period goal by defenceman Mike McMahon broke a 4-4 tie, putting the Saints in front to stay.

Wendell Bennett scored into an empty net with 14 seconds to play to wrap up the Roadrunners' win. Gerry Odrowski had scored an insurance goal for Phoenix earlier in the period after Wayne Carleton scored his 20th goal of the year for New England.

Tonight's schedule has Chicago Cougars at Quebec Nordiques, Baltimore Blades at Cleveland Crusaders and New England at San Diego.

On Sunday, Toronto visits Edmonton, Houston at Winnipeg, Vancouver at Chicago, Indianapolis Racers at Phoenix and Baltimore at Minnesota.

Voyageurs on the Move

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nova Scotia Voyageurs moved to within six points of division-leading Providence with a 6-2 win Friday night over the Reds in one of three American Hockey League games.

The Voyageurs have won 25 of 44 games with six ties for 56 points, and hold a two-point edge over third-place Rochester Americans in the league's Northern Division.

In other games Friday, Hershey Bears and Syracuse Eagles played to a 4-4 tie, and Springfield Kings downed the Americans 6-1.

Another game, Virginia at Baltimore, was cancelled when the Baltimore franchise was disbanded following the announcement that a World Hockey Association team would play in the Maryland city.

At a board of governors meeting Friday, it was decided the league would play a revised games for the remaining nine teams.

The governors said the revised schedule would be out in a few days.

At Providence, rookie Don Howse scored three goals in the first period to give Nova Scotia the win.

Dave Maloney, Jim Cahoon and Ron Andruff scored the other Nova Scotia goals, while Jim Nichols and John Wright scored for Providence.

Bobby Poffenroth scored two goals and assisted on a third at Springfield, Mass., to lead the Kings to their 6-1 win over Rochester.

Dick Sarrazin's second goal of the game with 8:16 left in the third period enabled Syracuse to tie the Bears.

The Eagles trailed 1-0 after one period on Michell Deziel's goal, but tied the game on Luc Simard's goal early in the second period.

Deziel's second goal of the game gave Syracuse a 3-2 lead, but Sarrazin scored his first goal to tie the game before the second period ended.

Joe Norris gave the Eagles a 3-2 lad after 25 seconds of the third period, but Jacques Cossette and Jack Surbey scored for Hershey before Sarrazin's tying goal.

In games tonight, Syracuse travels to Hershey, Providence is at Richmond, Springfield hosts the Voyageurs, and New Haven plays the Red Wings at Virginia.

Sunday, Springfield pays a visit to Halifax and a return match with the Voyageurs, Syracuse travels to Providence, Rochester hosts Hershey, and Richmond plays at New Haven.

Young Scores 6 In Ottawa Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A six-goal performance by Tim Young paced fourth-place Ottawa '67s to a 12-3 dumping of St. Catharines Black Hawks in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action Friday.

Young scored a pair of goals in each period, getting the final goal of the game at 18:50 of the third period.

Tom McDonell scored three goals for Ottawa while Peter Lee, Jamie Masters and Bruce Baker added the others before a home crowd of 4,065 spectators.

Dave Salvian, Kevin Kennery and Bill Hamilton replied for St. Catharines, outshot 47-31.

Barry Ashby went all the way in Ottawa nets while St. Catharines goaltending was shared by Bill Cheropita and Bob Froese.

Ottawa remains one point behind third-place Hamilton Fincups while St. Catharines slipped to sixth spot.

In other contests Friday, Kingston Canadians upset Peterborough Petes 4-2, Hamilton dumped Kitchener Rangers 7-1 and Oshawa Generals downed London Knights 7-5.

League play resumes today with Toronto Marlboros visiting Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds and Hamilton in Oshawa.

On Sunday, league-leading Toronto travels to Sudbury Wolves, Kitchener entertains Ottawa, St. Catharines plays host to Kingston and London meets Peterborough.

Canadians 4 Petes 2

The Canadians built up a 4-0 lead and hung on to defeat second-place Petes before a home crowd of 2,701 spectators.

Larry Murphy scored twice for ninth-place Kingston while Alex Forsyth and Dave Hynek added single goals.

Tony Cassolato and Brad Pirie replied for Peterborough in the second period.

Kingston outshot the visitors 41-40.

Fincups 7 Rangers 1

Rookie Mike Keating scored three goals to lift Hamilton to within three points of second-place Peterborough.

Sean Sullivan got two goals, with Archie King and Glenn Richardson getting the others for Hamilton, which led 3-0 in the first period and 6-1 after two periods.

Joe Fortunato fired the Kitchener goal midway in the second period for Kitchener, playing at home before 3,071.

Generals 7 Knights 5

Brian Dillon scored twice, the final in the dying seconds of the game, to lift Oshawa into fifth spot.

Brian Drumm, Tom Newton, Paul Gardner, Glenn Kirkham and Bob Gladney scored the other goals for Oshawa, playing on London ice before 2,979 spectators, the largest crowd this season.

Dennis Maruk and Terry Martin each scored twice, with Ron Zanussi getting the other.

Maruk also got three assists which brought his season total to 101 points.

Each team fired 46 shots on goal.

Flyers Whip Comets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

League, leading Barrie Flyers took period leads of 2-1 and 6-3 to coast to a 10-6 win over Napanee Comets in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action Friday.

Ken Knapton scored four goals and Bob Monteith added three to lead the Barrie attack. Bill Abbott, Jack Smith and Phil Branston got the others.

Jim Sunstrum and Charlie Convery each scored twice for fifth-place Napanee, with Dick Cherry and Winston Dowdell adding single goals.

In other league action Friday, Whitby McDonald's shut out Orillia Terriers 3-0 and Brantford and Cambridge Hornets were deadlocked at 5-5.

McDonald's 3 Terriers 0

Whitby scored on power-plays in the first and second periods and Dave Nicholishen stole the puck on an unassisted goal in the third period.

Cal Dettit and Gord McCosh also scored for Whitby, playing at Orillia before 500 spectators.

Bruce Derno earned the shutout as Whitby outshot Orillia 37-22.

Foresters 5 Hornets 5

Bill Hway's third goal with 21 seconds left in the game lifted Cambridge to the tie and to within one point of fifth spot.

Bob Channell and Doug Schoenfeld scored the other goals for last-place Cambridge before 640 spectators.

Bob Thompson led Brantford with two goals. Jim Reid, Steve DeGurse and Al Osbosne scored one each.

The Foresters outshot the visitors 42-37.

TRY McDOWELL

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Veteran pitcher Sam McDowell will try out as a non-roster player with Pittsburgh Pirates in spring training, a spokesman for the Natonal League baseball team said Saturday. McDowell, 31, is 10th on the all-time major league list with 2,424 strikeouts. He was released by New York Yankees earlier this month.

GEORGE FOREMAN

Bonavena To Meet Foreman

CHICAGO (AP) — George Foreman, former heavyweight champion, will meet Oscar Bonavena of Argentina in a scheduled 12-round bout March 24, promoter Don King announced Friday.

The fight will be part of the closed-circuit television doubleheader which also involves the Muhammad Ali-Chuck Wepner heavyweight title match at Cleveland.

The site for the Foreman-Bonavena fight has yet to be determined. King mentioned New York's Madison Square Garden, Dallas, Houston, Los Angeles and Washington as possible sites.

The match would be Foreman's first since he lost the title to Ali in Africa last October.

Victories for Canucks, Seals

Leaf Skid Continues

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

Coach Red Kelly and his Toronto Maple Leafs aren't out of the woods yet.

The Leafs, recovered from the worst of their injury problems, appeared to be a National Hockey League team on the rise after they upset Montreal Canadiens Saturday night.

But their grip on a playoff berth again began to look tenuous after they lost their third game in a row Friday night, 6-1 to California Golden Seals.

The Seals, making their first home appearance under new coach Bill McCreary, moved to within eight points of the third-place Leafs in the Adams Division.

A Toronto win would have given the Leafs a 12-point lead in the fight for the division's final playoff berth.

In Friday's only other NHL game, Vancouver Canucks topped Atlanta Flames 4-1.

Toronto's goaltending, frequently criticized when the Leafs were losing earlier this season, was weak again in the first two games of their three-game West Coast tour.

Doug Favell gave up eight goals to the Kings Thursday night in Los Angeles and was pulled in favor of Dunc Wilson after the Seals took a 4-1 lead midway in Friday's second period.

Rookie Frank Spring, acquired from St. Louis Blues earlier this season, scored his first two NHL goals for the Seals.

The Leafs complete their western swing Sunday with a game in Vancouver.

The Canucks continued their recovery from a slump that threatened their lead in the Smythe Division. The win, their second in a row, gave them a five-point edge over second-place Chicago Black Hawks.

It was the second win in 10 games for the Canucks. The loss was the third at home for the Flames.

Don Lever scored a pair of goals for the Canucks, including what turned out to be the winner on a second-period power play.

A game at Montreal between Buffalo Sabres, leaders of the Adams Division, and the Canadiens, who trail first-place Los Angeles by a point in the Norris Division, highlights tonight's schedule.

Other games tonight have New York Rangers at Pittsburgh Penguins, Washington Capitals at Detroit Red Wings, Los Angeles at New York Islanders, Chicago at St. Louis and Kansas City Scouts at Minnesota North Stars.

On Sunday, the Leafs are at Vancouver, Penguins at Montreal, the Kings at the Rangers, Philadelphia Flyers at Boston Bruins, Atlanta at Buffalo, Detroit at Washington and California at Chicago.

Money in the Mail

Has Payday Finally Come?

TORONTO (CP) — Draft payments from hockey's two major leagues are expected to be in the hands of the Canadian Ama- (CAHA) shortly, Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz, commissioner of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, said Friday.

Schmalz told leaders of Canada's three major junior leagues that a cheque for full payment of draft money owed by the National Hockey League is in the mail to the CAHA.

"The World Hockey Association held a meeting prior to its all-star game in Edmonton this week, and its money is expected to be forthcoming shortly," Schmalz said.

Major junior operators across the country have been unhappy with the lateness and payments from the two major leagues.

Last week Ed Chynoweth of the Western Canada Hockey League said league governors had voted uuunanimously to withdraw from the CAHA, citing a lack of leadership in pressing the professionals for the money outstanding.

Chynoweth said there was a strong possibility the WCHL, OHA Major Junior and Quebec Major Junior leagues would band together under a separate identity, "maybe under the CAHA umbrella."

Under a one-year agreement signed by the NHL, WHA and CAHA, draft money is paid to the CAHA head office and distributed to the verious teams.

The NHL and WHA are delinquent in the payment of more than $600,000 for drafted players.

Leaders of the three top junior leagues met for five hours Friday to prepare a draft of proposals they will present to today's meeting of the CAHA board of directors.

The proposals, which Schmalz said had the support of the WCHL, were presented to the CAHA executive Friday night.

Schmalz refused to speculate on what direction the Ontario and Quebec leagues will take if the CAHA rejects their proposals.

5 in Tourney Showdown

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Defending champion Verdun (Que.) Maple Leafs and four other clubs enter today's final round of the Canadian midget hockey tournament. If they win, the team will represent Canada in a spring tournament in the Soviet Union.

Verdun, which won the inaugural event last year and has a 4-0 record atop Division B, was expected to make a strong bid to retain the title. However, Oshawa Parkway, tied with Barrie (Ont.) Co-op for first place in Division A, is the surprise of the tournament.

Parkway gained a berth in the event on the basis of Oshawa being the host city, while the remaining teams had to win provincial playdowns to earn a spot.

Edmonton Canadians and Fort Garry-Fort Rouge (Man.) Twins also are still alive, each having lost once in four games. They are tied for second place in Division B.

Three of the contenders posted victories in Friday play. Barrie won twice, trouncing Corner Brook (Nfld.) Knights 9-2 and downing Quesnel (B.C.) Macks 5-2. Verdun outscored South Ottawa Canadians 8-6 and Oshawa blanked Yorkton (Sask.) Parkland 5-0. Edmonton and Fort Garry-Fort Rouge did not play.

In other Friday games, Thunder Bay (Ont.) Miners whipped Sydney (N.S.) Legionaires 5-2 and Dalhousie (N.B.) Legionaires posted a 4-2 victory over Charlottetown Golden Eagles.

The winners of each division advance to the final to be televised nationally on the CTV network Sunday at 1:30 p.m. EST, with the second-place finishers meeting in the consolation final.

In addition, the tournament's most valuable player will receive a $1,000 scholarship at the university of his choice.

Robert Garner was the big scorer for Barrie, connecting three times in Co-op's win over Corner Brook and twice against Quesnel. Robert Coulson collected four goals in the two games.

Verdun got a three-goal effort from Yves Couturier and two each from Steve Augustin and Jim Mann. The two clubs played through a scoreless first period with both Verdun and Ottawa scoring twice in the middle period.

Kevin Kelly's goal at 14:27 of the first period held up as the winner in Oshawa's victory. Mike Pigeon, Pat McArthur, Charlie Neal and Loran Prentice also scored for Parkway.

Five players shared in the Thunder Bay scoring as the Miners took period leads of 2-1 and 3-2. The win was Thunder Bays' second, while the Legionaires have won only once.

Dalhousie got two goals from Phil Mazerolle in gaining its first victory of the tournament. Phil Guitard and Conrad Drapeau added one each.

Bob Bradley and Dave MacKenzie replied for Charlottetown, who with Corner Brook, are the tournament's only winless clubs.

Harris Stays On

TORONTO (CP) — Billy Harris, whose career as coach of Toronto Toros came to an end two weeks ago, will remain with the World Hockey Association, at least until the end of this season.

"He'll be working with me on every aspect of the organization," Toros' president John F. Bassett said Friday. "He doesn't have one specific duty."

Bassett said scouting will be part of the job.

After Harris refused to resign as coach two weeks ago, he was granted a leave of absence and forward Bob Leduc got the coaching assignment.

Harris had been criticized for the club's poor home record. They have won only four of their last 14 home games.

"We'll decide what will happen with Billy at the end of the season," Bassett said. "He'll have to decide what he wants and so will I."

Hopes to 'See' East Meet West

Blind Curler Has A Vision

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Paterson has a vision of a day when his group of curlers from the East will compete against their counterparts from the West in a national championship.

The vision is the only thing Paterson sees clearly. He is almost totally blind, as are his fellow curlers.

"I'm sure it's going to come about," he said. "It will take a year or two to organize and we'll need some money. But curling is big out west. I'd love to have our best play against them. That would be something to see."

Paterson is 32. He has been blind since the age of four after a bout with polio. He now has 10 per cent vision. By day, he holds a regular job. On Sundays, he heads the 36-member Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) curling league.

This is the second year the league has operated in Toronto. This winter, the Ontario Curling Association sent some curlers to help provide instruction.

One blind competitor who knows what it is all about is Gord Clark. He's 73.

"When I was living in Montreal I used to curl at the St. Bonaventure Club," he said. "After I retired, I came back to Toronto and I curled three years before my eyes went this way. I only competed in an afternoon league with old-age pensioners and other retired people.

"I don't really know what percentage of sight I have now. I don't worry about it. I know that when I get ready to throw, anything past the near hog line is just a blur."

A flashing light is used to help some of the competitors.

"A few of them have light perception," said Paterson. "But we have curlers out tere who are totally blind. They just have to tough it out."

Once settled in the hack, the blind curler takes advantage of his advanced sense of touch. His skip tells him where the rocks are in the house. He adjusts his shots accordingly—in-turn, out-turn, heavy or light.

"Bowling is the other sport for us," said Paterson. "Paul Brodie just started curling this year. He's our best bowler. In fact, he outclasses everyone else in the league. Last year he had a 188 average and that's as good as many sighted five-pin bowlers."

Only two of the competitors are CNIB employees. In age, they range from university students to Clark, who is the senior citizen of the group.

"We could use more competitors," said Paterson. "And we need some more volunteers among sighted people."

Dave Gregory, who heads the recreation department at the CNIB helps organize the regular 38-ring bonspiel at the Terrace," Patterson said. "My brother Tommy, who has full sight, was the skip but the rest of us were all visually handicapped. And we finished third. Can you imagine that? Now you know why I'd like to take on some of those good guys from the West."

One Way to Get There

Cycling to the '76 Olympics

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cycle Canada '76, an inexpensive and interesting way to get to the Olympic Games in Montreal next year, is being organized by the Canadian Cycling Association.

All you have to do, whether you start in Victoria or St. John's, Nfld., is have a bicycle in good condition and be prepared to ride 50 miles a day.

If that sounds like a lot of riding, the tour organizers say it's not. It is actually tailored to comfortable riding by ordinary pleasure cyclers, not racers.

"Going 50 miles a day sounds like a hell of a lot but when you're riding en masse it's quite a short ride, and with the modern 10-speed bikes it's not so bad," says Tom Parry of Freelton, Ont., the Ontario tour supervisor.

The idea for a cross-Canada cycling tour originated with Tom Robson of Kitchener, Ont., a cycling enthusiast who sold it to the recreation committee of the cycling association.

Cycle Canada '76 will have three main tours.

The western lap will start from Victoria May 6, 1976, and cover the 3,000 miles to Montreal in 76 days with time off along the way for recuperating and sightseeing.

Feeder tours will originate in Calgary May 23 and Edmonton May 21, joining the main tour at designated points. The combined western tour will cross the Prairies and enter Ontario at Kenora June 15.

The southern tour will begin in Windsor, Ont., July 5 and will be joined along the way by feeder tours starting in such other Ontario cities as Sarnia July 6, Timmins July 7, Niagara Falls July 9 and Sudbury July 10.

They will join the main tour in Ottawa July 17, the day before the Olympics open in Montreal.

One eastern tour will start from St. John's June 18 and another from Halifax July 1, meeting at Riviere-du-Loup, Que.

Parry says cyclists may join the tour at any point and ride as long as they want. Participants will be charged $4 to $5 a day for food and shelter. To keep costs down, riders will stay overnight at provincial parks where possible.

He adds that some towns and cities along the route have said they will welcome the cyclists and may provide free food and lodging.

Since it will not be a race, riders will be free to set their own pace—10 miles an hour is about average—but there will be vehicles trailing the cavalcades to pick up stragglers or those with mechanical difficulties.

THE SYSTEM FOR KILLING PENALTIES

Coaches often stress the offensive points of hockey over the development of a necessary special team — the penalty killing unit.

There are two ways of approaching this part of the game. First, one can try to make this normally defensive strategy an offensive weapon. Over the past few years, Boston Bruins have had players such as Derek Sanderson, Ed Westfall, Phil Esposito and Gregg Sheppard killing penalties and we were able to score short-handed goals.

Few teams are fortunate enough to have such potent scorers like Esposito and Peter Mahovlich of Montreal Canadiens move to killing penalties and do an adequate job.

So that brings us to the basic system for killing penalties which is known as the 'box formation.' While a man short, the two defencemen and two forwards form a box area with the intention of keeping the puck out of that zone they've created.

Poise and discipline are required to carry out this assignment because there is a tendency sometimes to breakdown in keeping the box formation. When this occurs, the team with the man advantage often works their extra man into an excellent scoring position.

In the picture, you'll notice Dave Keon and Rod Seiling of Toronto Maple Leafs setting up their half of the box during one of our power plays. They're not going after the puck but letting us move it around as long as we don't step into their formation.

When the defensive team gets control of the puck, it should try to waste as much time as possible before firing the puck out of danger. And if you rag the puck long enough, perhaps you might irritate an opposing player into taking a penalty.

Philadelphia Flyers have one of the finest penalty killing teams in the National Hockey League with players such as Bobby Clarke, Terry Crisp and Rick MacLeish. Watch them, especially the team's discipline in using the box formation.

Arthur Ashe – Close But Not Quite

Victory One Point Away

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fifth-seeded Arthur Ashe, several times one point from victory, was upset by Jamie Fillol of Chile, 7-6, 2-6, 7-6, Friday night in quarter-final action in the $115,000 U.S. indoor professional tennis championships.

Fillol, a Davis Cup player since 1969, made a strong comeback in a match that saw Ashe of the United States hold match point seven times in the final set.

Ashe's defeat leaves Marty Riessen as the only player among the original top 15 seeds vying for the $15,000 first prize. He defeated Australian Tony Roche 7-5, 6-0, earlier Friday and will meet Fillol in one of two semi-final matches today.

Riessen, who earned $101,010 last year in his best showing as a pro, turned his match around after trailing Roche 3-5 in the first set to win 10 consecutive games and the match.

Toronto May Have to Wait for Franchise

MONTREAL (RP) — John McHale, president of the National League Montreal Expos, has indicated that baseball's "intelligent" expansion plans may mean a wait of three years before additional cities, including Toronto, obtain major league franchises.

"There are people in our league who feel fairly strongly about not expanding," McHale said in an interview Thursday. The NL requires unanimous approval for expansion, while the American League constitution requires an affirmative vote by nine of its 12 teams.

McHale said the Expos "would certainly make every effort to impress on our owners how important an area Toronto could be to us in the National League."

He said Toronto "is far ahead of the other cities in preparations and in facilities."

"Toronto is better prepared than the others. They have a good financial group—make that financial groups. And they have good stadium plans."

Toronto, New Orleans and Seattle were the cities most often mentioned in expansion discussions at winter meetings in New Orleans last month. They remain the top three.

"We are studying cities that have the solid financial backing, that are big enough to support major league baseball and that have stadiums," said McHale, named last month to a committee to examine relocation and expansion.

Donald Grant of the NL New York Mets is chairman of the committee, while the AL is represented by Bud Selig of Milwaukee Brewers and Ewing Kauffman of Kansas City Royals. Presidents Chub Feeney of the NL and Lee MacPhail of the AL are automatic members.

Current studies mark the first time the leagues have collaborated in planning expansion.

McHale said past expansion moves were forced on the NL, apparently referring to transfers of the Kansas City A's franchise to Oakland and the move of the original Washington Senators to become Minnesota Twins in the 1960s.

The American League was pressed to put new teams in the abandoned cities and the National felt obliged to keep pace and expand as well.

3 Players Suspended

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association, continuing to crack down on violence in its many leagues, says 121 players have been suspended for various infractions since its December executive meeting.

Three players suspended for the balance of the season and playoffs for striking officials are George Reeves of Seaforth Intermediate C, Don McDermott of Cottam Intermediate C and Mike Wells of Walkerton Junior D.

Leaders Still Concerned About Miller

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Neither Tom Watson nor Gene Littler, co-leaders after Friday's second round of the Bing Crosby National golf tournament, are about to write off the chances of Johnny Miller.

"You have to look back at Johnny," said Watson.

"Six shots," mused Littler. "Miller can make that up easy."

And Miller, who failed to make a birdie as he slipped six strokes off the pace, concurred.

"I can still win," he said. "If I can put one of my good rounds on 'em, a 64 or 65. I've still got a good chance."

Miller, runaway record-setting winner in his first two tournaments this year at Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz., didn't have a single one-putt green in his first over-par round of the year—his 10th round of the tour.

Watson had a second-round 70 and a 139 total, five under par at the halfway mark of the tournament being played on three courses. Sunday's final round is at Pebble Beach.

Littler had a 71 to share first place with Watson, who also played his round Thursday at Pebble Beach.

Hubert Green and Larry Ziegler, who shared the first-round lead, fell back. Ziegler had a 74 at Pebble Beach and was tied at 140, one stroke off the lead, with Cesar Sanudo, who had a 71 at Cypress Point. Green had a 75 at Spyglass Hill and was alone at 141.

Miller and Jack Nicklaus, the man Miller is challenging as the game's No. 1 performer, each shot 74 at Spyglass Hill. Each had a 145 total.

George Knudson of Toronto was tied with Nicklaus and Miller at 145 after shooting a 72. A 78 gave Ben Kern of London, Ont., a 154.

Hale Irwin, the U.S. Open champion, had the best round, a 67 at Pebble Beach for a 144 total.

Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Lee Trevino are not competing.

Marcelin Top Pick-off Man

TORONTO (CP) — It wasn't the best year for interceptions in the Western Football Conference last season, but Al Marcelin of Ottawa Rough Riders had no complaints in the East.

Five players shared the WFC lead with five interceptions apiece in the 16-game schedule, said in a release Friday. They were Howard Starks, Ted Bachman and Roger Goree, all with Calgary Stampeders who finished last, and Barry Ardern of British Columbia Lions and John Beaton of Edmonton Eskimos.

The last time five interceptions were enough to lead the WFC was in 1962 when Gene Wlasiuk of Saskatchewan Roughriders and Harvey Wylie of Calgary accomplished the feat.

Marcelin, a five-year veteran, was the fourth player to win the Canadian Football League's interception title two years in a row. Only Al Brenner of Hamilton Tiger-Cats in 1971-72, John Wydareny of Edmonton in 1969-70 and Don Sutherin of Hamilton in 1961-62 were the others.

Marcelin's leading totals were similar. In 1973, he was the leader with eight interceptions for 81 yards. Last season, he had eight for 85 to nip Phil Price of Montreal Alouettes, Lewis Porter and Brenner of Hamilton and Sam Cvijanovich of Toronto Argonauts, who each had seven in the Eastern Football Conference.

Goree returned two of his interceptions for touchdowns to lead that department in the CFL. Merv Walker of Winnipeg Blue Bombers had the longest return—112 yards and a touchdown in an early-season game against Saskatchewan.

No. 1,000 for Bulls' Chet Walker

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chet Walker prepared for his 1,000th game in the National Basketball Association by scoring 21 points Friday night to lead Chicago Bulls to an 86-81 win over Seattle SuperSonics.

Walker becomes the eighth player in NBA history to reach the 1,000-game plateau when he plays in Detroit tonight against the Pistons.

"I feel real good about it, because it shows I worked hard and earned my way," said Walker.

Walker, a 13-year veteran, will join Hal Greer, Dolph Schayes, Johnny Green, Wilt Chamberlain, Walt Bellamy, Oscar Robertson and Lenny Wilkens in the NBA's 1,000-game club.

In other NBA games, Boston Celtics beat Kansas City-Omaha Kings 96-87, Buffalo Braves downed New York Knicks 105-99, Houston Rockets trimmed Milwaukee Bucks 95-91, Detroit defeated Atlanta Hawks 113-103, Los Angeles Lakers shaded New Orleans Jazz 110-108, and Portland Trail Blazers ripped Philadelphia 76ers 119-97.

In the American Basketball Association, New York Nets topped Kentucky Colonels 112-110, Indiana Pacers defeated San Antonio Spurs 114-105, San Diego Conquistadors stopped Virginia Squires 108-105, Memphis Squires edged the Spirits of St. Louis 107-103 and Utah Stars trimmed Denver Nuggets 119-116 in overtime.

Wagner's Rink Winner

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Bill Wagner's Ottawa rink will represent Ontario at the Canadian seniors curling championship in Calgary Feb. 16-21, the result of a convincing late round victory in the Ontario playoffs.

The Ottawa foursome whipped Ken Stewart's Burlington rink 9-2 Thursday night to win the Ontario crown after the two rinks finished round-robin tournament play with 5-2 records.

In the seventh round, Wagner walloped Bob Mann's Toronto rink 12-3.

Stan Jones of Toronto and Charles Hackett of London finished the Ontario elimination play with 4-3 records.

Canadians Produce

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians won the men's and women's downhill skiing events at the Aspen, Colo., leg of the Can-Am skiing circuit Friday, the Canadian Ski Association announced.

Laurie Kreiner, 20, of Timmins, Ont., captured the women's event in one minute, 5.42 seconds while Bob Miller, 21, of Vancouver won the men's event in 1:59.89.

Leslie Smith and Pam Noyes, both of the United States, finished second and third respectively in the women's downhill while two other Americans, Scott Schimelfenig and Steve Devin, took second and third in the men's event.

The win for Miss Kreiner moved her into eighth place in the over-all Can-Am standings, the highest placing of any Canadian in the annual series.

Rob Safrata of Willowdale, Ont., was the only other Canadian to place in the top 10 of the three-day race. He finished fifth in the men's downhill.

Watered-down Leagues Hurting Hockey-Hanley

TORONTO (CP) — The expansion of the major leagues will hurt junior hockey, Bill Hanley, former secretary-manager of the Ontario Hockey Association, said Friday.

"I think they (the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association) are taking the juniors too early," Hanley said in an interview. "Years ago you couldn't or wouldn't touch a player until he was 20.

"Now they're picking them up at 16 or 17 and paying them big money."

Hanley said there had been exceptions in the past such as Bobby Orr, who was 18 when he signed with Boston Bruins, but "how many players like that do you find?"

He said the professionals, by raiding the junior leagues, are watering them down with a resultant fall in attendance.

Hanley, 60, recently left the OHA job after 27 years in amateur hockey. A dinner is to be held in his honor Monday night.

Everybody Pitched In

Anymore when you think of sports, you think of big business and lots of money. Money being the root of all evil, it's easy to consider athletics a cold-hearted way of life. You hear so much about the apparent worthless values placed on the human being when he enters the world of big league sports.

It should bbe known, though, that it isn't always as cold and ruthless as it appears. As an example (one that helped change my outlook a little): the 20th Annual Metro Junior B All-star game that was played in Belleville on Wednesday.

The whole point behind the game is to raise money for charitable works. Both the Ontario Crippled Children's Society and the Charlie Conacher Research Fund received about $1,000 each as a result of the 1,600 or so fans that turned out to support the game.

The money was just the direct kindness. That's what everyone saw. What people didn't know about, however, was all the work and sacrifice that went on behind the scenes.

The officials, for example, were donating their time and believe me, their time is worth quite a bit. John Brown, Gregg Madill and Bruce Garside were the trio of NHL sanctioned refs who came and did the job on the ice.

The officials off the ice. George Rutledge was one. He did the game's announcing and that was out of the goodness of his heart. George retired from announcing (he used to do the harness races at the local track) about three years ago. All the officials — the scorekeeptr, timer, ticket taker and the list goes on — donated their time to help leave a bigger cut for the charities.

The team representatives who were on hand. Nearly all the club managers came down to the game. Some of them didn't even have players in it, but they still travelled the distance just because it was for a good cause.

Then there are the players. They took the chance of getting hurt (Jim Richardson of the Bobcats was injured) for no other reason than to put on a show and attract the fans so the charities could get some money in the first place.

The city kicked in the cost of the arena for the night-over $200 — so the league would have some place to play the game.

The Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund covered the cost of advertising, programs and other stationary — about $150 — so it wouldn't be taken out of the gate receipts and the charities would get more.

After the game, Dixie Lee supplied a good meal for all the players. It wasn't free, but Bobcat General Manager, Snipe Matthews says they gave him a good buy on everything.

The Legion Branch 99 threw in the use of their top floor hall for the players to have some please to eat after the game.

And the list goes on.

Probably someone was forgotten. But if there are people involved with this undertaking who weren't mentioned in the list, please don't feel left out. Everyone and anyone who did help present the 20th Annual Metro Junior B Hockey game should be proud of its success and proud of themselves as human beings.

It did my heart some good to see so many people working together for no other reason than to help other people.

Neither Team "Up" as Lions Shade Bobcats

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

The Belleville Bobcats, despite a half hearted third-period comeback attempt were unable to gain a tie as the visiting Peterborough Lions edged the Cats 3-2 in Metro Junior B action Friday night.

The entire 60 minutes held as much excitement as an hour-long checker match. Cats' coach Bob Boyle summed up the game; "They (Peterborough) played bad but we played worse, the guys just weren't up for the game and it showed."

The win now puts the Lions within a win of Belleville in the race for fourth place and makes the Cats chances to keep up to third place Kingston a little tougher.

The locals were playing with less than a full roster again, with defencemen Dave Taylor out with work commitments creating an obvious gap on the blue line. Jim Richardson missed the game with his shoulder injury suffered in the All-Star game (only the second game he's missed). Also missing from the line up were Wally Damard and Paul King.

The home team scored both of their goals in the final frame showing more hustle than they did for the entire first two periods of the game.

The visitors took a total of 40 minutes in penalties, including two majors for fighting and a game misconduct. "The referee must have thought this was a basketball game," laughed winning coach Neil Wasson after the game. Belleville suffered only 24 minutes in the penalty department but were not able to cash in on any shorthanded tries.

"I am really glad the game wasn't 10 minutes longer. We were getting tired and Belleville was coming on strong," added the winning coach.

"I had to play some of my key players to kill off the penalties and as a result things started to look bad," said Wasson.

Peterborough opened the scoring at the 11-minute mark of the first period as Robert Fife was in the right spot at the right time, banging in a rebound for the goal.

Brian Seabrooke scored the Lions second goal of the period, an unassisted one as a Belleville defenceman put the puck right on his stick in front of the net.

The second period did little more than keep the near capacity crowd awake as both teams continually put the puck on each others sticks and appeared to lack any desire to win.

The best chance for the locals came early in the period as Lions' goalie Rob Duncan was out of position after blocking a shot leaving the wide open net, the shot from the blue line was 10 feet wide, a constant problem that faced the Cats throughout the game.

One spectator, watching his first game of the season from the sidelines, Jim Richardson, had this to say, "You sure see a lot of things that go wrong from up here.

"It's hard wanting to get out there and play but knowing that there's nothing you can do."

Jim hopes to be back in the lineup for the playoffs.

Steve Keech also had a good scoring opportunity as he stole the puck and broke in all alone on Duncan, the netminder was more than ready however as he robbed the Belleville forward from close in.

Andy Ricketts, a steady performer for Belleville in the game got things moving with his single handed effort with two minutes gone in the third period.

Any indication of life within the Belleville squad didn't last long as the home team went back to the old style of play.

Paul Graham moved the Lions two up midway through the period before Keech put the Cats within one goal with one minute and 41 seconds remaining.

Goalie Bob Moore was taken out of the net in favor of an extra attacker and the locals pressed for a short time but Peterborough was able to nullify any chances showing good puck control.

Belleville will be heading into a busy schedule starting Thursday night when they travel to Kingston to take on the Voyageurs, then playing games Friday, Sunday and the following Tuesday.

SUMMARY

First Period

1. Peterborough, Fife (Gibson, Tilley) 11:00.
2. Peterborough, Seabrooke, (unassisted) 12:32.

Penalties: Belleville — Calberry (interference) 1:58; Langstaff (slashing) 3:10; Powell (tripping) 10:33; Foster (roughing) 17:29; Thompson (5 minutes fighting) 19:53. Peterborough — Graham (interference) 3:32; Ayotte (interference) 4:33; Harris (holding) 9:20; McDowell (elbow) 15:50; Seabrooke (elbow) 16:41; McDowell (5 minutes fighting) 19:53.

Second Period

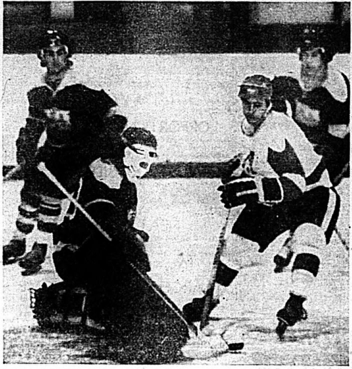
No Scoring.

Penalties: Peterborough — Gibson (holding) 0:38; Harris (elbow) 4:43; Ayotte (high stick) 6:09; McDowell (tripping) 9:32; Allen (hooking) 17:29.

Third Period

3. Belleville, Ricketts (Samis) 2:00
4. Peterborough, Graham (Ayotte, Pollock) 11:17.
5. Belleville, Keech (Watt, Turner) 18:19.

Penalties: Belleville — Jeffery (roughing) 2:00; Calberry (roughing) 7:30; Ricketts (roughing) 9:20; Foster (5 minutes fighting) 13:48. Peterborough — Pollock (roughing) 2:00; Fennema (tripping) 3:04; Tilley (roughing) 7:30; Ayotte (interference) 8:53; McDowell (hooking, 5 minutes fighting, game misconduct) 13:48.



Belleville Bobcats' Grant Goegan is foiled on this attempt for a goal. Peterborough Lions standout goaltender Rob Duncan makes the save in Friday's Metro Junior B game played at the Memorial. Duncan although not tested too many times looked sharp when called upon as the Lions edged the Cats 3-2.

Penalty Parade

FRANKFORD (Special) — Penalties, 104 minutes of them, marred an Ontario League game here Friday as Frankford Huskies gave up two unanswered goals in the third period and settled for a 3-3 tie with Bowmanville Eagles.

The tie brought Huskies' unbeaten streak to nine games and left the club four points back of the fourth place Eagles in the group standings. The two teams go right back at it again Sunday, in Bowmanville.

Included in referee Al Junkin's penalty parade, were a pair of 10-minute fighting sentences; five minutes for kneeing; another five for high sticking, and a rash of fighting majors.

After a scoreless first period, Huskies opened up a 3-1 lead in the second.

Al McIntosh, Ron Ferguson and Jean Doucette were the marksmen for the home team. Rory Gibbs replied for Eagles.

In the third, Gibbs potted his second of the night and with a little under three minutes remaining in regulation time, he set Glen Rice up for the tying goal.

IN MEMORIAM

MALCOLM: In loving memory of a wonderful father, and grandfather, Clarence Dearl, who passed away, January 25, 1971.

When the ties of love are broken,
And loved ones have to part,
It leaves a wound that never heals,
An ever-aching heart.
So you who have a father,
Cherish him with care
For you'll never know the heartache
Til you see his vacant chair.

—Sadly missed, forever loved by daughter Sherry and granddaughter Tamara.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of a dear husband, Clarence Dearl, who passed away January 25, 1971.

It is sad to walk the road alone,
Instead of side by side,
But to all there comes a moment,
When the ways of life divide.
You gave me years of happiness,
Then came sorrow and tears,
But you left me beautiful memories,
I will treasure through the years.

—Sadly missed, ever loved, by his wife Hazel.

PLUMMER — In loving memory of a dear dad and grandfather Douglas Charles who left us, January 26, 1967.

God saw you getting tired,
When a cure was not to be,
So He closed His arms around you,
And whispered come home with me,
You didn't deserve what you went through,
And so He gave you rest.
God's garden must be beautiful,
For he only takes the best.

—Sadly missed and remembered by son Ray, daughter-in-law Joan and always loved by grandchildren Margaret, Debbie, Doris, Doug, Wanda, Russell and Tina.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away Jan. 25, 1971.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far forthought to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
And who, though absent is just as dear.

—Sadly missed and loved by son Dwight, daughter-in-law Cheryl and grandson Jason.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of my dear father Clarence who passed away January 25th, 1971.

Today recalls the memory,
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of him today,
Are those who loved him best.
The flowers we lay upon his grave,
May wither and decay,
But the love for him who lies beneath,
Will never fade away.

—Always remembered by loving son Dearl, Glenore and family.

MALCOLM — In memory of our very dear father, Clarence, who left us four years ago

We stood beside you helplessly,
And watched you fade away,
Never knowing why or when,
It may be your last day,
Oh how we need and miss your guidance,
And those usual words so wise.
But somehow dad, we'll carry on,
As we look up to the skies.

Gone from us but will never be forgotten by your son Garth, daughter-in-law Carol and three of your granddaughters whom you loved so much.

MALCOLM — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Clarence, who passed away, Jan. 25, 1971.

Within our hearts, we'll always keep
A special place for you,
And try to do our best to live
As you would want us to.
You gave us years of happiness
Then came sorrow and tears,
But you left us lasting memories,
We'll treasure through the years.

—Sadly missed by Gary, Ruby and family.

NUGENT — In loving memory of a dear brother James Nugent, killed from a fall at Bath, Ont., Jan. 23 '73.

As time unfolds another year,
Memories keep you ever near Silent thoughts of times gone by
Memories that will never die.
Life goes on with many changes,
Joy and sorrow smiles and tears,
But with love you are remembered
With the passing of the years.

—Ever remembered by his sister Rita from Newfoundland.

IN MEMORIAM

SILLS — In loving memory of our dear aunt Charlotte E. Sills, who passed away January 26, 1961.

However long our lives may last,
Whatever lands we view,
Whatever joy or grief be ours,
We will always think of you.

—Mr. and Mrs. Oliver M. Day, Winnipeg, Man.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to thank our friends and neighbors for their kind deds and thoughtfulness to our family and myself during our time of need. Sincerely Pete Archer and family.

I wish to express my appreciation for flowers, gifts and cards from relatives and friends during my illness in Belleville General Hospital and kindnesses and good care from the staff on the 5th level. Also Dr. B. Morgan and Dr. Morphy.
William MacKenzie

I would like to express my sincere thanks to Dr. Hartt, Dr. Manderville, Dr. Cronk, Dr. Pattell, Dr. Marshall; the nurses on 6th floor; all those who sent cards, gifts and visits during my stay in Belleville General and Kingston General Hospital. It has been very much appreciated.
Marion Hagerman.

ENGAGEMENTS

NO WONDER WE'RE ALL DIZZY!

With revolving credit, spiraling prices and soaring taxes! Well, this old fashioned home can't solve today's problems, but it could solve your problem if you're looking for:

- Plenty of rooms — 10 in all
- A place close to both Belleville and Trenton on the Rednersville Road
- A good sized lot — 100 x 300
- Grass, trees and shrubs — they're all there

ENTHUSIASM IS INFECTIOUS

BRANCH OUT BEFORE SPRING!

And establish your "family tree" on a bus route 3 miles from Belleville. Three lots to choose from, good water supply and priced right. Start building now before inflated prices rise higher. Call today.

HOW WILL YOU TELL YOUR FAMILY "I'VE BEEN LAID OFF"? HOW WILL YOU KEEP AHEAD OF INFLATION IN 1975?

Before more jobs disappear, shouldn't you at least investigate how you can start in your spare time as a representative of the Ontario Automobile Association. You'll earn extra money and be prepared for a fulltime career that is not dependent upon bosses, strikes, layoffs, recession or inflation. We have two full-time positions open in this area now! Salary, plus commission plus bonus if you qualify. Training provided. Car required. Apply now giving your phone number. Write Mr. Riddill, Ontario Automobile Association, Box 307, London, Ontario.

Protests Competition

BRYNMAWR, Wales (CP) — The managing director of a shoe manufacturing firm has asked the British government for protection against competition from cheap shoes imported from Eastern Europe. Arthur Jolley said his company has been forced to lay off 250 of its 400 workers despite receiving a government subsidy.

Seek Documents

CALGARY (CP) — University of Calgary has issued a plea for any documents Canadians may have which will help the university expand its Canadian studies program. "Much of the material we need is out of print and consequently difficult to obtain," said Ernie Ingles, librarian in carge of rare books and special collections.

Expert Retires

SASKATOON (CP) — Transit Superintendent Burt Scharfe has retired after 46 years as a civic employee. He saw Sahkatoon's transit fleet increase from a dozen street cars to the 72 buses now in use. Mr. Scharfe started as a clerk in the transit department and worked his way up to Superintendent, a position he held for 25 years.

Aid for Deaf

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Co-ordinating Council in Deafness, a new organization to co-ordinate efforts to assist the deaf,. has been formed. Officials said the provincial council should attempt to have a balance of deaf and hearing members on committees so neither group feels the other is taking over.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED WANT AD

Be clear. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, or definite information.
Make It Easy for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects call you.
Place Yourself in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified ad.
Want Ads That Fail to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they do not contain enough information to prompt action.
The Greatest Reader Attention can be secured for your advertisement by ordering consecutive insertions. You can stop your ad in the event of results and then pay only for the days it is published. There are also very special rates for those who are desirous of keeping their name or offer before the public every day.

The Haunted Liquids

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT
Copyright 1975,
Toronto Sun Syndicate

Haunted house? Yes, you've heard about them. But haunted liquids?

Well, one of the most inexplicable hauntings ever investigated involved a house where strange liquids poured out of thin air.

And I mean poured.

The weird goings-on occurred in Swanton Novers rectory in Norfolk, England in 1919. The rector, Rev. Hugh Guy, lived in the old house with his family and a maid.

The epidemic of oddities started suddenly. Liquids simply began spurting or streaming from the ceilings and walls of the rectory. Refined oil came gushing out, as did water, methylated spirits and sandalwood oil.

At one place in the house, a quart of oil poured from the ceiling in five minutes. On Sept. 2, 1919, Mr. Guy said that up to that time 50 gallons of oil had been collected. And as the bizarre gushers continued, the clergyman and his family were forced to move out of the house.

Fantastic?

That's what the self-styled experts said. They promised to solve the mystery in short order.

An architect, a geologist and a chemist investigated as a team. They ripped apart the walls and ceilings and found only dry plaster and wood. They left scratching their heads.

Two magicians decided to put a stop to the nonsense. They accused the family maid of being a prankster responsible for the weird showers of liquids The girl denied it.

Moreover, even when she was out of the house the showers continued. In fact they got worse. With the maid nowhere in sight one oil expert caught two gallons of the fluid in an hour.

Finally, in desperation, the rector, Mr. Guy, asked England's greatest magician, Nevil Maskelyne, to investigate.

He stayed in the house several hours. In a statement he wrote for the London Daily, Maskelyne said that during his observation literally barrels of liquids — many different kinds — streamed from the ceilings and walls of every room in the rectory.

England's most famous wonder worker admitted that he was stumped. There was, he conceded, not the least evidence of trickery.

Several days after his investigation the showers stopped as abruptly as they had begun a few weeks earliers. The wall and ceilings of the rectory were noew completely dry. The rector and his family moved back in and apparently lived dirly ever after.

The mystery of the incredible showers has never been solved

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary of the folksinging trio Peter, Paul and Mary still is singing, but now she is host of her own radio show syndicated each week through the United States.

Mary Travers and Friend, a one-hour show, features chats with prominent music groups or solo performers, as well as samples of their old and new recordings and those of other artists they admire.

She says one future guest is reclusive folk musician-millionaire Bob Dylan, a friend of hers since the early 1960s when, as she puts it, "we hung out in the same coffee houses and starved together."

A tall, friendly woman of 38, she has worked solo since 1970, when the trio she calls PPM broke up after nine years of fame for its music and its involvement in the civil rights and anti-war movements.

She also is finishing an autobiography dealing mainly "with growing up left in New York" in addition to her show which, its producer, Twenty First Communications Corp., says began last weekend in 83 cities.

She is married to Jerry Taylor, publisher of National Lampoon magazine. The magazine is owned by Twenty First Communications, but she says her husband played no part in setting up her radio show.

Home life involves four children ranging in age from 16 to 8. Two are Miss Travers' by a previous marriage and two are Taylors' by a previous marriage.

WINNIPEG (CP) — A new Winnipeg company hopes it has provided an alternative to high-cost entertainment in clubs and cocktail lounges.

R. E. Kirk, president of Videma Ltd., says video cassette programs geared to specific audiences has attracted tremendous interest, partiularcly from hotel owners.

The company's program for such places as beverage rooms and cocktail lounges consists of a color television projector and a 1,200-square-inch screen.

"At the push of a button, not only live off-the-air broadcasting such as hockey and football games are available, but also prerecorded programming tailored to the particular needs of the establishment."

Mr. Kirk said some of the taped programs such as television shows and feature films are available even before the local movie house has them.

Chronic 'Pot' Use May Be Dangerous

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Do you have any information on short or long term effects of using marijuana? My teen-ager tells me there are none, but I think there may be.—Mrs. E.A.D.

This is one of those issues where social factors and medical facts get intertwined. They shouldn't, but they do.

Yet, since the rather widespread use of marijuana began, certain scientific evidence has accumulated, and although the final chapter has not been written, much of that evidence should prompt caution about this drug.

There are apparently no serious side effects from a casual, short term use of marijuana, but there are many that result from long term use. And, since the toxic material in the plant is absorbed and stored in the body's fatty tissue, these effects can accumulate.

Cancer-producing tars and carbon monoxide, toxic arids, and the irritating smoke particles must all be added into the potential for long-term harmful effects. So must the characteristic eye-reddening irritation.

Brain damage is entirely possible, and this may show itself as a personality change or memory loss in some habitual users.

In the lungs marijuana may cause bronchial irritation and asthma. Lung function tests in long term users show significant impairment. Intestinal disturbance such as diarrhea and abdominal cramps can occur with chronic use. So can weight loss.

More disturbing, perhaps, is some medical data showing damage to the body's immunity mechanism. The chronic user may become more vulnerable to disease.

And marijuana cannot be looked at in isolation. Pot heightens the actions of other drugs (amphetamines notably). That is, the combined effect of it in connection with another drug is greater than the sum of effects of each used alone. It can also accentuate the depressive effects of barbiturates (downers) and alcohol.

So, from a purely medical standpoint, you should not let anyone tell you (or your teen-ager) that marijuana is an innocuous high.

With all of the conflicting reports going around, it is easy to become confused. I suspect that your teen-ager is pulling your leg when he argues there are no serious effects from its use.

Dear Dr. Thosteson I've read that in order to conceive the male has to have an orgasm. Does the female? If not, why not?—P.M.

The male yes, the female no. Pregnancy results from the presence of sperm in the vaginal tract at the right time, when the female releases an orgasm is not necessary for fertilization of the female egg by the male sperm.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know what kind of a test you need for the change of life. How would you know when you need hormones?—Mrs. R.M.

I'm not sure I understand you. If you mean a test to determine whether or not you have reached menopause, then I'd say there's no specific test I know of for that. The only evidence is the cessation of the menstrual cycles.

As far as hormone therapy is concerned, this would be determined by your doctor after menopause has been established. The dosage varies widely among individual women.

Cause Undetermined

NORTHAMPTON, England (CP) — A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death in a crash at Silverstone auto racing circuit Oct. 16 in which Ernest Scragg, 53, chairman of a textile firm, was killed. The inquest was told investigators could find no reason why his E-type Jaguar spun during a time trial.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, Jan. 26

Aries (March 21-April 19) Events may not start out exactly as you like, but they'll end up to your satisfaction. Hang in there with high hopes.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Your over-all plans will run very smoothly today. Don't be hesitant to tackle big ideas. Think in broad terms.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You're lucky in material affairs, especially if a reliable friend of long standing is involved in your endeavors.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Conditions that have a direct effect upon your personality are improving. You'll find your outlook is far more optimistic.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) It will be difficult to fool you today. Your intuition is very keen. You'll perceive that which lies beneath the surface.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be a loner—get involved in some form of group activity. It will brighten your day and cheer others as well.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You'll be fortunate today in competitive types of situations. Lady Luck will be doing all she can to give you a boost.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't discount your creative ideas at this time. If they can't be used immediately, at least note them for future reference.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A person with whom you have strong emotional ties will bring something worthwhile into your day.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll be lucky today in situations where you have a teammate or partner working in close association for a common cause.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you apply your mind to it, there are things you could do that would save money instead of farming them out to a professional.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You have that extra-plus quality today. You'll find wherever you go and whatever group you mix with you'll be well-received.

South looked over dummy. North had overbid tremendously and South saw no way to make his contract against any reasonable defense.

South was an old campaigner and no one could tell from his manner that he wasn't thinking about overtricks. He played dummy's queen of diamonds and when it held led a spade and finessed his 10. That held also and South continued with the ace. West played a diamond South. He decided to play for a series of mistakes by his opponents and proceeded to cash the king and queen of trumps and throw East in with his jack.

Dummy's four discards in order were club, heart, diamond, club, while West made the mistake of chucking four diamonds. That took care of South's diamond loser but left a spade, two hearts and a club for the opponents.

Then the opponents came to his rescue. East led the deuce of clubs. West rose with the ace and led the suit back on the theory that East held the king-jack. Now South took his king, led a diamond to dummy's ace, discarded one heart loser on the queen of clubs and claimed the impossible contract.

Legislature Resuming

Redistribution Bill Election Prelude?

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis has two key pieces of legislation for members to consider when the Ontario legislature resumes next week.

The bills, involving election expenses and redistribution of provincial ridings, are critical for the premier in keeping his political options open.

Mr. Davis expects the resumption of the session to last about two weeks and has stated publicly that he wants guidelines on election spending and redistribution before Ontario faces another election.

Having the legislation approved in the next couple of weeks would give the premier time to call a spring election this year.

Many party officials and backbenchers expect Mr. Davis to decide on a fall election, probably October, but the premier himself isn't saying.

Recent polls have shown a decline in his own popularity and that of the Progressive Conservative party.

That has led many party observers to believe that the premier wants the widest possible latitude in setting an election date—that he might go to the people any time after the April budget if he can find a proper issue.

The legislation, on election spending, which sets limits on the amounts which may be contributed by individuals, companies and unions, is expected to be the object of a vigorous opposition attack.

Opposition leaders Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis have been critical of the suggested legislation, which limits contributions but not the amount candidates or parties can spend on their campaign.

The redistribution of Ontario ridings is expected to add eight new seats to the 117-member legislature. There will be heavier urban representation.

The importance of quick passage of the bill is that it gives political organizations in the new ridings a chance to organize—a gain in time for a spring election if necessary.

One of the first items of business scheduled for Tuesday is the tabling of Judge John Pringle's long-awaited report on his investigation into a raid on a Fort Erie hotel by Niagara regional police.

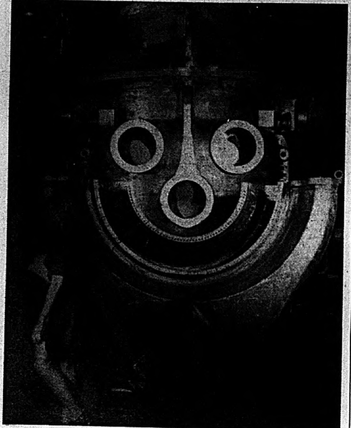
There was a public outcry about police actions last May after more than 100 persons were searched and 38 women forced to strip as police looked for drugs. Fewer than a dozen charges were laid, mostly for liquor offences.

Judge Pringle conducted an 11-day investigation into the matter last August and Solicitor-General George Kerr says the judge's report is now ready.

Political sparks are also likely to fly over Management Board Chairman Eric Winkler's suggestion that members of the cabinet and MPPs take a five-per-cent pay cut to set an example in the fight against inflation. The suggestion has already been criticized by some opposition members.

Five cabinet ministers will be in different portfolios because of a cabinet shuffle by the premier this month.

John Clement is the new attorney-general, Robert Welch has gone from attorney-general to the new ministry of culture and recreation, John White has gone from treasurer to minister without portfolio, former energy minister Darcy McKeough has taken over as treasurer, Dennis Timbrell, former minister without portfolio, has become energy minister and Sidney Handleman is minister of consumer and commercial affairs.



The Face

Unmindful of the once-over being given her by this monstrous face, an office worker goes on with her work at the St. Cloud, Minn. plant of the Turbodyne Corp. "The Face" is actually the upper half of a compressor case marked with white lay-out powder for precision machining. The mouth is the lower half of an inner housing for a turbine case. (CP Photo)

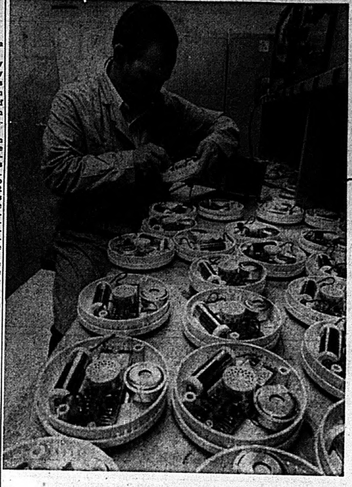
Suggests Trucks Swap Travelling Privileges

TORONTO (CP) — The trucking industry should consider keeping its vehicles off congested routes at certain times of the week in exchange for Sunday trucking privileges, Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Friday.

In a speech to the Ontario Household Movers' Association, Mr. Nixon suggested trucks avoid using northbound Highway 400 on Friday nights during the summer cottage season.

The industry wants to operate on Sundays for trips longer than 450 miles while the government argues that all Sunday trucking should be banned because of the high accident rate on that day.

Mr. Nixon said his suggested trade-off could be the answer.



Smoke Sleuths

Saucer-like ceiling fixtures for use in homes to detect smoke and sound an alarm are given a sensitivity test at Emhart Corporation's research lab in Farmington, Conn. A key element in the device is Americium, a by-product of atomic energy research. The alarm re-sets itself after danger has passed. (CP Photo)

Munro Trying for Formula To find Strike Alternative

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said in the Commons Friday he has "no doubt there are going to be problems during 1975" with work stoppages.

But the government is talking with labor and management groups to try to find a means other than strikes to settle disputes, he told Frank Maine (L—Wellington).

Dr. Maine, referring to the prospect of "non-stop strikes" during the year, asked what the government is doing to avert strikes.

His question came after his private motion calling on the government to form a special Commons committee to find an alternative to the use of strikes.

This would protect "innocent third parties whose lives are disrupted during strikes in both the private and public sectors of the economy. . . ."

Dr. Maine's motion said such strikes "threaten to be more serious than in past years owing to the large number of contracts to be renewed in the current year."

He said in a news release that strikes make it possible "for a relatively few irresponsible individuals to deprive millions of postal service and even food. . . ."

It has reached the point where the government is forced to intervene "in a ridiculously large number of disagreements. . . ."

Dr. Maine said the challenge is to make the strike "obsolete without weaking the bargaining power of the unions."

There would be complaints about disregarding human rights, "but the rights of the many must be given consideration as well as the rights of the individual."

Dr. Maine did not offer any specific method by which strikes might be made obsolete.

Ottawa Financing Protects Pipeline

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal government and Interprovincial Pipeline Ltd. lawyers are negotiating final details of an agreement under which Ottawa will provide financial aid for construction of an oil pipeline into Montreal.

The government agreed last week to protect Interprovincial against losses if the pipeline is not fully used.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said in the Commons Friday that a legal document covering the agreement is being prepared by the lawyers.

The minister said he hopes construction of the 520-mile Sarnia-Montreal pipeline will start this spring. The line will be an extension of the main oil line from Western Canada.

Under the agreement, if the flow of oil through the pipeline drops below its full capacity of 250,000 barrels a day the government will provide financial aid.

The federal funds would be used to help meet the pipeline's fixed costs of an estimated $25 million annually.

Interprovincial applied to the National Energy Board last spring for permission to build the extension.

But last fall the company said declining crude oil reserves in western provinces made it doubtful whether enough oil will be available to fill the pipeline.

On that basis, the company said, it could not go ahead with the project unless Ottawa agreed to protect it against losses.

Your Horoscope

MON, Jan. 27

By Bernice Bede Osol

Aries (March 21-April 19) Be prepared to take a back seat socially when you cross paths with a dominating character. He'll want the stage to himself.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) It would be wise to let everyone get his two-cents' worth in over a major family issue. All should be heard.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) An important plan will run into serious opposition unless you present it tactfully and diplomatically. Use soft-sell.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Don't leave anything to chance in your business dealings today. Insist on complete disclosure of relevant facts.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Normally dependable allies won't be so eager to lend a hand today, especially if they feel you're being forceful.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Plan your moves carefully or you'll make extra work for yourself. Also, don't rely too heavily on co-workers.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't gamble on situations today where control lies in the hands of someone else. Manage important affairs personally.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be prepared to shift tactics when your ambitious aims are stymied the next few days. Avoid showdowns, confrontations.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to waste considerable time today trying to do things in a manner experience has proven unworkable.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) For the next few days count pennies very carefully. Think, think, think before assuming new obligations.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) One-to-one relationships will be a bit tricky for you today and tomorrow. Don't put your interests selfishly above others.

Municipal Representatives Summoned to Toronto Tuesday

Queen's Park Plans Announcement Affecting Eastern Ontario

Municipal government representatives from Peterborough County east to the Quebec border have been summoned to a meeting Tuesday at Queen's Park with Tourism and Industry Minister Claude Bennett for an advanced briefing on a public announcement affecting Eastern Ontario.

A total of 200 representatives of municipal governments will attend.

A spokesman for Mayor Robin Jeffrey's office said today the mayor was notified by telephone of the meeting Friday and a followup telegram arrived this morning.

The telegram said an advanced briefing and buffet luncheon would be held at 11:30 a.m. in the Ontario Room of the Macdonald Block where both Mr. Bennett and Donald Irvine, minister of housing, would answer questions.

Mayor Jeffrey is in Toronto this week for milk commission meetings and the spokesman said she will attend the briefing.

Hastings County Warden William McCrea said Sunday no further indication was given on what is involved in the announcement. "We're looking to some kind of announcement that would be beneficial to Eastern Ontario," he commented. If no such announcement were forthcoming, local government representatives might be "very disappointed," he said.

Reeve Gordon Wilman of Sidney Township said he received his phone call about 10:40 p.m. Friday. But "I have no idea what it's all about," he added.

Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, in a telephone interview from Toronto, said he was just as mystified about the reason for the assembly as were the heads of local governments. "I'm just as puzzled as the rest of them," he said.

Davis Dismissed Fund-raiser

PCs Said Offered $30,000 Land Deal

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party was offered $30,000 if the government would buy almost 100 acres of land in Oakville.

In a copyright story, the newspaper says the offer came in a letter dated Nov. 23, 1971, to William M. Kelly, chief fund-raiser for the party, from Ross A. Shouldice, a former Sudbury real estate agent and party fund-raiser in Sudbury at the time.

The government closed the deal for the land 15 months later in March, 1973, apparently for $1,498,076, for a highway right-of-way, which the newspaper says may not be needed.

However, Mr. Kelly denied receiving the $30,000 and denied any involvement with the Oakville land purchase.

He also denied having received a letter from Mr. Shouldice, in which Mr. Shouldice said he would receive a six-per-cent commission from the owners on the sale, The Globe and Mail says.

It quotes Mr. Shouldice as concluding in the letter that "in the event that a sale is effected, it would enable me to forward to Toronto Central (party headquarters) the $30,000 that I was short in my commitment to you."

The Globe and Mail says the letter it obtained was a copy of correspondence seized from Mr. Shouldice's files by government investigators looking into his Sudbury dealings and is still in government files.

In another copyright story, the newspaper quotes Premier William Davis as saying Mr. Shouldice was removed from his position as Sudbury-area fund-raiser because "I didn't like the way he was suggesting the party does business."

In an interview with the newspaper, Mr. Davis said Sunday he had no recollection of the Oakville land deal but was certain it would not have involved a donation to the party.

"We just don't do business that way," the premier is quoted as saying.

In a third copyright story, The Globe and Mail says that despite government assurances that Mr. Shouldice is too ill to return to Canada, he continues to lead a busy life in Florida.

Last November, John Clement, then consumer and commercial relations minister and now attorney-general, told the legislature that Mr. Shouldice, wanted by a ministerial tribunal dealing with complaints involving a real estate transaction, was too ill to travel.

However, The Globe and Mail quotes Mr. Shouldice's wife as saying that she acts as her husband's secretary and screens all calls and visitors "because he is such a busy man, he doesn't have time to talk to you without knowing first what it's about."

She added that Mr. Shouldice currently is on a two-week business trip in Canada.

Real Estate Man Denies Shouldice Aided in Sale

TORONTO (CP) — Ross Shouldice, a former Sudbury real estate agent and former fund-raiser in Sudbury for the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, has faced allegations of misconduct before.

Mr. Shouldice, 48, now a resident of Orlando, Fla., is in the limelight again, less than a year after he was acquitted of charges of fraud, forgery and uttering forged documents.

The Globe and Mail alleges in a copyright story that Mr. Shouldice told the provincial Tories he would be able to give them $30,000 if the government purchased 100 acres of land in Oakville.

The government paid $1.5 million for the land in March, 1973, to Fantum Holdings Ltd.

But Fantum president Alan Feldman, a friend of Mr. Shouldice, denied that Mr. Shouldice helped with the sale or that his pany paid Mr. Shouldice the six-per-cent commission wich The Globe and Mail says he was to receive upon closing the deal.

Access to Book Racks Not Promised

Faulkner's Power Disclaimer Irks Publishers and Writers

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — The people who write, publish and sell the country's books and magazines ended a two-day conference on the future of their profession Saturday divided among themselves and embittered by the federal government's response to their appeals for help.

The majority of the 260 delegates to the conference at Trent University formed a common front called the Book and Periodical Development Council to press for alternatives to what was described an "extremely disappointing" publishing policy outlined at the conference Friday by State Secretary Hugh Faulkner.

The council, composed of publishers', writers', poets', librarians' and book sellers' associations, will meet in Toronto this weekend to draft policies aimed at stopping increasing foreign ownership of the publishing and distribution industry.

Absent from the list of founding organizations was the Canadian Book Publishers' Council, composed largely of big foreign-owned publishing houses operating in Canada.

The decision to form the new organization came after delegates reacted with dismay and hostility to Mr. Faulkner's proposals to pump another $1.5 million a year in the Canada Council's $4-million aid program for publishers and writers, extend foreign ownership laws to control foreign take-overs of Canadian publishing houses, review copyright laws, sell Canadian books in federal buildings and consider increasing government advertising in Canadian periodicals.

Mr. Faulkner said he could not meet publisher demands for legislation aimed at giving Canadian publications greater access to the country's retail book racks which are owned predominantly by United States wholesale and distribution companies. Such controls are under provincial jurisdiction as are proposals for increasing the use of Canadian books in schools and libraries, Mr. Faulkner said.

Many publishers, authors and book sellers told Mr. Faulkner that the program was inadequate and that stronger measures were needed

Nixon and Lewis Both Call For Land Purchase Probe

TORONTO (CP) — Leaders of the provincial opposition parties have called for a public inquiry into the Progressive Conservative government's purchase of 100 acres of land in Oakville.

"I see no alternative but to have a full public inquiry," Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said in an interview.

The Globe and Mall, in three copyright stories, says the Conservative party was offered $30,000 if it purchased the land and that there is some doubt the land, which was purchased by the province in 1973 for $1.5 million, is really needed.

The newspaper says that Ross A. Shouldice, a former Sudbury real estate agent and former fund raiser for the Conservatives, offered the government the money if they bought the land from Fantum Holdings Ltd.

After the New Democratic Party swept all three Sudbury seats in the last provincial election, Mr. Shouldice wrote letters to Premier William Davis and William Kelly, the party's provincial fund raiser, the newspaper says.

In those letters, the newspaper says Mr. Shouldice said he could do a great deal better "if it were known that I could exert some influence."

In connection with the land deal, Mr. Nixon said that "it appears that the requirement for the land is at least in question."

He said the situation is "absolutely unacceptable' and that it "shows the mentality of the Conservative fund-raisers."

"Whether this was accepted by the government or not, their fund-raisers are obviously used to using this blackmail approach."

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis agreed with Mr. Nixon's call for an inquiry.

"This is the kind of cloud over a government that throws politics into disrepute," he said.

Mr. Lewis said the debate on an election reform bill in the forthcoming session of the legislature will be "largely self-righteous nonsense" unless the Conservative party reveals the "major corporate contributions" made to it in 1971.

He said he would not dispute Premier William Davis's word that he had removed Mr. Shouldice from his position because he "didn't like the way he was suggesting the party does business.'

"If he says he fired Shouldice because he didn't like his way of raising money, I'm prepared to accept that," Mr. Lewis said.

11,000 CN Employees Laid Off Owing to Engineers' Walkout

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A Canadian National Railways spokesman said today 11,000 employees across Canada have been laid off their jobs in the face of the wildcat walkout of locomotive engineers.

In Belleville, engineers have been "sick" since the action started last Thursday. Since that time, operations on CN's mainline between Toronto and Montreal have all but ground to a halt.

Supervisory personnel have kept one or two trains a day moving along the route. CN officials this morning said the only trains running Monday will be the 6:44 p.m., eastbound Bonaventure and the 8:25 p.m. westbound Bonaventure.

Approximately 400 engineers in Belleville and the Great Lakes region walked off their jobs.

John Noel, Toronto CN public relations officer, said "3,000 men have been laid off their jobs in the Great Lakes Region. Another 8,000 men have been laid off in western Canada".

No layoffs have been announced for Quebec and the Maritimes, where engineers remained on the job.

Engineers are refusing to go back to work in Toronto, Belleville, Niagara Falls, Winnipeg, Thunder Bay and Edmonton, said Mr. Noel.

As a result, CN has suspended its transcontinental service. Passengers caught in the strike were flown to their destinations by the railway.

Management's response to the walkout came Friday with threats of writs and legal action against delinquent engineers. While Mr. Noel said "a great many have been served, and the balance will be served today", a union spokesman in Toronto said this weekend, "the writs would be fought in court".

The engineers walked off their jobs last week, calling for a 15 percent cost of living increase, retroactive to Jan. 1. A contract signed Dec. 11 allows for a similar cost of living raise effective May 1.

Union and management will meet in Montreal Tuesday to discuss the conflict. No local union comment was available.

Bus Business Booming

While Canadian National Railways engineers continue to stay off the job, the Voyageur Colonial bus line in Belleville is experiencing record business. The seven regular Sunday buses were expanded to 12 this weekend. "It was terrific - - - just couldn't believe it," said a bus line official today.

Mrs. Phillips is survived by her husband, Myron Phillips, and five children, George, David, Catherine, Bradley and Richard, all of Consecon.

His comments about the quality and presentation of the local work produced for the November juried show formed the bulk of his address to the group.

He advised those present not to destroy the impact a piece of artwork could have by choosing an overly ornate or unsuitable frame.

"The important thing is the style, not an attractive cover."

He also advised his audience not to be too concerned about the technique or the media, but to be honest with what they intend to do woth their artwork.

Car Lands On Lawn

REDNERSVILLE — Two men were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital Sunday afternoon following a one-car accident on Rednersville Rd.

Injured were Bruce Cairns, 22, of Bramalea and Steve Rodrigues, 19, of RR 1, Carrying Place, passengers in a car driven by Grant Park of Oakville. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $400. Police said the car went out of control on an icy curve. The car entered ditch, struck a culvert and finally came to rest on the lawn of William Jones, RR 1, Carrying Places.

Frankford Mishap Minor

FRANKFORD — Two Belleville area men were treated and released from Trenton Memorial Hospital Saturday for minor injuries they received in a one-car mishap on Highway 33, one-quarter mile north of here, at 4.50 p.m.

Ontario Provincial Police in Belleville said Sunday the vehicle was occupied by Brian Hayward, the driver, and a passenger, Merle Dafoe. Both men reside at RR 3, Belleville.

A police spokesman said Hayward lost control of the car which went off the road. Further accident details and a damage estimate were unavailable.

Province Offers Ice-control Grant

The province has given a $500,000 grant to the Moira River Conservation Authority for the Belleville ice-control project.

Proposed ice-control dams will be constructed on the Moira River in the vicinity of Reid St. and College St. in the city.

"The city, as the chief benefiting municipality, will pay the major portion of the authority's share of the cost," said the announcement from Leo Bernier, minister of natural resources.

The grant will cover the cost of acquiring land and doing engineering studies, said James McCloud, secretary-treasurer of the authority. Construction of the dams is not expected to start until 1976, he said.

Bylaw Restores Police Seniority

The city's police commissioners moved Saturday to correct a personnel procedure that, in effect, brought a penalty along with promotion.

Under existing rules when a constable was promoted to sergeant he lost his seniority, on which a number of personnel benefits — including lengths of vacations — are based, Police Chief Douglas Crosbie told the commissioners.

The situation arises because a veteran constable on promotion becomes the junior sergeant on the force, he said.

The commissioners quickly gave three readings to a measure amending the department's personnel bylaw.

Driver Escapes Injury

TWEED — A 35-year-old Willowdale man, Howard Weinroth, was uninjured when his car left Highway 37 on Saturday, travelled for 17 feet and hit a culvert.

Police said the accident happened about two miles north of Tweed when the vehicle was travelling south on Highway 37. The car was described as a write-off.

Three Women Injured

PLAINFIELD — Three Toronto women were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital Saturday for injuries suffered in a one-car accident on Highway 37 near here at 6 p.m.

An Ontario Provincial Police spokesman at Belleville said Sunday the driver, Brenda Vokes, and passengers Lynn Delaney and Terry Wallace received "bumps and bruises" when their vehicle left the road due to road conditions.

Damage to their 1973 Pontiac station wagon was estimated at $1,200.

Damage Extensive

TWEED — A two-vehicle collision Saturday on Highway 37 north of Tweed resulted in $1,100 damage to the two cars and $75 damage to five guideposts taken out in the accident.

The driver of one vehicle was Pierre Salois, 22, of Robertson Lane in Belleville. The driver of the second vehicle was Douglas Williamson, 23, of RR3, Belleville. Both drivers were alone and unhurt in the accident.

A total of $1,000 damage was done to the Williamson vehicle while the Salois vehicle sustained $100 damage. Police said slippery road conditions contributed to the accident.

Two-car Collision Sends One to Hospital

TWEED — An Ottawa teacher is in satisfactory condition in Belleville General Hospital today with lacerations and a possible concussion after a two-vehicle collision Sunday on Highway 7, eight miles northeast of Tweed.

Police said Michael Terrence Flynn, 31, of Ottawa was taken to hospital after the 3:40 p.m. accident Sunday.

His car was in collision with a station wagon driven by Dorothy Haluszka, 17, of Stouffville, Ont., who was not hurt in the accident. Police said that her vehicle was travelling west on Highway 7 when it went sideways, crossed the median and landed in the other lane, in whch Mr. Flynn was travelling.

Police said there was $3,000 damage to the Flynn vehicle and $2,000 to the station wagon.

YOUR CHANCE TO HELP PLAN
THE DEVELOPMENT OF EASTERN ONTARIO'S RESOURCES

The Ontario Government is interested in your views on what direction it should be taking in conservation, agriculture, tourism, industrial development, labour, transportation, energy and the environment in Eastern Ontario.

These areas of government policy are the concern of the nine Ministers in the Ontario Cabinet Committee on Resources Development. They have been holding a series of public meetings in the various regions of Ontario to encourage open discussion of future government policies.

The Ministers are planning to hold the next public meeting in the Park Room, the Four Seasons Hotel, Belleville, throughout Monday, February 17, and Tuesday, February 18.

You are invited to make a written submission to the Ministers and to talk with them personally.

Briefs should be addressed to:

Former Commanding Officer Honored by Hasty Pees

About 80 former wartime militia and present officers and non-commissioned officers gathered at the Belleville Armories Saturday to honor Lt.-Col. The Lord John Tweedsmuir, a former commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment during the Second World War, on what may be his final visit to Belleville.

Lord Tweedsmuir, OBE, CD, a member of the British House of Lords who resides in Scotland, has been invited to several inspections for annual Hasty-Pee events since the war ended.

At one occasion during the Trooping of the Colors ceremonies on May 17, 1964, he took the salute during the march-past. On May 28, 1972, when he inspected the cadets, he was presented with the key to the city and honorary Belleville citizenship papers.

And in October, 1973 on Thanksgiving weekend, he was the featured speaker for the Hasty-Pees' 29th annual reunion.

Lord Tweedsmuir, son of a former Canadian governor-general, twice commanded the regiment during its Italian campaign.

His first command was during the capture of the Sicilian hill town of Assoro in 1943, accomplished in a gruelling all-night climb up sheer cliffs to surprise the enemy. That command ended after several days when he was wounded.

His second command later in Italy again ended after several days when he contracted malaria.

Lord Tweedsmuir's first act in the afternoon was to inspect the regimental guard of honor, which he described in an evening after-dinner speech as "excellent." "We are the past, they are the present," he commented. "But we can help them."

The British peer pointed out he did not mean this would be his final visit. His regular monthly business trips to Canada will finish soon, so it will be difficult to attend Hasty-Pee functions. "It only means the Atlantic will become a little wider," he remarked.

Lord Tweedsmuir described his fondness for the regiment.

"35 years ago was a tremendous day for me," he said. "On that day, I met the first Hasty-Pees."

Presentations included a shield from Tony Bossiano, President of the Regimental Association, which reflected the Hasty-Pees' feelings. A badge - mounted inscription read, "wel ye no' cum' buk agen!"

There was also an engraved mug from Ted Lawson, President of the Ack Ack Kennedy Club, a pin for Lord Tweedsmuir's daughter from the Peterborough members, a copy of the Queen's Own Regimental History and a copy of The Regiment by Farley Mowat, with Hast-Pee signatures on the front cover.

Cornwall Honors Lord Tweedsmuir

Lt.-Col. The Lord John Tweedsmuir, OBE, CD, a member of the British House of Lords, who was commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment during the Second World War, received a surprise presenation from the city of Cornwall during a special gathering in his honor Saturday at the Belleville Armories.

Acting Mayor Francis Guindon, a Cornwall alderman, presented Lord Tweedsmuir with a letter from Mayor Gerald Parsien, and three souvenirs of the city in an informal meeting during a pre-meal cocktail hour.

Lord Tweedsmuir was given a set of engraved cufflinks, a lighter, and handblown glass ornaments for Lady Tweedsmuir.

Mr. Guindon said the presentation was similar to those accorded visiting VIPs to Cornwall. He explained the city acted on a suggestion by Cecil Kennedy, an original regiment member, who now resides in Cornwall.

Inrig Stresses Need For Self-identity

Lt.-Col. John Inrig, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, received a rousing ovation from former regiment members Saturday when he told them of the regiment's insistance to maintain self-identity while wearing the standard green uniforms required for all services in Canada's armed forces.

"We will continue to be Hasty Pees," he said to about 80 former members who gathered at the Belleville Armories to honor Lt.-Col. The Lord John Tweedsmuir, former commanding officer during the Second World War in Italy.

Col. Inrig said his regiment is the only unit in the country wearing reb berets with their green uniforms, which distinguishes members as Hasty-Pees.

He said the regiment is discussing the standard of dress with senior levels of the defence staff.

Woman Hurt

STOCO — A Belleville woman, Dorothy Boomhower, is in satisfactory condition in Belleville General Hospital today after the vehicle in which she was a passenger skidded on a slippery road Saturday and struck a pile of logs and a fence.

Her husband, Vernon, the driver of the car, was treated and released from hospital. The two were travelling on a county road about five miles east of Highway 37 in the Stoco area.

Police said the accident occurred about 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

Police said the vehicle sustained about $500 damage.

Car Rolls, Driver Unhurt

SHANNONVILLE — A Belleville man escaped injury Saturday when the car he was driving left Highway 2, about two miles west of here, and rolled over.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said Sunday the vehicle was driven by Ronald Denike.

Drug Plan Affects Only County Homes

New provincial regulations on drug prescriptions for pensioners on low incomes has led to a flood of extra work for Hastings Manor and similar government - operated homes for the aged.

County administrator Carl Bateman said recently, prescriptions for county home residents are up 300 per cent. The increase was termed costly.

This situation does not affect private nursing homes, only those operated by the province.

Cornwall Surprise

An unannounced surprise visit by the acting mayor of Cornwall, Ald. Francis Guindon, greeted Lt.—Col. The Lord John Tweedsnuir, former commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, during a cocktail hour prior to his tribute from fellow Hasty-Pees at the Belleville Armories The Lord John Tweedsmuir, (left) receives Cornwall souvenirs and an letter from Mayor Gerald Parsien from Mr. Guindon. The presentation was conceived by Cecil Kennedy, a Hasty-Pee who now resides in Cornwall.

Police Commission Balks At Higher Membership Dues

Belleville's police commissioners want the association that represents them at the provincial level to become more influential before they consider higher membership dues.

The new fee schedule would drastically increase membership costs for the Belleville commissioners from $25. to $360 in the Association of Municipal Police Governing Authorities.

The association comprises local police committees and commissions.

One reason for the higher fees is that the association feels it either has to become more active and significant or it will fold, said Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

One problem encountered by the association is a lack of attendance at its meetings, the chief told the commissioners.

James Driscoll, re-elected to his third term as commission chairman, said the association's letter seemed a "negative attitude".

He said the group holds one meeting a year with little participion from the membership because there is "no method of getting input".

"They're going to have to put more teeth into their association. They're going to have to have more influence on the OPA (Ontario Police Association)," he said.

Said commissioner Judge W. S. Lane: "If they don't do any better job than they have done, I don't see why we should pay them that much money."

The commissioners agreed with the judge that the issue should be discussed at the next authority meeting, scheduled for Toronto in March.

Driver Charged After Three-vehicle Mishap

MADOC — A 34-year-old Oshawa man faces three charges after an incident Saturday night in which $450 damage was done to two parked cars.

Grant Roy Demill, of Drew St. in Oshawa has been charged by police with failing to remain at an accident, failing to report an accident and careless driving.

Police said the charges stem from an incident which occurred about 10.45 p.m. Saturday on Durham St. N. in Madoc near the Madoc Hotel.

A car owned by Edward Thomas Norman, 26 of Lingham St., parked and unattended on Durham St. N was struck by another car, receiving a total of $400 damage

A car, also parked and unattended, directly behind the Norman vehicle, owned by Richard Clayton Foster, 27, of Marmora, received $50 damage to the front right fender The driver responsible for hitting both vehicles drove off, police said, but not before receiving $750 damage to his own car.

Mr. Demill was charged by police the day after the incident. He is to appear in Madoc court on Feb. 11.

Chickens Stolen

HILLIER — The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police is investigating the weekend theft of chickens owned by Leonard Smith of Hillier.

It is believed the fowl were taken, along with a jute bag, from the Smith barn early Sunday evening.

Officials Stress Need For Service Citations

Citations encourage civilians to get involved assisting local civic authorities, says James Driscoll, chairman of Belleville's police commission.

The commissioners Saturday presented merit certificates to two brothers who rescued a car driver from Belleville harbor.

Citations for two teen-age youths who helped police solve a burglary, also were approved by the commissioners.

"I think there's a lot of merit to civil citations," said Mr. Driscoll. "It's a way to encourage people to get involved."

The remarks came after he presented awards to Mike Holland, 47, and his brother, Pat, 38. Both men were on the scene Dec. 5 when a station-wagon drove off the federal government dock at the bottom of South Front St. They helped rescue the driver, Timothy Auger, 21, of Marmora, after the vehicle sank into the Bay of Quinte.

Recommended for citations at Saturday's inaugural 1975 meeting of the commission were Peter James Bennett and Chris Walmsley, both 14. Take 2

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie told the commissioners the youths were in the area of a Charles St. home when it was being robbed of $360.

They were alerted by the sound of breaking glass and later saw a man drive away. They gave the licence number to detectives and later gave "excellent evidence" at a preliminary hearing and jury trial that convicted a Belleville man.

Without their aid "it is doubtful" if the case could have "been brought to a successful conclusion," said the chief.

Halfway House Still Considered

Belleville police authorities are still pursuing a halfway house project to assist the rehabilitation of problem drinkers.

Police commissioners still are endeavoring to define what provincial — government financing is available and other steps needed to start the centre.

The project — prompted by operations of Friendship House in Cornwall — was first discussed a month ago by the commissioners.

The centre would involve itself with assisting problem drinkers released after treatment from hospital or provincial detoxification units.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said he will visit the Cornwall project to veiw the project first-hand.

Women's Year

"Future Shock" author Alvin Toffler was a distinguished visitor to Belleville recently.

His book, and what he had to say here, shed a great deal of light on these rather frenetic times.

Since this is International Women's Year, it is also an opportune time to consider inviting someone of note from the distaff side.

We could have Alice Munro perhaps. The author of Lives of Girls and Women, and other works, Miss Munro has wide appeal. Or Joyce Carol Oates, whose vivid and menacing prose tells the story of violence in American life today, especially in Detroit where she once was a university lecturer. Today she is an associate profesor of English at the University of Windsor, here in Ontario.

More than ever the status and lifestyle of women around the world are being discussed. Queen's University has just had a week devoted to the Chancellor Dunning Trust lectures ,focusing on the human dignity and the experience of women. Speakers included Elizabeth Hardwick of New York (she was formerly married to American poet Russell Lowell) and Doris Anderson, editor of Chatelaine.

Mrs. Anderson had an observation about Mrs. Margaret Trudeau which deserves mention as a sympathetic apprisal of the strain of political office and its effect on family life. Mrs. Trudeau had considered working for the magazine, and Mrs. Anderson said the deluge of publicity probably overwhelmed her and led to the announcement from her office that the whole scheme was untrue. The press, she said, turned it into some type of confrontation. She felt Mrs. Trudeau was under enormous strain and was looking for some type of outlet that the writing project might have provided.

So much for the vexations of politics, as they intrude upon privacy and upon family life. Of course the women's movement continues to gather momentum anyway, and not just at its extreme limit of militant feminism. Newspapers in recent days have carried advertisements, under the title of the Minister Responsible for the Status of Women, pointing out that there can be more to life for a young woman than being a typist or secretary. In short, it says: "We have the right to fill whatever role in life we choose . . ." in the professions and in politics, all the way to the office of Prime Minister. And there is an address to write to for further information.

But to get back to the local scene, let's consider those invitations. We need to open our doors to people of distinction, and in turn show them what we have to offer here.

Opera's Appeal

A night at the opera!

It is one of the most absorbing and pleasurable experiences in the midst of life's busy round.

Opera, like all art, reflects life, gives it color, a touch of magic. If it is something like La Boheme, there is the additional delight of beautiful melodies, to go with the humor and tragi-comic story of the great Puccini work.

In the Quinte area and beyond, thanks to the Canadian Opera Company, a wider audience than ever before has been introduced to this aspect of musical art. Students and adult audiences from Niagara-on-the-Lake to Waterloo, Belleville and surrounding points, Guelph and Windsor have been on the company's itinerary. Kingston, Deep River, Pembroke, and London also are playing host to this fine national group.

Sponsors of the company locally were Corby Distilleries and the Quinte Arts Council and both are to be congratulated for their part in another excellent evening's entertainment.

The Canadian Opera Company has a young and vigorous cast and they were in fine voice for the Belleville production, despite a gruelling schedule. Several have experience with European companies and others are products of the University of Toronto's opera department — surely one of the most valuable faculties in the development of the cultural life of the nation.

More Enlightened Budgets

Canadians Coping Better Than U.S. with Inflation

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

How well is Canada coping with the growing economic crisis compared to the United States?

In nearly every way much better, although the Canadian cost-of-living like the Amerian, jumped to a record high last year for the first time since 1946, 11 per cent, not as high as the record U.S. figure of a 12.2 per cent increase.

Part of the reason for the better Canadian position, even though the U.S. and Canadian economies are closely interlocked, has to do with political stability in Canada during 1974 and a better track record of managing the national economy than in the U.S.

In addition, we have had two enlightened budgets during 1973-74 which gave substantial relief in tax removals and other measures which Americans have not experienced.

In the last two budgets, Canadians felt their finance minister for once had concentrated on them instead of on the big corporations, always crying for tax relief.

And all the Canadian budget measures are of great interest to Americans who are experiencing President Ford's sudden and draconian measures of tax cuts and cash grants, but for a short-term period.

For the hard-pressed consumer in Canada, the most innovative measure by far has been the "indexing" as economists put it, of low income salaries that is those less than about $4,000 annually.

Against current sophisticated budgeting in Canada which also includes reduction of several discriminatory sales taxes, the $1,000 deductions up to $10,000 against new housing purchases, the U.S. presidential give-aways like the $80 yearly cash payments to urban and rural poor, sound like gimmickry in Canada.

This is because many federal and provincial welfare, unemployment, and our euphemestically called "winter works" projects for the lean and cold winter months, are traditional state commitments to the economy in good times and bad.

Perhaps the chief reason the Canadians are ahead with better budgetary and over-all better economic planning, is the lack of ideological or political bias in Canada's fraternity of corporate and government economists.

In the United States, an economist is first identified politically as a "conservative" or "liberal," the label suggesting which way he is likely to move on economic policy.

The response of the Canadian economist to a question asking him for his personal politics is, "what has that to do with economic policy?"

This tradition is paying off in the present record inflation in those Canadian budgets which have given the Canadian man-in-the-street more money to play with as purchasing power dwindles.

It also helps psychologically that public discussion in Canada is still about the "economic crisis" not as in America about "when the recesson might become a depression."

Canadians borrow from American big-time salesmanship palaver and still like to "think positive."

Australia 'Redy' For Switch

From
The Christian Science Monitor

"Eny more apels? sed Dick. "I alredy ate them," sed Jane.

Is the English language redy for enything like this?

yes, say members of the Australian Teaching Federation who recently approved the first step in a program of spelling reform.

The federation hopes to convince school systems throughout Australia to teach children a more phonetic way of spelling English. The first step is to replace the sound "eh," however it is spelled, with the single letter "e." Said becomes sed, any changes to eny, etc.

Later changes to be submitted to the federation for approval will simplify the spelling of other sounds.

Extradition Denied

War Criminals Hunters Suffer Setback

Hamilton Spectator

The Bolivian Supreme Court's decision to refuse the extradition of wartime Nazi secret policeman Klaus Altmann was a setback to the worldwide hunt for war criminals.

But the pursuit of the creatures Adolf Hitler's monstrous regime inflicted on humanity is not likely to be stopped while there is any suspicion that any of the Nazi hatchetmen remain alive and free.

Altmann, living in Bolivia under the name Klaus Barbie, represents one case among thousands. An SS commander whose work in German-occupied France earned him the title, "Butcher of Lyon," Altmann admitted his identity when German manhunters tracked him down in Bolivia. But the court ruled that since France had no extradition treaty with that South American state, Altmann could stay.

Although Hitler's Reich went down in flames almost 30 years ago, World War Two is still being fought on personal human terms in the war criminal hunts.

Except for such celebrated monsters as Martin Bormann and Adolf Eichmann, names of the war criminals are little known.

Ever since the Nuremburg trials of Hitler's highest henchmen and the plethora of war criminal sentences immediately after, news stories about hunts for Nazis in South American jungles and about ex-Gestapo murderers and torturers caught living under assumed names in Europe have hit the world steadily, if not frequently.

To a new generation, the names are meaningless, the terrible deeds are history. Even those who lived in times of Nazi power have forgotten all but a few of the names of hunted Hiterites. Adolf Eichmann, caught, tried and executed by the Israelis. Martin Bormann, Hitler's right hand man now officially listed as dead by the Bonn government. But few others.

With relatively few exceptions, Nazis at the decision-making levels during the war were in their 30s, 40s or older. Most war criminals who have survived and evaded justice now are 60 or more. Many Nazis still being sought may have been in their graves for years.

It's doubtful if any tangible good is to be achieved in the continuing manhunts. As some people asked at the time of the Nuremburg trials, is it justice or is it revenge? Or is it the atavistic continuation of a process the Nazis set in motion?

The pursuit of geriatric fugitives has become more symbolic than practical in civilization's reaction to a time of darkest barbarism. Dragging a few more elderly war criminals before the courts cannot further discredit Nazidom for the verdict passed upon it can be neither intensified nor mitigated.

But the hunting will go on until time puts an end to it. The forces that drive the hunters are too powerful to stop.

A committee of aldermen has been formed to investigate the possibility of installing parking meters in Belleville.

The local Executive Board of the Red Cross at Bancroft met this week to discuss arrangements for the erection of a new proposed $65,000, 20 — bed Red Cross hospital in Bancroft in the near future.

Major Bond, Supt of the C.N.R. District of Montreal and Mr. E.R. Bailey, Supt of Motive Power, were in Belleville yesterday partly to see the new buildings here, housing the famous 6000 engines and to encourage the boys here in bowling. The Major likes to see C.N. employees engaged in sports and is arranging inter-city bowling matches.

Marine Oil Pollution Problem Reaching Epidemic Proportion

The Christian Science Monitor

Wanted: prevention of more episodes like the following.

August, 1974 — 75 miles of Chilean shoreline blackened by 1.8 million gallons of oil spilled from the tanker Metula.

October, 1974 — almost 650,000 gallons leak from the Universe Leader into Ireland's Bantry Bay, spreading along 22 miles of coastline dotted with fishing villages and glorious views. (Another 115,000 gallons leaked into the bay just last week.)

January, 1975 — 844,000 gallons pour from grounded tanker Showa Maru into the Malacca Strait, creating a 10-mile oil slick south of Singapore.

And these are only among the most recent oil - pollution calamities since the Torrey Canyon's spill off England in 1967 and the Keo's off Massachusetts in 1969. Apart from their immediate dangers and economic losses, they involve what studies have shown to be an unexpectedly long-term blighting of marine life.

For North Americans the need for preventive measures becomes more urgent now that the Alaskan pipeline is going ahead despite warnings about the danger of oil spills along the western coastlines where tankers will carry the oil on the last leg of its journey to the United States.

Some of the measures immediately being suggested include regulation by coastal states of tanker travel in waters such as the Malacca Strait, where super-tankers, with their huge under-water surfaces, face particular hazards.

But more general international regulation, standards, and safety practices are required. Consideration of these should be a first order of business when the International Conference on the Law of the Sea reconvenes in March.

Besides tightening the rules, and trying to reduce the margin for human error which has caused some of the spills, concerned parties need to take technical and economic steps. In some areas seabeds need to be recharted in the light of supertanker dimensions. Compensation needs to be made to victims for long-term as well as immediate losses. Clean-up measures, such as those pursued with considerable speed and success by Singapore authorities, must be maintained and improved. The seas are too valuable to let the list of oil leaks grow.

Spending Travellers Should Watch Calendar

Watertown Times

If you contemplate travelling abroad during 1975, better plan on taking sufficient cash, travellers' checks or credit cards. The banks may be closed on the day or days you need money.

The banks in Malaysia will be closed on 42 days during the coming year. And Switzerland and the Republic of China are not far behind, their offices unopened on 35 days, followed by Australia, 32 days; Honduras, 28 days; Spain and Andorra, 26, and Ecuador, 23.

This assortment of information is contained in the 1975 issue of a 96-page booklet called "Bank and Public Holidays," published by the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

However, it won't be as difficult to transact business in some of the other nations. Algeria observes only nine bank holidays; India, eight; Republic of Cameroun, seven; Mali and Czechoslovakia, six; Bulgaria and Albania, five; and Saudi Arabia, just two.

And, in some of those countries with the most bank holidays, the closing period may cover two or three days.

Bills May be Paid by Push of Button

Peterborough Examiner

A committee of the federal government has gone to work to design an electric alternative to the cheque book.

A computerized connection between banks and businesses seems to be the design in the minds of Finance Minister John Turner and Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier, who started the committee.

For example, if the hydro or telephone bill falls due, somewhere a button is pushed and the invisible, faceless money is smoothly transferred from the private account to the creditor.

This step towards a cashless society is proposed because, according to the ministers, there is too much paperwork involved in cheques. Bankers say they're choking on the tons of paper circulating around in commerce, and sooner or later some sort of computerization will be necessary.

This is a good reason for tying our bank accounts to one big, buzzing, insidious system? Hardly.

The ramifications are many, and not attractive. Simplification of business transactions is fine, but there's more to this simplification than pushing a button.

Consider the problem of the individual's privacy; the psychological implications of the approaching cashless society, where the cash or pay cheque is never seen; reflect on the many cases of haywire computers making crazy billing mistakes.

There have not been enough reasons given for this move. This and similar attempts to centralize information about the residents of Canada, or attempts to keep tabs on personal affairs must be resisted.

Not only to protect individual rights, but to save governments the effort of trying to resist obvious temptations.

No Crystal Ball Needed

Drop in Short-term Interest Means Easier Money

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Let others gaze into crystal balls or tea leaves to divine the future—for investment dealers it is all there in the movement of interest rates on short-term paper.

Commercial credit instruments (borrowings that corporations must repay in anything from a day to a year) are currently bearing interest of only 7.75 per cent, down sharply from the range of between 8.75 and 10 per cent just a month ago.

To a money-market dealer, this drop in short-term interest rates means that economic activity is slowing down, that borrowers' applications for credit will be tapering off, and that the monetary authorities in Ottawa are promoting "easy money" in an attempt to revive the economy.

In more specific terms, a reading of the current money market foretells a drop in the chartered banks' prime lending rate (the interest charged on loans to the best corporate borrowers) from the current 10.5 per cent to an even 10 per cent by mid-February—with two or three similar reductions in the offing.

The trend is clearly favorable for anyone who has to borrow, whether to operate a business or to buy a car, and unfavorable for investors seeking income.

The impact of the relatively steep decline in borrowing costs has been somewhat muted because demand for loans is always light during the first two months of the year—after the frantic activity of the December retail scene.

Meanwhile, Ottawa's new easy-money policy has led to a huge jump in domestic money supply, which rose at an annual rate of 41 per cent during the last week of 1974 and the first week of 1975.

The result is that the banking system is in a very strong cash position—especially since the recent reduction in the amount of secondary reserves that they are required to hold.

This means that would-be borrowers have some unaccustomed clout at the bank. Those who are not committed to a particular bank are in a good position today to shop around for the lowest borrowing cost.

What's behind the recent trend to cheaper money?

Primarily, it's the U.S. recession.

Economic activity in the United States last year was down 2.2 per cent from 1973. That made 1974 the worst year for the U.S. economy since 1946.

So President Gerald Ford, who had come to the White House in August vowing to check inflation, has in January reversed himself.

In his new fight against recession, President Ford has proposed big tax cuts and credits for individuals and businesses, as well as a package of energy-conservation proposals.

Net impact of the two would be to produce federal-budget deficits as high as $50-billion over the next two fiscal years—and that spells inflation like mother used to make.

As for Canada, the Ford proposals would reinforce the pump-priming, inflationary approach taken by Finance Minister John Turner in his Nov. 18 budget.

But if the Ford proposals are blocked in Congress (or, even if enacted, fail to end the American recession), then the U.S. troubles would almost surely be duplicated here—in spades.

More Data Sought For Bus Service

TRENTON — A need for more information might mean a four-week delay before town council considers whether to ask for a provincial study to determine the feasibility of a bus service in Trenton.

More background information that now is available is needed before council can make any decision, town clerk administrator Aubrey Sharp said last week.

He said, "There are a lot of things that we want to bring before council."

Prior to any council decision, the town must know the cost of sheds to house buses, salaries of maintenance staff and drivers and the price tag of the buses.

Any deficits a bus service would run up, and the town's share of such losses must also be known.

A study must also survey the need for a bus system in Trenton, he said.

Mr. Sharp added that it "should be able to provide us with the number of people that would use the service.'

Two options are open to council in deciding the form the study will take.

An outside consulting firm could be called in. Should this be the course decided upon, the provincial transportation ministry would pay 75 per cent of study costs.

On the other hand, council might decide on an in-house study. A committee of Trenton residents would be formed.

Such a committee, backed by technical staff from the provincial government would not be backed financially by the province. Any costs, such as the printing and circulating of questionaires to Trenton homes, would be paid by the town.

Either way, the study will take four to five months to complete.

If will present to council cost estimates for different bus services — either fixed route or dial-a-bus. Projected deficits for the alternate systems will be included in the study results.

In establishing a bus service, Trenton would recieve a minimum of 75 per cent of the inital capital costs. Subsequently, additional capital costs would be offset by a 75-per-cent grant to a maximum of an esimated $30,000 ($2 per capita).

The province and the town would split evenly the operating deficit of the bus services.

Bursaries Suggested

burg Township farmer Seymour Hamilton says Prince Edward County offers no bursaries to secondary school graduates planning to continue their education at agricultural colleges.

He told the annual meeting of the Prince Edward County Milk Committee recently week that "it wouldn't hurt to promote education a little further."

The committee agreed and voted to contribute a $50,00 bursary to assist a student planning to attend agricultural college.

Mr. Hamilton in an interview after the meeting said he did not feel the bursary should be awarded solely on the basis of marks. Need also should be a factor, he said.

Evans Re-elected

WELLINGTON — Athol Township farmer Harry Evans has been re-elected chairman of the Prince Edward County Milk Committee for 1975.

He was returned to office by acclamation during the committee's annual meeting recently.

Elected as director were Mr. Evans, Lewis Wight as vice-chairman Kenneth Wright as secretary-treasurer and Ben Prinzen, Harold Bartman, Robert Carson, Gary Fox, Ross Foster, George Emlaw, Harry Topp, Donald Hicks and James Alexander.

Stirling Coach Dead at 27

STIRLING — Brian Finnigan, coach of the Canadian 'C' Champions (1969-70) Stirling Senior Girls Hockey Team died Sunday in hospital.

Mr. Finnigan, 27, had Hodgkin's disease, a rare form of cancer which affects the lymphatic system. He stopped coaching the hockey team two years ago, but resumed the activity for this season. Last week he became ill and was taken to Kingston General Hospital where he died at 5.30 a.m. Sunday of pneumonia.

Prior to discovering his illness, Mr. Finnigan had coached the Stirling team for five years. He was respected as a coach and is credited for the existence of the team. Last summer he was manager of a ball team, the Madoc Purina-ettes, which won the local Belleville Yardmen's League.

Mr. Finnigan had his own landscaping business. He had played hockey as a youngster in Toronto and Ajax. The two years he took off coaching were spent in Ajax.

Mr. Finnigan is survived by his fiance, Sharon Lessard, of Stirling, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Finnigan, RR 3 Frankford, a sister, Sister Patricia with the Felician Sisters, Mississauga, Ont., and two brothers, Bill, of Oshawa, and Michael, of Kamloops, B.C.

He is resting at the Hogle Funeral Home, 87 James St., Stirling. Time of funeral is 11 a.m. Wednesday, January 29. Interment St. James the Minor Cemetery, Stirling.

Fencing Damaged

Injured was Murray Hicks, 27, of Milford.

Police said the car missed a curve, left the road and struck two fences before entering the ditch. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $700 and damage to the fences at $100. The accident occurred at 1:45 a.m. Sunday.

Two Girls Injured

ROSSMORE — Two women were admitted to Belleville General Hospital Sunday morning after the car in which they were passengers went out of control on Highway 14 about one and a half miles south of the Bay Bridge.

Injured were Wanda Lamoureux, 18, of Trenton who received cuts and bruises and Bonnie Joy, 17, of Demorestville. Both were passengers in a car driven by Walter Wrightman, 20, of Trenton.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $200.

Edifice Wrecks Haven For County Collectors

PICTON — Antiques, leaded glass, books and "paraphermalia" are displayed for winter browsing at Edifice Wrecks near Picton on Highway 33.

Proprietor David Granatstein, who opened the shop in May, 1974, after moving to Prince Edward from Toronto, says the county has many collectors.

The collectables they buy often are "just an interesting little item people haven't seen for a long time."

Mr. Granastein recently reopened Edifice Wrecks on weekends to accommodate customers who enjoy expand-shop," observes.

"I buy only the things I like — mostly Canadian. Basically, Its may taste that's in the shop," ovserves.

He notes it has become increasingly difficult to stock his shop because there are few winter auctions where he can buy items to replace those he has sold. Also, many of the antiques found in attics and at country sales, have been purchased.

Still, Edifice Wrecks offers the buyer a wide variety of unusual and interesting stock.

There are furniture pieces, old china, bottles, sealers, books, pictures and picture frames, clocks, crocks and sleigh bells.

"If something is in limited supply collect it," says Mr. Granatstein, indicating a display of glass insulators.

In addition to such common collectables as these the shop features unusual items such as leaded glass lamps and mirrors made by the proprietor.

There is also a snuff box collection and a child's miniature cap pistol, an old land deed and oil lamps.

Edifice Wrecks is more than just an antique shop. It is a gracious brick country house built about 125 years ago, just west of Picton on the Bloomfield Road. Mr. Granatstein displays his antiques in two rooms at the rear of his home. A fire is lighted in a large brick fireplace for weekend visitors who stop to browse.

Mr. Granatstein noted many Prince Edward area residents as well as summer visitors to the county call at the shop.

To accommocate their patronage the shop is opened Saturday and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Public Speaking Popular With Elementary Students

TRENTON — Three Dufferin Elementary School students made a clean sweep of the top awards at the Canadian Legion, Branch 110, public speaking contest for Grades 1 to 3 here Friday.

The contest, at this grade level is an innovation by the Trenton Legion branch.

Special events chairman Louis Knack says interest by elementary school teachers in 1974 prompted the creation of the lower levels this year.

The Legion runs a public speaking contest annually for children from Grades 4 to 13.

Winning the lower grade contest Friday was Grade 3 student Lydia Lo, who explained traditions behind the Chinese New Year.

Second place went to Mary-Jane McDowell. Mary-Jane spoke about baby animals while third-place winner Brian Poste discussed squirrels.

In all, 14 students competed Friday. Their efforts were judged by the Bay of Quinte Toastmasters Club.

Next Friday, Grade 4-6 students will compete. The following week, Feb. 7, students from Trenton area schools from Grades 7-13 will lay their thoughts before judges.

The Trenton Legion branch will act as host to the District F finals Feb. 23.

At that time, says Mr. Knack, 20 students, in four grade categories and from five District F zones will be judged. Four will go on to the provincial finals.

Arena Condition Prompts Meeting

STIRLING — An emergency meeting of parents has been called by the executive of the Stirling Minor Hockey Association for Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Stirling community hall on Front St.

Cecil Solmes, SMHA secretary, said Sunday, "The purpose of the meeting is the seriousness of the situation regarding a new arena and about raising funds for it."

Parents of the league players live in Thurlow, Huntington, Rawdon, Sidney and Stirling. They will be contacted personally by coaches and managers, said Mr. Solmes.

Also on the agenda might be what will happen if the ice-making unit at the Stirling arena is non-operational. It has broken down, and experts are examining it today to see whether it is operable or will be shut down for some time for repairs to be carried out.

Quinte Cuisine

Catharine Roulet met husband Roger in her native Wales where they were both stationed at a small base. They came to Canada — Roger's home — and set up housekeeping in Belleville. Her Welsh Cakes are a specialty from South Wales where recipes are handed down from mothers to daughters. Mrs. Roulet guesses that these Welsh Cakes are the sort of cake King Alfred allowed to burn — for which he was roundly scolded. The Roulets have three children: Geoffrey, Nigel and Jill.

Welsh Cakes

3 cups unsifted all purpose flour
1½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp baking soda
one tsp. salt
one cup white sugar
one tsp. ground nutmeg
¼ tsp. ground mace
one tsp. cinnamon
one cup margarine, butter or shortening
one cup mixed currants and seedless raisins.
two eggs, beaten
small amount of milk

Sift dry ingredients together in a bowl; cut in the fat finely until its like bread crumbs. Add fruit and two eggs. Work enough milk in to make into a stiff dough. Roll out (half at a time is best) to about ¼ inch thisknes on a floured board. Cut into rounds about two inches across. Bake on a heated griddle (called a bakestone in Wales and heated over an open fire) for three to four minute on each side until golden brown. Lower heat if necessary to be sure they cook through thoroughly. Serve hot or cold with or without butter. These cakes keep well or half the dough can be frozen and baked later.

Mr. and Mrs. William Doxtator

Golden Anniversary

A surprise celebration was recently held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William Doxtator of 45 Benjamin Street, to mark the 50th anniversary of their wedding. The occasion took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Jeffrey of RR 1, Carrying Place, daughter and son-in-law of the Doxtators.

The couple was married January 14, 1925 at the home of the groom's parents at Point Anne.

They have three children and seven grandchildren, all present at the golden wedding celebration. Their children are Mrs. Gregory (Betty) Kingston of Don Mills, Mrs. Maurice (Glenda) Jeffrey and Douglas Doxtator of RR 4, Belleville.

During the afternoon, flowers, cards and gifts were received by the celebrating couple from the friends and relatives present. Best wishes were also received from Governor-General and Madame Jules Leger, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Jack Ellis, MP, Richard Potter, MPP, and Mayor Robin Jeffrey.

A plaque and telegram from Premier William Davis on behalf of the Province was also received.

The Doxtators continue to enjoy the hobbies they've developed through the years together, particularly attending harness racing.

Ann Landers

This Is the Other Side of the Story

Dear Ann: I feel that you are unduly harsh in your criticism of children who, for one reason or another, have severed themselves from their parents. I hope you will listen to what some of us are saying. We are not warped by bitterness and hate. We attempted to make our parents feel wanted and loved but met up with a wall of solid resistance.

My husband and I provided a home for my mother, within our own home. Not just a room, but an apartment which we built complete with kitchen. We let her ruin our children with candy and cake, countermanding our instructions, undermining our attempts at discipline. We did her errands and walked the last mile. It wasn't sufficient. She wallowed in self-pity and accused us of not "doing enough."

I was finally driven into therapy where I learned that she blamed first my father, then others for all her unhappiness. Now it is my turn to carry the guilt and I refuse.

When a parent threatens your mental health, the relationship with your children, and you have exhausted every avenue, there is nothing to do but call it quits.—One Who Tried

Dear One: There are always two sides to every story, and I am pleased to print the other side. Thank you for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to reply to Alone A Lot—the woman who wanted to know if bisexuality is grounds for divorce. Tell her yes, it is. I obtained a divorce a year ago from a bisexual, and it is considered the same as adultery.

Most homosexuals stay to their own kind which, is, of course, what they ought to do. The ones who are ashamed of what they are often try to pass themselves off as heterosexuals by sneaking around with their gay friends at private parties or out-of-the-way places, and managing to escort some respectable woman to social functions.

When I was dating D. I had no idea what he really was. Our sex life was wonderful. He had me completely fooled. In fact he used to make some very unkind remarks about my hairdresser who was overtly gay.

Within three months of our marriage I too, was alone a lot.

The truth finally came out when D. came to me and said he couldn't go on living with me because he missed his boyfriend so much it was driving him crazy.

Please, Ann, print this letter for homosexuals who think they can lead a double life. It's a rotten thing to do to a woman.—Used In Appleton

Dear U: Here's your letter and I hope it helps. I agree—it is a rotten thing to do to a woman.

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please allow me to say a few words to the rude people of this world who feel they should call it to a thin person's attention that he needs to gain a little realize how difficult it is.

It seems whenever I sit down to a meal someone urges me to "eat more—you need it." These same people wouldn't dream of saying to a heavy person, "Eat less, you're too fat—and skip the dessert."

Our metabolism and lack of fat cells cause extra calories to be burned up as extra energy, so the additional amount we eat really doesn't stick to our ribs. Actually, we thinnies are a lot healthier than the fatties, so please tell them to shut up and mind their own weight and forget about ours. We are plenty frustrated as it is.—Skinny's Lib

Dear Lib: You told 'em, and in a way I never could since I am not one of your number. Thanks for writing.

Donates Bicycles

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — A young Belgian visited Malaysia last year and decided that some Malaysian children had to walk too far to school. Rudy Dekkers, 21, went home and collected $3,500 from school children in his own country. As a result, the Belgian Embassy recently presented 35 bicycles to Malaysian children and expects to receive 25 more to give away.

Books By And About Women

GLORY AND THE LIGHTNING by Taylor Caldwell.

This latest novel by Taylor Caldwell is set in ancient Persia and Greece; the central figure of the story is Aspasia, the beautiful and intelligent courtesan who eventually became the companion of Pericles, ruler of Athens.

It is the story of an extraordinary woman, trained since childhood in the arts of beauty and seduction, who finds herself increasingly in rebellion against the helpless position of women in ancient society.

Passionate, restless, and fiercely independent, Aspasia is compelled to pursue her destiny wherever it may lead; from the narrow confines of a school for high-class courtesans, into the household of a despotic Persian ruler, and finally to Athens at the height of its glory.

The author has written a thought-provoking novel of the ancient world, seen through a woman's eyes. We find in the life of Aspasia a model for the timeless conflicts of all women.

This book is available in the Corby Library.

Is This New Math?

OTTAWA (CP) — Pocket-size electronic calculators, miniature adding machines, are sprouting everywhere, even in the pockets of school children, and school teachers are undecided what to do about them.

In the national capital, teachers disagree on when a student is ready to use them. And what will they do to the teaching of old-fashioned arithmetic or new mathematics?

The calculators can easily provide totals to long lists of numbers and, depending on complexity, can compute logarithmic problems at the touch of a finger.

They can end the drudgery of practising multiplication and division tables and virtually eliminate the third of the three Rs of learning—reading writing and 'rithmetic.

The problem for teachers is whether such mechanical aids should be allowed into the classroom, especially during exams.

A survey of elementary and high school teachers here revealed that in many schools the question has not even been raised yet. Among those who have considered the problem there is no consensus.

"Children need to practise basic computation skills up to Grade 8," said Donald Halley, principal of Vincent Massey public school.

"A person has to be able to approximate the answer he expects from the machine, otherwise he wouldn't know when he had pressed the wrong button, because he wouldn't know how to recognize when the machine was giving an absurd answer."

Jim Craig, principal of Fielding Drive public school, said a child should have to take a basic-skills test before being allowed to use a calculator in the classroom.

At some elementary schools students are introduced to such aids as the slide rule and computer in Grades 7 and 8, but so far no pocket calculators have been seen.

Teachers agreed that calculators have no place where computation skills are being tested. They differed, however, on the question of allowing them during exams.

"A calculator is an unfair advantage on an exam with a time limits," said Bob Green of Sir Wilfrid Laurier high school.

'Bitching after the Fact'

OTTAWA (CP) — Criticism of government buttons promoting International Women's Year has prompted Prime Minister Trudeau into an observation that is unlikely to sit well with opponents of sexism.

"That's the trouble with ladies, they bitch after the fact," he told reporters after being questioned about criticism by two women Liberals over the red and white "Why not!" buttons.

Mr. Trudeau is one of many MPs who have worn one of the lapel buttons bearing a message that Simma Holt (L — Vancouver Kingsway) and Iona Campagnolo (L—Skeena) have complained is open to interpretation.

Questioned by reporters about the criticism, the prime minister asked an aide why she had not stopped approval of the button. It was after hearing that her investigation came too late to stop approval that Mr. Trudeau made his comment about "the trouble with ladies."

Mrs. Holt said earlier this week that the "Why not!" slogan is "bloody degrading" and Mrs. Campagnolo said it has a sexual connotation.

Day Care Council Reports

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario advisory council on day care says proposed government increases in child-staff ratios in licensed day-care centres likely would result in only "minimal" savings to the province.

The first report of the 11-member council, released Friday, says savings announced last June by Margaret Birch, provincial secretary for social development, "are difficult to substantiate."

Mrs. Birch's announcement that the government intended to double allowable ratios for some age groups and substantially increase them for others sparked criticism from opposition members and day-care groups.

The government-appointed council, headed by Anne Barstow, board president of the Metropolitan Toronto social planning council, says increased ratios might not result in savings to parents because there is no guarantee savings from reduced staff costs would be passed on in reduced fees.

Staff reductions would occur only in large centres with sufficient children in each age group "to be able to effect a ratio where one less staff member would be required."

"These changed ratios would not mean more children served . . . since the number of children in any program is controlled by the physical setting and capacity for which the program is licensed."

Mrs. Birch had said she expected up to 50 per cent more children would receive day care in some centres without increases in staff costs.

The report says no "satisfactory research" is known on how children are affected by various child-staff ratios. The council favored instead a formula approach for determining levels in each centre.

Such a formula would consider purposes of the program, number and ages of children served, number of "contact hours" needed for each child, and facilities of the centre.

Meantime, the council recommends that the government hold the line on existing ratios until "alternative methods of establishing staff complements can be more fully explored."

The council says it intends to continue investigation into ratios, private home day care, infant care, staff training and salaries and allocation of capital funds, and plans a series of public meetings in various regions.

Among 10 added recommendations in a separate report on fire and safety regulations, the council suggests adding to the Day Nurseries Act regulations which would require telephones in all centres and allow fire authorities to approve centres above the third storey of a building.

New Pill Safer, Few Side Effects

WINNIPEG (CP) — Recent surveys show that a new version of the oral contraceptive pill is safer to use and completely effective, Dr. Earl Plunkett of London, Ont., said Friday at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons annual meeting.

The new pill, which has an estrogen dosage of 30 micrograms compared with 50 migrograms for the more traditional preparations, is just as effective and apparently free from many adverse side effects, Dr. Plunkett said in an interview.

Use of oral contraceptives can lead to complications such as depression and weight gain in some women.

The new pill, put on sale by several pharmaceutical firms within the last eight months also contains a new synthetic progestin known as dl-norgestrol. This can apparently lower the cholesterol or fatty acid levels in the blood.

The new pill's only apparent side-effect is mid-cycle bleeding in between 10 and 15 per cent of the women taking it during the first three months, said Dr. Plunkett, an obstetrics professor at University of Western Ontario.

The findings on the new pill's effectiveness are based on a study of 60 women in Britain and 23 more in Canada.

Lower cholesterol levels were found in the British study. Patients with pre-medication counts of 170 milligrams per 100 millilitres used to get cholesterol elevatons to 195 on the older pills, but the levels dropped to as little as 150 once the new preparation was used.

Dr. Plunkett said progestin could theoretically be used to lower cholesterol levels in men.

He also said there has been a noticeable return to use of oral contraceptives, following several years during which skepticism about side-effects led to a decline in their use.

Moreover, doctors no longer caution about oral contraceptives or advise women to discontinue the medication periodically.

The pill may be entering a new era of further refinement, said Dr. Plunkett.

"It is apparently possible by minor adjustments to the molecule of the progestin . . . to alter its effects considerably, and it may be possible to find even better combinations."

The idea is to disturb the normal function of the body as little as possible, and, Dr. Plunkett said, "we seem to be getting close to the answer now."

Doris Clark

Widow Should Keep Active

Dear Doris: I am 58 years old and lost my husband two years ago. Our family are all married and living in Alberta - wonderful kids and I love them dearly, but though they have each asked me to come and live with them, I know it wouldn't work out. Seems you lose your identity once you give up your home and your own life.

I was a school teacher (in fact I still substitute teach and enjoy it) and last year I took a children's literature course, which I worked hard at and enjoyed.

I would like to know more about the International People's College - the cost for three months, etc.

Retired Teacher.

Dear Teacher: You've got the secret. you are a going concern, and yet you have tapered off to the point that your system can manage well. You can get the rest you need. The recreation and fun that can keep life exciting.

The International People's College in Denmark would be the richer for a visit from you - and the benefit would be mutual. I am sending you details as to where to write for the things you need to know.

Dear Doris: Like "Useless" I've been through countless "I'm O.K. — You're stupid" drinking bouts. I finally ended up at an Al-Anon meeting and have discovered there are poeple who have peace despite such drinking spouses because of their own understanding of the problems involved.

Since that first meeting things haven't been the same. Doris, please tell these people about Al-Anon and Al-Ateen for any drinking problems.

A column like yours is a power for good.

Twelve Weary Tears.

Dear Twelve: Al-Anon and Al-Ateen are offshoots of A.A., but do a different job. Relatives, usually wives, belong to Al-Anon, and attend meetings where there is frank talk about what worries them most — their alcoholic husbands.

They get very clear ideas, here, about the disease called alcoholism; they learn how to cope with it — and one way not to cope is to keep trying to cover up for the victim.

The drinker's relative learns how to live her own life; how to approach some semblance of peace of mind.

I would certainly urge such persons to find and attend an Al-Anon group. They can be traced through a listing of A.A. in the telephone book.

(Ask Doris, in care of this newspaper, for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Freight Rates Case In Mixup

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federal Court of Appeal overturned Saturday a Canadian transport commission ruling postponing part of a recent rail freight-rate increase for 60 days.

But lawyers for the railways and some provincial governments were puzzled later about whether the railways can immediately raise general commodity freight rates.

The court ruled unanimously that the commission exceeded its authority in postponing half a 25-per-cent rate increase to March 1 from Jan. 1.

But three of the five judges recommended that the commission reconsider the freight-rate case that led to the commission's Dec. 31 ruling.

Restore Gas

MONTREAL (CP) — Gas service to 15,000 customers in the city's west end was restored early Sunday after 200 repairmen were flown in from Toronto and Ottawa following a refusal by Montreal crews to work overtime.

A spokesman for Gaz Metropolitain Inc. said a main valve which regulated the flow of gas to several west-end districts was deliberately turned off Friday.

Probe Asked

TORONTO (CP) — The Psychiatric Hospital Patients Welfare Association says it has asked Ontario Health Minister Frank Miller for an investigation into boarding-house conditions for patients discharged from Ontario psychiatric hospitals.

The homes should be controlled and supervised by the government, the association said in a news release Saturday.

Misleading

HAILEYBURY, Ont. (CP) — The president of Temiskaming Hospitals Corp. said Friday a brief presented by a citizens' committee to New Liskeard council is misleading.

President John McKay-Clements said that there is no plan to depreciate services and staff at the New Liskeard unit of Temiskaming hospitals. The unit will not be closed until a new hospital replaces the New Liskeard and Haileybury units, he said.

Need Definition

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Don Collins, Sudbury regional chairman, has asked the federal government to define its air transport policy.

In a litter to Prime Minister Trudeau, Mr. Collins said such definition was needed, especially in light of the federal air transport committee's refusal to grant Nordair a licence to operate between Thunder Bay, Ont., and Montreal with stops in Sudbury and Ottawa.

TORONTO (C) — John Robarts, former Ontario premier, says that an increasing amount of participation in community citizens' groups has resulted "in better government in most cases."

In an off-the-cuff speech Saturday at a conference of the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs, Mr. Robarts said the two sides often have disagreed but "I think it is fair to say that this movement has affected practically every aspect of local government in Metro."

Most Draft Evaders Facing No Charges

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg-based organization established to advise draft evaders and deserters from the United States says thousands of draft evaders now can return to the United States without fear of arrest or prosecution.

In an news release, the War Resistor Information Program (WRIP) said Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts received from the U.S. justice department Friday a complete and up-to-date list of all draft evaders under indictment or investigation.

Persons not on the list will not be prosecuted if they return to the U.S., while many of those on the list may be able to get their charges dropped. WRIP Program Co-ordinator Tim Maloney said WRIP was able to provide advice on this matter.

In preparing the list, the justice department had asked its U.S. district attorneys to review all outstanding draft evasion cases and report on their status.

The review reaffirmed that more than nine out of 10 men who evaded the draft no longer have charges. It also prompted the dismissal of 1,500 indictments.

Senator Kennedy has passed the list on to four organizations—WRIP, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Clemency Information Centre, and the United Church of Christ.

WOMEN GRADUATES DON'T EARN AS MUCH AS MEN GRADUATES.

WHY NOT?

Canada has one of the finest educational systems in the world. But many Canadian employers unjustifiably underpay some very well-educated graduates of that system. Women.

A 24-year-old male, leaving university with a degree, earns on the average 19 per cent more in his first job than a woman of the same age with the same degree. A male high-school graduate can expect an average 34.2 per cent more than the equivalent female graduate. It just isn't right.

It just isn't right, either, that long before graduation, some schools still insist on channelling girls into home economics classes and boys into industrial arts.

Some girls make excellent mechanics and engineers. Some boys make excellent designers and chefs. Why curb their natural talents?

There is no logical reason why we should. Equal educational opportunities are guaranteed us under law, but there are prejudices and precedents. Society expects women to cook and sew because it expects them to get married one day. Don't men get married too? Maybe they should learn household skills as well.

When it comes to employment, the same kind of archaic thinking brings us less pay and recognition. Certainly women get married, but many keep on working. Of some three million women working in Canada today, more than 50 per cent are married. Why are they being paid less than their husbands? Because they are married? How about a single working woman? It costs her as much to live as a single working man. So why is she also being forced to live on less? Particularly when 50.0 per cent of all Canadian women in the labour force, having completed their high-school education, have gone on to take post-secondary training, compared to 39.3 per cent of the men. So no one can use the excuse that working women are less qualified.

The entire situation must change. But if it is to change, we have to start thinking of ourselves as equals. And demanding that others do, too.

We have to teach our children to think differently. Because they are the next generation of educators and homemakers, employers and employees. We must break down the barriers of prejudice for ourselves and remove them entirely for our children.

Goalie's Big Save Starts Barrie Co-ops on the Way to Russia

OSHATA, Ont. (CP- — Doug Kean knew if he could make a big save early the opposition would be in for a tough assignment.

He did, they did, and Barrie Co-ops hung on Sunday for a 7-4 win over the defending champion Verdun Leafs in the title game for the Canadian midget hockey championship.

It also qualified the Co-ops for a five-game series of exhibitions in the Soviet Union sometime in March.

"I was just hoping to make a big save at the beginning. I figured the team would get the lift they needed if I played well early," said the 16-year-old goaltender.

He made a key save on Verdun's Pierre Sarrazin in the opening minutes of the final and the Ontario Hockey Association team immediately took charge of the game.

When it was over, Shane Pearsall had scored two goals with the others going to Robert Garner—with his team playing shorthanded for most of the last five minutes of the game, Donald Martin, Peter Trzecak, Kevin Beaupre and Robert Coulson.

Kevin Reeves, who saw almost as much ice time as the goaltenders, scored twice for Verdun. Linemate Jim Mann, whose booming shot from the right side had Kean wincing on several occasions, and defenceman Pierre Tremblay, also tallied for defending champion Quebec, represented for the second straight year by the Leafs.

"I don't know who the guy was but he really zipped one at me in the first period," said Kean of Sarrazin's drive from five feet away. What could have given the Quebecers a big lift simply turned into a great save and seemed to lift the Barrie players.

"You can bet it was a big one," said Barrie coach Lloyd Pearsall of the save. "It could have been the one that turned this thing around.'

Verdun coach Roland Dagenais is convinced it was the turning point, that and the several other missed scoring opportunities by the Leafs in the opening period that saw Barrie move into a 2-1 lead.

The free-wheeling Quebec club, though down two goals with five minutes remaining, was still in contention when Ontario's Bradley Tamblyn was sent off with a double minor after belting Verdun's Alain McElligott at the 15:33 mark.

The Leafs carried the play to Kean's goal crease for the closing minutes of the game but couldn't produce another score, which, Kean attributed to a couple of good saves and "close ones" that zipped past open corners.

Garner sealed the win by stealing the puck at the Barrie blueline and sped in alone on Pierre Cloutier, beating the Verdun goalie cleanly.

Garner, who was named winner of the tournament's most valuable player award at a dinner later in the day, said "nothing, but nothing" could surpass the championship.

The rangy centre had a goal and two assists against Verdun and won tournament scoring honors with 23 points, including 12 goals.

Dagenais said a combination of circumstances served to set back Verdun's hopes of repeating its 1974 championship year.

"They (Barrier) had just too much on the bench," he observed. Without the line of Reeves, Mann and Sarrazin on the ice, the Quebecers were obviously at a disadvantage against the physically larger Co-ops.

He sent out his 205-pound defenceman, Michel Phaneuf, in the final period in an effort to slow down the Barrie club, but Phaneuf plodded his way into a minor infraction and the Quebec club reverted to using its speed to offset the Co-ops' experience.

The Barrie club, with the exception of two or three players, has been together seven years and in the interim has won provincial AA championships in minor - bantam and minor - midget, and was provincial peewee finalists.

The Co-ops went through five series in the province to advance to the championship, winning 16 and tying one of 18 games. They gained revenge for their only setback, to Toronto Don Mills, in the decisive Ontario championship game at Sault Ste. Marie.

The Co-ops made some adjustments for the tournament, putting the high-scoring line of Garner, Pearsall and Coulson together for the first time this year.

"Normally they don't play together," said the coach. "I usually like to go with a more balanced effort, but I knew here we had to go for goals.

"All week we were keeping our eye on Oshawa. They had played that one extra game and I figured as long as we could keep up to them with our goals we'd be in fair shape for the last game."

It turned out to be just what the coach ordered Saturday when the two teams met in the final divisional game and Barrie prevailed 2-0 with a late-game goal and another into the empty net in the closing seconds.

Verdun also had its moments, running into unexpected challenges from South Ottawa Canadians and Charlottetown Golden Eagles before winning by 8-6 and 5-2 margins in its final two scheduled games.

Oshawa took the bronze medal prior to Sunday's championship game, romping 8-3 over Manitoba's Fort Garry-Fort Rouge Twins.

Pat McArthur's three third-period goals paced the host Parkway entry. Kevin Kelly, Mike Pidgeon, Charlie Neal, Bill Locke and Dave Allen adding one apiece. Peter Fargher scored two and assisted on the other Manitoba goal by John Marowitch.

Big M Gives Toros Bounce

FRANK MAHOVLICH
In Top Form

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Edmonton hockey fans got a look at Frank Mahovlich in vintage form Sunday night.

Mahovlich picked the sagging Toronto Toros up by their bootstraps, scoring a pair of goals and killing many of his team's seven penalties as the Toros dropped the hometown Oilers 7-5.

Mahovlich's goals, his 19th and 20th kept the Toros from sliding into a second-place tie with the Oilers in the Canadian Division. The win gave Toronto a four-point edge.

Jacques Plante, the 46-year-old veteran, was shaky in goal for Edmonton. Mahovlich's first goal trickled through his legs in the first period to tie the score 1-1.

Mahovlich fed Jacques for the fifth Toronto goal, then followed in less than two minutes by beating Plante cleanly from the slot with what proved to be the winning goal.

A crowd of 12,237 saw Pat Hickey and Jeff Jacques score two goals each for the Toros. Rusty Patenaude had two goals and Barry Long a goal and four assists for Edmonton.

In Sunday's other WHA games, Houston Aeros downed Winnipeg Jets 3-1, Vancouver Blazers defeated Chicago Cougars 5-3, Phoenix Roadrunners blanked Indianapolis Racers 6-0 and Minnesota Fighting Saints edged Baltimore Blades 2-1.

Cleveland Crusaders edged Baltimore 2-1, Quebec Nordiques downed Chicago 6-4 and San Diego Mariners New England Whalers 6-2.

The Howe family produced Houston's decisive goals, sending the Jets down to their fourth straight defeat.

Defenceman Marty broke a scoreless tie in the first minute of the second period and father Gordie took a pass from Marty and rifled a low shot past Winnipeg goalie Joe Daley later in the period to score the winning goal.

Winnioeg player-coach Bobby Hull, the league's leading goal scorer, hit the post twice in the first period and again in the second. Hull wasn't even credited with a shot on goal in the second period, despite being set up four times in the slot, as he whistled each of the shots wide.

Bryan Campbell scored two goals and linemate Larry Israelson added another as the Blazers handed the Cougars their fifth loss in a row.

A fight between Chicago's Rosaire Paiement and Vancover's Butch Deadmarsh turned into a bench-emptying brawl as referee Bob Kolari handed out 48 minutes in penalties.

Phoenix goaltender Gary Kurt turned aside 30 Indianapolis shots to earn his second shutout of the year. Jim Boyd had a pair of goals for Phoenix.

Don Tannahill set up the tying goal and scored the winner for the Saints as the Blades lost their second game in as many nights since being shifted from Detroit, where they were Michigan Stags.

In two seasons representing Los Angeles (the Sharks), Michigan and Baltimore, the club has won only once on the road.

"Listen, they're a better team than people give them credit for," said Minnesota goalie John Garrett, who stopped 34 of 35 Baltimore shots. "They're going to be much better now that this franchise mess has been settled."

The Crusaders play the Whalers at Hartford, Conn., in tonight s only game.

Littler Overcomes "Little Setback"

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gene Littler completed his comeback from " my little setback of a couple of years ago" Sunday by winning the $185,000 Bing Crosby National golf tournament.

His "little set-back" was cancer.

He underwent surgery that involved some irreparable damage to shoulder muscles. His career appeared to at an end. His life was in danger.

But Littler came back, working, exercising and finally playing again. He won the 1973 St. Louis Open, but admitted being fearful that the victory might have been a fluke.

"This is great," the usually poker-faced, 44-year-old Littler said with a broad smile. "This really proves that I'm back—that I can do it again.

He won the 34th edition of the tournament on the windswept crags and cliffs of the Pebble Beach Golf Links, one of the most demanding courses in the United States.

He won over a field that included Johnny Miller, who set records sweeping two Arizona tournaments to start the year.

"There's not a lot to say," mused Miller, who seemed relieved that the intense pressure of constant, daily national attention had been shifted from him.

"Everybody had become so 'Johnny Miller-winning-oriented' it was hard for me, getting behind, to try to play for position," he said.

"The start set the tone for the whole tournament. I didn't play very well the first two rounds and I didn't have the punch left to catch up.

"My game just needs rest. There's nothing wrong with my game. I have the technical part of it down pat. It's now 90 per cent inspiration, 10 per cent persperation."

Napanee's Finlay Tied for Second

Annand, Minogue Lead Pontiac

OTTAWA (CP) — Tracy Annand of Petawawa, Ont., and Danny Minogue of Montreal emerged Sunday as the leaders in the eastern division of Pontiac Cup ski competitions.

Miss Annand, 17, took both Saturday and Sunday single pole slalom events to earn 50 cup points in the first of four eastern events leading toward a national championship.

Minogue, 19, came back from a fourth place finish Saturday to a second Sunday for 28 cup points.

The two days of competition at Edelweiss, about 10 miles north of here in Quebec's Gatineau Park, were the first of the Easter series. The next eastern event will be held Feb. 22-23 at Rimouski, Qu. The western opener scheduled at Banff, Alta., was cancelled this weekend and the first western race now will be held at Kimberley, BC.., Feb. 19 and 20.

With her perfect record on both days, Miss Annand has a big lead on second-place Nancy Korte of Ottawa, who earned 28 points with a second Saturday and a fifth Sunday and Joanne Ness of Quebec City with 22 points on a fourth Saturday and a fifth Sunday.

Scott Finlay of Napanee, Ont., stands second in men's points with 25. He won the Saturday event, but was disqualified Sunday. He is tied with Melvin Schoicher of Montreal, the winner Sunday after a Saturday disqualification.

Michel Pratte of Rouyn-Noranda, Que., is next in line with 20 points on a fifth Saturday and a seventh Sunday.

Following are the other men's and women's points leaders following the two-day event:

Men—Remi Cloutier, Montreal, 18; Robin McLeish, Ottawa, 17, Sean Russell, Aurura, Ont., 12; Jeff Armstrong, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., 11; Aiken Scherberger, Toronto, 11; Gord Acton, North Bay, Ont., 8.

Women — Rhonda Cole, Wakefield, Que., 20; Martine Lesieur, Trois-Rivieres, Que., 15; Karen Gerbasi, North Bay, Ont., 8; Cornelia Bulau, Ottawa, 7; Dominique Lanctot, Montreal, 7; Louise Senecal, Laval, Que., 6; Diane Boileau, Montreal, 4; Helene Kompre, Labrador City, Nfld., 4.

Klammer Snaps Record

INNSBRUCK, Austria (CP) — Franz Klammer, a 20-year-old son of peasant parents from the tiny Corinthian village of Mooswald, Austria, snapped an eight-year record Sunday when he won his sixth consecutive World Cup downhill ski race.

His time was one minute, 55.78 seconds down the 4,750-foot Patscherkofel Mountain—site of the 1976 Olympic Games skiing competition.

Official world records are not kept in Alpine skiing, but Klammer's achievement was considered a record because no skier ever had won six consecutive World Cup downhill races.

Bernhard Russi of Switzerland, the defending Olympic champion, finished second in 1:56.27, followed by Herbert Plank of Italy in 1:56.61 and his countryman, Gustalvo Thoeni, in 1:57.16.

Best Canadian was Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., with a sixth-place finish in 1:57.38. Jim Hunter of Calgary was 10th in 1:57.90, Ken Read of Calgary 16th in 1:59.05, Steve Podborski 19th in 1:59.20 and Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., 22nd in 1:59.31.

"I was a little worried at the start but after the first few turns I knew I could do it," said picked up six points—the first time he has received points in World Cup skiing.

"This gives me a great boost and will improve my starting positions next year."

Hunter said: "I felt a lot more relaxed today. I think this is what I have been waiting for. The kind of mental lift it gives you."

Murray was disappointed after training times which put him in the top 10. "I tried to change a few things, improve them in my run. I went too straight into a couple of gates and came out hopelessly low."

After 16 events men's events, Klammer leads with 184 points. Thoeni is second with 146.

Hunter now has seven points over-all for a 36th place tie with two others. Irwin, with six points, is tied with two others in 39th place and Read is tied with five others, each with two points, in 49th position.

In downhill, Klammer leads with 125 points, Werner Grismann of Austria is second after six races with 81. Irwin is tied for 14th with two others, all with six points. Hunter is 23rd with one point.

George Best A Cosmo

NEW YORK (Reuter) — New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League say they have reached a verbal agreement with Manchester United of the English League for the purchase of controversial George Best.

A spokesman for the New York team said Saturday that the agreement was reached during negotiations that day in Manchester between general manager Clive Toye of the Cosmos and the English club's board of directors.

He added that the Cosmos have agreed to pay Manchester "a substantial amount" for Best's services. Financial terms were not revealed. It has been reported the Cosmos were willing to pay the British club as much as $250,000 for Best's contract.

"Best now belongs to the Cosmos," the spokesman said. "There are a few minor things to sort out, but George should be in New York City to formally sign a contract in the last few days of February."

Mystery Solved

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Star says a Miami veterinarian has cleared up the mystery regarding the death of La Prevoyante, Canada's horse of the year in 1972.

Dr. Murray Teigland said Friday in a telephone interview from Miami that La Prevoyante, which was owned by J. Louis Levesque of Montreal, died of injuries suffered in a freak accident at the Calder race course in Florida last December.

The horse died shortly after the Miss Florida Stakes at the Miami track. She had set a brisk early pace, only to drop far out of contention near the finish.

Dr. Teigland's own autopsy showed a ruptured lung was the cause of death but to satisfy his own curiosity about the circumstances, he sent the filly's vital organs for further tests, The Star said. There was suspicion La Prevoyante had, in effect, killed herself through over-exertion—and also a suggestion that her death was related to earlier instances when she bled through the nose.

The Star said the mystery was cleared up when the doctor received the results of a pathological analysis performed at Auburn University in Georgia.

BETSY CLIFFORD

Quebec Skier Winner

ELM, Switzerland (C) — Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., outraced a field of top women skiers by a margin of 3.33 seconds Sunday to win an international giant slalom event.

Miss Clifford, 21, swooped and swerved through the 54 gates of the three-quarter mile course with a vertical drop of 1,180 feet in one minute, 47.92 seconds.

Cindy Nelson of the United States was second in 1:51.25 and 17-year-old Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., was third in 1:52.03.

Killanin Denies Report

LONDON (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, will meet in Amsterdam Tuesday with his three vice-presidents on problems threatening the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

But he denied a Canadian report that he had summoned the organizing committee from Montreal to attend. "The Montreal people will not be there," he said Sunday in an interview.

He said Roger Rousseau, commissioner for the Games, had wanted to report personally on the delay and escalation of costs. But hearings of the Quebec national assembly committee into the Olympics' budget, have been adjourned until Tuesday.

"Obviously nobody can come over from Montreal until that hearing is finished," Killanin said. "I understand that the hearing is going quite well."

Jim Worrall, Canadian member of the IOC executive, is expected at the meeting.

"He will bring facts, which is what we need," Killanin said. "I have been in constant touch with him since this trouble began."

Construction of the stadium fell two months behind schedule because of a strike by ironworkers, and some officials expressed doubts it would be finished for the Games in July, 1976.

The budget, listed last October as $310 million, is now put at $653 million. Montreal faces a deficit of more than $300 million and the federal government has said it will not help.

The Canadian Olympic Association told the Montreal organizing committee in a recent letter that it must decide by Feb. 15 whether to go ahead with the Games. But Killanin and other IOC officials have said there is no question of withdrawal.

A meeting is scheduled for Feb. 20, probably in Lausanne, Switzerland. Killanin said the Montreal organizing committee will be there.

"By that time we shall know the facts and we shall know what action to take."

WCHL Stands Firm

TORONTO (CP) — The Western Canada Hockey League has not compromised any of its demands after weekend meetings with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA), says WCHL president Ed Chynoweth.

"I hope it doesn't sound like we've backed off," Chynoweth said Saturday in an interview. "Our position hasn't changed any.

"The next move is for the CAHA to decide how it will react to our concerns."

Last week Chynoweth said league governors had voted unanimously to withdraw from the CAHA, citing lack of leadership in pressing professional leagues for overdue draft payments.

Chynoweth met with officials of the Quebec and Ontario Major Junior leagues Friday. A set of proposals from the three leagues were taken by the CAHA officers to the semi-annual meeting of the CAHA directors Saturday.

The officers were authorized by the membership to pursue further meetings with the junior leagues in an attempt to negotiate a compromise.

"Our big concern is still the fact the pros can sign our players as early as October and not pay for them until January," Chynoweth said. "We can't operate on that basis and there has to be a better solution than to wait that long to be paid."

Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz, commissioner of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, said Friday the National Hockey League's draft payment was in the mail to the CAHA and that payment from the World Hockey Association "is expected to be forthcoming shortly."

The two professional leagues owe more than $600,000 for players signed and drafted from last June's amateur draft. The CAHA passes the payments on to the various teams.

Chynoweth was not happy with news of the expected payments or with Schmalz' assertion that problems regarded as major by the WCHL are only minor by the standards of the Ontario and Quebec leagues.

"The agreement was for them to pay for all drafted and signed players by Nov. 30. Do we pat them on the back for coming up big on Jan. 25?"

"I know we have very serious financial problems and we are very concerned about them whether anybody else is or not."

Lafleur — First 4-goal Game

Leafs Stagger Back to MLG

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

Toronto Maple Leafs return to the friendly confines of Maple Leaf Gardens this week after a road trip that got off to a promising start but had a horrible ending.

The Leafs, forced to take an extended trip because of an ice show at the Gardens, defeated St. Louis Blues and Montreal Canadiens to begin their swing, snapping Montreal's 21-game unbeaten string in the process.

Last Sunday, after losing to Boston Bruins, the Leafs headed for the West Coast for games in Oakland, Los Angeles and Vancouver. Not only did the Leafs drop all three games out West, but they were outscored 20-5 in the process.

Sunday afternoon in Vancouver, the Canucks extended their winning streak to three games to protect their lead atop the Smythe Division, by downing Toronto 6-4.

In other Sunday action, Chicago Black Hawks edged California Seals 3-2, Montreal Canadiens crushed Pittsburgh Penguins 7-2, New York Rangers edged Los Angeles Kings 3-2, Atlanta Flames nipped Buffalo Sabres 4-3, Washington Capitals topped Detroit Red Wings 6-3 and Boston Bruins and Philadelphia Flyers fought to a 2-2 tie.

Saturday night, Buffalo took Montreal 7-6, Los Angeles and New York Islanders played to a 5-5 draw, Pittsburgh topped the Rangers 5-2, Detroit beat Washington 5-2, Chicago dumped St. Louis 4-1 and Minnesota North Stars snapped an 11-game winless streak with a 4-1 win over Kansas City Scouts.

Greg Boddy, Ron Sedlbauer, Leon Rochefort, Dennis Ververgaert, Paulin Bordeleau and Mike Robitaillt scored for the Canucks before 15,570 fans.

Darryl Sittler and Inge Hammarstrom scored two goals each for Toronto, who lost 8-0 to the Kings Thursday and 6-1 to California Friday.

The Leafs may have lost the services of defenceman Bob Neely for an indefinite period. Neely hurt an ankle when he fell into the boards with the Canucks Don Lever in the second period.

In Chicago, Dennis Hull scored his first goal in 10 games to start the Hawks en route to their second win in a week over California.

"I knew it had been a long time," said Hull. "I hadn't been paying much attention to it the last few games because we have been winning.

"It's when you lose that you worry about not scoring goals."

The Hawks announced after the game that Dale Tallon, out since November with a hip injury, was being sent to Dallas of the Central League to get back into shape.

"Dallas plays seven games in 14 days," said Hawks coach Billy Reay. "Dale can get into shape and regain his confidence. Up here, I'd be using him for a few minutes each game and you don't get into condition that way."

The Hawks are three points behind Vancouver and hold a game in hand on the Canucks.

At Montreal, Guy Lafleur registered his first four-goal performance in the NHL and Peter Mahovlich added a pair of goals to pace the Canadiens attack.

"It's a big thrill for me to score four goals," said Lafleur, who now has 38 on the year and is bidding to become the first Montreal player to score 50 goals since Bernie Geoffrion accomplished the feat in the 1960-61 season.

Jenkins' Rink in Top Form

TRENTON — "We just keep putting it together," offered Shorty Jenkins at Trenton Curling Club, Sunday night after he led his Canadian Forces Base rink to the top honors in the Bay of Quinte Mixed Bonspiel.

Matched against Quinte Curling Club of Belleville's Bill Henderson in the Deacon Brothers Sportswear First Event showdown, Jenkins kept his perfect record in the spiel intact, posting a 10-4 win.

Curling with Barbara Bullis, Tony Pasula and Kitty Vaters, Jenkins showed the form which has carried his foursome to 32 straight wins in mixed bonspiel play.

Second event winner and recipient of the Pepsi-Cola Trophy was the Mike Dorey-skipped Trenton Curling Club entry, an 8-6 winner over CFBs Derek Palidwar in the final Mike and Shirley Dorey combine with Leo and Shirley Lane on this championship rink.

Frankford Curling Club's Ray Edwards got by Quinte's Dave Brown in the third event final to win the Dixie Lee Trophy.

Pat Edwards, Helen Elder and Gord Elder teamed with Ray to outscore Brown's foursome 8-4.

The Carling Bowl went to Jim Hope's CFB rink, an 8-7 winner over Dr. Glynne Jones of the Trenton Club.

Other members of the Hope-skipped rink are Jo Hope, and Frank and Beatrice Rutledge.

In a consolation final, Quinte rinks skipped by John Hughes and Fred Smith hooked up. Smith's foursome, with Huck and Betty Ingram along with Jean Rashotte completing the entry, took the nod, 9-7.

Northern Lites Show the Way

The 14th annual Belleville Women's Bowling Association tournament was held on Saturday and Sunday at the Brunswick Bowl in the Belleville Plaza.

There were three events taking place throughout the weekend including a team championship, doubles match and a singles encounter.

In the team competition, Diane Keogh, Angela Jones, Marion Gelsthorpe, Eleanor Lessels and Violet Christopher took top honors with a total pin fall of 3063, giving the Northern Lites the victory. The Rebels were second, led by captain Dorreen Dath, with an overall score of 2994.

Barb Hill and Elaine Scott captured the doubles championship with 1223 for the weekend.

Gil Hillingsworth was the singles champion with a 675 total score, nearly 70 pins ahead of her nearest opponent.

Snowmobile Races

Thrills and Spills

PICTON — Picton fairgrounds Sunday was crowded by about 600 spectators for snowmobile races sponsored by the Prince Edward Racing Club.

Club spokesman Ron Denard of Picton said competitors agreed track conditions were perfect for the races, the first to be held here in 1975.

Sutton Leads Lancers To Fourth OCAA Win

LINDSAY (Special — Wirey Jim Sutton, one of the top rebounders in the Eastern Ontario College Athletics Association Men's Basketball League, led the Loyalist Lancers to their fourth win of the regular season here, Saturday as he dropped in 23 points and the Lancers downed Sir Sandford Fleming 76-63.

Loyalist's Bill Kyle was right behind Sutton as he broke up the middle of the key for 22 points.

Loyalist held a slim 32-29 lead at half time, but Kyle and Sutton exploded for 14 and 13 second half points, respectively, to give Loyalist the 13 point win.

John Smith had 10 points, Pete Scott, eight and Dave Culmer, six. Larry Green got four points and Brian Calnan rounded things out with three.

Dary Chow responded for Sir Sandford Fleming with 32 points and Keith Ebbs got 17.

Bearcats Top Rebels 8-5

In Northern Electric Hockey League action on Sunday, the Bearcats, led by a four goal performance from Rod Salter defeated the Rebels 8-5.

Larry Lupenette had a pair of markers for the winners with Ron Comber's single rounding out the scoring for the Bearcats.

Joe Scanlan had a hat trick for the losers with Bruce Pascoe and Rick Rosebush each adding a helper.

In the second game of the day, Bob Baitley's three-goal effort paced the Yankees to a 4-2 win over the Falcons.

Wayne Wood had the other Yankee goal with Ralph Bailey and Eric Tugnette counting for the losers.

Belleville Mel Barriage's Wanda Clapp comes close to adding to her team's total in 5-5 Quinte Women's Hockey League match with Picton, Sunday, but the visitors' goalie Lorraine McConnell has puck smothered. Coming to goalie's assistance is defence player Linda Wiggin.

BCI Settles for Consolation Title

PEMBROKE (Special) When Belleville Collegiate Institute (BCI) senior basketball coach Brian MacKenzie said his team is very dependent on star forward Larry Wilson, he warn't kitting. Wilson got into four trouble early in the second game of the North-South Classic Tournament, here, on the weekend and bci lost 62-50. The loss didn't hold them back completely however, as Wilson kept his infractions total down and the Belleville squad went on to win the consolation title over Scollard Hall, of Sudbury, 65-55.

BCI showed their classic form in their opening game as they trounced Pembroke 71-42. The Red and Black machine struck for an incredible 69.4 percent from the field and out-rebounded the host team 31-18

Wilson hit for 22 points in the opener to lead the way. Brian Bell and Russ Simonds dropped in 10 apiece.

Their second start was the one that set them back. Wilson took four fouls in the first three minutes of the game and coach MacKenzie was forced to sit him out until late in the fourth quarter. Eventually he fouled out, anyway. Steve Kirby and Larry Savage were tops with 10 points each as the Belleville crew went down at the hands of Sault Ste. Marie.

Despite the fact that BCI went with only eight players, their bench strength was enough to pull them through. In the final game they held a five-point margin at the half and doubled that lead by the end of regulation time.

Wilson led the way with 18 points and Gary Donavan dropped in 11. Bell and Gord Wright got 10 points each and Simmonds came off the bench to score 7 for the Consolation crown.

OMHA Roundup

3 City Teams On Sidelines

Belleville's Shell Juveniles, Lion's Club midgets and Rollins Peewees ended their Ontario Minor Hockey Association playoff seasons Saturday night.

The juveniles lost 6-2 to Oshawa; the local midgets dropped a 3-2 overtime decision to Kingston, and Rollins went down 6-2 in Oshawa.

In other OMHA playoff games on the weekend the Kinsmen bantams lost games 9-4 and 5-2 to Peterborough in their best-of-five series and the Dixie Lee peewes lost to Kingston 11-3.

Mik Crawford and Ross MacLeod scored for the Shells, who were playing without the services of injured defenceman Larry Woodley and winger Joe Muldoon; Mark Foster, sitting out a one-game suspension, and first-line centre Rick Growden, stranded in Bancroft by freezing rain. Team captain Gary Thompson played with an injured knee that sidelined him for the previous playoff game.

Oshawa took the best-of-five series 3-1, but that one Belleville win was only the second Legionnaire loss in regular season and playoff action, with the first also coming at Belleville hands in November.

Oshawa will now meet Peterborough for the Eastern Ontario Group AAA title. The Petes thumped Kingston 9-3 Sunday night to take their series 3-1, with one game tied.

Eastern Ontario AAA midget will have Kingston playing took their series with Oshawa 3-1 and Kingston had the same success against the Belleville crew.

The local midgets jumped in front 1-0 on Sandy Waterson's goal, but Kingston managed to tie things back up. The two clubs then battled scorelessly through the remainder of the game.

They traded goals early in the 10-minute overtime period, but with four seconds left and the Lions with two men in the penalty box, Mike Simurda gave Kingston the win.

In Oshawa, Rollins gave up four second period goals without a reply on the way to its third straight playoff series loss.

John Samanski and Greg William each fired a pair of goals for the winners.

Replying for Rollins were Jamie Robertson and Tony Parks.

Tonight, the Rollins youngsters are in Frankford for an exhibition match with that community's bantam team. Game time is 8.30.

Peterborough scored four unanswered goals in the third Friday night to dump the Kinsmen Bantams 9-4. Danny Duffy scored twice and Danny Vance and Gary Frederick added singles for Belleville.

Peterborough took a 2-0 lead in the series Sunday when they won 5-2. Pat Wilman and Mike Bryant scored the only goals for the Kinsmen Club.

The third game of the series is scheduled for Peterborough on Thursday at 7 p.m.

Steve Molaski, Stu Emerson and Darcy Maher were the only goal scorer for Dixie Lee in their loss to Kingston on Sunday.

Barriage Ties Picton On 3rd Period Surge

A four-goal splurge in the final two periods gained the Belleville Mel Barriage Ladies hockey team a 5-5 tie with the visiting Picton Ladies on Sunday at Dick Ellis Rink.

Nina Flieger led the locals with a pair of goals with singles going to Sandra Claus, Judy Rappel and Shirley Gulliver.

With 23 seconds remaining in the middle frame and the home team down 5-1 things looked bad but throughout the third period the Belleville squad just kept pressuring Picton goalie Lorraine McConnell.

Picton got goals from Linda Wight with two goals, Debbie McKinnon, Sandra Wight, Linda Wiggins all with one apiece.

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE

PROCLAMATION

"JUNIOR ACHIEVEMENT WEEK"

JANUARY 26th - FEBRUARY 3rd, 1975

Junior Achievement is dedicated to the proposition that the best way to educated the men and women of tomorrow in the workings of our economic system is to give them first-hand experience of it. Accordingly, it makes it possible for groups of high school students to organize and manage their own temporary small-scale businesses under the guidance of adult advisers from local business and industry.

In this year's programme, the eight companies involved will produce and market a variety of consumer items ranging from desk, pen and pencil caddies to winter maintenance kits for automobiles. One of the secrets that keeps the programme viable is the support from the City's industrial community. Each Junior Achievement Company is sponsored by a parent company which volunteers a management officer to act as adviser to the student company. Understand Junior Achievement by visiting their Workshop "Open House" at St. Thomas Parish Hall, on Monday, February 3rd, 7 - 9 p.m.

NOW THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Mayor of the City of Belleville, I hereby proclaim the week of January 26th to February 3rd, 1975, as

"JUNIOR ACHIEVEMENT WEEK"

ROBIN JEFFREY,
MAYOR.

Lanier and Dave Bing Team Up for Pistons

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A good big man, Bob Lanier, and a good little man, Dave Bing, made the difference for Detroit Pistons in a rough and tumble National Basketball Association game Sunday afternoon.

Lanier poured in 31 points and Bing added added 25—including 11 in overtime—to give Detroit a 102-93 victory over Chicago Bulls.

The win at Detroit's Cobo Arena gave the Pistons a two-game lead over Chicago in the NBA's Midwest Division and avenged an embarrassing 116-96 loss Saturday night at Chicago.

"I was loose and I figured I was overdue," Bing said after scoring 11 of Detroit's 15 points in overtime.

Bing said he noticed Lanier was tired following an all-out effort in the rough, fast-paced battle.

"Someone had to pick up the slack, and I'm the obvious guy to do it," Bing added.

The Bulls erased a nine-point deficit in the final 5½ minutes of regulation, sending the game into overtime when guard Jerry Sloan came up from behind to slap the ball away from Lanier in the closing seconds. Bing scored two quick baskets in the first minute of overtime, however, and Chicago never recovered.

In other NBA games Sunday, Washington Bullets whipped Houston Rockets 118-90, Seattle Cavaliers 96-93, Boston Celtics beat Buffalo Braves 107-93, Philadelphia '76ers defeated Los Angeles Lakers 103-97 and Portland Trail Blazers topped Golden State Warriors 128-113.

In Saturday's other games, Kansas-City Omaha Kings beat New York Knicks 112-103, Atlanta Hawks tripped Milwaukee edged Cleveland 94-92, Phoenix Suns downed New Orleans Jazz 94-90 and Golden State stopped Portland 114-109.

In Sunday's American Basketball Association games, New York Nets topped Indiana Pacers 115-111, the Spirits of St. Louis beat San Antonio Spurs dropped Memphis Sounds 108-104 in overtime and San Diego Conquistadors trimmed Virginia Squires 98-95.

On Saturday, San Antonio overcame St. Louis 115-104 and Denver trounced Virginia 119-99.

Marlies Can't Match Sudbury Wolves' Attack

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sudbury Wolves handed Toronto Marlboros their second setback in 21 games, defeating the league-leaders 5-2 Sunday in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

A home crowd of 4,200 spectators watched the Wolves take period leads of 2-0 and 3-0 and extend their unbeaten span to nine games, including six wins and three ties.

Toronto holds a 12-point lead over second-place Peterborough Petes while Sudbury moved into a sixth-place tie with Oshawa Generals.

Rod Schutt, Dave Farrish, Bob Russell, Geoff Green and Ron Duguay scored for Sudbury, which outshot the Marlboros 47-33.

John Tonelli and John Smrke replied for Toronto on goals less than a minute apart, which brought the score to 3-2 early in the third period.

In other league games Sunday, St. Catharines Black Hawks dumped Kingston Canadians 5-1, Peterborough downed London Knights 5-2, and Ottawa '67s edged Kitchener Rangers 5-4.

In action Saturday, Toronto defeated Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 8-4 and Hamilton Fincups outscored Oshawa Generals 5-2.

Play resumes Tuesday with Hamilton visiting Oshawa, playing host to Oshawa, Sudbury in St. Catharines and Kitchener visiting Peterborough.

Hawks 5 Canadians 1

Left winger Dave Salvian scored his 36th goal of the season and 100th of his three-year OHA Jr. A career to help St. Catharines move into fifth spot.

Steve Cupolo scored twice for St. Catharines, seven points behind fourth-place Ottawa, with Rick Adduono and Gary McAdam getting the others.

Mike Crombeen spoiled Hawk goaltender Bill Cheropita's bid for a shutout with a goal six minutes into the final period.

Playing at home, St. Catharines outshot Kingston, 40-12, including 14-1 in the first period.

Petes 5 Knights 2

Second-place Petes broke a 1-1 first-period tie with three unanswered goals in the second period.

Petes goals went to Doug Jarvis, Mark Perras, Red Laurence, Gary McMonagle and Brad Pirie.

Rick Green and Jim Hamilton replied for London, outshot 38-35 before a home crowd.

'67s 5 Rangers 4

Rookie Warren Holmes' goal midway through the third period lifted Petes to the win ovr last-place Kitchener before 2,053 spectators.

Tom McDonell led fourth-place Ottawa with two goals while Norm Kajola and Doug Wright got the others.

Joe Fortunato, with two goals, Dan Djakalovic and John Baby replied for Kitchener, which has dropped the last seven games, including six at home.

The Rangers outshot the visitors 37-21 in the first two periods and 44-36 overall.

Marlboros 8 Greyhounds 4

Lynn Jorgenson and Bill Wells each scored twice for Toronto while single goals went to Mark Napier, Brue Boudreau, Mike McEwen and John Smrke, playing on Sault ice.

Randy Borbely, Greg Keating, Cary Farelli and Romano Carlucci scored for the Greyhounds, who have lost their fourth consecutive game.

The Greyhounds outshot Toronto 47-43.

Fincups 5 Generals 2

Hamilton built up period leads of 2-0 and 5-0 and went on to extend their winning streak to four games.

Dale McCourt scored twice for third-place Hamilton, with Greg Hickey, Glen Richardson and Mike Keating adding one each before 1,591 spectators in Oshawa.

Brian Dillon and Bill Leamen replied for Oshawa, outshot 38-23.

Everton Looking Good

LONDON (Reuter) — English League leaders Everton emerged as the new favorites for the Football Association Cup after Saturday's fourth-round matches and fifth-round draw.

After defeating Plymouth 3-1 at Plymouth, Everton was drawn at home against either Fulham or Nottingham Forest in the next round and was listed as a 9-2 favorite by one leading bookmaker.

Ipswich, only one point behind Everton in the First Division standings, reached the fifth round for only the second time in its history.

Everton captain Nick Mills scored the decisive goal only two minutes from the end at Everton to give the home team a 1-0 win over Liverpool.

Ipswich was paired with Aston Villa and was made 5-1 second favorite while league champions Leeds United, which could only draw 0-0 at home to Wimbledon, a non-league team, dropped down to third from first place in the betting list at 11-2.

While Liverpool was making its Cup exit, Newcastle United, the other 1974 finalists, was being sidelined 1-0 by Walsall of the Third Division.

A second non-league club, Leatherhead, gave Leicester City of the First Division a fright, leading 2-0 before the all-amateur side was edged 3-2.

"I think it was a bit of a miracle," said Leicester manager Jimmy Bloomfield. "I think class told in the end but they were definitely the better team in the first half."

But it was Wimbledon of the Southern League which undoubtedly pulled off the most remarkable feat of the day by holding mighty Leeds to a draw.

Goalkeeper Dickie Guy was the man Wimbledon had to thank for its survival following his 82nd-minute penalty save from Leeds' Scottish International Peter Lorimer.

Wimbledon manager Alan Batsford said:

"I've been saying all season that guy is a great goalkeeper and now he has proved it."

Walsall, having already disposed of Manchester United in an earlier round, eliminated Newastle, six times FA Cup winners, through a 34th-minute goal by George Andrews and they now visit Birmingham in the fifth round.

The most convincing victory of the fourth round went to Aston Villa which crushed Sheffield United of the First Division 4-1.

Villa, who have won the Cup a record seven times, will face a tough task away to Ipswich though the manner of its triumph Saturday indicated it could well threaten its First Division rivals. Villa is already scheduled to face Norwich in the League Cup final at Wembley in March.

Foresters Nip Comets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jim Lebar's second goal with 13 seconds remaining in the game lifted Brantford Foresters to a 7-6 win over Napanee Comets in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action Sunday.

The win moved second-place Brantford 15 points behind first-place Barrie Flyers and dropped Napanee to the league cellar.

Jim Cochrane also scored twice for Brantford while playing coach John McMillan, Steve DeGurse and Al Osbourne added the others.

Napanee goals went to Mike Flanigan, Ron Riley, Wayne McConnell, Jim Sunstrum, Wayne Elder and Charlie Convery, playing at home before 424 spectators.

The teams were tied 3-3 at the end of the first period but Brantford took a 6-4 lead into the final 20 minutes.

Napanee outshot Brantford 43-40.

In Sunday's other game Whitby McDonald's dumped Orillia Terriers 8-4. On Saturday, Cambridge Hornets upset Barrie 7-3.

Commons to Begin Work On Housing Proposals

OTTAWA (CP) — The House of Commons begins work today on housing proposals the government hopes will attract more than $1 billion in private money to alleviate housing shortages across the country.

Announced before Christmas by Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson, the proposed changes would broaden the scope of existing mortgage rental subsidies for low-and middle-income families.

Up to $50 a month for such families now is available through programs such as the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP).

If passed unchanged, a bill introduced by Mr. Danson will make AHOP assistance available to persons obtaining mortgages through banks, insurance companies, credit unions and trust and loan companies.

AHOP benefits currently are restricted to housing provided through Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC).

The extension also would apply to privately-financed low-rental housing where owners agree to hold rents to a "fair and reasonable" rate for five-to 15-year periods. The effect of the proposals should mean more than $1 billion in private housing investment, Mr. Danson has estimated.

Other measures in his bill would give CMHC authority to buy and lease at low rates to non-profit and co-operative housing corporations, including service clubs, churches, legion branches and unions.

Big Pay Boosts Out — Chretien

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will have to take a tougher stand on civil service pay raise demands in 1975 because it cannot afford high percentage increases, says Treasury Board President Jean Chretien.

Speaking on the CTV television network program Question Period scheduled for broadcast Sunday, Mr. Chretien said civil servant salaries have—over the last six or seven years—always been far "ahead of inflation."

Mr. Chretien agreed with panel members that the public service and the federal government seemed to be in an adversary situation all the time over salary demands.

He agreed also that the constant confrontation between his office and the over 4,000 people who work for him probably presents a bewildering situation to the ordinary citizen. It does not appear like the ordinary collective bargaining situation.

BIRTHS

ELLIOTT — Lorne and Sue Elliott (nee Ashbury) of R.R. 6, Belleville wish to announce the birth of their second daughter, Suzanne Elizabeth Violet, 8 lbs., 13½ ozs. Born at Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, Jan. 23, 1975. A sister for Diane. Thanks to Doctors Allore, Empson, Pearce, nurses and staff of fifth floor.

RUPERT — Christine and Robin are very pleased to have a new member in the family, she is Jennifer Ann, born Monday, Jan. 20, 1975, weighing 7 lbs. 15 ozs. Many thanks to Dr. Allore, Dr. Dolan and all the nursing staff. Proud parents are Arthur and Alfreda Rupert.

IN MEMORIAM

TOMPKINS — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Albert Knight Tompkins who passed away January 27, 1970.
They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps one to forget,
But time so far only lets us know,
How much we miss you yet.
—Always remembered by son Harold, daughter-in-law Thelma, granddaughter Mary-Jo and family.

CLARKE, Rachel Lynn — In memory of our darling daughter who passed away Jan. 27, 1974.
Rachel, you haven't gone out of our thoughts,
You haven't gone out of our dreams.
Our lonely hearts ache to hear your voice,
To see your sweet smiling face.
We loved you then, we love you now,
Your life was so very short,
We miss you so much.
Yet we know you must be,
With our heavenly father above.
May your rein by his side be long and sweet,
And all of our love from now till we meet again.
—Love Mommy, Daddy, Ian and Andy.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Ethel Mae (Robinson) who slipped away January 27th, 1970.
Each lonely night brings thoughts of you,
Each eventide a prayer,
For in the hearts that loved you well,
You always will be there.
—Always remembered with love, husband Oscar, daughters and sons-in-law, Bernice and Reginald, Edna and Perry, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

CLARKE, Rachel Lynn — In loving memory of our darling granddaughter and niece who passed away January 27, 1974.
Rachel,
We are so lonely without you,
Our hearts mourn for you.
We miss your laughter and your fears.
We miss not seeing you in your older years,
We miss not sharing your joys,
And not seeing you play with the boys,
We miss not hearing if you call,
Or not comforting you if you fall.
Just remember you will always be with us.
—Love and prayers, Grandpa and Grandmas Quinn, Aunt Karen and Uncle Randy.

Profits Small

WASHINGTON (AP) — The country's auto-makers cannot lower their prices over the long-term because it would mean losing money, the president of the United Auto Workers Union (UAW) said Sunday.

The auto companies' profit margins have been "paper thin" for more than a year, Leonard Woodcock said. "You can't cut prices if you're losing money on every car that is sold."

Resent Charge

TORONTO (C) — Spokesmen for immigrant communities in Metropolitan Toronto have citicized Police Chief Harold Adamson for saying that immigrants are responsible for many crimes in the area.

Chief Adamson said Thursday that Canada's immigration laws are too lax and although 98 per cent of the immigrant population in Metropolitan Toronto is honest, many crimes in the area have been committed by recent immigrants.

Two More Victories For A&J

A and J's Drive-In Restaurant, of Trenton, continued its undefeated streak on the weekend as they took both of their Belleville Broomball League games. Friday they dumped Northern 9-1 and Sunday they edged Golden Mile 3-2.

In other league games, Golden Mile beat Art's Esso 4-2 on Friday and on Sunday, Northern downed Art's 5-1.

A and J's not only holds down first place in the league standings, but also occupies five of the top six scoring spots in the league's points race.

Mike Paquette is the number one point-getter with 15 goals and 12 assists. Larry Wannamaker is second with 15 and eight and Ron Cannons is third with 5 and 13.

Golden Miles John Paul, is fourth with 10 goals and five assists and Warren Morash and Gilles Paradis are tied for sixth spot with 14 points apiece.

Larry Lupenette put Northern ahead 1-0 Friday, but that was all his club could manage as A and J's bounced back with nine unanswered goals. Wannamaker had three, Morash and Paquette had two and Henry Sonneveld and Paradis got one goal each.

John Paul scored twice in his club's win over Art's Friday and Chris Johnston and Joe Romano added singles.

Garry Hughes and Jim Parks had one each for the Esso Crew.

Sunday, Paquette, Morash and Paradis showed their scoring form as they each got one to lead A and J's to their second win. Eric Johnston and Charles Neserowski replied for Golden Mile.

Northern got a pair of markers from Neil Brown and singles from Lupenette, Ron Lessels and Lori Ducet.

Alec Belch got the lone goal for Art's.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

TUESDAY, JANUARY 28

Aries (March 21-April 19) Put very little stock in information passed on to you at luncheons or cocktail parties. It's merely colorful conversation.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You'll find yourself in a spot where you'll feel you have to tell a few white lies to cover for shortcomings of a family member.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) It's kind to compliment another if the remarks are deserved. Don't use flattery today as a tool for ulterior purposes.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Continue to be on guard in any situation that costs you out-of-pocket. First, be sure your dollar will do its full job.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're quite indecisive. You'll look for routes that offer the least resistance, rather than meeting issues head-on.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Avoid a companion who does not operate openly or you'll be in a complicated situation that will be difficult to get out of.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're likely to give too much attention today to nonproductive interests. Attend to duties first, play when they're finished.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll feel you have to put on a front to make a favorable impression. That's your pride speaking, not the real you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're easy prey for a fast-talking purveyor of flamboyant ideas. Be sure you buy the steak not the sizzle.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do your budget a favor. Don't spend funds earmarked for essentials on items unnecessary for your immediate needs.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you make promises to a loved one today, make every effort to see they're fulfilled and not just idle words.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You're apt to be a bit lax where self-discipline is required, especially where sensible health habits are concerned.

In Hong Kong Winter, Cookpot Menaces Dogs

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Winter in Hong Kong spells doom for many of the colony's stray dogs, snakes and rare animals from China. Many end up in cooking pots.

The winter season is a time for many Chinese restaurants to display imported live animals and snakes in cages and cooked-food stalls put up signs indicating that dog meat is available.

The most popular delicacies are dog stew and snake broth, both cheap enough for the average worker.

Also slaughtered during the cold spell are pangolins, (scaly anteaters), leopard foxes and civet cats. They are costly and customers must tell the restaurant in advance to prepare the meal.

In the colony, Chinese change their eating habits in winter preparing meals that help to keep them warm.

Dogs, some rare animals and snakes are considered to have all the necessary ingredients.

There is no law banning the butchering of rare creatures for restaurant kitchens. But there are provisions that allow the authorities to prosecute anyone caught ill-treating them.

The slaughter of cats and dogs is illegal and anyone found killing them for food is liable to be fined a maximum of 1,000 Hong Kong dollars (about $200) but the lucrative business goes on illicitly every winter.

Food-stall owners have found a canny way to try to beat the law enforcers. They put up signs in Chinese which bear the figures 6 and 3 which add up to nine. In Cantonese the words nine and dog sound the same.

The local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA) recently led police to a major dog distribution centre in a rural district. They seized 100 live dogs.

A few slaughtered animals were found strewn on the floor, flies swarming over them.

A man was arrested, prosecuted and fined a total of 2,000 Hong Kong dollars.

A week earlier, another police raid in the city area uncovered seven live dogs in a hut.

The executive secretary of the SPCA, Mrs. C. M. Nutten, said the raids were made following tipoffs.

"We went with police to these places where we were told dogs were slaughtered," she said.

"They were full of disease and I wished that people who eat them were there to see for themselves that what they buy from the stalls could affect their health.

"These dogs were not fit to stay alive and had to be humanely destroyed."

Fred Chen, known as the colony's snake king, and the owner of the China Wildlife Co., said he buys nearly 4,000 snakes every month from China, and nearly 80,000 of them from Bangkok in winter.

Housewives can buy snake flesh at eight Hong Kong dollars a pound.

Chinese believe a snake's gall bladder can cure rheumatism. They can walk into a snake shop, order a glass of snake gall at 30 Hong Kong dollars and wash it down with Chinese wine.

Congestive Heart Failure Explained

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain what congestive heart failure is. Can it be damaging to the heart? What is the cure, if any? Should someone see a heart specialist?—L.A.

Congestive heart failure (CHF) means that the heart muscle has lost its efficiency. This can result from damage to the valves which become either narrowed or loosened—often the result of rheumatic fever.

With the internal structural damage, the heart usually becomes enlarged because of the strain of pumping through a defective valve opening. The "back wash" effect from valves that do not close properly reduces the heart's pumping efficiency, and as a consequence fluid accumulates in the tissues—the lungs and legs chiefly.

Heart failure can also be caused by heart attacks or congenital valve problems.

Symptoms of CHF are usually shortness of breath, coughing, swelling of the lower legs (edema) and a dusky-colored skin, all direct results of the reduced circulation and the sluggish uptake of oxygen in the lungs.

It is a serious condition, but it can be handled by the family physician. He would be familiar with the extent of the heart damage in any individual case and know if it is advisable to bring in a specialist..

Treatment includes use of digitalis to strengthen the heart muscle, and diuretics to promote release of excess fluid through the kidneys. Bed rest is necessary in the initial stages, and activity should be kept to a minimum. A diet low in salt is advisable, and if you are obese, you should lose weight.

Since CHF is caused by heart damage, the word control is more appropriate than cure, except in instances where a valve can be replaced. Surgeons have had considerable success in valve replacement.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Fifteen months ago a doctor diagnosed that I have Morton's neuroma. He said it would be ripe for excision last summer. But we have moved and the doctor where I now live prefers to inject the nerve rather than remove the tumor.

I am a teacher and on my feet, and it is difficult for me.

How can a doctor tell when the tumor is ripe?—M.F.

Morton's neuroma—or morton's toe—involves the disturbance of a nerve in the foot which causes pain in the area of the third and fourth toes. I dislike the term "ripe." What your previous doctor meant to tell you was that, other treatment failing, the best way for you to get relief was from surgical removal of the nerve tumor.

Conservative measures such as use of arch support or steroid injection are often effective enough, but they do nothing to eliminate the cause. I agree with your previous doctor.

Surgical removal should provide complete relief. Since other measures have not been effective, I would advise you to talk to your new doctor about the possibility.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Upon dressing one morning a year ago I noticed a spot of blood on my nightgown about two inches in diameter in the nipple area. The doctor's examination showed no lumps and a mammogram of both breasts are negative. Should a biopsy be done?—V.M.M.

Nipple bleeding may be due to cancer, but other, non-cancerous conditions can cause it. It could be caused, for instance, by a benign papilloma, which is a small growth in a duct near the nipple.

You have assurance with the normal mammogram. The absence of a lump and the fact that bleeding hasn't recurred would indicate that things are pretty satisfactory.

There appears to be no need for a biopsy, but you should be checked again in about six months, or immediately if you detect some change during self-examination of your breasts.

Did Curse Work?

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (CP) — Two young men who had a curse put on them after digging up African graves to make way for an airstrip both needed medical treatment within months of the incident.

The men are Nick Downer and Spook Franco. In June they were employed by a contractor to move three graves after local Africans had refused to carry out the job.

While they were standing at the bottom of one of the graves an old African warned them they would be dead within six months because they had interfered with the graves. Neither took the warning seriously.

Now Spook, for one, is having second thoughts. He is recovering in hospital from a traffic accident which partially paralysed him and caused internal injuries.

Nick recently left Rhodesia. At the time he thought he had bilharzia, but it was later found to be tick-fever. He was treated for this in England.

After the bodies were exhumed they were reburied with suitable ceremony, but even after this relatives of the deceased expressed fears for the safety of the two men.

Northern Electric Lays Off 200 More

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Northern Electric will lay off 200 more employees here on Feb. 7.

Last November 142 Northern workers were laid off indefinitely. None have been recalled.

The company announced today that these laid off workers will be joined by 200 more of its union employees — 100 laid off for 12 weeks and 100 laid off indefinitely.

The employees affected by the new layoff will receive their notices on Friday of this week, the layoffs to take affect the following Friday. Eight of the 200 employees laid off are office staff members.

When the earlier layoff was announced in November, the company said it was made necessary by "a softening of the economic market."

The company news release on the new layoff says the firm is "adjusting staff levels to compensate for reduced demand for telephones, switchboards and related components."

A company spokesman said today, "we hope this will mean the end of layoffs," though he preferred not to speculate when employees might return to their jobs.

The majority of employees laid off will qualify for layoff benefits — calculated on length of service.

H.W. Lilly, general manager of the plant, said the work force has been cut down to handle the work load predicted for the remainder of the year. "I sincerely hope there are no more layoffs."

Miss Lorna Moses, president of the union, said the situation is "bad" and that this company action will lead to "increased employee insecurity."

The two layoffs have pared the number of employees at the local plant to 1,000 from 1,350

Industrial Park Plan Announced

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Housing Minister Donald Irvine said Monday he will announce in the legislature today the establishmnt of a 10,000-acre industrial park near Spencerville, 10 miles north of Prescott.

Mr. Irvine said the announcement will be preceded by a meeting of eastern Ontario municipal politicians and officials at which details of the planned park, which is to include some housing and parkland, are to be outlined.

Mr. Irvine said Monday that A. E. LePage Ltd., a Toronto real estate firm, had been assembling land in the area for the government.

Bar on Cash Discounts To Be Banned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Legislation against abuses by credit card companies and other credit grantors will be introduced soon in Parliament, Andre Ouellet, consumer and corporate affairs minister, said Monday.

For credit cards, the bill would outlaw agreements under which merchants accepting credit cards pledge not to give discounts for cash transactions, and give consumers protection against harassment arising from false billings due to computer bookkeeping error.

Jamaican Musicians Wounded

TORONTO (CP) — Two Jamaican musicians were shot Monday night by an unknown assailant as they entered the Generator Tavern on Yonge Street.

They were in fair condition—not in danger—in hospital today.

Trevor Daley, 25, member of the Toronto-based Crack of Dawn rock band, and Garth (Ike) Bennett, 30, were with Brenda Brown 25, when the white gunman opened fire.

Miss Brown, who was not injured, said the attacker was "just firing like a madman."

Another friend said there was no apparent reason for the shooting. The gunman said nothing.

Mr. Daley was wounded in the abdomen and Mr. Bennett suffered chest wounds.

Members of the Crack of Dawn band were attacked and insulted by a group of members of the studio audience, wearing false Hitler-type mustaches and brown shirts, when they appeared last June 16 on a program of CITY-TV here.

News Briefs

Four Released

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Donald Wayne Cline, 21, was charged in provincial court Monday with attempted murder, kidnapping and possession of stolen identification. On Monday, provincial Judge F. S. Gregory released four of Cline's five alleged robbery co-conspirators from custody, saying the Crown's case against them is nothing more than allegation at this time.

Flu Hits Peterborough

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — The city's medical officer of health said Monday that hospital visitors will be restricted to patients' families because of an increase in a "flu-like illness". Dr. J. K. Edwards said the restriction takes effect immediately and will remain until the illness goes away. He said the virus has not been isolated and the type of flu is not known.

Lazy Bums Are Robbers

TORONTO (CP) — "Lazy bums who want to live high or buy drugs" are responsible for a dramatic rash of armed robberies this month, says Bernard Simmonds, deputy police chief. "They don't want to work so they prey on those who do and you can quote me on that," he said in an interview Monday.

China Cancels Purchase

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — China has cancelled an order for more than 22 million bushels of American wheat, or about two-thirds of U.S. wheat set for shipment to China through mid-1976, a Memphis-based commodity trading firm said Monday.

Tax Exemption Asked

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition members of the Ontario legislature Monday prodded Treasurer Darcy McKeough to take steps to revive the ailing automotive industry to combat mass layoffs. Bernard Newman (L-Windsor - Walkerville,) speaking in the legislature, urged the treasurer to exempt new car purchases from provincial sales tax for a set period of time to alleviate what he called "mass unemployment."

Changed Attitude Needed

NEW YORK (CP) — The New York Times, in its annual international economic survey, asked 50 heads of state and government what initial steps are needed to achieve co-operation in solving global problems. "More than anything else," replied Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada, "we needs to change our attitude — to realize that too few of us have been enjoying too much of the world's wealth; to realize that too many countries for too long have not been able to particate in the decisions that affect them."

IRA Bombs Injure 26 In London, Manchester

LONDON (AP) — Prospects for a new ceasefire by the Irish Republican Army (IRA) dimmed today after six bombs exploded in London and Manchester, injuring 26 persons.

"We seem to have a blitz on our hands," a spokesman for Scotland Yard said. "We are expecting more."

The bombing Monday was the first large-scale attack in England since the IRA's Provisional wing ended a Christmas ceasefire Jan. 16. The IRA's army council has been reported discussing a new truce at a meeting in Dublin. But violence resumed in Northern Ireland nine days ago, and five more persons have been killed there.

The bombing Monday began with an explosion in the basement hardware section of a Manchester department store. A man with an Irish accent telephoned a warning 17 minutes before, but the police were unable to clear the store in time. Nineteen persons were injured.

Five explosions followed in London, 200 miles to the south. The first wrecked Gieves, tailor and outfitter to British military men for generations. A warning was given, but a caretaker was injured.

After another warning, there were explosions but no injuries at a gasworks and a chemical plant in north London. Then came explosions without warning at a jewelry store in Kensington High Street and a fashion boutique in Victoria Street, almost opposite Scotland Yard. Six persons were injured.

During the evening, more telephoned warnings sent the Yard's bomb squad to a restaurant in a shopping district in Hampstead, north London, and a shoe store in Putney, in southwest London.

Outside the restaurant they found a bomb set to go off at 7:30 p.m., when the street was crowded with shoppers, but the clock had stopped at 7:15. At the shoe store they found 24 six-inch sticks of gelignite with a timing device. They defused the apparatus a few minutes before it was set to go off.

Bomb squad chief Robert Huntley said the explosions in London were "the work of one gang and typical of the IRA."

Another bomb went off in Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second largest city, but nobody was hurt.

The IRA council began considering a new ceasefire after a meeting last week between British officials and representatives of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political front.

The British offered to release some of the 1,500 persons held in Northern Ireland as convicted or suspected terrorists and to withdraw some of the 14,500 British troops in Northern Ireland if all violence ended. But IRA sources in Dublin said hawks in the guerrilla army considered these concessions inadequate.

Oral Diabetic Drugs May Wear Out Heart

CHICAGO (AP) — Oral diabetic drugs may be causing 10,000 to 15,000 unnecessary deaths in the United States each year, medical researchers reported in a study Monday.

The study, undertaken by specialists from the Biometric Society to evaluate a report issued almost five years ago on the alleged dangers of oral diabetic drugs, will be published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (AMA).

About four million Americans have diabetes and more than 1.5 million are being treated with oral medications, the AMA said.

The earlier study, released in 1970 by the University Group Diabetes Program (UGDP), said deaths from heart disease were twice as high among those taking oral diabetic drugs as in diabetics taking other kinds of treatment.

Dr. Max Miller of Case Western Reserve Medical School said the drug most closely studied, tolbutamide, influences muscle contraction. Studies on animal heart tissue showed it made the muscles work harder and required more oxygen.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Thomas Chalmers said that if the drugs actually cause premature deaths, "one might estimate that there are 10,000 to 15,000 such unnecessary deaths occurring each year in the United States alone."

A spokesman for the AMA said the 1970 report was criticized by a group of practising physicians. As a result, the National Institute of Health requested the Biometrics Society to review the 1970 study.

Plan Offer To Indians In Yukon

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan confirmed reports Monday that the federal government is prepared to make an offer to settle Indian claims in the Yukon.

He said in an interview that the offer, to be made within a month, will follow the terms accepted by Indians in James Bay—land, cash plus hunting and fishing rights—but will have "regional differences."

Although the government agreed almost two years ago to negotiate a settlement with Yukon Indians, progress has been slow, and Mr. Buchanan cited this as a prime reason for deciding to make a firm offer.

"I guess I'm an impatient guy," he said. "I don't want the negotiations to go on and on." By making an offer, the government would give the negotiating teams a chance to get down to firm bargaining.

Turner Asks Canadians To Curb Wage Demands

TORONTO (CP) — Citing wage and salary increases as the major causes of inflation, Finance Minister John Turner has asked Canadians to ease their demands on the economy

Although food and energy costs will continue to cut into the family budget, Mr. Turner said Monday, excessive wage and salary demands will only provoke inflation.

He told The Canadian Club that other countries are facing a prolonged period of declining prosperity, whereas Canada has the potential to continue improving its standard of living.

"But we are only likely to realize this potential if we are able to exercise enough self-discipline to avoid trying to take out of the economy more than it is capable of producing."

ROSS SHOULDICE

Davis Says Land Sale Reports 'Irresponsible'

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis charged Monday that news reports linking Progressive Conservative fund-raising activities with a government land purchase were "irresponsible to the point of negligence."

Mr. Davis labelled as "sinister, sordid speculation" the reports that Ross Shouldice, a former real estate agent who acted as Tory fund-raiser in the Sudbury, Ont., area, prompted the government to buy land in return for a donation to the party.

In a November, 1971, letter to William Kelly, the party's chief fund-raiser, Mr. Shouldice offered a $30,000 donation if the land in Oakville, Ont., were bought by the government.

Mr. Kelly has denied receiving the letter or the $30,000.

Government documents show it paid $1,498,074 in March, 1973, for 100 acres of land for a proposed road linking the Queen Elizabeth Way in Oakville with the planned Highway 403 extension several miles to the north.

A portion of the sum was paid to Fantum Holdings Ltd. whose president, Alan Feldman, offered Mr. Shouldice a six-percent commission on the transaction in a November, 1971, letter in which he said: "We must find a way to bring the (government) to a decision."

In his address at a board of trade dinner, Mr. Davis angrily reiterated what he had said earlier in the day at a news conference and in the legislature that he fired Mr. Shouldice after meeting him in his Queen's Park office in November, 1971.

"I was appalled at his understanding of his place in the party," the premier said of Mr. Shouldice.

"Mr. Shouldice suggested in a letter to my office in November, 1971, that the government make a distinction between those who contribute to the party and those who do not," he said.

"Fortunately, we do not do business that way."

Mr. Davis called published allegations "unreliable and unfounded."

He singled out The Globe and Mail for what he described as "an attempt to destroy a government and a party through the sheer weight of ink and baseless innuendo."

In the legislature, Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and NDP Leader Stephen Lewis called for a royal commission inquiry into the allegations.

When Mr. Davis refused to consider the requests, Mr. Nixon challenged him to call an election to allow the voters to judge the propriety of Tory fund-raising activities.

Pie-eating Champion

Dale Dyer, a Cambridge, Ont., high school student, was a big winner in the pie-eating contest held by the school as part of its winter carnival. Dale has the secret to his success displayed all over his face after his attack on a chocolate cream pie. Students had to bake their own pies for the contest.

Police Blotter

Routine Check Turns up Pot

An automobile check early today by an OPP constable on patrol has resulted in a quantity of marijuana being found in the vehicle.

As a result, 24-year-old Jerry Paul Glenn of Burton St., Belleville has been charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Constable Don Bowry was patrolling on Highway 14 north of the city about 2.30 a.m. today when he stopped a car driven by Mr. Glenn, alone in the car.

A record check revealed him to be wanted by city police on a warrant to committal in relation to an impaired driving charge. A further search of the vehicle produced the drugs contained in five or six small bags, police said.

Verdict Not Guilty

A 23-year-old Belleville man was acquitted Monday of a charge of causing bodily harm with intent to wound in regard to a stabbing incident last fal.

Robert William Cone of Maple Dr. was found not guilty by a jury that deliberated for over two hours before reaching their decision. Judge Russell C. honey presided over this case in County court.

Mr. Cone was charged after an incident Sept. 12 1974 in which a 24-year-man now in penitentiary on an unrelated charge was stabbed with a fishing knife.

The incident occurred in the evening near the rear of Geen's Drug Store near the footbridge.

Wanted Man Nabbed

A Nova Scotia man wanted by the RCMP on a Canada-wide warrant for parole violation was picked up near Belleville early today.

Carl Kenneth Robichaud, 42, of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia was travelling west on Highway 401 near the Marysville interchange when he was stopped on the Shannonville Rd. by Constable Shane Halversom of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

A further search revealed the car, in which he was alone, to have been stolen from Truro, N.S. on Jan. 20.

The incident occurred about 5.25 a.m. today. Mr. Robichaud is in custody awaiting transfer to Nova Scotia to face charge of auto theft and parole violation.

Mr. Robichaud, police said, had a year yet to serve on a 3½ year sentence for break, enter and theft and auto theft.

Car Damaged

A car parked on the north end of John St. received about $100 damage overnight, police said.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the vehicle owned by Harold Bentley of John St. received two flat tires, bent windshield wipers, spark plug wires ripped out and a broken aerial. As well the air breather and rotor cap was taken.

Police said the incident occurred sometime between 10 p.m. Monday and 7:30 a.m. today.

Stale-dated Cheques Annual Bank Headache

By BOB BOXALL

Dated a cheque this month 1974? Don't worry, if you did you're not alone.

The procedure for handling "stale-dated" cheques varies slightly with five major banks and two trust companies in Belleville.

At the Bank of Montreal, Administration Supervisor Marion Burley said the problem is, "very common at the first of a new year." The remedy for a known customer is to contact them and make the necessary change. If the customer is unknown the cheque will be returned.

Manager Roy Tripp of the Bank of Nova Scotia in the Quinte Mall said it usually only happens during the first week of January and that the problem is over and done with for this year. The method for correction is to have the customer come in and fix the error.

Randy Brintnell, assistant manager for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said, "It doesn't occur as often as could be expected." Up until the end of January the customer will be contacted and the change made, after that date the cheque is returned.

No definite figures were available on percentage of cheques received incorrectly dated but James Blattman, accountant for the Royal Bank made a rough guess that it would be around one per-cent. He said his branch will process such cheques for the first two or three weeks of the new year, but after that they are returned.

"Some people are slow to change their thinking into 1975 — they wake up in February and realize it is a new year," John Warkentin of the Toronto Dominion Bank stated. For that reason cheques stale-dated are passed until the end of January but after that they are sent back.

About 15 such cheques were received in the first two weeks of this year at the Guaranty Trust Company and with an average of 30 cheques a day Manager Wayne Miller said he does not consider it to be a major problem. The majority are payable to known companies and are paid, he said. But if the cheque is for a large amount or to be paid to private individual it will be returned.

Cecil Brown at Victoria and Grey Trust Company said, "We always receive some at the first of the year but it is starting to taper off now." They returned one or two cheques a day for the first 15 days so the customer can change date and initial the cheque or just write out a new one, he said.

Engineers Claim CN Reneged on Contract

Canadian National Railways engineers were "misled" by management during the negotiation of a Dec. 11 contract awarding cost of living increases to 18 railway-related unions, said Ian Brady, acting for 139 Belleville engineers.

The Belleville local of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE) has been on strike since last Thursday, claiming the company has reneged on the contract.

The BLE was the only union involved in the contract whose members did not receive the cost of living benefits Jan. 1. The company explained that the others all had contracts which terminated Dec. 31. The BLE will receive the 15 per cent bonus when their contract runs out April 30, said John Noel, CN public relations officer in Toronto.

"The company stated in writing on at least two separate document circulated among all the members of the BLE that the 15 percent and shift differential (night shift bonus) applied to them as well as all other member employees," said Mr. Brady in a written release today.

In the meantime, 58 CN union employees in Belleville have been laid off as 139 engineers remain away from the job, personnel officer Jim Newman said today.

With the exception of the evening Bonaventure between Toronto and Montreal, the CN's mainline between those two centres is idle, a CN spokesman said. Walkouts are still being staged in Ontario's three major centres, Toronto, Belleville and Niagara Falls.

Foxboro Gets School By March

An end-of-March completion date is estimated for Foxboro Senior Elementary School, now being constructed at the north end of the village.

The Hastings county board of education Monday night approved an $800,000 debenture covering the construction costs.

The school will be completed by the end of March, said controller of plant, Keith Hawkins. The water problem that has plagued the school since its beginning has been solved by an engineering consultant's report.

It says the present wells drilled on the property will be sufficient to serve the school for all but two months of the year. During September and October of each year it will be necessary for the school to draw water to the site.

"We have made provisions in the design of the school to enable water to be brought in," said Mr. Hawkins.

What We Think

an engineer's view of current affairs

Adam the Engineer—Adam was an engineer. He applied technical knowledge for social and economic benefit and that is engineering. And so down through the ages it has been engineering rather than science, philosophy or sociology that has given mankind whatever standard of living it has. Where engineering is vigorous and imaginative, as it is in Canada, the standard of living is high. Man can survive and still does survive in some areas of the world without many of the secondary services such as medical care, dental care, science or social studies. But man cannot survive without food, shelter and clothing. The provision of food, the processing of food; the provision of shelter, the design and construction of buildings; the provision of clothing, the weaving and the finishing of cloth, all these require engineering. And with population pressures mounting, with human wastes spreading, with arable land diminishing, with food shortages rising, with energy and raw material resources dwindling, at no time in the history of man has the engineer and engineering been more needed by society. Engineers understand and accept the almost awesome responsibility we have today, individually and collectively. Our task is to harness technical knowledge for the benefit of man. So if there are those among you, young or old, who would share our burden to carry society ever forward then come and join us. Come and be a servant of man, the proudest role of all. Come and be an engineer, the proudest of the proud.

Citizens Appointed to Engineers' Council—The Attorney General of Ontario, The Honourable Robert Welch, Q.C., has recently announced the appointment of two lay members to the Council of the Association, Mr. Stanley Friesen of St. Catharines, a self-employed businessman, and Mr. James Kelleher, Q.C., a lawyer in Sault Ste. Marie. These three-year appointments, as authorized by the Professional Engineers Act, now bring the complement of Council to twenty-three, including the five professional engineers previously appointed by the Lieutenant Governor-in-Council, according to their qualification in the traditional fields of engineering. Very briefly, the principle of appointing non-engineers to the governing body was one of the recommendations of the Inquiry into Civil Rights by the Royal Commission under the Honourable J.C. McRuer. The appointments are a safeguard to ensure that the power of a self-regulating profession is exercised in the interests of the public rather than in that of the profession.

Trenton CGE Lays Off 38

TRENTON — Unexpected plant shutdowns of four of its major customers has forced Canadian General Electric Col. Ltd. to lay off 38 of the plant's normal complement of 250 employees, Ray Baldin, special relations manager, said Monday.

The layoff, effective Monday, Feb. 3, follows a previous announcement that 14 men were let go three weeks ago. It brings the number of workers laid off to 52, a fifth of the company's employees.

When he made his original announcement, less than two weeks ago, Mr. Baldin said he anticipated no drop in business and there were "no mass layoffs foreseen in future".

The picture changed rapidly last week with the announcement that four of Canadian General Electric's (CGE) major buyers planned to shut their plants to two-weeks during the first quarter of 1975.

"It hit us hard," said Mr. Baldin, "We weren't expecting it. But when your customers cut back, what can you do?"

"We looked great for two months," he said.

The plant, which manufactures small electric motors for sump pumps and household appliances, had orders for 15,000 motors a week until the end of March.

Shutdowns by the company's buyers, all major appliance makers, will see orders for its motors drop by 3,500 a week.

Mr. Baldin said CGE considered closing its Trenton plant, but orders for sump pump motors were high and warehouse inventories were low.

He said it is unknown how long the current layoff will last: "I can't put a time period on it."

Asked whether any further layoffs are foreseen, he said that "if orders are what they are foreseen to be, this should be it."

"It's entirely dependent on how our business holds up." And business is "unpredictable," he said.

In response to the layoff, a statement was issued by Gordon Young, president of union Local 509, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America.

The UE president called upon all government levels to give the housing industry a shot in the arm.

"The slump in appliance motors is directly related to the steady decline in housing starts over the past few months," read the release.

"We would therefore urge all levels of government to exercise their powers to facilitate the erection of housing at reasonable cost."

Chief Wins Extra Fireman

TRENTON — Town council Monday authorized Fire Chief Cecil Ellis to hire one additional man to augment his 10-man fire department.

The 11th fireman would be hired as a full-time employee at the fourth class or probationary rate of pay.

Council's move follows year-long talks between the town and the department over the need to increase the strength of the night staff at the fire hall.

At present, two men work the midnight shifts, a situation, councillor Robert Wannamaker said Monday, that could lead to serious problems.

Councillor Ron Price said on more than a few occasions the fire hall has not been staffed when the two men have left to answer a fire call.

Trenton Chief Ellis has pushed for the increase of the department's man-power to three men a shift.

In a letter to council, Monday, Chief Ellis states: "The department operates most of the year short staffed due to sickness and holidays."

Town council has held off on any agreement to increase department staff because no guarantee could be made by the chief that any new man would only work the night shift.

Scheduling could not be worked out to that end, Mayor Robert Partrick said. As a result, hiring was held up.

Council's move Monday falls far short of recommendations made by two surveys by the Ontario Fire Marshal's Office and an underwriter's association. The latter recommended six men man a shift while the former proposed a seven man shift.

Advertising Request Vetoed by Council

TRENTON — Town council refused a request from the Canadian Legion for a $150 donation to cover a half-share in a full-page newspaper advertisement greeting provincial curlers in Trenton Feb. 7-9.

Council's refusal comes in the midst of its consideration of a new grant policy that will be applied to all future applicants for town money.

The policy was discussed last week but no decision was made then.

Mayor Robert Patrick said Monday any new policy would likely be based on a "first come, first served" basis. He said there was talk of setting a budget limit for grants, but no final figure was established.

In speaking against town support for shared advertising costs, councillor Robert Wannamaker said the town has been "handing out" donations far in excess of those given to applicants by town industries.

He suggested an upper limit of $25 be set for such donations.

Meet Friday

PICTON — The Prince Edward Agricultural Society will hold its annual meeting Friday, January 31 at 7:30 p.m. in the board room of the offices of the ministry of agriculture and food on Bloomfield road.

Trenton's CGE plant has laid off fifth of payroll

No Injuries in Three-car Collision

PICTON — Three motorists escaped injury Monday morning in a three-car pile-up at the corner of Queen and Elizabeth streets.

Drivers of the cars were Carol Thompsett, 34, RR 1 Plainfield, John McNeil 58 of Picton, and Dr. Richard Evans of Picton.

Police say when the accident occurred the Thompsett vehicle was northbound on Elizabeth Street and the McNeil car halted on Queen St. on a stop sign. The Evans car eastbound on Queen St. stopped at the intersection, crossed it, then collided with the other two cars.

Total damage to the three vehicles was estimated at $600. Constable Ronald Roblin investigated.

Madoc OPP Charge Two Drivers

TWEED — Charges of passing when the way is not clear and parking on road with no clear view have been laid by the Madoc OPP in two separate motor vehicle accidents.

Charged with passing when the way is not clear was Martin Douglas Wheeler, 26, of Georgetown when the transport trailer he was driving eastbound on Highway 7 was in a collision with a car riven by Leslie William Marshall, 32, of Cloyne.

The accident occurred at 3 p.m. Monday three and one-half miles east of the Highway 37 and Highway 7 junction.

Three passengers in the Marshall vehicle were treated at the Belleville General Hospital and released. They were Susan Marshall, 21, Mr. Marshall's sister-in-law, and her two children: Patrick, 16 months and Tracey, 3, all of the Denbigh area.

The accident was investigated by Constable Robert Bruce of the Madoc OPP.

Walter Hood, 52, of Havelock was charged with parking on a road with no clear view after his half-ton truck was struck by a car driven by Douglas McCormack, 43, of RR 4 Marmora.

The accident, causing $300 damage to both vehicles, occurred Monday 27 on the 12 Concession of Rawdon Township three miles west of Highway 14.

The accident was investigated by C. S. Robinson of the Madoc OPP.

Sharing Practised

PICTON — A Kingston couple who have raised $21,000 in a food fund for Bangladesh will address Picton area residents Ash Wednesday, February 12.

Pat and Terry Leonard will speak at the Anglican Church at 7.30 p.m. following hunger meals at the Church of St. Gregory the Great, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton United Church and the Church of St. Mary Magdalene.

The hunger meals, to be served in the churches next month consist of soup and bread.

The theme for the Share-Lent '75 program is Share dignity, justice and hope to help a broken world.

An inter church Share-Lent committee has been organized among the participating churches in Picton to plan for the Ash Wednesday hunger meals.

Lodgers Protected

TRENTON — Council has given final reading to a lodging house bylaw that licenses, regulates and establishes safety and health standards.

Including an amendment passed last night, the bylaw will apply to all lodging houses in which more than three people are housed for a monied return.

Stick Together, Workers Urged

TRENTON — Public Service Alliance of Canada national vice-president Gordon Grant called upon union members to remain united behind the 19,000 general laborers and tradesmen of PSAC if they reject a conciliation board report and vote for strike action.

The Ontario vice-president spoke to Local 637 members of the Union of National Defence Employees (UNDE) who made up the majority of the 100 workers at a special meeting here Friday. Most are employed at CFB Trenton.

The PSAC bargaining team is currently before a conciliation board in Ottawa. It rejected a federal Treasury Board offer of an average 12 per cent across-the-board increase the first year and a similar eight per cent increase the second year during negotiations over a two-year contract.

The union seeks an approximate 40 per cent increase in a one-year contract. This would give the general laborers and tradesmen 90 per cent parity with industrial workers outside the civil service.

Declines Appointment

TRENTON — A 20-year member of the town parks board, Marion Baker has refused to accept appointment as Trenton's representative on the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority.

In a letter to council Monday she declined in a statement that said in part: "Since your new policy prohibits knowledgeable members from providing continuity to this (parks board) or any other committee, I am no longer interested in service to the municipality."

Council recently established a policy that limits a tenure of appointees on various boards and committees.

Council Seeks Efficiency By Meeting Alternate Weeks

TRENTON — A revamping of Trenton council procedures will mean a more efficient use of councillors time, Mayor Robert Patrick said Monday after council agreed to hold regular meetings every two weeks.

Implementation of the new procedures follows what the mayor called a feeling among some councillors that they were duplicating the work by attending both committee of the whole and council sessions on alternating Mondays.

As adopted, Monday, the changes will see council meet only in regular session every other Monday from feb. 10.

Prior to each 8 p.m. session, council will hold a one-hour committee of the whole session to which the press will be invited to attend.

Originally, prior to an amendment moved by councillor Peter DeGroot and seconded by Robert Wannamaker, the new rules included a provision for a one-hour caucus session before the regular meeting.

Special meetings can be called at the discretion of council.

It was understood the new system will run on a trial basis for three months. If it is found unworkable, council will return to the existing procedures.

The main objections to the new rules came from Councillor Ron Price, who said the town dealt with too much business to hold meetings every two weeks.

"It might be too long for some things to wait," Mr. Price said. He suggested council hold a regular business meeting every week on Monday.

Nurcombes String Meeting Along

PICTON — Members of the Prince Edward Arts and Crafts Association Monday were invited to "string along" with Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Nurcombe as the couple offered a demonstration of off-loom weaving.

Mr. and Mrs. Nurcombe, who operate a studio at Cherry Valley, demonstrated several basic articles that can be woven on a cardboard backing during their display at Benson Park Hall.

The demonstration was part of the organization's regular monthly meeting.

Formed in 1966, the Prince Edward Arts and Crafts Association today has an active membership of 34 men and women, all interested in filling leisure time by developing and increasing their hobby skills.

Classes are offered regularly by the organization and in past years lessons have been provided in caning, pottery, painting and rug hooking.

This year, a crochet class instructed by Thelma Calnan was introduced and already there is an enrolment of 14.

Membership in the arts and crafts association is open to all Prince Edward County residents for a fee of $2.

Y Men's Anniversary

Belleville Y president Dr. Douglas Horne had encouraging words on the current status of the organization when he addressed Belleville Rotarians recently.

In Dr. Horne's view the Y here is becoming a more viable operation. Most significant perhaps is reduction of the capital debt to $40,000 from $90,000, with strong hopes that it will be eliminated entirely before long.

Marking its 50th anniversary meanwhile is the organization's service club affiliate — the Y Men's Club.

A charter member, the only one remaining from those 1925 days — and still very active in the community — is Vernon Weir. In his earlier years, Mr. Weir was prominent in local sports, especially baseball, basketball and hockey. Now in his seventies, Mr. Weir still plays golf during the summer season.

Currently, the club is making preparations for its 50th anniversary dinner and ladies night February 20 — an event that might also be termed New Zealand Night.

The club, whose president is Harry Collins, is twinned with one in New Plymouth, N.Z. A representative of the latter, Russell Clearwater, was in Belleville a couple of years ago, and he has prepared a tape which will be heard during the anniversary event here.

In the realm of the culinary arts, Hazel Watson, wife of treasurer Hugh Watson, is preparing some New Zealand receipes, and the guests will include a representative of the New Zealand High Commission in Ottawa.

It will be a signal occasion for the Y Men's Club here, and remembering too that the Y itself has been operating here for an even longer period, since 1893.

Girls and Sport

As in the professions — and it is a profession for some — girls have taken a back seat in sport.

This is changing, thanks to the professional golf and tennis stars among the fair sex. But not as quickly as some would like, and certainly not in the schools.

Billie Jean King in her provocative book, "Billie Jean", tells of a discussion with her husband Larry (who is heavily involved in the business end of the game) about the "lousy deal" girls are still getting in interscholastic sports.

Referring to the situation in the United States — and it is the same elsewhere — Ms. King says that in 1971 there were 300,000 girls in the entire country in high school sports; in 1973 there were 800,000. A considerable jump until, as she says, the small base figure is considered.

With everyone, including the Government, encouraging women to widen their job potential, there should also be more effort toward participation in sport. Eventually Canada might even produce a star of the calibre of those winning top money on the professional circuit.

Troubled Land

Once the news from Northern Ireland was that it was hanging on the "brink of civil war." This when much of what was happening was in fact "civil war."

But that was not the whole story during these past six years or so of terrorism which has cost more than 1,000 civilian and military deaths.

Life continued with a fair degree of normalcy and where the economy was concerned it was business as usual. Indeed it was in 1971, if memory serves, that per capital production in Northern Ireland was reported as being higher than the rest of the United Kingdom, not to mention that of such advanced nations as Germany, Sweden, and Japan.

In the midst of tragedy, there have been bright spots, and ingenuity to combat a difficult situation. Such as advances in brain surgery at Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital, stemming from bomb injuries, educational programs in the schools aimed at keeping youngsters off the streets during the summer holidays, maintenance of cultural activities, and so on.

Unhappily, there is renewed evidence that the focus of IRA terrorism has now shifted to Great Britain. And this, on the heels of rumors of another extension of the on-again off-again truce. Sanity has yet to prevail in this troubled situation. How much longer will it take?

Candidates Weigh their Chances

'I'm in the Race Depending...' is the Rallying-cry of PCs

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — A number of Progressive Conservatives appear to have a toe in the leadership waters testing the temperature before deciding whether to take the plunge.

They can be identified by the expression, "it depends on who else runs."

With Robert Stanfield planning to step down late this year, there is no shortage of potential candidates to succeed him. But few members of caucus have given firm indications and appear to be watching to see who takes the plunge first.

"Outside of Stanfield and myself, each one is available," says former John Diefenbaker.

Most of the in-caucus speculation centres on eight or nine people—some of whom openly admit to temperature testing.

Eldon Woolliams, 54, (Calgary North) has made it clear on several occasions that he is interested in the job.

It is generally assumed that the race will attract both Flora MacDonald, 48, (Kingston and the Islands) and Heward Grafftey, 46, (Brome-Missisquoi). Neither has discounted the idea.

Jack Horner, 47, (Crowfoot) the plain-talking Alberta rancher, says he is "looking over the country and it's looking pretty good to me."

"I have been all across the West talking with people and now I am going to Nova Scotia and my finger tips will be feeling the pulse."

Another name frequently mentioned is Sinclair Stevens, the 47-year-old lawyer-businessman from York-Simcoe and the Conservative finance critic.

"I would still have an open mind on the subject. It would be premature to decide before the convention date is even announced. And I'd be interested in seeing who else is in the running."

Someone else who wants to see the other watertesters in action is Allan Lawrence (Northumberland-Durham), who came to Parliament after a good shot at the Ontario leadership.

"I just don't know," says the 49-year-old former Ontario attorney-general. "There are all sorts of things to consider—the timing, the location, who else is running and whether I really want to do it."

Joe Clark, 34, MP for Rocky Mountain and a former president of the party's student federation, is another possibility.

"I am not planning to run," said the fluently bilingual Albertan. "But I don't rule out anything that might develop."

Most members are confident that Claude Wagner, 49, the former Quebec justice minister and MP for St.-Hyacinthe, will be at the starting gate. But he offers little information on the subject.

"I haven't even thought of it. I am busy trying to do the best job I can where I am."

Two British Columbia MPs are included in all the talk about a new leader.

John Reynolds (Burnaby-Richmond-Delta), a 32-year-old marketing consultant, said: "I'll just say I am not running. I'll have something more specific to say on it, perhaps Monday."

John Fraser, 43-year-old Vancouver lawyer, who has been high on the speculators' lists, could not be reached for comment. He was off on a French immersion course, which might or might not be significant.

Illegal Aliens Pose a Problem

Montreal Gazette

The problem of illegal aliens in Canada is a mess — legally, economically, and morally. This is the overriding point repeatedly driven home in the series of articles by Jacques Hamilton now running in The Gazette.

Immigration Minister Robert Andras estimates that three to five per cent of all visitors to Canada — excluding Americans — wind up as illegal immigrants every year. This works out to about 350,000 of whom perhaps 10,000 may be caught. Illegal immigrants thus exceed by well over 100,000 annually the number of legal arrivals.

Laws and enforcement procedures that tolerate violations on such a scale can only encourage continued flouting of the system. It is questionable whether they are better than no law at all.

The flood of illegal immigrants, simply because it is illegal, spins off violent eddies of associated criminal activities — fraud, bribery, loan sharking, prostitution, blackmail and others — which, because of the easy, silent money to be made, quickly attract organized crime.

Illegal immigrants are easily exploited, since they dare not complain for fear of exposure. They risk what are often their families to come here and take poor jobs at substandard wages and live in slum housing. They are preyed upon by social parasites, but many in turn become parasites themselves, tapping into welfare and medicare systems without paying income taxes.

It is the price we pay for our prosperity, for that is what brings the illegal immigrants here. Poorly educated and easily exploitable as they are, thousands of these people in Canada find life better than anything they have known before. Earning $75 a week can be as much as a Haitian or an Indian would earn in nine months at home. So they keep coming, because for all its evils and illegality, life in Canada is a chance for a new start they could not otherwise get.

What is this country to do? Whatever it does, it must make its laws more credible. This might require more manpower. At present fewer than 30 men in Montreal are supposed to track down 15 to 30 thousand illegal immigrants. It might require newly married foreign husbands and wives of Canadians to wait as long as anyone else before acquiring citizenship.

It might require federal coordination with the provinces to crack down on make-beleve students in scarcely more than make-believe schools. It might require legislating stiffer penalties for those who profit from the illegal aliens and negotiating with other countries to make the profiteering an extraditable offence.

National solutions to international problems are necessarily elusive, and we shall probably never entirely control illegal immigration unless Canada becomes less attractive than the country left behind. Ottawa can help avoid that by keeping away from identity cards and other remedies likely to infringe on the liberties of citizens.

Snowmobiles Go Down in Thin Ice

Oshawa Times

The deaths of four snowmobilers when their two machines plunged through the ice of Lake Timiskaming Saturday night and the close calls of four Durham residents earlier last week when their machines went through the ice on Lake Scugog should be a grim warning to snowmobilers everywhere.

Lakes hold tremendous attraction for snowmobilers because they usually provide good, clear surfaces for travel. With the cold spell in which we now find ourselves, most lakes will be solid enough for travel now. But there are always pressure cracks or air bubbles in lake ice, even in the deep of winter. That's why the people who should know — manufacturers, police and safety spokesmen — keep telling snowmobilers to stay away from lakes.

So far this year there have been seven snowmobile fatalities in Ontario, two of the other three due to collisions and the third caused when a driver fell off his vehicle and was struck by it. There were 41 deaths in Ontario in 1974 and 127 in snowmobile accidents across Canada last year.

The figures, compared to our national and Ontario traffic tolls, aren't spectacular. What makes them particularly saddening, though, is that in most cases those deaths were needless.

The Ontario government and the snowmobile clubs have been working for some time now in creating a network of safe snowmobile trails across Ontario. Snowmobiling is a popular sport, growing more popular all the time. But until its enthusiasts realize its hazards, its toll will continue to grow along with its popularity.

Sudbury Man's Visit

Hawaii Trip Dream of 14-year-old Dying of Cancer in Belleville, Ill.

From The Sudbury Star

"When she told me her last wish was to go to Hawaii, I couldn't help myself. The tears ran down my cheeks. Here was this little girl dying and being so calm and cool about it ..."

These were the sentiments expressed by Sudbury businessman Russell J. Penny as he told of his meeting with 14-year-old Heidi Biggs, a resident of Belleville, Ill., afflicted with a rare cancerous disease which is threatening her life.

Penny, a 40-year-old home appliance salesman, first learned of Heidi's plight when he saw a picture in the Dec. 13 issue of The Sudbury Star showing the young girl reading the Bible to her brother as she lay in bed. At that time, it was questionable whether Heidi would live to see Christmas.

Happily, she did and thanks to the efforts of Penny, it was a memorable holiday. Moved by the account in The Star, Penny decided to phone Heidi to wish her a Merry Christmas. He talked with the girl's mother, Mrs. Lucille Biggs, and was surprised to learn that the dying girl had received few calls or holiday messages.

Responding to the situation, Penny placed advertisements in Sudbury and St. Louis, Mo., newspapers asking readers to make Heidi's last Christmas a memorable one by sending her a card of greeting.

Scores of cards and letters from Sudbury and area residents — many of them from school children — were among the 300 greetings Heidi received from Ontario. An additional 700 messages of hope came from people across the U.S., including a card from Elvis Presley.

"I can't begin to tell people in Sudbury and other parts of the province what those cards mean to her," Penny stated. "She is simply overjoyed."

Besides arranging the advertisements, Penny went one step further. He made a special trip to Belleville to meet Heidi. "It was while attending a New Year's Eve church service with Heidi that she confided in me her wish to visit Hawaii," the Sudbury businessman said.

This request led to the most recent development in the Heidi Biggs story — the setting up of a trust fund that will hopefully enable her to visit the island state before her death.

Contributions to the Heidi Biggs Fund can be sent to Henry River, Belleville National Savings Bank, 23 Public Square, Belleville, Ill., or to Chief of Police Barry Biehl, Belleville Police Dept., City Hall, Belleville, Ill.

Penny, who helped establish the fund, said, "This is the first time I've ever done anything like this. But I love people and this poor girl, lying there all alone and dying ... it could be me or you."

"I can only hope with others, that everything will work out for the best and Heidi will live to see the realization of her dream," he concluded.

Detroit Pursesnatchers Surprised

Peterborough Examiner

Amidst horror stories from around the world where man's inhumanity to man is calmly watched by other men who won't lift a finger to help (remember Kitty Genovese's screams?) a few pieces of good news filter down.

Recently in Detroit, city of the 'Saturday night special' a purse snatcher got more than he bargained for. He grabbed 65-year-old Grace McLaughlin's purse, headed for the back alleys, and was immediately chased by an angry throng of 100 people and a car.

Grace blew a whistle she keeps handy for such occasions, screamed, and started off after the man in what, in most cases, would have been a futile gesture of self-reliance.

But immediately, the 100-odd bystanders sprang into action; several called the police; most of them darted after the disappearing desperado; and Michael Higgins, sitting in his car, stepped on the gas to join the chase but lost control and smashed into an apartment building.

That roused more vigilantes, and one of them eventually cornered the thief with a shovel. The purse was recovered intact and the thief was turned over to the police.

"It was beautiful," said a pedestrian. "A hundred people from a mixed neighborhood - black and white - chasing up and down trying to catch a thief."

"If more people get involved, the crime rate will go down," said another participant in The Great Chase.

Wooded Areas Opened to Public

West German Information Bulletin

Germany's woods and forests, including even private woods, are to be made freely accessible to the public in principle under a new law approved by the German Bundestag.

The law states that only in a few exceptional cases will access be prohibited or fencing be permitted.

The new legislation also provides generous openings for horseback riding. In the past walkers and hikers, not to mention owners, have raised strong objections to the way horses have kicked up paths.

There are to be limitations, however, on camping and caravanning.

The new law is likely to come into force on January 1, 1975, and its approval follows a long-drawn-out debate on what constitutes woodland and the public's right to use it.

Solar Heat Tried for Drying Corn

Minneapolis Tribune

The University of Minnesota is about to embark on a modest - but potentially far-reaching - project in the use of solar heat to dry corn. With a $14,000 grant from U.S. Department of Agriculture, university engineers will experiment with a solar collector as a supplemental source of heat for a grain dryer. If the project is successful, it would help reduce the use of liquefied petroleum gas and other fuels for drying grain and would reduce costs. The solar-heat studies will be run at the Southwest Experiment Station at Lamberton, Minn., and on the St. Paul campus. We hope the project is successful.

Commentary on Educational Scene

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Howard Moscoe's response to Mrs. Williamson's commentary on teachers endorsing candidates for boards of education was quite interesting and informative but he spoiled it all by asking Mrs. Williamson to apologize for expressing her opinion.

According to "Mastering Effective English" by Tressler-Lewis, 3rd edition, Copp Clark, a text used in the high schools of Ontario, "an editorial or commentary on the news does not pretend to be a straight report. Rather it is someone's opinion about a current news item. Some readers and listeners, unfortunately, often accept opinions as fact."

It seems strange that a teacher would not know the definition of an editorial and expect a researched report when all that is expected of an editorial, is an opinion. Furthermore, one must become a little concerned about the kind of teachers we have when one of them starts expecting people to apologize for their opinions — shades of the Inquisition!

Many Worried About MP Pay Hike

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Undoubtedly one of the first items of business to come before the House of Commons when it reconvenes will be the Bill to increase the Members' salaries and tax free allowances.

The first wave of opposition was of such proportions that the House adjourned debate to enable the members to sound out their constituents on this important matter during the Christmas recess. Some members did, some did not, and those who did could only speak to a very limited number of voters. Such limited discussion could never be expected to produce an acceptable consensus of opinion.

It is my belief that one of the most effective means of showing our opposition to and — or disapproval of this measure would be the general public expressing their disapproval, by writing to the Prime Minister.

Log Houses Suggested For North

OTTAWA (CP) — Log houses may be the answer to severe housing problems in communities along the Mackenzie River Valley, Wally Firth (NDP—Northwest Territories) said Monday.

Timber grows abundantly in the valley and the government should use it to alleviate northern housing problems, he told the Commons. Prefabricated housing was expensive, maintenance costs were high and shipping problems caused construction delays.

Pickering Bill Stirs Debate

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition members of the legislature Monday attacked the government's record of consultation with those affected by the proposed development of the North Pickering community.

In a four-hour debate on a bill to establish a development corporation to plan the community, Stephen Lewis, NDP leader, condemned the North Pickering experience as a "classic" example of the unresponsiveness of the Davis government.

Both opposition parties opposed in principle the bill which would set up a government-appointed body to plan the area, near the site of a proposed second major airport for Toronto.

Nixon Submits Pay Cut Bill

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon jumped the government Monday by introducing a private member's bill which would cut cabinet ministers' salaries and his own pay by five per cent.

The Liberal leader also introduced an amendment which would prevent members of the legislature from receiving additional pay for sitting on provincial boards and commissions. Private member's bills rarely come to a vote.

Ads Assailed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative consumer affairs spokesman asked the government Monday to take action against gasoline companies for misleading advertising about unleaded gasoline.

James A. McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said the CBC-TV program Marketplace Sunday "clearly substantiated" false and misleading advertising relating to the economy of the fuel

Justice Minister Otto Lang said that in a case such as this, his department would carry out its own investigation. If the law was violated, action would be taken, "but I can't give a blanket answer."

Aid Queried

OTTAWA (CP) — Demands were renewed in the Commons Monday by the Conservatives for a full - scale committee inquiry into foreign aid programs.

But External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said the government has no plans to initiate such an inquiry. The Commons external affairs committee would have ample opportunity to examine the question when it studies the spending estimates of the Canadian International Development Corporation.

Price Cuts Help

OTTAWA (CP) — Price discounts have already had some effect in stimulating sales in the automotive industry, Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie said Monday.

Ed Broadbent, NDP parliamentary leader, asked what progress the government has made in dealing with layoffs in the auto industry. Some estimates had set the number of laid-off workers at up to 40,000.

'Tory Boroughs' Protected - - Claim

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition members of the legislature criticized recommendations Monday of a three-man commission for proposed changes in provincial electoral boundaries.

The final recommendations, made public late last year, would add eight new seats to the 117-member legislature, if approved

Donald MacDonald (NDP—York South) told the legislature the independent commission had applied guidelines set down by the legislature only "when it suited them" but had perversely misapplied the guidelines in other situations.

He pointed to wide disparities in the number of constituents to be represented in rural and urban ridings as one example.

In eastern Ontario, an area of "Tory boroughs," he said, the commission had held more closely to existing boundaries than adhering to the principle of representation by population.

Mr. MacDonald said that in that area of the province the guideline that no greater than 25-per-cent deviation would be allowed had been ignored.

Nor had the commission given a rational justification of departure from guidelines.

James Breithaupt (L—Kitchener) said his chief concern was that the commission had not adopted "block" constituencies in Metropolitan Toronto to reflect communities of interest and instead had held with "strip" ridings.

He said it was likely too late to involve full public hearings in any revamping before the next provincial election but he hoped further consideration would be given to changes in the Metro ridings.

Members of both opposition parties said they felt it would have been preferable if the commission had allowed more public participation and followed the lead of redistribution of federal ridings which allowed for about 15-per-cent deviation in riding population from the average.

5-year Minimum Term For Gun Use Is Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Persons carrying guns for criminal purposes should be jailed for a minimum of five years, John Diefenbaker said Monday.

The former prime minister termed as lax the existing penalty for such offences, which is a maximum five-year sentence.

Solicitor - General Warren Allmand in the Commons exchange said he believes personally that gun laws should be tightened and a review is under way by government officials. No decisions had been made, however.

He promised to pass Mr. Diefenbaker's suggestion on to those in charge of the review.

Mr. Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) said a change is needed because of the crime by "thugs who are terrorizing all parts of Canada."

Outside the House, Mr. Diefenbaker said criminals have declared war on the public and have set off "an avalanche of crime."

Sells Interest

NEW YORK (Reuter) — American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (A.T. and T.) has sold its remaining interest in Bell Canada, the company said Monday. A.T. and T. said it has sold the 749,992 shares it held in Bell Canada to Canadian and other foreign investors.

Carton Has No Memory Of Sale

TORONTO (CP) — Gordon Carton, former Ontario transportation minister, said in an interview today he has no recollection of any correspondence concerning the purchase of 100 acres of land for a proposed highway right of way.

The Globe and Mail says in a front-page story that documents tabled in the legislature Monday show a December, 1972, letter from W. W. Buchanan of Ottawa to A. B. R. Lawrence, former provincial secretary for resources development, saying Mr. Buchannan had an interest in the land and asking for Mr. Lawrence's help.

Mr. Buchanan is a former chairman of the federal anti-dumping tribunal who resigned in 1972 after the federal government attempted to quash a tribunal order concerning importation of glass.

The newspaper says the letter said in part:

"To the extent that you feel able to do so I would greatly appreciate an indication as to when, if ever, we might anticipate reaching an agreement to dispose of this property to the government."

The newspaper says Mr. Lawrence passed the letter on to Mr. Carton with an accompanying letter, dated Dec. 8, 1972, describing Mr. Buchanan, now a private consultant who said he had "an interest" in the land, as a friend.

A letter dated Jan. 3, 1973, which The Globe and Mail says is a copy of the one Mr. Carton sent responding to Mr. Lawrence, reads in part:

"It has been determined that a portion of this land will be required for the highway. Our staff will establish the exact requirements and will complete the necessary appraisals. Following this, we will contact the owners and proceed with negotiations on a voluntary sale basis, providing funds are available."

In March, 1973, the government purchased the land from Fantum Holdings Ltd. for $1.5 million.

But Mr. Carton, member of the legislature for Armourdale, said in the interview that he does not remember the exchange with Mr. Lawrence and was not aware if the land had been bought.

Humane Society Conduct Is Under Investigation

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Solicitor-General George Kerr said Monday that officials are investigating allegations of misconduct in the Ontario Humane Society made public by former society employees.

He was replying in the legislature to Edward Good (L—Waterloo North) who asked what action was underway following charges that seized animals were sold contrary to regulations and 1973 lottery funds had been misused.

Mr. Kerr said one lawsuit was before the courts as a result of the charges and other matters still are under investigation.

The provincial government funds the society through a $50,000 annual grant which Mr. Kerr said was expected to increase to $75,000 in the next set of government estimates.

'Dust Is Killer' Mine Probe Told

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — While a former mine worker carrying a sign reading "Remember Inco Kills" marched outside the Holiday Inn Monday, United Steelworkers of America spokesmen were inside testifying before the Ham commission hearing into safety and health conditions in Ontario mines.

J. L. Gagnon, chairman of a committee representing former employees at the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Inco) sintering plant at nearby Copper Cliff, said mine dust must be eliminated to protect workers.

"Dust is a killer," he said. "To me, there is no acceptable level."

He said about 1,200 workers had been "exposed to miserable working conditions" of the former sintering plant. About 60 of these had contracted lung cancer, 40 of them terminal, and about 60 have contracted other serious respiratory diseases.

The sintering plant, shut down in 1963, was replaced by another milling process

HOW COME I'M PAYING SO MUCH TAX?
TAXMAN
$562

If you made over $10,000 last year, odds are you paid at least $562 more income tax than you should have.
Like a lot of Canadians, you probably thought Registered Retirement Savings Plans were for somebody else. Somebody who makes a lot more money than you do. Somebody who doesn't have a company pension plan like you do.
You're wrong. Virtually anybody earning a living can save money with an RSP.
For instance, a man earning $10,000 a year can use an RSP to get as much as a $562 tax refund.
A man with a company pension plan can still reduce his taxable income by up to $2,500 and wind up paying as much as 30% less income tax.
Even if you have no ready cash to put into an RSP, you can use whatever qualified stocks and bonds or trust and deposit certificates you own to get a substantial tax refund.
You can probably even borrow the money to get into an RSP from Guaranty Trust. And wind up earning a good deal more than the after-tax cost of your loan.
So when you finally stop working or need money for something really important, you'll have the money put away.
It's all fully explained in a comprehensive, yet delightfully simple new book that's free from Guaranty Trust.
There's one catch though. After March 1, the government won't let you into an RSP that will do you any good on your 1974 income tax return.
So drop into your local Guaranty Trust branch or send in the coupon and we'll get an RSP book off to you right away.
It could be the difference between thinking about what you're going to give the government, or looking forward to what the government is going to give you.
I want a big tax refund this year.

Teachers 'Graded' Not Kids

SIAN, China (Reuter) — Kuan Li-ching, 17, looks the very model of a demure student. But appearances deceive.

Miss Kuan, along with some 1,200 schoolmates at the Chang An (Eternal Tranquility) School near Sian, is not above making forthright verbal attacks against her teachers and indeed she considers it her right to do so.

The teen-agers are taking their cue from an even younger colleague called Huang Shuai, a 12-year-old schoolgirl from Peking who made national headlines last year.

Miss Huang earned the spotlight by writing a diary accusing one of her teachers of overdoing discipline and stifling pupils' initiative.

The national media took up the girl's cause. The People's Daily front-paged her diary, she appeared on television and, during this year's celebrations of the 25th founding anniversary of the People's Republic of China, she was easily the youngest of 4,500 prominent personalities at the anniversary reception.

The Huang Shuai affair heralded the start of a shakeup in China's educational world aimed at countering the appearance of a number of undesirable conservative trends. trends.

The last decade has been a period of innovation in Chinese education, with a greater accent on practical application of classroom work and a variety of novel ideas such as open-book exams, where pupils can consult textbooks.

Huan Shuai felt her teacher was drifting back to the bad old days. The authorities evidently agreed with her and encouraged the whole nation to learn from her experience.

In Sian, both teachers and students said they welcomed the chance to reassess the school's work. The pupils said they have several times taken their teachers to task.

Miss Kuan, interviewed in the presence of some of her teachers, recalled how her mathematics teacher "had a tendency of failing to combine theory with practice", meaning he concentrated to much on booklearning).

"Other students fela the same. So we suggested to the teacher that he improve his ways."

Another teacher felt the rough edge of his pupils' tongues when he chastised one of tem, who was sick, for failing to do his best during a games period.

A 17-year-old boy, Chan Chih-ying, explained what happened. "When the teacher came to realize his mistake he went to the class and made a self-criticism to the sick student. After that the relationship between teachers and pupils improved."

What do the teachers think of their charges' right to tick them off?

"We are all fighters in the same trench," was the bland response of one teacher.

In fact, judging from the relative mildness of the examples of student criticism offered by the pupils here, it is clear they are much more restrained than their colleagues during the 1966-69 Cultural Revolution, when there were instances of teachers being publicly humiliated and beaten up.

One aim of the campaign may have been to convince the Chinese people that there can be country-wide debate and differences of opinion without the nation flying apart at the seams.

What this presumably means for institutions like Sian's Eternal Tranquility School is that both teachers and pupils are encouraged to debate and discuss the system with a view to improving it, not upsetting it.

Fathers Just As Qualified

PARIS (Reuter) — Francoise Giroud, France's first secretary of state for women's affairs, suggested recently that husbands could stay home to look after the children in their early years.

home until the youngest child is three, four, five or six, I don't see why the husband shouldn't stay behind just as much as the woman."

"It would be far from a bad thing for the child," she said.

All the Greats Collected Here

There's Billy De Wolfe and Bing Crosby, Betty Grable and Torchy Peden, Mae West and Mary Pickford.

Benny Leonard and Fanny Brice, Jack Benny and even Margaret Lynne Munn.

The now-famous and the then-famous, all commemorated in carefully prepared albums and scrapbooks, the work of 30 years of autograph and photograph collecting by a man forced by life to curb his adventuring spirit.

The black and white 8 x 10 photographs with hand-written autographs were collected by John Campbell, a young Scotsman who left his home and travelled the world for many years.

Then his wife, Annie, was injured in a fall down a manhole and spent the next — and last — 25 years of her life in bed.

To amuse her and to add spice to his now-tame life, John Campbell began collecting autographs, writing hundreds of letters and receiving, by the time he died in 1965 at age 80, more than 700 photographs and autographs.

A machinist with the CNR, John Campbell recalled, years ago, that the only person who ignored his plea for an autograph was Joseph Stalin.

Now that both Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are dead, the collection belongs to their son's widow, Doris Campbell.

She's carefully preserved them — it was she who mounted them in albums and scrapbooks — and now, besides taking them out occasionally to display or look at herself, she says she doesn't know what to do with them.

The collection includes, Mrs. Campbell says, a tightly rolled scroll of pages closely written by John Campbell detailing the process of acquiring the autographs.

"I think they're valuable but I don't know how valuable," she says. "And I don't know what to do with them."

There's an autograph of Sally Rand — no pictures! — and Dorothy Lamour in her sarong.

"I guess my father-in-law just loved famous people," Doris Campbell says. He managed to collect for example, the signatures of the mayors of the capital cities of 46 of the United States.

There are dignitaries, in fact, from every profession. Sportsmen like boxer Benny Leonard or cyclist Torchy Peden and entertainers and Miss Canada of 1949, Margaret Lynne Munn. Even the former Minister of Veterans Affairs is there.

Of all the photographs and autographs, Mrs. Campbell says her favourite is that of the Dionne Quintuplets autographed by Dr. Allan Dafoe, the man who delivered the babies.

"There are so many things here people would enjoy," Mrs. Campbell says. "I wish I knew what to do with them."

In April the collection will be displayed at the Hastings County Museum, Glanmore House.

After that, it's back to storage until Mrs. Campbell finds a home for them.

"I don't want them to be left in a suitcase after I die," she says.

Release Woman

SANTIAGO (AP) — A Frenchwoman detained by men identifying themselves as members of the Chilean military intelligence service has been released on condition she leave the country, French embassy sources said. The woman, Monique Darrigade, 42, was released after approaches by French diplomats to Chilean government officials. Miss Darrigade has lived in Chile for the last six years.

People and Events

QUINTE WHITE CANE CLUB

Frank Deacon, vice-president of the White Cane Club presided at a recent business meeting held in the Recreation Centre. Maude Rollins informed the group that February 2-8 will be White Cane Week, with prevention of blindness as its theme.

The members learned that the Canadian Council's 30th anniversary project, financing 1,000 sight-seeing operations in Bangladesh, surpassed its goal of $5,000.

Entertainment was provided by John Seames who played musical saw, and violin, and Leon Gannon who played mouth organ.

Lunch was provided by the Kinettes club.

CHRIST CHURCH A.C.W.

Christ Church A.C.W. held its annual meeting earlier this month.

The devotional, especially appropriate for the season of Epiphany, was presented by Dorothy Wright, Eleanor Wood and Claire Smith.

Reports from conveners showed that the group had completed a rewarding year. Mrs. Ethel Green told of the recent induction of the new Bishop of Ontario Diocese, Right Reverend Henry Hill and news of the recent corporate communion for workers and shut-ins was given.

Installation of the new executive was conducted by Reverend John Uttley with the following officers being elected: Past president, Ida Godden; President, Lois Beeby; Vice-president, Bernice Willis; Secretary, Margaret Devolin; Treasurer, Eleanor Bailey. Conveners for all of the activities of the A.C.W. were also ontroduced and installed.

Plans for a rummage sale and a dinner for the Men's Club Ladies' Night were discussed and finalized. At the February meeting a member of the Altar Guild will be the guest speaker.

Canon R.B. Wright closed the meeting with a message titled "1975, the Eucharistic Year'.

Ellen Vesterfelt and Florence McRae were hostesses.

BELLEVILLE NSA

The Belleville chapter of the National Secretaries Association met at the Sun Luck Gardens for their January meeting.

President Dorothy Aitchison informed the group about a year-long awareness program being fostered by the international organization, funded by a $25,000 government grant. The project is aimed at educating the public about the essential important role that secretaries play in business. Hopefully this recognition will open up positions of management to the experienced and capable women who are still, at this point, in supporting roles.

During 1975, NSA personnel will work with all levels of the community to bring about further understanding of secretarial skills, with special emphasis during "Secretaries Week" the last week of April.

The program for the evening concerned methods of relaxation, during which travel, hobbies and cosmetic treatment were recommended.

Ann Landers

'Controlled Alcoholic' Just a Drunk

Dear Ann Landers: My husband proudly proclaims himself as "one whom Ann Landers would call a 'controlled' alcoholic." Well, I am willing to bet my last buck you never made any such statement because I don't think there is such a thing.

What Harry considers "control" is that he never touches a drop until he gets home from work. He also brags that he has never missed a day at the office because of a hangover. He says he can quit drinking when he feels he has had enough. And he can.

But not everyting is under control. He must have a drink the minute he steps inside the door. He can consume approximately half a bottle straight—in a single evening. Now for the problem

Harry is a highly-paid professional, loves his work, is attractive and well-liked, generous and thoughtful—when he's sober. The minute he starts to guzzle he becomes argumentative sarcastic, paranoid and the least little thing sets him off. He talks non-stop—mostly nonsense—and repeats himself until I could scream. He never listens to one word anyone says.

What should I do? Please don't suggest A.A., a physician, religion or counselling. He insists he is a "controlled drinker" and therefore has no problem. How about some vital statistics that might scare him into sobriety?—A Desperate Wife

Dear Wife: Your husband will not be scared into sobriety by statistics or anything else. He is a drunk and "controlled" is just a word he made up to reduce the stigma.

An alcoholic should not have one drop of liquor, wine or beer. Until your husband is willing to accept that theory he will be a victim of the bottle.

Since you obviously plan on sticking with him, I'D like to suggest Al-Anon. It's an organization for people who have opted to live with drunks. The Address is: Al-Anon Family Group Headquarters, Inc., P.O. Box 182, Madison Square Station, New York, New York 10010. Write for information. It could do you a great deal of good and him as well.

Dear Ann Landers: remember your advice, "Don't marry the best-looking fellow in school, the terrific dancer, the guy with all the personality or the star athlete"? It was excellent and I agree—but why didn't you go on and advise those girls to stick with their solid, balding, unspectacular guys instead of grabbing our husband for the evening and leaving us stranded with the solid citizen who is a Rock of Gibraltar in a crisis but can't dance worth a damn?

My husband has his faults, but he is great-looking and a terrific dancer. Whenever we go where there's music I get cut in on left and right by gals whose husbands have two left feet. They say, "You have Jerry all the time——," I'm left standing on the floor like a fool. My husband is flattered out of his mind and wouldn't dream of rebuffing them.

If you print this letter I promise to clip it out and carry it in my evening bag so I can hand it to the next gal who horns in.—Twinkie Tees Who Sits Out the Best Numbers

Dear Twink: OK clip it out. But I can't imagine a dame stopping to read a column on the dance floor. What you need is Jerry's co-operation. Maybe if you show it to him and tell him you wrote it, that might help.

Historical Prints Are Good Investment

REGINA (CP — Saskatchewan is a good source of historical prints because, in the past, interest has been minimal, says a local print-making instructor.

"here's lots of good stuff floating around in this province because few people are picking it over," Jack Cowin said in an interview. There is a general lack of interest and knowledge here about graphics of historical value, he added.

"There still are lots of good buys in Saskatchewan because we have no exclusive print galleries. But if you go to places like Chicago, Toronto or Montreal, where they have print galleries, then they're hip to prices.

"A situation like this in Saskatchewan is good for the young collector because you don't really need large capital for investment."

Mr. Cowin said the province not only has a wealth of inexpensive historical graphics, but it also has a broad selection of Canadian and European prints, some of which go back as far as the 16th century.

"Most of the people who settled here are of European descent and they brought those old prints over with them.

"And this still is a good province for Canadiana. Besides being a good investment, it's also damn good art and you can quote me on that."

Although interest in historical prints lagged for many years here, the tide has turned, he said.

"Interest in prints is growing hand over fist because art is a good investment.

"A very hot item now is the Toronto Press which did the Batoche series of prints about the Riel rebellion. A few of these still are floating around Saskatchewan."

The now-defunct Toronto Press originally published the series for calendars which sold for about $1, said Mr. Cowin, an instructor at University of Regina.

Now the prints sell for hundreds of dollars, depending on their condition.

"Toronto Press prints go up at a rate of between 5 to 100 per cent a year."

Approaching historical prints or any art work as an investment calls for some study, however.

"You've got to know what you're looking for," Mr. Cowin said. "And it's like buying stocks and bonds or any other type of investment. You can get taken really badly unless you know something about what you're doing."

He said books are a good source of prints, as are the Salvation Army, junk stores, flea markets and auctions.

"Farm auctions are the best."

A buyer who stumbles onto what appears to be a valuable old print but is unsure of its worth, should have the work appraised, Mr. Cowin said, adding there are no professional, full-time art appraisers in Saskatchewan but there are some persons with experience in the trade.

"Several book dealers in town and faculty members of the anthropology department also have the knowledge to appraise prints."

Most appraisers charge 20 per cent of the estimated value of the work, he said.

"If you think you really have a good find, then go to the National Gallery in Ottawa. Often a phone call and a photograph of the print will suffice."

She's Paid to Deliver Her Own Mail

SOMERSET, y. (AP) — The postmistress of Drum, in the hollows of Southeastern Kentucky, is Rita Sears. She earns $3,300 for doing nothing.

"I don't know why they just don't go ahead and close it up,' she said. "We just sit here waiting to hear something, but we never do."

Kentucky has 825 fourth-class post office—more than any other state—and Mrs. Sears is in charge of one of them.

She inherited her job from her husband' who retired in 1970.

Mrs. Sears seldom bothers to run up the flag in front of the post office any more It hasn't a single customer, not even Mrs. Sears and her husband. Their mail is delivered by a rural-route carrier.

Mrs. Sears is not unique. Just a few hollows over is the Conrad post office run by Mrs. Jesse Bullock.

To get to the Conrad post office, you bump along three miles of dirt road, ford three streams and shoo away the chickens in the front yard of the Bullock home.

There, at 8:30 a.m every day, Mrs. Bullock raises a battered United States flag. The flagpole's base in an old tire.

Mrs. Bullock has four customers, including herself and her husband, who send 90 per cent of the mail.

This year the federal government will pay her about $4,000 for, in effect. delivering her own mail.

"I guess you just think that's awful, don't you," said Mrs. Bullock. "Well, I said something to one of my friends and she said not to worry about it. She said that if they weren't giving it away to me, they'd be giving it away to someone else, so I might as well take it'

Long-standing postal policy accords Mrs. Bullock the privilege of remaining the Conrad postmistress until she retires or dies.

When roads were bad and transportation unreliable, the fourth-class offices were often the only link between rural people and the outside world.

In recent years, with expanded rural delivery, that's no longer true. Nevertheless, the postal service keeps the operations going.

Local politics has a lot to do with it, said John J. Tohill, the postmaster at Somerset. The postal system has been slow to change.

"The postal service policy is that after a postmaster is appointed, no effort is made to pull his job out, even though the need for the office deteriorates.

"I think the unofficial policy is this: The cost of those operations is less than one per cent of our budget, so why stir up the people and the congressmen by getting rid of them?"

Should Mother's Stroke Prevent Anniversary Party?

Dear Doris: My parents will soon have a 60th wedding anniversary.

My Mother has had a stroke to her right side, is speechless and in a wheel chair. She has periodical crying spells. At present she is being taken care of in a nursing home. My Dad, who is the same age (87), still gets around fine and lives with us.

Would you suggest a two-to-four open house at the nursing Home? Or would this be imposing on them?

What would be involved in making lunch, and so on?

Doubtful.

Dear Doubtful: A great deal depends on your mother's state of mind. If, being speechless, she feels frustrated and defeated, she may not want people to see her this way.

But if she has risen above her infirmity to the point of greeting people with a smile, taking one's hand, showing appreciation to her nurses, perhaps she would like to see her friends on the occasion of this milestone.

Your first job is to consult the supervisor at the nursing home. There might be a sitting room available for quiet visits one afternoon when arrangements could be made to serve tea and cake.

Anything too taxing on her is out. A lovely bouquet and a card of congratulations signed by the family members and close friends, might be what she could appreciate most.

Confidential to Worried Aunt: First of all, the little fellow should be taken to a good pediatrician, who should be told all the facts, including his restlessness, unfriendliness with children, lack of control and tantrums.

A specialist may discover physical difficulties and prescribe calming medication.

Many wonderful things are being done for hyperactive children. You can be a big help to your sister by offering your moral support and some sound suggestions. She is probably at her wits' end about what to do.

(Please make letters to Doris, in care of this newspaper, as brief as possible — not more than two pages. And remember that stamped envelope.)

Today's Child

By Helen Allen

RICKEY

Rickey is a good-looking 12-year-old with blonde hair, blue eyes and fair skin. In good health, he wears glasses for short-sightedness.

Rickey was slow in getting started at school and he is in a special developmental class to help him catch up. He has made good progress there. He will need the special program for at least another year. Ricky is not really academically minded and will likely take a vocational course later on.

Extremely sports-minded, Rickey enjoys hockey, soccer, swimming and skating. He'd rather watch sports than any other kind of television and he makes scrapbooks about sports personalities.

This lad is good at working with his hands. He has done some woodworking and he likes building models, especially of planes.

Rickey is a likable boy who needs to feel he belongs. He needs much praise and encouragement and failing these is likely to withdraw into a moody silence.

Parents who will understand his great need for love and attention are being sought for Rickey. An active, sports-minded family with several older children would be ideal for him.

To inquire about adopting Ricky, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888 Station K., Toronto M4P 2H2.

Woman Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate judiciary committee has approved the nomination of a British-born woman, Marjorie Lynch, to be deputy administrator of the American Revolution bicentennial administration. Because of her birth, Mrs. Lynch's nomination had drawn opposition from the Daughters of The American Revolution.

Abortion Debated In New Zealand

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — Vigorous debate over whether New Zealand's abortion law should be liberalized has done little to prevent thousands of women here from having abortions each year.

The controversy over changing the law to allow abortion on demand, in line with many other western countries, suddenly flared last September when the police and government entered the fray.

Police raided New Zealand's only private abortion clinic to confiscate 500 confidential files and photograph the rooms and equpment, after receiving a complaint. This was followed by introduction of a bill in Parliament seeking to restrict abortions to public hospitals.

Since the raid, the clinic, operating on a non-profit basis, has been providing abortions for 40 women a week while police considered whether to prosecute.

The law provides up to 14 years imprisonment for anyone carrying out an abortion unless it is necessary to preserve the life of the mother. The medical director of the clinic, Dr. Rex Hunton, is adamant that all abortions carried out at the centre comply with the law.

He said 100 of the 500 women counselled in the clinic's first four months had been refused abortion and added that the majority of these had since had abortions elsewhere.

Hunton said the clinic has the support of nearly 300 doctors as well as the College of Psychiatrists, the Association of General Practitioners and the Association of Psychologists.

There has been strong opposition to private clinics from anti-abortionists who, led by the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child (SPUC), recently outnumbered pro-abortionists marching on the Parliament Buildings in Wellington.

Further controversy was provoked when Ruth Kirk, the wife of the late prime minister, Norman Kirk, strongly condemned abortion and became patron of the society.

Meanwhile the bill seeking to outlaw private hospitals carrying out abortions, which was introduced by a member of the ruling Labor party, Dr. Gerald Wall, is still being considered by government.

REAL ESTATE:

Postponement Clause Like Aspirin

Ed. McKinney
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

Often, a buyer of real estate will have to take out a second mortgage in order to finance the purchase. Mortgage seniority is determined by the date and time of registration in the land registry office. If the length of the second (normally the smaller mortgage) has a longer period of time to run than the existing first mortgage, there could be a problem.

Why? Because the first mortgage cannot be renewed or replaced without the express permission of the holder of the second mortgage. But there is a solution. The second mortgage should contain a postponement clause which would automatically allow the borrower to renew or replace the first mortgage and pocket the difference. Any increas in amount must be used to reduce the second mortgage.

The moral here is to know your mortgage expiration date and pocket the difference. Any increase in amount must be used a financial headache.

Record Spending

The petroleum industry spent a record $100 million in 1974 searching for energy off Canada's East Coast and came up with some encouraging natural gas strikes. The Geological Survey of Canada has identified the Alberta oil sands, the Arctic Islands, the Mackenzie elta and East Coast offshore as Canada's major energy pools for future use. All these reserves are costly to develop and need "world prices to justify investment, say industry spokesman. The Mobil-Tetco Sable Island well was the first reported discovery off the East Coast and since then strikes have been made in the Grand Banks, off the Labrador coast and near Prince Edward Island. Job of Harbormaster At Halifax Demanding

HALIFAX (CP) — Cmdr. R. G. Guy has one of Halifax's most nerve-wracking jobs.

He's the Queen's harbormaster making him directly responsible for the port's military dockyard including co-ordinating the supply and movement of all military and auxiliary ships in the harbor.

He controls a staff of 365 civilians and 12 armed forces personnel.

There are 11 jetties and 55 berths and Cmdr. Guy has to determine which of the various docking spaces best suits the needs of a particular ship.

The traffic control office is manned 24 hours to maintain a safe flow of traffic in the port. Th office works closely with transport department harbor control to co-ordinate the movement of military and civilian ships.

Record Amount Spent In Offshore Oil Hunt

CALGARY (CP) — The petroleum industry spent a record $100 million in 1974 searching for energy off Canada's East Coast—and came up with some "encouraging" national gas strikes.

But transforming the Atlantic basin's huge potential into home-heating oils and gasoline—still is a thing of the future, made more uncertain, industry sources say, by the country's prevailing political climate

The industry has spent $400 million on exploration off the Maritime provinces to date. The previous record for a year's investment was $91 million in 1973.

The increase in spending, however, does not mean that drilling activity is up, because the cost of exploration has increased sharply during the last year, says Hans Maciej, manager of economic affairs with the Canadian Petroleum Association. (CPA)

Drilling activity is barely at last year's level and the association is forecasting "a decrease in both spending and activity" in 1975 as a result of federal resource-taxation policies, he said.

The Geological Survey of Canada has identified the Alberta oil sands, the Arctic Islands, the Mackenzie Delta and its adjacent offshore areas of the Beaufort Sea, and East Coast offshore as Canada's major energy pools for future use.

But all these reserves are costly to develop and need "world prices" to justify investment, the industry says.

Shell Canada Ltd. estimates on a barrel-equivalent basis that it requires five times the investment to develop the oil sands than the conventional reserves of Western Canada. The same rule of thumb applies to other future energy pools.

Arne Nielsen, president of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd., says the industry is facing more problems in Atlantic offshore than the oil sands.

The dispute between Ottawa and the Maritime provinces over the ownership of offshore minerals and federal royalty and taxation policies—in East Coast offshore, the industry is operating on federal lands—must be resolved before the industry is able and willing to step into the production stage.

Mr. Nielsen said Ottawa, through its Nov. 18 budget provisions, is disallowing the deduction of federal royalties in computing federal income tax the same way it is disallowing the deduction of provincial royalties in computing federal income tax

Although federal royalties and "double taxation" do not affect companies operating off the East Coast now, assurances that they will be moderated are needed to attract risk capital and encourage companies to do eventual production planning.

Carl Nickle, president of Conventures Ltd. and a former president of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, says the industry "has been operating there on Ottawa's good faith since ground rules were removed in April, 1970, when royalty leases were cancelled on federal lands."

The two natural gas strikes which the industry calls the best shows in East Coast offshore to date were made off the Labrador coast by Eastcan Exploration Ltd., which has confirmed its intention to do extensive testing near the wells in 1975.

The Eastcan wells—Gudrid H-55 and Bjarni H-81—yielded gas at the rate of 20 million cubic feet and 13 million cubic feet daily respectively during testing.

Eastcan, a subsidiary of the French government-controlled Compagnie Francaise des Petroles and operator for a consortium also including Italian, United States and Canadian interests, now has classified the Gudrid and Bjarni wells in the "probable commercial discovery" category.

"But it is premature at this time to estimate the probable recoverable reserves or the threshold reserves required to warrant development," Pierre Ballard, Eastcan exploration

The Gudrid and Bjarni wells, Mr. Nickle pointed out, are some 1,000 miles north-northeast of Montreal, a likely marketplace, and pipelines would have to be built not only under the ocean but also overland to market.

And the Labrador coast, nicknamed "iceberg alley," presents major technological challenges.

Therefore, in addition to world-level prices, reasonable government policies and a favorable investment climate, "we have to find elephants rather than mice in East Coast offshore," says Dave McAsey, public affairs officer with Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd.

Another major natural gas discovery was made off Prince Edward Island by a consortium headed by Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd. The results of testing were not announced but Hudson's Bay says it was a "very encouraging" discovery.

The Hudson's Bay group—consisting of British, Belgian, U.S. and Canadian interests—encountered a "substantial flow of natural gas" at the East Point E-49 well 17 miles northeast of East Point, P.E.I.

But the Labrador shelf and Prince Edward Island discoveries, plus earlier industry finds in the Grand Banks and Sable Island areas, still are insufficient to warrant commercial development.

"In the interest of Canada's long-term energy self-sufficiency, the federal government should act quickly to remove the uncertainties surrounding East Coast development," says Scotty Cameron, general manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada.

He said the Alberta petroleum exploration plan announced by Premier Peter Lougheed will not help East Coast development much, although the industry, mostly located in Alberta, may have more cash flow as a result.

"But then the industry may want to spend the extra money in Alberta" Mr. Cameron said.

To date, no production revenue has been returned to the industry from activities off the East Coast.

Lawyers Find Sabbaticals Ease Professional Pressure

VANCOUVER (CP) — City lawyers are getting away from it all in growing numbers as law firms find sabbaticals are good for everyone concerned.

In 1970 the trend started at the young law firm of Ray, Wolfe, Connel, Lightbody and Reynolds. The partners are aged between 30 and 40 and encourage one another to take sabbaticals every five years.

Julian Ray says he has "never been quite the same" since he took his six months off.

"I take a more relaxed attitude to the pressures of the profession," Mr. Ray said. "I've learned to appreciate leisure time."

Mr. Ray, his wife and three children toured Europe.

One partner worked on his ranch, another played tennis and also went to Europe and a third lived in Israel, working on an archeological dig.

"People want time, they don't want money any more," said Mr. Ray.

But with lawyers hitting the top incomes in the land, and with "only a slight financial penalty" levied on sabbatical time' they don't need to worry.

Shrum, Liddle and Hebenton (12 lawyers, aged 24 to 43) offer three months at full pay to their 25 secretaries and non-legal staff after six years' service.

The lawyers get two-thirds to three-quarters of their salaries after six years but they can take six months off.

Sholto Hebenton spent his first four months in Toronto teaching company law at Osgoode Hall and University of Toronto. He lectured only four hours a week. The last two months were spent with his wife and two children in Europe.

"Law is a stressful occupation," Mr. Hebenton said. "The point was to give myself a complete rest and come back refreshed.

"I still feel refreshed."

Sabbaticals are the company policy at Davis, Hossie, Campbell, Brazier and McClorg, one of the city's oldest law firms, but nobody seems enthusiastic about it.

Partner Arthur Johnson said the company gives three months off, fully paid, to lawyers after five years. After 10 or 15 years, they get six months.

How's Your Hearing?

Montreal — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

This is not a real hearing aid but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit. No wires lead from body to head.

These models are free, so write for yours now. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 9406, Beltone Electronics of Canada Ltd., 3637 Metropolitan Blvd., E., Montreal H12 2K2, P.Q.

You can help conserve electricity, too: this free Hydro booklet tells you how.

Foundry or kitchen, we'll help you use less electricity

Bernie Campbell of Ontario Hydro's Western Region is one of a team whose main responsibility is to show our customers how to use less of our product...by using it more efficiently. He works with industrial and commercial users, who consume about 65% of the power we produce.

Everyone who uses electricity, whether it's a lot or a little, can conserve it; and we'd like to help you. Unfortunately we don't have enough Bernie Campbells to go around; but we do have a booklet which suggests many simple ways of checking your use of electricity and other fuels around the home.

Send for a copy of "The Wise Use of Electricity", or ask for one at your local Hydro office.

Saving electricity isn't difficult. And if we each save a little, we'll all save a lot.

Official Plan Will Okay Mobile Homes

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville's official plan will permit mobile home subdivisions, says Quinte Planning Board director Bert Kenny.

He said, while there are strenuous regulations on such development, "it is quite possible the way the plan stands right now," for mobile home subdivisions to be developed in the city.

Though mobile home subdivisions received scant comment during official plan discussion, it is likely much more attention will be paid to them during upcoming public meetings on a zoning bylaw to implement the official plan, said Mr. Kenny.

"The zoning bylaw meeting will invariably bring out the people in opposition," said Mr. Kenny. "There'll probably be a fair amount of debate on the mobile homes."

The plan has already received local approval and now awaits final approval from the provincial government. Once the plan meets provincial approval, the zoning bylaw will be submitted.

"If there is a focus of protest on mobile homes, it will not necessarily delay passage of the zoning bylaw," said Mr. Kenny.

"Referrence to mobile homes can be deleted (from the document) and re-instated later through an official plan and zoning bylaw amendment," he said.

On the other hand, if mobile homes are acceptable during the public hearings on the bylaw, mobile homes will become a "permitted land use" and will be bound by regulation similar to those imposed on row housing, said Mr. Kenny.

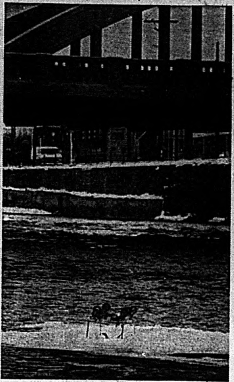
The two major requirements on a developer setting up a mobile home subdivision will be a minimum subdivision land assembly of 10 acres and that seven units an acre will be the maximum density.

At present neither Belleville or Thurlow Township allow mobile homes in the municipality.

Mr. Kenny said if the zoning passes "public scrutiny," spot placement of mobile homes would not be permitted in the plan and that mobile homes would have to locate with in a 10-acre park.

Graham Attends Gathering

Among the guests who attended the special gathering Saturday at the Belleville Armories to honor Lt.-Col. The Lord John Tweedsmuir, former commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment during the Second World War, was Lt.-Gen. Howard Graham (Ret.), retired chief of defence staff for Canada. Gen. Graham is also a former Hasty-Pee commanding officer. He enlisted for the First World War at the armories here.



Cart Caper

The second sighting of a grocery cart locked in ice in the Moira River in two weeks was reported to city police Monday. The latest metal victim sits here topsy-turvy near the North Front St. bridge. "They think it's a big joke," a police spokesman said of the pranksters who spirit carts off downtown food store lots. The joke could be on those caught with the carts who could be charged with theft or possession of stolen goods, and if apprehended while dunking the cart in the river, a wilful damage charge could be added.

Trustees Go Half Way in Pay

Hastings county trustees have been granted a 50 per cent increase in their honorarium for serving on the county board.

They turned down the opportunity, granted them under the new education act, to accept a 100 per cent increase.

Since the new bill came into effect, boards of Hastings county size have been empowered to pay their trustees $400 a month, an increase of $200 over the monthly stipend paid since larger units of administration were instituted in 1969.

Hastings county trustees voted against accepting the maximum monthly sum, and instead voted themselves a compromise honorarium of $300 — $100 more than they had been receiving.

The board chairman will receive $450 a month — her basic stipend as a trustee, and one-half that amount in addition for her chairmanship.

Had the board opted for the maximum honorarium, the chairman would have received $600 a month. Instead, she will be paid $450.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1975

Hastings Board Votes to Hire Truant Officers of Its Own

Hastings county board of education will hire its own attendance counsellors in the future to handle truancy in the schools. It will terminate its contract with the Family and Childrens' Service of Hastings county, which now provides the service, in June.

The board Monday night approved hiring one attendance counsellor next August at a salary of about $15,000. He will be responsible for the entire county. The pilot project in north Hastings, employing a retired teacher, will continue at an estimated annual cost of about $3,000. The board also approved a budget provision for two school-home liaison officers at about $14,000 each annually. They would work under the attendance counsellor, doing preventive work and family counselling, from those schools that have higher truancy rates than others.

The decision to terminate the Children's Aid Aociety contract for attendance counselling came after the report of a task force on truancy that found dissatisfaction on all sides with the existing situation.

Harry Birkenshaw, vice-principal of Moira Secondary School and chairman of the task force, said most of the criticism on all sides was unwarranted, but there is a problem in maintaining communication with schools and agencies concerned with chronic truants.

The quality of the CAS work was high calibre, he indicated, but the society was unable to take on all the cases the schools presented, and could not do the preventive family counselling necessary.

"We need people to follow up the chronic truant after he is back in school, and to keep in contact with the drop-out who might consider coming back," said Mr. Birkenshaw.

The north Hastings pilot project involving a retired teacher who works part-time, has proved successful, said deputy-director L. F. Reid. Last year, 104 students were reported for attendance counselling. From September to December of 1974, when the new counsellor was on the job, only 12 students required his formal services.

Trustee Don Williams of Stirling summed up the situation by quoting the opening sentences of the task force report.

"Throughout the years the role of school attendance counsellors has changed dramatically. Twenty or thirty years ago truants took a day or so off to go hunting or fishing ... truants were not usually hostile towards school and authority."

Take 3

"In our society," said Mr. Williams, "with the breakdown in guidance that used to come from the family and the church, the school is the only organization left to handle these hostile children."

Loyalist Criticism Draws Ire Of Stirling Board Member

Criticism by Loyalist College of the qualification of graduates of Hastings county schools has "disturbed" one trustee.

Former board chairman, Donald Williams of Stirling, brought up the subject of recent press reports at the Monday night meeting of the board. He referred to accusations by Loyalist College's Ernst Kneisel that incoming students were unversed in math and English and needed remedial work before they could begin college courses.

''Personally,'' said Mr. Williams, "I thought a lot more are going to school and staying in school than when I was there. Not everyone went to school when I did, a lot dropped out, and therefore the level of academic ability is not as high now as it was then."

Director of education Eric Runacres said he had been in contact with Mr. Kneisel since the printing of the two reports.

"He never meant to imply he was looking down on our secondary schools,' said Mr. Runacres. "He realizes we have trouble with the basics all through school. People who are enrolling at Loyalist are people who never went to school 20 years ago. Their level of performance is not as high — they have to be helped to upgrade.

"The statement that people are having trouble with the basics is true," he continued. "It has always been true and probably always will be true. Many out there, products of the old system, can't spell, can't read and write. As educators, we are pleased that the public is waking up and helping us with the problems. There's been nothing in the papers for the last three years that the board wasn't aware of."

Mr. Runacres noted the results of an investigation undertaken by the board into post - secondary education. Most university deans of faculty "took great pride in the product" of the secondary schools, he said.

"The bulk of our children are reaching up in terms of taking on difficulties," he said. "They are being motivated more than in the past. That may be the reason for the difficulties Loyalist finds in its students.'

Rollins Retails Mobile Homes

Rollins Construction Ltd., today became Belleville's first retailer of pre-fabricated, mobile homes.

The company — the largest residential developer in the Quinte area — announced Monday that model homes will arrive at the Dundas St. east show park today.

Donna Hebert — a former mobile home park operator — will mange the mobile home division which will be based just east of the intersection of Dundas and Herchimer. The site is to be named Rollins' Village Homes.

Bob Marcotte, a senior official with the firm and president of the Quinte Home Builders Association, said the company's aim is not toward the city but for sales in Sidney Township and the central and northern portions of Hastings County.

At present neither Belleville nor Thurlow Townships allow mobile home development. Recently, Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey and Quinte Planning Board director Bert Kenny were taken to Barrie by Rollins Const. to view mobile home park operation.

Mr. Marcotte said his firm intends setting up similar parks throughout its "business area".

Mr. Marcotte said the sales division will be marketing both single and double width homes (two trailers bolted together) and prices will range from $10,000 to $30,000. All models will come completely furnished.

"We're aiming primarily at young couples starting out and retired couples who do not want the responsibility of a large home but prefer not to move into an apartment," said Mr. Marcotte.

Drum and Bugle Corps May Lose Practice Hall

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps hopes city council will tune in their problem and allow them to remain at their present practice location in the old St. George's Mission building on Station St.

During a recent council meeting, aldermen granted a request from the recreation department which asked it be allowed to use the main floor of the city-owned building for storage of equipment.

The corps also wrote council asking for an accommodation extension.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey suggested council could explore the possible purchase of a school property — not specified — as a solution to the corps dilemma.

Director Hugh Bondy said in an interview Sunday the corps would like to remain in the building until at least September when the season's activities are completed.

He explained the crops is rehearsing heavily at present in preparation for summer competitions and the time required to secure another location plus the actual move disrupt practices.

Mr. Bondy pointed out the problems in switching locations which would require a lot of time to resolve.

The corps would require a building at least the size of the mission structure, room for storage, separate facilities for drummers, buglers and color guard, a nearby outdoor practice field and a place a large distance away from other groups to avoid any inconvenience.

Mr. Bondy noted the corps, under the sponsorship of the Yardmen Benefit Fund, has never asked the city for financial assistance, and hopes council will grant their one request.

"We've carried the name of the city and we have provided a worthwhile program for young people", he commented. "I'd like to see the city take a little more interest."

Roll of the Drums

Three members of the Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps hone their talents on the tympanis during the corps' regular Sunday afternoon practice at the old St. George's Mission building on Station Street. From left are Mike Lynch, Pete Crawford and Ed Keuning. The corps, in fear of being removed from the site to make way for equipment storage by the city's recreation department, hope council will allow them to remain until September before moving to a new location.

Committees Announced

The Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board announced its committees for 1975 at the first regular meeting of the board Jan. 21.

Chairman of the management committee is Msgr. J. P. Sullivan and members are Herb Brown, Rev. Louis Casartelli, Michael Collins, Bert Garrett and Frank Hyland.

Chairman of the religious education committee is Rev. Louis Casartelli and members are: Michael Collins, John Granville, Frank Hyland, Leonard O'Leary and Msgr. J. P. Sullivan.

The liaison committee is headed by chairman Lillian O'Connor and members are Herb Brown, Joseph Chapelle, Paul Fleming, Bert Garrett and Paul Wall.

Lack of Horn Players Hurts Yardmen Band

As if the Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps does not have enough problems due to an impending forced move from its present rehearsal site, it also needs more members for effective competition this summer.

"We're really hurt for horn players,' noted Hugh Bondy, corps director, in an interview Sunday at the old St. George's Mission building practice location on Station St.

He said the corps requires between 15 and 20 additional horn players, five more drummers and about 20 more participants in the rifle team and color guard.

The corps provides all equipment. "All they have to do is buy their meals when we go away," remarked Mr. Bondy "Interest is the main factor."

Morris Co-ordinates Special Education

About 10 to 15 per cent of all children enter schools in Ontario with a burden in their bookbags.

These are the children with special educational needs that cannot be satisfied in the mainstream of school life — those with learning disabilities, with behavioral or emotional difficulties, or with learning capacities below the norm schools are geared to serve.

All are handicapped, one way or another, through no fault of their own. They comprice the enrolment in schools for the trainable retarded, the opportunity classes in elementary schools, the occupations classes in secondary schools, and the special education classes everywhere.

The ministry of education has set up a new special education branch to care for these children and to co-ordinate the many services — educational, health, community and social — available to them.

To co-ordinate these services available in Hastings county, the public school board has appointed an administrator to the position of superintendent of special services.

He is E. T. Morris, now a superintendent with the board, whose sole function in the future will be to direct special education.

Mr. Morris was superintendent of schools with the Trenton board before amalgamation of individual boards into the county unit in 1969. He holds qualifications in special education and has been largely responsible for schools for the trainable retarded in Hastings county since they came under the jurisdiction of the board.

Stephens-Adamson Plant Gets $2-million Order

A $2 million contract to design and manufacture a travelling stacker for the Steel Company of Canada Limited, of Hamilton has been awarded to the Stephens - Adamson Division of Allis-Chalmer in Belleville.

The 815-ton, 100-foot stacker will be used at Stelco's new Lake Erie steel mill centre at Nanticoke, and is scheduled for commissioning in September 1976.

The stacker will be put into operation to stockpile 275,000 tons of coal and 580,000 tons of pellets in preparation for the Nanticoke blast furnace which is to be operational by early 1977.

Dancing in the Halls

Moira Secondary School's physical education students are making do with improvised facilities this year while their gym is being renovated and a new one built. Many classes are held outside the school, and others are conducted in corridors. A class in modern dance takes over the school's entrance hall.

Classes Continue

Loss of Gym Doesn't Dampen Spirit

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Going out of school for physical education classes is not unusual. But at Moira Secondary School this year it has become a way of life.

The reason is the remodeling of the school and the conversion of the gym to a resource centre. The school has been without a gym all year, and construction of the new one is behind schedule because of the difficulty in getting structural steel.

All phys-ed classes at Moira are co-educational and are organized in 12 sets of three-week blocks. Each student has a choice of one of four activities in each block. The choices include boating, winter camping, cross-country skiing, snowshoeing, folk dancing, wrestling, badminton, basketball, volleyball, football, soccer, field hockey, table tennis, table games, including euchre, track and field, softball, self defence, orienteering, yoga, bowling, curling and mandatory swimming for grade 9 students.

The winter camping is done at Vanderwater Park with students leaving in the afternoon and returning the following morning. Accompanied by two teachers, the students sleep in tents and cook their own meals.

Corridors in the school are used for some phys-ed classes and gyms in other schools are used for after-hours team practices.

When the construction workers leave the Moira gym at 4 p.m., the dust and debris is cleared away and basketball practice gets under way.

"The morale and attitude of the students has been wonderful," says phys-ed teacher Valerie Paddon. "Usually, they would balk at any changes in the routine, but since this is a year-long arrangement, they have accepted it quite happily."

From Senior B Hockey To Champion Steelers

When was the Super Bowl? January 12?

No matter, a regular reader of this column (oh, yeah! There is one) will recall a reference not so long ago to one Tony Parisi.

Seems equipment manager Parisi, a Canadian, came back across the border long enough to pick up a supply of football shoes for his Pittsburgh Steelers just prior to the club's Super Bowl date with Minnesota Vikings.

Parisi's action drew praise from the Steelers after Terry Bradshaw and Company had romped to the title on the shoes provided by their thoughtful equipment manager who had the foresight to come to the conclusion that the artificial turf at Tulane Stadium might be a trifle slick.

TONY PARISI

As it turned out, rain made the footing perilous to say the least. And evidently Parisi's Canadian contribution supplied the necessary footing to combat conditions.

When I read the account of Parisi's part in the success of Chuck Noll's Pittsburgh aggregation, the bells began to ring, as they say.

Wasn't a Tony Parisi a senior goalie with Belleville clubs 20 or so years ago, I asked?

Since I was alone at the time, there was no immediate answer.

However, plowing (or is it oughing?) relentlessly forward. I contacted the Steelers.

Public relations man Joe Gordon confirmed the suspicion which hatched here.

Joe, and The Intell morgue supplied the following information.

Parisi was indeed a senior goalie here. He performed with Senior B clubs representing the city in the early 1950s.

Yes, Bill, I'm old enough to remember those days, too.

While Tony was busy kicking them out at one end, fellows like Brian Mulvihill, Ted DeGray, Jud Semark, Keith MacDonald, Peter Jones, Jackie Wardaugh, Sam Mulholland, Jerry Desjardins, Doug (Knobber) Day and others were making life miserable for goalies at the other end of the ice.

Big Vern Goyer, Huck Reeves and Tom Schreider were part of the defence corps sent out by playing coach Lloyd (Red) Doran.

The Belleville Glen Roys of that era were packing Memorial Arena when Peterborough Petes, Oshawa Transports, Kingston Goodyears, Stouffville Clippers and Orillia Terriers came to town.

Those were the days when a young man named Jean Beliveau was announcing he would leave his beloved Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League long enough for a three-game stint with the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens.

And man, what a pro career that turned into.

I confess, my age prompts me to reminisce just a little too often. Bear with me, will you?

Returning to Parisi, with an alacrity inspired by years of adhering to deadlines, the Pittsburgh Steelers' media guide informs us:

"Tony Parisi, equipment manager, is a transplanted Canadian who found his way from hockey to football.

"Tony is in his 10th year with the Steelers.

"He is responsible for the purchasing, care and reconditioning of the equipment. (And returning to Canada for certain necessary items.)

"He was the trainer for Pittsburgh Hornets (of the American Hockey League for four years before coming to the Steelers.

"Tony played pro hockey.

"He and his wife Joan have two daughters, Paula, nine and Beth, five."

Well, there you have it.

In a roundabout way, Belleville played a part in Steelers Super Bowl victory.

Satisfying, isn't it?

SLICES — The Ontario Amateur Softball Association reminds those associated with the popular diamond sport that the annual meeting is scheduled for the Holiday Inn at Scarborough this year.

The session will run April 4-5-6.

Reservations for the event must be made through OASA secretary George Mahler, 9275, Esplanade, Windsor.

Mr. Mahler will also take proposed amendments to the constitution, bylaws, playing rules and nominations for executive offices. These must be in writing and received by the secretary prior to March 1.

Changes Pay Off

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A shakeup didn't turn the slumping New England Whalers into an offensive powerhouse Monday night, but at least they won.

Coach Ron Ryan, faced with a four-game losing streak, juggled his lines and the Whalers responded with a 2-0 win over Cleveland Crusaders in a World Hockey Association game.

The Whalers, who had scored only eight times in their last five games, played their best game in two weeks to extend their East Division lead over Cleveland to 12 points.

"We played terrible on the West Coast last weekend," said defenceman Brad Selwood, who drew an assist on the second New England goal.

"He (Ryan) told us if we didn't straighten out tonight, things were going to happen. We didn't set the world on fire, but we won."

Selwood's slapshot early in the third period was tipped in by New England centre Gary Swain to give the Whalers some breathing room after Tom Webster gave the Whalers a 1-0 lead with his 23rd goal of the season in the second period.

Goalie Al Smith picked up his second shutout of the season, stopping 35 shots. Cleveland's Gerry Cheevers had 24 saves.

Tonight Bob Leduc makes his first appearance at Maple Leafs Gardens as Toronto coach when the Toros play Quebec Nordiques, who lead second-place Toronto by eight points in the Canadian Division standings.

After trailing the Toros during the first half of the season, the Nordiques overhauled them with 10 wins in 11 starts.

Quebec coach Jean-Guy Gendron says his team has reached a peak "because we're in good shape and have no injuries."

"Eleven of our next 12 games are on the road though and that's why I say we're at a crucial stage," the coach said. "When we return home from these games I will have a much clearer picture of where we stand."

The rest of tonight's schedule has Winnipeg Jets at San Diego Mariners, Houston Aeros at Edmonton Oilers, Cleveland at Chicago Cougars and Phoenix Roadrunners at Indianapolis Racers.

Boston Held to Tie

Scouts Give Bruins Fits

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A last-minute goal by Don Marcotte saved Boston Bruins from a second embarrassment in front of their old coach Monday night.

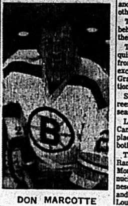
The Bruins needed Marcotte's 22nd goal of the season to salvage a 3-3 tie with Kansas City Scouts in a National Hockey League game.

Until Marcotte scored, the Bruins appeared headed for their second 3-2 loss in five days to the Scouts, an expansion team. Their loss to the Scouts at Boston took place only last Thursday.

Kansas City coach Bep Guidolin, who led the Bruins to the Stanley Cup finals last spring, watched his last-place team embarrass his old club.

Goaltender Denis Herron, who beat the Bruins last Thursday, was outstanding for the Scouts. His 28 stops included two saves on breakaway attempts in the third period.

Guidolin had more to rejoice about than tying his old team. After only five wins and four ties in their first 36 games, they have five wins, five losses and a tie to show for 11 outings this month.



DON MARCOTTE

The Scouts took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Norm Dube and Guy Charron, blew the lead, and then went back in front on Robin Burns' third-period goal. Rod Graham and Phil Esposito were the other Boston scorers.

The tie left Boston nine points behind Buffalo Sabres, who lead the Adams Division.

The Sabres, meanwhile, acquired centre Fred Stanfield from Minnesota North Stars in exchange for winger Norm Gratton and future considerations.

Stanfield, 30, who has 169 career goals, had only eight this season for the Stars.

Los Angeles Kings and the Canadiens, who share first place in the Norris Division, both see action tonight.

The Kings play New York Rangers at Los Angeles while Montreal visits Vancouver Canucks. In other games, Minnesota is at New York Islanders and Detroit Red Wings at St. Louis Blues.

Breaks Hand on Williams

Fergie 'Fools' with Fist

TORONTO (CP) — George Ferguson returned from Toronto Maple Leafs' disastrous road trip Monday with his right hand in a cast after punching rookie team-mate Dave Williams in the jaw.

Ferguson declined to discuss his injury, but Williams said:

"Ferguson and I were room-mates. We got to fooling around in the room, just kidding around. He hit me on the jaw and it broke his hand.

"He went to hospital to get a cast on it, and when he came back there were no hard feelingr."

Coach Red Kelly said he did not plan to fine either player because the incident took place before curfew and there was no damage done to the hotel room.

"The bone is broken up from his little finger," said Kelly. "They were just fooling around, they say."

GEORGE FERGUSON

Maple Leaf president Harold Ballard said he plans to meet with Kelly today to discuss the "apparent breakdown" in discipline on the trip. The Leafs lost all four games and were outscored 28-8.

"If we're going to beat anybody, I want it done on the ice," he said. "It was a fiasco, this road trip."

Ballard said that "one or two" players got drunk on the trip and one missed the team bus to the airport in Oakland. He said no coaching change is planned.

"He (Kelly) can't score goals or keep them out, but I wish he was a tougher disciplinarian."

MacMillan Recalled

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers recalled centre Bob MacMillan from their American Hockey League farm team in Providence, R.I., Monday, to replace Rod Gilbert, sidelined with influenza. MacMillan had six goals and 13 assists in 23 games with the Reds.

Sims Release

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Texas Rangers of the American League have requested waivers on catcher Duke Sims for the purpose of giving him his outright release, the baseball team announced Monday. Sims, 33, hit .198 with New York Yankees and the Rangers last season.

Quinte Rink Scores Twice

ST. CATHERINES (Special) — Quinte Curling Club's Ann Acton rink from Belleville and defending champion Peggy Lawrie's rink are in the lead going into the second round of the Southern Ontario Ladies Curling Association championships, here.

Monday the two rinks went undefeated in both their starts in the double knockout, round-robin event.

be Belleville rink rallied to edge Muriel Folkard of St. Marys 8-7 in the opening draw, tying the game with a single point in the ninth end then stealing one in the 10th to win.

Acton then trounced Kit LeMasurier of Fenelon Falls 13-2 in her second-round game. Mrs. Acton is actually a substitution at skip for the rink. The original skip, Hazel McNevin, asked to be replaced when her son died just before the district playoffs in Brighton, January 13-15. McNevin had knocked the Acton rink out of the right to compete in seniors play in the QCC competition and therefore Mrs. Acton was the natural substitute. The Southern Ontario Ladies Curling Association allows one substitution on each rink, under extenuating circumstances.

The remainder of the rink, Jessie Barber, vice, Helen Lewis, second, and Kay Pape, lead is the same.

The bonspiel determines three representatives for the all-Ontario women's senior championship in Ottawa, next month.

Lawrie's rink defeated Mary Ritchie of Guelph 8-4 in the opening game, then got past Beatrice Lent of Brampton 9-7, scoring two in the final end to break a 7-7 tie.

Shirley Pilson of Chatham, Eilene Adams of Hanover, Florence Mowat of Hamilton Glendale and Amy Wilcox of Meaford all won their only game.

Gladys Jansen of Barrie and Mrs. Folkard's St. Marys foursome were eliminated on two straight losses.

The competition continues today.

Napanee Tops Belleville Girls

Teams of 12-16-year-old young ladies booked up in hockey action at Dick Ellis Rink, Sunday with Napanee recording a 7-2 win over Belleville.

Christine Kennelly was a three-goal shooter for the visitors. Janet Haylock, Julie Hinch, Angela Perry and Frances McTaggart potted one each.

Belleville goals were shared by Lorraine Hossack and Kim Mott.

Quinte Reps Strong

The Bay of Quinte Basketball Association was well represented at the Cobourg East-West Boy's Basketball Tournament on Saturday.

Nicholson Catholic College won the senior title, BCI won the junior and Brighton's East Northumberland was beaten out in the final of the midget championship.

Nicholson went undefeated in four starts to earn top honors in the senior division.

The tournament was set up in a winner-loser draw, whereby a team could lose its first game and remain in competition for the Grand Championship, providing they didn't lose after the first round.

The Nicks downed Cobourg West in the opening game of the tourney 44-32. Cobourg then won their second and third games to earn a spot in the Grand Championship and another shot at Nicholson. The second time around was just as fruitless as the Nicks upended them again, 40-27.

Bruce Collins had 16, Chris Kalnay 12 and Jeff Boyle got nine in the Nicks Tournament opener. In their second game, a 52-24 win over Centennial Secondary, Collins had 12, Boyle 11, Kalnay 10 and Mark Soule got nine. Doug Yates had eight for Centennial.

The Nicks, through a strong defensive effort, downed Oshawa Catholic in the semi-finals, 38-21. Boyle had 10 points, Collins eight and Kalnay, Soule and Dale Wilson got six each.

Another outstanding defensive effort gave Nicholson the title as they beat Cobourg West for the second time in the daylong event.

Kalnay played his strongest game of the day, leading the Nicks offensively with 12 points and was outstanding on defence.

Collins got 11, Dave Holland; seven and Boyle, five.

BCI Juniors lost their opener 31-22 to Cobourg East, but came back in the tournament final to dump the East Cobourg crew 40-25. In their second game, BCI upended Peterborough 38-33 and in the tourney semi-final they edged Oshawa Central 23-19.

In the Grand Championship game the Belleville school was in full flight as they gained revenge for the opening loss. Despite the fact they went to the tournament with only six players, they outscored Cobourg by 15 in the final. Mike Kirby and Mitch Hannah had 12 each and John Guthrie and Ron Bell had six apiece. Dave Franklin and Gord Van Vliet rounded things out with two each.

This is the fourth consecutive year that the BCI juniors have won their division of the East-West Tournament.

The only home town team to salvage anything from the tournament was the Cobourg West midget squad. They beat East Northumberland in the final.

Loyalist In a Rut

Loyalist College Women's Volleyball team seems to be stuck at winning five of nine games whenever they meet the other three college teams in the Eastern Ontario Collge Athletics Association Volleyball League.

Saturday, at home, the local team lost three straight to Ottawa, 15-7, 15-1 and 15-0. They then took three straight from St. Lawrence, Kingston, 15-9, 15-6 and 15-11. In their final hookup of the day they went two for three against Oshawa's Druham college 15-1, 15-11 and 13-15.

This Saturday Loyalist is at Algonquin, Ottawa, for three more matches. Ottawa is still in first place while Loyalist is in second.

TRENTON — While parents of young athletes are coming in for loads of criticism for their actions at sporting events, these days, it was refreshing to hear mothers and fathers earn some praise from speakers at Monday night's recognition banquet for Trenton's Midget softball champions.

O. W. LARRY

Guest speaker O. W. Larry, former town clerk-comptroller, now retired; Ontario Amateur Softball Association (OASA) executive member Jim Tebworth of Belleville; coach-sponsor Bill Dickson, and team manager B. A. (Doc) Birbeck all directed some kind words at parents attending the function at Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 110, here.

The role parents play in helping to mould youngsters into individuals capable of combining talents to form a championship team was stressed often.

Representing the OASA, along with Tebworth, was Trentonian sports editor Bill Huffman who is a convener with the softball association.

Deno Gettas, Trenton parks and recreation director, represented the town council and presented players, coach, manager and batboy with plaques marking the Dickson Sport and Bait team's 1974 Midget B OASA championship.

Sharon Gaudaur, assistant recreation director, represented the Parks and Recreation Department at the event.

Tracing the history of softball in Trenton, Mr. Larry laced his remarks with humorous anecdotes relating to his own playing days as a shortstop with town teams.

He referred to the town's hockey and softball championship teams as assets to the community.

And he did not miss the opportunity to bring out the importance of "dedicated men" who serve as sponsors, coaches and managers.

BILL DICKSON

Team co-captains Rob Oliver and Greg Kendrick saved the highlight of the evening until official proceedings had all but been completed. Representing the ball players, they presented Dickson and Birbeck with plaques.

Both men experienced difficulty controlling their emotions while accepting the tangible evidence of thanks from their young charges.

Master of ceremonies for the event was long-time Canadian Forces Base Trenton softball player Moe Maltby who donned ball uniform and catcher's mask in order to "feel more at home" while carrying out his duties.

Crawford Sparkplug

KINGSTON (Special) — Led by the four goal performance of Mark Crawford, the Belleville McInroy-Maines minor bantams edged Kingston 5-4 in Ontario Minor Hockey Association action, Sunday.

Paul Chapman got the other goal for the locals and Steve Casey and Greg Sprout got a pair of assists each.

The McInroy-Maines club takes on Kingston again this Sunday at 2.45 p.m., at the Memorial Arena.

Jim's Keeps Hold on Fifth

Jim's Pizzeria continued to hold down fifth place in the Gas House Hockey League despite the efforts of sixth place Constellation Carpets, Monday night.

Constellation came up with a 5-2 win over fourth place Chuckwagon Foods, but Jim's blanked Art's Esso 1-0 to remain two points up on the Carpetmen.

In the other game played in the Gas House Monday, first place Stanley Structures trounced last place Canadian Durabla 12-1.

Dale Kiley led the Constellation attack with two goals and Gord Vessterfelt, Ken Kerik and Wayne Andrews each scored once.

Steve Moore tallied both the Chuckwagon markers.

Chuck Powell did the only scoring of the game in Jim's win. Bruce Gibson was in net to record the shutout.

Ray Summers was the only scorer with more than a single tally for Stanley. He had a pair of goals and two assists to lead their onslaught. Bob Mulvihill scored once and added four helpers and Ron Fuller had a goal and three assists. Other goals went to Bob Windyka, Russ Harrington, Rob Harrington, Flori Geogan, Wayne Leveque, Charlie Rowbothom, Wayne McGeacy and Mike Goegan.

John Vance ruined Vern Whalen's shutout bid with just seconds remaining in the game.

Frankford Gets Win

FRANKFORD (Special) — Busy preparing for an upcoming trip to Sault Ste. Marie for tournament action, Belleville Rollins Peewees tackled a bantam squad here Monday night and bowed 5-0.

Gary Beaudrie recorded the shutout. Brad Hutton fired a pair of goals with singles for Lyle Mater, Chris Macauley and Darrell Lott.

In spite of the setback, officials of the Rollins club were satisfied that their charges came through with a solid effort against the bantams.

The same two teams go at it again tonight at Belleville Memorial Arena, at 8 p.m.

Streak Snapped

BOWMANVILLE (Special) — Frankford Huskies had their Ontario Hockey Association Junior C unbeaten streak snapped at nine games here Sunday, staging a late comeback drive that fell just short of the mark in a 4-3 loss to Bowmanville Eagles.

Down 4-0 in the second period, Huskies battled back to count one before heading into the third. The visitors connected for a pair of unanswered goals in the final frame.

John Wood fired two goals for Eagles. Singles were supplied by Boyd Knox and Glenn Rice.

Defenceman Joey Edwards led Huskies with two goals. Jeff Brown had the other marker.

Toller and Lynn Rated Sure Bets to Repeat

QUEBEC (CP) — Toller Cranston of Toronto and Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa are strong favorites to retain their senior singles titles in the Canadian figure skating championships beginning Wednesday but the pairs and dance competitions will be wide open.

Cranston, who has won the Canadian title the last four years and was No. 3 in the world in 1974, is rated in a class by himself.

But if there was any doubt at all, it was removed when Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., an excellent free skater who is No. 2 in Canada and fifth in the world, had to withdraw.

Shaver suffered a groin injury while skating in Brandon, Man., two weeks ago and has been ordered by his doctor to pass up the Canadian championships. He expects to be ready for the world championships in Colorado Springs, Colo., March 4-8, having qualified automatically for admission on the strength of his fifth-place finish in Munich last year. Cranston also qualified automatically.

Miss Nightingale, 18, who succeeded to the Canadian title after Karen Magnussen retired, has improved her compulsory figures. She was sixth in the world last year but ended up winning the Skate Canada and Moscow Skate competitions.

Challenging Miss Nightingale are such skaters as Barbara Terpenning of Vancouver, runner-up at Moncton, N.B., in 1974, Kim Alletson of Ottawa, last year's junior champion, and Susan MacDonald of Vancouver, second in the 1974 junior competition.

The pairs, won by Sandra and Val Bezic of Toronto the last five years, are in doubt because the brother-and-sister team will not compete here.

Sandra, 18, under treatment for a thyroid condition that had caused a serious overweight problem, suffered pulled ligaments in her ankle several weeks ago.

"It was hard to make the decision," said Sandra, who announced Monday in Toronto she and her brother won't compete this week.

"But the doctor thought it would be very silly for me to risk reinjuring the ligaments."

The Bezics, who will be at the championships as spectators Friday and Saturday, do not have to qualify for Colorado Springs because of their fifth-place finish in last year's world championship.

The second-place pairs in last year's Canadian championships—Marian Murray and Glenn Moore—have split up. As a result, the favorites to win the title are Kathy Hutchinson and Jamie McGrigor of Cambridge, third in 1974, and Candy Jones of Toronto and Don Fraser of Richmond Hill, Ont., fourth a year ago.

There will be new champions in the senior dance beause the husband-and-wife team of Barry and Louise Soper have retired. Their successors are likely to be found among Barbara Berezowski and David Porter of Toronto, second in 1974, Susan Carscallen and Eric Gillies of Toronto, junior champions, or Shelley MacLeod and Bob Knapp of Cambridge, fifth in the senior competition last year.

The runner-up spot to Cranston in the men's will be an important objective because Canada can send three men to the world championships this year.

Good bets to finish second to Cranston here are Bob Rubens of Montreal, third in the Canadian championships last year, Stan Bobonek of Toronto, who was fourth, and Ted Barton of Vancouver, seventh.

Canada can also send three pairs to the world championships but only two women and two dance pairs. The feeling among some experts here is that Miss Terpenning will retain her No. 2 placing if she skates her best. She was 13th in the world championships in 1974.

2-point Edge for Hull

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (CP) — A two-point edge in the World Hockey Association scoring race might not be much of an edge, but Bobby Hull is breathing a little easier.

The veteran Winnipeg Jet winger has been leading the points race for several weeks but rarely with more than a point separating him from the surging Serge Bernier of Quebec Nordiques.

In official league statistics released Monday, Hull enjoyed that two-point margin with 74 points made up of 41 goals, tops in the WHA, and 33 assists.

Bernier, who trailed Hull by only one point in each of the two previous weeks' releases, had 72 points that included 35 goals.

Larry Lund of Houston Aeros and Andre Lacroix of San Diego Mariners continued to hold the next two spots in the scoring with 66 and 63 points respectively.

But Swede Ulf Nilsson of the Jets has replaced Mike Walton of Minnesota Fighting Saints in fifth place. Nilsson, whose 43 assists ties him for league lead in that department with Lacroix, has 57 points to Walton's 56.

CHRIS EVERT

Wants Out In 5 Years

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chris Evert said Monday that she may retire from professional tennis when she's about 25 years old.

Miss Evert, who celebrated her 20th birthday in December, has been playing professional tennis since she was 15. She appeared here to promote an upcoming stop on the women's tour.

"Most women peak at a much later age, but that's beause they usually start playing at a later age," Miss Evert said. "Billie Jean King is still playing and she's 31, but she didn't start the tour business until she was 20 or so."

Miss Evert said that when she is 25 she will have been on the tour for 11 years and "it will be really difficult mentally to continue playing after that.

Tennis was much more demanding than other professional sports because it is "a 12 month-a-year sport without the time off that other athletes get."

She said that playing at night has disrupted her routine of trying to get 10 hours sleep every night.

Milwaukee Nips Jazz

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — John McGlocklin hit a 15-foot jump shot at the buzzer to give Milwaukee Bucks a 117-115 victory over New Orleans Jazz in the only National Basketbal Association game Monday night.

The score was 115-115 when the Bucks inbounded with only four seconds left. McGlocklin took his game-winning shot after the Bucks' initial play was thwarted by the Jazz defence.

Pittsburgh Is on the March

MONTREAL (CP) — A hot rookie, veteran forwards and a long streak of victories at home have helped Pittsburgh Penguins push their record over the .500 mark in the National Hockey League.

The Penguins, absent from the Stanley Cup playoffs the last two years, have 19 wins, 18 losses and 10 ties for 48 points and a 16-point lead over fourth-place Detroit Red Wings in the Norris Division. The top three teams from each of the four NHL divisions make the playoffs.

The Penguins are unbeaten at home in 15 games. Montreal Canadiens edged the Penguins 3-2 Nov. 27, but Pittsburgh was 9-0-6 at home after that.

Penguins centre Ron Schock, an 11-year veteran, has 19 goals and 36 assists for 55 points, eclipsing a personal high of 49 points in 1972-73.

Right winger Jean Pronovost and Syl Apps, voted the most valuable player in last week's all-star game, are second on the team in scoring with 48 points. Pronovost has 25 goals and 23 assists while Apps has 19 goals and 29 assists.

Penguin Pierre Larouche, who had 251 points for Sorel of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League last year, has 19 goals and 21 assists and remains one of the top contenders for the top rookie award.

Following Sunday's play, Phil Esposito topped the scoring 89 points on 45 goals and 44 assists. Bobby Orr was second with 82 points, including a league-leading 55 assists.

Montreal's Guy Lafleur followed with 38 goals and 42 assists for 80 points.

The Los Angeles Kings goaltending duo of Rogie Vachon and Gary Edwards have combined for a goals-against average of 2.10 to lead the league while Dave Schultz of Philadelphia Flyers leads the bad men with 286 penalty minutes.

2 Junior Divisions Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series should split into two divisions next year, commissioner Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz recommended Monday.

Schmalz met governors from the 11 existing teams in the series to consider franchise applications for next season from Windsor and Niagara Falls.

An expansion decision will be delayed until Feb. 10, Schmalz said, but the divisional format probably will be adopted for next year in any case.

"I think that in an 11-, 12-or 13-team league, it's a lot better to be in sixth place than in 11th place."

Schmalz said the league's expansion committee met groups from Windsor and North Bay last week and reported on from their presentations at Monday's meeting.

This season Windsor's top OHA team, the Spitfires, are in the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League while North Bay Trappers are in the OHA Provincial Junior A series.

Gibson Signs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Right-hander Bob Gibson, the major leagues' winningest active pitcher, signed his 17th contract with St. Louis Cardinals at undisclosed terms Monday. The 39-year-old Gibson, who has won 248 games, is one of two pitchers to achieve 3,000 or more strikeouts in a career.

Red Storey's Men Won't Be Gagged

MONTREAL (CP) — Red Storey, one of the National Hockey League's top referees until he retired in 1959, was named Monday as referee in chief of the National Lacrosse League.

Storey, 56, replaces Skeets Harrison of Windsor, Ont.

"Red will be responsible for recruiting of officials, their scheduling and expenses," said Gerry Patterson, president of the six-team league.

"It was a hard decision to make," Storey said. "It took me a long time to decide. Gerry asked me and I said yes.

"I love refereeing. I love challenges and this is going to be a terrific challenge.

"It may start off a little rough, but there is going to be some improvement in the officiating for this season.

"I've got a list of 19 officials who worked last year," Storey said, adding he would eliminate the names of those not able to work the full lacrosse season.

Last year, the NLL employed some referees from the National Hockey League including John McCauley, Bruce Hood, Ron Finn and Bryan Lewis but they were not able to work the playoffs in September.

"I'd like to limit our staff to 10 men," Storey said. "That will give us five officiating teams which will work together all season. We will start with the 10 best men we had last year."

Storey said that unlike the NHL, he will allow his officials to talk to reporters after games about rule interpretations.

"When I was in hockey there was a gag rule and I don't agree with it. Our guys will be available to talk to."

Bartkowski and Atlanta —A Mutual Admiration

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a great year for linemen and linebackers, but all-America quarterback Steve Bartkowski was expected to be the No. 1 selection today when the National Football League opened its annual two-day draft of college players.

"I think Atlanta and the South are the places to play football," Bartkowski said Monday shortly before he left the University of California and flew to Atlanta to attend a news conference today.

"They take the game seriously and the fans have enthusiasm, as I learned from trips to Gainesville, Fla., and Mobile, Ala. I look forward to playing with the Falcons."

And the Falcons look forward to having the drop-back passer, who broke Craig Morton's single-season California passing record by throwing for 2,580 yards, including 12 touchdowns.

"He's the best to come along since (New England quarterback) Jim Plunkett," says Tom Braatz, Atlanta's player personnel director.

If Bartkowski is the No. 1 pick, he will be the first quarterback to achieve the honor since New England picked Plunkett in 1971.

The last three No. 1 picks were defensive linemen—Notre Dame's Walt Patulski by Buffalo in 1972, Tampa's John Matuszak by Houston in 1973, and Tennessee State's Ed (Too Tall) Jones by Dallas last year.

Bartkowski is rated the best of a slim quarterback crop. But there is no shortage of linemen and linebackers.

"This is the best crop of linemen and linebackers ever," says coach John North of New Orleans Saints.

"It's the top year for linebackers since I've been in the business," said Cincinnati scouting director Pete Brown, mentioning 230-pound Robert Brazile of Jackson, Miss., State as "the finest I've seen in three years."

Atlanta, which originally was supposed to pick No. 3, acquired the No. 1 choice in a trade with Baltimore Colts last Thursday. The Falcons gave up six-year offensive tackle George Kunz and their own first-round pick in exchange for Baltimore's No. 1 pick plus the Colts' sixth-round pick.

The Colts and New York Giants finished with 2-12 records, worst in the NFL. However, the Giants traded their first-round pick to Dallas in midseason for Morton and Baltimore won the coin flip with the Cowboys, winning the choice they eventually swapped to Atlanta.

After the Falcons draft Bartkowski, the Cowboys were expected to go for 255-pound defensive end Randy White of Maryland.

Following the picks by Atlanta and Dallas, the Colts draft third, followed by Chicago, Cleveland and Houston. The Oilers will use Kansas City's first-round pick acquired in the John Matuszak-Curley Culp swap.

The rest of the opening round, in order:

New Orleans, San Diego, Los Angeles, using Green Bay's choice, San Francisco, Los Angeles again, using Philadelphia's choice, New York Jets, Detroit, Cincinnati, Houston, New England, Denver, Dallas, Buffalo, Los Angeles, St. Louis, San Diego with a pick obtained from Washington, Miami, Oakland, Minnesota, and, finally, the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

The 26 NFL teams will draft 442 players in 17 rounds.

Showbiz Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Broadway and London producers are threatening to cancel future Canadian tours of British and United States shows because of recent changes in Canadian tax policy.

Effective last Jan. 1, all foreign performers and companies touring in Canada must pay a witholding tax of 15 per cent of their gross incomes from Canadian sources.

The Globe and Mail quotes producers as saying the tax will prevent them from making money, even if they get some of their payments back in tax rebates, and that the principal roadhouses in Canada, the National Arts Centre in Ottawa and the Royal Alexandra and O'Keefe Centre in Toronto, will face a shortage of attractions.

"There's no way we can afford to have that amount of money taken out of circulation," Bernard Jay of the Triumph Theatre Productions, London, told the newspaper Monday. "We'll have no cash flow to produce the next show."

Richard Barr, the show's producer, said that "if I could get out of my contract for Coward in Two Keys at the O'Keefe Centre, I would never play Canada again as long as that tax is intact."

New York producer Elliot Martin told the newspaper that he already has cancelled a booking of Eugene O'Neill's Moon for the Misbegotten, scheduled for the Royal Alexandra next December.

The Globe and Mail quotes John Playfair, special assistant to Revenue Minister Ronald Basford, as saying the tax policy has been revised because the old system was abused.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A $10-million damage suit has been filed in Santa Monica Superior Court against Hugh Hefner and his Playboy companies by a woman who says she was injured in a fall after eating a drug-dosed dinner at Hefner's posh Holmby Hills residence.

The suit, filed Friday on behalf of Cheryl Kaltschnee, also names Lee Wolfsberg, who was identified as her escort at the dinner, and 40 "John Does."

Miss Kaltschnee claims she attended a dinner party recently at Hefner's Playboy Mansion West where a "legally restricted and dangerous drug" was placed in her food and beverages without her permission. The suit says she later fainted and hurt her head in a fall.

The suit asks general damages of $1 million and punitive damages of $1 million each from Hefner, Playboy magazine, Playboy Enterprises Inc., Playboy Productions and five of the John Does.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — The French-born wife of singer Andy Williams sued for divorce Monday on grounds of irreconcilable differences.

Williams, 47, and Claudine Longet, 33, a former Folies Bergere dancer, were married in 1961 but have been separated the last five years.

Mrs. Williams asked for custody of their three children, Noelle, 11, Christian, 9, and Robert, 5, and that child support and alimony be fixed by the court.

Transport Body Waits For Ruling

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission is awaiting a written decision from the Federal Court on a dispute over railway freight rates before deciding its next move.

In a decision handed down from the bench Saturday, the court overturned a commission ruling postponing half a recent freight rate increase for 60 days.

The commission exceeded its authority in postponing half a 25-per-cent increase to March 1 from Jan. 1, the judges said.

A spokesman for the commission said they are awaiting a formal, written decision from the court.

"There's not much we can do until we get the written decision and have a chance to go through it."

Ontario Has Not Agreed To Boost in Doctor's Fees

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller said Monday that Ontario so far has not agreed to an increase in doctors' fees beyond an earlier agreement.

He was replying in the legislature to NDP Leader Stephen Lewis who asked about negotiations on the 14-per-cent increase sought by the medical profession. The negotiations before the Clawson review committee were in the final stages.

"I think it's just as wise not to comment too much on them until we've reached either an agreement or disagreement at this stage," he said.

However, he said the ministry has brought figures to the committee which sow the 7.75-permittee which show the 7.75-persuited in a net increase to each doctor "considerably higher than that."

Mr. Lewis said each one-percent increase granted the medical profession means a $5-million cost to the province.

Surgery Is Cure For Cervical Rib

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been bothered with neck and shoulder pains. X-rays were taken, and I was found to have arthritis in my spine. The doctor said my upper ribs were fastened to my spine.

Could you explain?—Mrs. L.O.M.

I believe you are referring to what is called a "cervical rib."

At the top of the spinal column are a group of seven vertebrae that make up the neck section. Each of these has a small projection of bone jutting out sideways called "lateral processes."

Occasionally in the lower vertebrae of this neck section, one of these processes may tend to be exceptionally long and, for want of a better term, this has been referred to as a cervical (neck) rib. It can become painful, especially when the bone exerts pressure on nerve trunks in the area.

I recall one patient who had suffered neck pain for year and had seen a dozen doctors from coast to coast. None had taken an x-ray of her neck.

Finally, an x-ray revealed a cervical rib. The woman underwent an operation to remove the "rib" and wasn't bothered again with neck pain.

I'd be intersted in knowing whether or not you have as much success.

Dear Doctor: I would like to know exactly what is piles? Is there a difference between piles and hemorrhoids? What causes piles? What is done for piles? what does it mean when you have a lump which causes the rectum to be very sore?

I'm a practical nurse, and everyone thinks I know everything. I'm a beginner and curious.—Student

As a student practical nurse you may not receive much training in anatomy, but piles (hemorrhoids) are such a common complaint that it is important for you to know something about them.

There are two kinds, those just inside the anal opening, and those protruding beyond the anus.

A hemorrhoid is basically a varicose or distended vein. They are caused by pressure on the area, pressures such as straining at stool, constipation, or pregnancy. Some folks are more subject to hemorrhoid formation than others, those, for example, whose veins have weaker walls.

Some people develop a clot that eventually shrinks in size. This may remain as a small lump which can be a continuing source of irritation. When a hemorrhoid ulcerates, there can be pain and bleeding. Itching may be due to failure to keep the area clean, so frequent baths are advisable.

But the ultimate cure for hemorrhoids is surgical removal.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor has diagnosed the cause of terrific pains in my leg as circulatory problems. However, he gave me no sort of test or examination.—M.E.A.

He may not have given you any special test, but he undoubtedly did some careful "eyeball" examination.

Checking the appearance of the limb—the color, the temperature and the pulses in the foot, knee, and groin will give any doctor a fair clue to the poor circulation.

New Zealand Prepares For Bitter Election

AUCKLAND (CP) — New Zealand has already begun the build-up for a general election late in 1975 and the highlight promises to be the clash of two dramatically different personalities. The confrontation could produce one of the most bitterly fought elections the country has known.

Like most of the world, New Zealand is battling an economic recession, inflation, an adverse balance of payments and falling foreign exchange balances. The major difference is that unemployment still is negligible—a tiny fraction of one per cent of the work force.

Against this background the ruling Labor government must face the voters in a general election no later than November.

It faces a dilemma. Usually in an election year the policy has been to ease financial restraints, cut taxes, let inflation get away a little, to give an impression of plenty of spending money and general wellbeing.

Labor can hardly afford to be so generous this year. Inflation has been kept more under control than in some countries, but any release of restraint could send it out of control.

Government hints are that there will be extra taxes on the wealthy and reductions for lower wage groups—possibly some kind of wealth tax. Capital gains are not taxed in New Zealand.

The opposing leaders in the coming trial of strength have both been in their leadership posts for less than a year.

The totally unexpected death of prime minister Norman E Kirk in his early 50s threw Labor into disarray. He was so dominant that no one had been groomed to replace him..

Yet Labor has rallied astonishingly well. The new prime minister, Wallace Edward (Bill) Rowling, has shown balance, coolness, and common sense in taking over at a time of economic difficulty.

Aged 47, he is a quiet, nonflamboyant politician, quite out of the traditional Labor pattern. He is right of centre of anything in his party.

He was minister of finance in the Kirk government and although he made a reputation as an effective administrator, he was content to do his job competently under the leadership of the dynamic Kirk. Little known to the country, he remains something of an enigma as he does not seek the limelight.

More in the public eye, perhaps, is his personable wife Glen. Blonde and attractive, though restrained, she has displayed an unsuspected talent for public appeal. When it became known she was a competent singer, the compere of a nationally-televised New Year's Eve popular show sought her participation. She agreed and emerged as star of the show.

Her rendering of It's a Lovely Day Tomorrow got across to far more people than her husband's New Year economic survey.

The opposition National party, in contrast, has rejected an able, restrained leader in former prime minister Sir John Marshall for provocative, militant, controversial Robert D. Muldoon, 53.

Muldoon was also formerly minister of finance in the former National party government.

Sir John is an able negotiator and won terms for New Zealand on British entry to the Common Market not accorded to any other country. But the National party felt he lacked the agressiveness needed to regain office for the party in 1975. Sir John has announced his retirement from Parliament at the end of the present term.

Muldoon's reputation for belligerence led him into indiscretions in 1974, and some of the party developed misgivings about casting in their lot with such an impetuous leader.

Apparently realizing that he was earning an unfortunate reputation, Muldoon embarked on a countrywide series of addresses late in 1974. He drew extraordinarily large and appreciative audiences in an era when the political meeting was thought to be outdated.

One of the major influences in the choice of Rowling as prime minister among contending Labor leaders was his ability to stand up coolly to Muldoon's onslaughts.

Rowling has shown he can give as good as he gets. He says his immediate task is to run the country efficiently, and there will be plenty of time for electioneering in due course.

Labor has the advantage of a handy majority in the single-chamber Parliament. It holds 55 seats, against 32 for the Opposition National party.

Labor gained office in 1972 after 12 years of National rule with a vote of 48 per cent of the electorate, against 42 per cent for National, with the balance going to lesser parties which failed to gain representation in the House of Representatives.

The state of the economy as the year advances, and the ability of Labor to stave off unemployment, unknown in New Zealand for more than a generation, will probably be the deciding factor in the election outcome.

Beetles Clean Bones For Zoological Work

OTTAWA (CP) — Locked behind a double-doored metal vault are 10,000 slaves, hard at work cleaning specimen bones for the National Museum of Natural Sciences.

The slaves, bearing the somewhat aristocratic name of dermestes maculatus degeer, are beetle larvae that thrive on eating their way through the meaty tissue that is left on the bones of animal carcasses.

Anne Rick, head of the zoology research centre, said the larvae are an indispensable part of the scientific work of the department.

"They make our life easy and they only ask room and board," she said. "I can't imagine what scientists would do without such helpers."

The research centre collects bones of present-day animals, birds and reptiles and uses them in comparison studies with ancient bones found in archeological digs.

The carcasses come from a variety of sources.

"Sometimes we're a clearing house for the remains of experiments and tests in the museum's pathology and mammalogy departments," Mrs Rick explained.

"For the service of disposing of unused parts, we get the skeletons for our collection."

She said the scavenger insects thrive best on specimens supplied by the Ontario ministry of natural resources. Last year, conservation officers from eastern Ontario gave 125 freshly killed animals to the centre.

Mrs. Rick and research assistant Jim McElman skin the carcasses, remove the heavy flesh and dry the specimens slightly before wrapping them in cheesecloth shrouds and offering them to the larvae.

The cheesecloth makes dermestes feel at home, since he prefers to work in the dark. It also keeps the bones from scattering once they are picked clean.

The insect colony cleans the speciments "in a matter of days," Mrs. Rick said.

The larvae are about three-quarters of an inch long with brown, oval, segmented bodies. After going through the pupal stage they become black beetles, three-eighths of an inch long. The adults live about three months, feeding beside the larvae and laying eggs that hatch in three to five days into more larvae.

The metal room and double doors are needed to discourage the larvae from wandering off and transferring their attention to books and other materials in the museum.

Philip M. Youngman, senior nature interpreter at the museum, who was responsible for rejuvenating the colony 15 years ago, said no one seems to know how the museum acquired its larvae.

When he became interested in the beetles, their numbers were depleted because of irregular feeding. Regular work and proper housing has restored the colony to its present strength.

Stamp Values Higher

LONDON (CP) — Postage stamps of the last 22 years in Britain and Commonwealth countries are becoming valuable stamps of the future. This is shown by prices in a catalogue published by Stanley Gibbons, London stamp dealers, covering stamps issued for Britain and the Commonwealth since Queen Elizabeth II came to the throne. The pale orange-yellow color, for instance, was missing from some sheets of the 7½ pence stamps in the British paintings issue of July, 1973, and they now fetch £100.

Pringle Report Is Critical Of Strip-search of Women

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General George Kerr said Monday a report by a royal commissioner that criticized Niagara regional police for stripping and searching 38 women during a drug raid at the Landmark Motor Hotel in Fort Erie, Ont., was "a good report all in all."

Mr. Kerr said in an interview the report will be studied by his department, the federal goevrnment, the Ontario government and the Ontario Police Commission.

"There is nothing that I can see in the report that should be questioned," Mr. Kerr said. But he refused to comment on sections of the report that were critical of the regional police.

Mr. Kerr appointed Judge John Pringle of Norfolk County as a one-man royal commission into the incident after public outcry about police methods used in the raid last May 11.

Judge Pringle said in his report, tabled in the legislature Monday, that the strip search of women patrons during the raid was "foolish and unnecessary.

"I am satisfied that there was not a shred of evidence to support a suspicion that any of the female patrons had concealed heroin or any like substance on their person prior to the search," said the judge.

Albert Shennan, chief of the Niagara regional police, said Judge Pringle appeared to have been "most fair" in his assessment of the raid and some changes in the force's policies likely will be made.

Evidence during the inquiry was that more than 100 patrons were searched by Niagara regional police and 38 women customers were forced to strip and submit to an examination by police women as they searched for marijuana and heroin.

Judge Pringle recommended that the intelligence unit of the police force be "either disbanded or integrated more fully into the existing command structure."

He also recommended that persons found in a place other than a dwelling house "where there is no reasonable cause to believe that they are in possession of a narcotic or anything incidental to possession of a narcotic by themselves or others, should not be subject to any search when the only basis for the search is their legitimate presence in such a place."

Among other recommendations were suggestions:

—That the Ontario government recommend an amendment to the federal Narcotic Control Act which would allow a search only when an officer reasonably believes the person has possession of a narcotic;

—Sufficient physicians and registered nurses should be sworn in as peace officers to enable them to conduct searches of females suspected of hiding drugs in body orifices.

—That the plan of operation by the Brantford police force in respect to its operation against the Graham Bell Hotel Nov. 23, 1973, be studied in depth as to how a raid should be planned and conducted.

During the inquiry, Judge Pringle heard evidence concerning the Brantford raid which indicated that only those suspects police believed to be involved in the drug trade were searched.

Danson's Bill Is Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP) — Barney Danson, the self-made millionaire dropped into the housing portfolio six months ago when the market was in its worst shape in recent years, has a reputation for being super-enthusiastic about any job he tackles.

He still was smiling Monday night after the first bill he has introduced as urban affairs minister took a pasting from the opposition, which says it is too little too late.

"I'd like to do everything they suggest, but there's a limit to the number of things that we can do," he said with a grin after the Commons had adjourned for the day. "They're good ideas, every one of them, but they all would cost a great deal of money."

As introduced just before Christmas, his proposed amendment to the National Housing Act is geared mainly to increasing the funds available through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) and to encouraging more private investment in the mortgage market.

He says it would have a "stimulating and regenerative effect throughout the whole economy" because of its potential stimulus to the building industry, a stimulus the government estimates at $1 billion.

The proposal came at the end of a year which showed only 222,123 housing starts, down about 17 per cent from the record 1973 total of 268,500. It was the worst year since 1971 when starts were down to 190,528.

Mr. Danson projects the 1975 total at between 200,000 and 210,000 and bases his forecast on the general shape of the economy. But he still contends last year's total was a good one when viewed against the backdrop of the United States, where starts were down to 990,000.

He said that when the customary 10-to-1 ratio—based on U.S. population compared with Canada's—starts in this country is taken into account, were 2½ times that of the U.S.

But the opposition parties, notably the Progressive Conservatives, do not share Mr. Danson's optimism. They contend that more drastic measures are necessary to shore up the housing industry.

Flora MacDonald, the Conservative housing critic, sees the two major problems as land costs and construction costs. Miss MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands) said Ottawa should set up a land bank to prevent developers from jacking up land values unnecessarily.

"We've been looking at housing in this country with an act drawn up in the 1940s," she said in an interview after speaking on the bill. "But it's out of date; our needs have changed dramatically from a rural-based population to an urban one."

She said the government should look at housing the way it does at education and health care—as a basic necessity available to everyone, not a luxury available to a few.

The recently introduced $500 grant for first-time buyers of new, moderately priced homes, for example, was a farce. Miss MacDonald said the $500 barely would cover the first month's payment on a home in Toronto, where the average price is $50,000.

She said the government should have removed the 11-per-cent federal sales tax on building materials completely instead of cutting it to five per cent.

As for Mr. Danson, Miss MacDonald said:

"If words could produce houses, they'd be sprouting up like mushrooms. He's tremendously enthusiastic, but that's no substitute for effectiveness!"

Walter Baker, deputy Conservative House leader, said Monday there should be a minister responsible for housing only, separate from urban affairs. But Mr. Danson, who says he has a "constant personal battle" over what he would like to do and what he is able to do as a cabinet minister, is not receptive to the suggestion.

One of his main concerns is treading on provincial toes, a subject slated for discussion Thursday, when Mr. Danson meets here with his provincial counterparts.

That worry does not sit well with Mr. Baker (Grenville-Carleton), who said that while his party ultimately will support the bill, he was not hopeful about the long-term housing picture.

"People don't care about a jurisdictional quarrel," Mr. Baker said. "They want to know where the houses are coming from."

Social Credit spokesman Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse) said his party also will support the bill, but he too had some reservations.

Foreign Control Ban Easy to Get

OTTAWA (CP) — Separate legislation to end foreign interference in Canadian trade would whistle through Parliament in a matter of days if the government wished, say spokesmen for the opposition parties.

Both the Progressive Conservatives and the New Democrats say all the government need do is split the legislation away from its proposed competition bill.

Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie said Monday the Liberals are considering splitting the bill.

Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy Royal) welcomed the idea, saying the Conservatives asked for the bill to be split more than a year ago when it was before the last Parliament.

Ed Broadbent, NDP parliamentary leader, said "we'd speed it right up," if the government brought the measure before the House as a separate piece of legislation.

A separate bill would make it illegal for companies in Canada to obey foreign laws and directives that prevent them from pursuing foreign trade legal under Canadian law.

In recent years sales to China have been lost and more recently sales to Cuba have been threatened, mainly because Canadian subsidiaries of United States companies have complied with the U.S. Trading with the Enemy Act.

The trouble currently is that provisions to outlaw the extra-territorial application of this U.S. law—and any other foreign laws like it—is contained in proposed legislation amending the Combines Investigation Act.

United Aircraft Contracts Did Not Require Work Here

OTTAWA (CP) — Contracts covering $73 million of government aid to United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. contained no provisions to ensure that development work would occur in Canada or that the government would ever recover its investment from the corporation.

The 25 contracts, spanning a period from March, 1960, to November, 1972, were made public in Parliament Monday.

In fact, federal aid to the strike-plagued U.S. subsidiary company substantially exceeds the total of the contracts tabled Monday. Industry department officials have estimated up to $83 million in development grants and $4 million in loans was agreed to, although not all of it has been paid out.

This massive federal aid became an issue last fall after United Aircraft started transferring vital production equipment from its Longueuil, Que., plant to the parent company's base in Hartford, Conn.

The United Auto Workers union struck the Longueuil plant Jan. 7, 1974, charging the equipment transfer was a strike-breaking manoeuvre. Opposition members, notably Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, charged the government was "financing the technical development and the growth of jobs in a foreign country."

Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie first refused to divulge details of contracts with the company for aid under the defence industry productivity program, then admitted he did not know whether the company had broken them.

At one point, he said it was a matter for the courts to decide, but industry department officials said at the time the contracts were so loosely designed the company could probably defeat any legal challenge.

The issue never went to court. Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau suggested that the company might be nationalized to protect the federal investment, but this idea was hastily dropped. The company resumed production at Longueuil and said it would pay back about $62 million of the money it received.

The contracts made public Monday cover development grants on a turbine engine. The contracts total about 200 pages but nowhere is there a requirement that the work for which the money is offered is to be done in Canada.

And while the government had laid down targets of 75 per cent Canadian content in the turbine engines, officials say they realized this was an ambitious goal.

United Aircraft does not have to repay unless it makes a profit. Typical of the repayment terms: United Aircraft would pay one-quarter of all profits up to 10 per cent net from engine sales, then all profits over 10 per cent until the government aid had been repaid in full.

Mr. Gillespie was quoted last November as saying the question of repayment was "pretty academic" in view of operating losses United Aircraft had incurred.

Sharp Rejects Delay in Boost Of Taxes on Powerboats, Planes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives Monday made a second attempt to delay consideration of budget proposals to conserve energy until the long-delayed conservation policy statement is made later this month.

It will consist largely of recommendations in newspaper ads.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield asked the government to hold off on legislation to increase taxes on private aircraft and pleasure boats with engines of 20 horsepower or more.

But the suggestion was turned down in the Commons by House Leader Mitchell Sharp, who said the government wants to get the legislation out of the way and move on to consideration of income tax changes.

A similar suggestion was turned down Friday.

Mr. Sharp said the conservation program already has been discussed by cabinet a couple of times and probably will be announced within a few weeks.

Last week, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said the conservation program will be revealed about the end of the month. He had hoped to make it before Christmas.

Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer told Mr. Stanfield that he is negotiating with other departments on action the government can take to conserve its use of energy.

AMSTERDAM (Reuter) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), said today there is no question of the 1976 Summer Games being held anywhere except Montreal.

He told a news conference after talks here with the Canadian IOC representative, James Worrall of Toronto, that the committee is confident that a solution will be found to the problems of cost and organization which have threatened the Games.

"I would like to make it quite clear that there is no question of the games taking place other than in Montreal," Lord Killanin said.

He said he expects to have a meeting within 10 days with the president of the Canadian Games organizing committee, Roger Rousseau, to discuss the state of preparations.

The Quebec legislature is holding hearings into the organization and escalating costs of the games. Strikes by construction workers also have endangered the completion of the main Montreal stadium.

Referring to his planned talks with Rousseau, Killanin said: "There is no point in our meeting until he has definite facts."

The Canadian committee will have to present a full report to the IOC executive at a meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, Feb. 20, Killanin said.

"Now it may be that we are told there will be no changes, but it may be that we are asked to agree to certain modifications or changes," he said.

Killanin did not elaborate on the changes beyond saying that one of the topics he discussed with Worrall was minor changes in the main Montreal stadium.

Belleville Engineers Silent

Men at Montreal Join CN Strike

Staff and CP

Canadian National (CN) locomotive engineers in Montreal Tuesday night voted to take immediate strike action, seriously jeopardizing progress toward settlement of a week-old wildcat walkout by other enginers across the country.

Doug MacAvoy, general chairman of the Canadian Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (CBLE) for the CN's Quebec and Maritimes lines, said 100 Montreal engineers booked off early today.

"If this action continues, it's really going to put the screws to everything," he said.

The decision to strike was taken at a meeting of 70 Montreal engineers, representing about a third of the local.

"Montreal is off the job and they are staying off the job," said Mr. MacAvoy. "This is much against CBLE executives' wishes and it is our opinion that this will put negotiations back indefinitely."

Engineers returned to work Tuesday in Winnipeg, leaving Toronto, Belleville, Ottawa and now Montreal as the only centres still out of service since a dispute over a retroactive wage issue began last Wednesday.

The Belleville local of the Brotherhood of Engineers (BLE) was one of the first to walk off the job last Wednesday and have since thrown up a wall of secrecy.

Ian Brady, acting on behalf of the Belleville local said today no comment is to be made on the situation locally and that union meetings are being held daily.

"Before we make any decision to go back to work, we will assess the situation in other areas," he said. "We're not waiting to follow any other local's lead — we took the lead by going out."

It is expected information from a national union-management in Montreal Tuesday will be presented to the local in Belleville today. A passenger sales spokesman in Bellville said the evening Bonaventure travelling between Montreal and Toronto will run as scheduled tonight.

The spokesman said the Montreal engineers were split with some reporting for work as usual.

Supervisory personnel will continue to operate the trains from the Belleville terminal, the spokesman said.

The return of enginemen in Winnipeg in addition to reports that engineers in Toronto were prepared to return, raised hopes Tuesday among CN officials that transcontinental passenger service might be resumed by Thursday.

The dispute centres on terms of a new contract which includes 3,164 locomotive enginemen represented by the CBLE.

The contract, signed between 18 railway unions and 11 rail companies, provided most of the 100,000 workers involved with a 15-per-cent wage hike Jan. 1. But the engineers' pay raise will not take effect until their contract is renewed May 1.

CN reiterated its stand Tuesday that no "meaningful" negotiations on the wage issue would take place until all centres were back at work.

In Toronto, Paul Mandziak, local CBLE chairman, said Monday the local had hired a lawyer to contest the terms of the new contract. Mr. Mandziak added the engineers had received a letter from CN saying the new contract would take effec Jan. 1

Postmen Want $2.50 Pay Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — The Letter Carriers Union of Canada is seeking a $2.50-an-hour raise for its 16,000 members in current negotiations with treasury board—an increase that would bring average annual salaries to about $13,000, Jim Mayes, national union president, said today.

The union also wants a one-year contract and a cost-of-living clause that will protect the value of earnings, he said.

Present hourly wage of letter carriers is $4.35.

Mr. Mayes said he is optimistic about the way bargaining teams have got down to serious business since talks began about two weeks ago.

Industrial Park Planned

Everybody Happy? Not Mayor Jeffrey

Staff and CP

TORONTO — The provincial government announced Tuesday it plans to spend more than $3-million to purchase land for an industrial park in Edwardsburgh Township near Prescott, Ont.

Housing Minister Donald Irvine, in whose riding the industrial park is to be located, said options have been acquired on 10,000 acres of rural land.

He declared that the residents of eastern Ontario "are happy the government is providing this added impetus" to boost the area's economy.

"I'm not happy about it," said Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey. "The Provincial government is likely taking the right move in the long run to de-centralize development from the Toronto — Hamilton area but I'm concerned about the immediate effects on the Quinte area."

The mayor said "providing the provincial government keeps its word on attracting only large industries to the new park, the effect on Belleville may not be too great."

The mayor said municipalities were "assured" the province will be looking only for those industries needing sites of "1,000 acres or more".

"Belleville would not be able to handle such an industry anyway," she said.

"But I'm very fearful Belleville will suffer if the province attracts medium and light industry requiring lesser amounts of land."

City industrial commissioner Fred Bemis said today, "it is very difficult to assess the impact". He agreed with the mayor that Belleville will be "okay" if the province attracts only large land users.

Sites in the 10,000 - acre park (twice the area of Belleville) will sell for about $4,000 an acre — half the asking price for serviced, industrial land in the city.

Cold Cures May Kill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Patients suffering from colds and other relatively common complaints may run the risk of serious illness and death if treated with two powerful but frequently misprescribed antibiotics, a United States Senate subcommittee was told Tuesday.

The antibiotics are clindamycin and lincomycin, marketed as Cleocin and Lincocin by the Upjohn Co. of Kalamazoo, Mich.

Six authorities on gastroenterology and infectious diseases testified that the two drugs should be administered for certain bacterial diseases, and only when other more preferable antibiotics cannot be used.

Drapeau Winning Fight for Stadium

QUEBEC (CP) — Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau's insistence on going ahead with the building of the main stadium and swim hall for the 1976 Summer Olympics came one step closer Tuesday after consultants rejected the concept of relocating the Autostade to the east-end Montreal Olympic site.

The relocation proposal was dismissed when architect Claude Gagnon told a Quebec legislature committee studying Olympic costs and construction that the Autostade, built for Expo 67, could not be torn down, transferred, and rebuilt in time for the opening day of the Games, July 17, 1976.

The national assembly committee requested the feasibility study on the relocation last week after it heard conflicting reports about the cost and construction of the 70,000-seat, $320-million stadium.

Mr. Gagnon told the committee the cost of the relocation alone would amount to $92 million, and another $70 million would have to be added to take into account the building of a dome, additional seats, the breaking of present contracts and the losses incurred by work already completed but which would be rendered useless.

He said construction of the Olympic stadium would be completed by February, 1976, as promised by Mayor Drapeau.

Whether the stadium will be built without an adjoining 600-foot tower anchoring a retractable roof has yet to be decided.

Income Tax Refunds Could Be Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — People will have to wait for income tax refunds this year if the government's omnibus tax bill is delayed in the Commons, Finance Minister John Turner said Tuesday night.

Tax returns have to be completed and filed by April 30, three months from now, and the House has only started second reading of the 287-page tax bill. And, from early opposition reaction in the House, it might be a long fight.

"Until the bill is passed, the department of national revenue doesn't have the authority to send out refunds . . . ." Mr. Turner said in an interview.

"I'd like to see the bill dealt with with reasonable dispatch, but I think the issues are important enough that they ought to be debated thoroughly. But I never lean on Parliament; I find that that would be self-defeating9"

Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp, however, suggested outside the Commons that the bill might be passed by early next month.

There are 142 clauses in the bill, many of them with complicated sections and sub-sections that might promote lengthy debate individually.

The personal income tax proposals, some held over from the May, 1974, budget that defeated the government, include:

—reduced personal taxes by a minimum of $150 and a maximum $500 for 1974 and a minimum $200 and maximum $750 for 1975.

—exemption from taxation on $1,000 interest income, extended to divided income and private pension benefits.

Wilson Pays Ottawa Visit

OTTAWA (CP) — British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan arrived here Tuesday night for a brief visit before flying on to Washington for talks with President Ford.

Today Mr. Wilson will attend a working luncheon with Prime Minister Trudeau, tape a television interview and hold a news conference.

Bullet Hits Truck

TORONTO (CP) — A truck driver suffered facial cuts Tuesday when a bullet shattered his windshield as he drove north on the Don Valley Parkway. Police later arrested a man with a rifle in a 10th-floor apartment in the immediate vicinty of the shooting. His name was not released.

Blast Kills 16

TAIPI (Reuter) — At least 16 persons were killed and more than 100 injured today by an explosion which ripped through a toy shop in the central Taiwanese city of Taichung. Twenty-two persons were missing.

Guards Charged

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — Ten present or former guards at the Oklahoma State Penitentiary were indicted Tuesday in connection with the gassing of prisoners locked in a maximum security area last May. One of the prisoners died. The guards were accused of using pepper fog machines, 37-mm. gas guns, 12-gauge gas guns, 25-mm. gas guns, gas canisters and other gassing weapons on the prisoners, who were locked in solitary cells in the maximum segregation building.

Egypt to Get French Planes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt announced today he had purchased a number of supersonic jet fighters from France to make up for a lack of supplies from the Soviet Union.

Sadat said he could not reveal the exact number of jets he has bought but said they were "much less than" the 120 previously said to be involved in the deal. Sadat said delivery of the planes will be "in years to come."

More Aid For Saigon Unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Henry Kissinger says he hopes the administration's request for more aid to South Vietnam will not rekindle debate about United States involvement in Indochina, but Congress already is balking at President Ford's proposal.

Congressional leaders said stiff opposition awaited Ford's request for an additional $300-million in military aid for South Vietnam and $222 million for Cambodia.

Shortly after congressional leaders met with Ford and Kissinger, assistant Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said that while both sides did not give a "flat no," they said it would be difficult, if not impossible, to win approval for the request.

Senator John Tower (Rep. Tex.) chairman of the Republican policy committee, said the request would be denied because "the majority of the Congress is prepared to let Vietnam go down the drain."

Health Board and Companies At Odds Over Lead Charges

TORONTO (CP) — David Caverly, chairman of the Ontario Environmental Hearing Board studying lead pollution, expressed concern Tuesday about "the very serious turn of events" involving charges and counter-charges between the Toronto board of health and industry spokemen.

Mr. Caverly's comment followed rejection of health board complaints that industry spokesmen dominate the hearings and a countercharge by two smelters that health board members are making false representations.

Mr. Caverly said he does not think cross-examination of witnesses by Ian Outerbridge, lawyer for Canada Metal Co. Ltd. and Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd., has been too lengthy.

The board also rejected Mr. Outerbridge's demand for an immediate recess to allow his clients to consult Attorney-General John Clement and seek protection against what he termed false representations by health board members.

Persons appearing before the board "to bring the truth . . . ought not to be vilified," Mr. Outerbridge said. The board said it would investigate the lawyer's complaint.

A Monday request by the health board remains unresolved. The board, which says it has exhausted its $10,000 budget for the hearings, is seeking extra money to pay for qualified witnesses to counter industry witnesses.

It has voted 4 to 3 to withdraw from the hearing unless the witnesses are brought forward by the environment ministry.

Outside the hearing, Environment Minister William Newman vetoed the health board's request for a meeting with his officials to discuss financing. He said such a meeting would be inappropriate because the hearing board is to report to him.

Tax Tips

Q. What is the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan?

A. RHOSP was introduced in 1974 to help taxpayers save money to buy a home. It allows a taxpayer to deduct from income all amounts, up to $1,000 per year contributed to a Registered Home (RHOSP). A person's maximum life-time contribution is $10,000. Investment income of the RHOSP is accumulated tax-free and when the taxpayer wishes to withdraw all his funds to purchase a home, or home furnishings such as essential major appliances and furniture, the funds are received tax-free to the extent they are used for these purposes.

Q. Who may benefit under the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan?

A. Taxpayers resident in Canada, 18 years of age or over, who were never previously beneficiaries under an RHOSP and who are not presently home-owners may contribute to an RHOSP.

Q. I am a salaried employee and I have to purchase special reference books for my work. Can I claim these as a deduction for income tax purposes?

A. No. The cost of reference books is not an allowable deduction from salary received as an employee. You may claim an employment expense deduction of 3 per cent of your employment income, up to $150 a year.

Q. Can I claim dental expenses incurred at a denturist's establishment as medical expenses?

A. Yes. The stipulations are that the denturist must be licensed, and the expenses aren't paid for by dental insurance plan.

Q. My employer states that the portion of the medicare premiums that he pays on my behalf must be included in my income. Is this correct?

A. Yes. The benefit derived from an employer's contribution to a public medicare plan is a taxable benefit, and must be included with your other income from employment. The employer's contributions to private health services plans, such as the Blue Cross are still exempt.

Q. I am a transport employee and I do have certain travelling and away-from-home expenses. What records are necessary to prove my claim for these expenses when filing my income tax return?

A. If you are an employee of an airline, railway, bus or carrying goods or passengers other transport company and you are required to travel regularly away from the municipality or metropolitan area where you report for work, you may claim actual expenses for meals and lodging while away, minus any amount reimbursed by your employer. Information from your detailed records should be shown on form TL2 and filed with your return. There is an Information Circular 73-21 available on this subject.

Board of Education Loses Key Official

John Bancroft, transportation officer with the Hastings County Board of Education since its inception in 1969, died Jan. 25.

"He went about his work quietly, efficiently, with the patience and understanding so necessary in dealing with the parents of students and with those involved in our vast transportation system," said business administrator Kenneth Wormald, at the board meeting Monday. "As an employee and as an individual, he will be greatly missed."

As transportation officer Mr. Bancroft was responsible for 270 daily bus routes, covering two million miles a year and carrying 9,500 students to classes daily.

He was secretary-treasurer of the Centre Hastings District High School Board from 1960 to 1967, before it was incorporated into the former Bay of Quinte District High School Board. He became transportation officer with the county board in 1969.

The board lost two other valued employees in January.

Carl Shellield, 53, a custodian at Quinte Secondary School since September of 1972, died Jan. 12. Burrell Hamilton, custodian at Centennial Secondary School since April, 1968, died Jan. 20.

New Craft Program To Supply Relief Funds

A new craft project under the International Aid Red Cross Program this year to produce funds for food and medical supplies in disaster-ridden warm climate countries highlighted committee reports of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society at its annual dinner meeting Tuesday in Sun Luck Gardens.

Dorothy Smith, women's work chairman, said the finished products, such as dolls and ornaments which will be sent to branches in kit form, will be earmarked for sale at a gift shop in Toronto with proceeds for international aid.

The scheme was devised when the Red Cross realized its usual work projects of knitted, crocheted and sewn goods would not suffice for recent disasters in "hot" countries, such as the flood in Bangladesh, where emergency food and medical supplies were badly needed.

Mrs. Smith noted 30 per cent of each branch workroom's budget will be allotted for the draft kit project, with the remainder maintained for fabric items. The craft portion may increase in coming years.

In other committee report highlights:

MORE

— Blood donor chairman Merritt Hackett reported an increase in total blood donations to 1,841 in 1974 from 1,469 in 1973. He praised students who donated in first-ever clinics held for secondary students. "It was gratifying to see these young people respond so willingly to our request," he commented.

— Homemaker services chairman Helen Ketcheson announced an increase in home care rates over 1974 from $18 to $24 per day. "While the figure is high, it is still a very reasonable alternative to a hospital bed at approximately $80 per day," she pointed out.

— Disaster chairman Effie McCabe said her committee assisted 22 families and 74 children last year last year who lost homes and all belongings by fire and carried no insurance.

— First aid chairman Harry Hitchon said his new program started last May and reached 1,100 students in the Quinte area, and held courses for three groups: a Belleville girl guides troop, Church of Jesus Christ Latter-Day Saints in Trenton and Quinte Rescue Squad.

The program is in co-operation with City Ambulance which provided qualified instructors.

Skaters Collect $2,000

MADOC — The skate-a-thon held here in December has raised $2,000 and the money is still pouring in, it was reported recently.

The money will be shared by the Madoc Skating Club and the Minor Hockey League Association to pay for future ice rental.

Participants were awarded prizes for their efforts. Receiving first prize, a pair of skates, was Tony Douglas, for earning the most money. Second prize in the male division was a pair of hockey gloves, which went to Scott Chapman, while third, fourth and fifth prizes of hockey sticks went to Darcy Kirkwood, Doug Reid and Brennan Devolin, respectively.

In the girl's division, first prize, a pair of skates, was awarded to Shelley Nolan; second prize, skate warmers, to Lesley Mason and third, fourth and fifth prizes of fur mittens went to Mrs. Violet Preston, Darlene Francis and Jill Taylor, respectively.

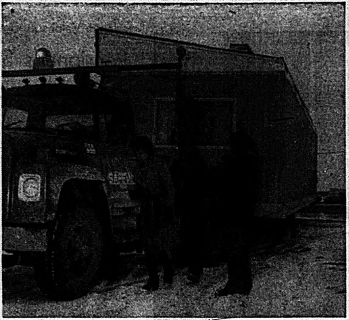
Forsyth Visits

Area Kiwanis Club leaders are hoping for a minimum 125-member turnout for the official visit of Governor Charles Forsyth of Toronto. The event will be staged on the evening of Tuesday, March 18 at the Four Seasons. It will replace the usual noon luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville that day. Price of each ticket is $8.

Red Cross Crafts

Daniel King, development officer with the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society, explains the new Red Cross craft program started this year to develop additional funds for world disaster relief in food and medical supplies in warm climate countries. Holding a sample craft kit following the Belleville branch's annual dinner meeting at Sun Luck Gardens Tuesday are Joan McRorie (middle) and Dorothy Smith of the branch's women's work committee. In foreground are knitted garments and blankets also destined for aid stockpile.



First to Arrive

Mobile homes from St. Hubert, Quebec arrived in Belleville Tuesday, the first visible signs of the Mobile Homes Sales Division of Maurice H. Rollins Const. Ltd. Donna Hebert, manager of the division, here gives instructions to transport drivers. The sales court is located on Dundas St. east near Herchimer.

Taylor Outlines Benefits For Province's Elderly

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

WELLINGTON — It is important for senior citizens to realize the government programs available for them, whether they relate to income security, health care or recreation, says James Taylow, MPP Prince Edward — Lennox.

Mr. Taylor recently told members of the Wellington Senior Citizens' Club income security is basic to relaxed life.

"All Canadians receive old age security payments at age 65. If they have little or no income from other sources they are entitled to the guaranteed income supplement," he remarked.

Thse payments are adjusted to reflect the changes in cost of living.

Mr. Taylor says at present these total $192.18 monthly for a single person and $366.62 monthly for a married couple. Annually this totals $2,306 for single and $4,399 for married persons.

"The Ontario government introduced a guaranteed annual income system in 1974 which assures every pensioner resident in the province a minimum monthly income of $230.50 at the present time," commented the MLA.

"While the first monthly payments began in July, 1974, periodical adjustments will continue to be made to reflect the impact of inflation."

The province provides income support through the Ontario tax credit system, subsidized health insurance premiums and free prescription drugs.

The property tax credit is available whether the property is owned or rented.

In 1973, the Ontario government introduced a sales tax credit and pensioner tax credit.

When a senior citizen has little or no income old age security and guaranteed income supplement this could mean an additional payment of up to $353 for a single person and $368 for married couples.

Mr. Taylor reminded senior citizens of drug benefits for all persons receiving the guaranteed income supplement.

He also referred to the extended health care program introduced to enlarge the scope of insured health services to include people requiring nursing care in licensed nursing homes.

Senior citizen housing and Prince Edward's new home for the aged also were discussed.

Other benefits for senior citizens include free or reduced admission for provincial parks and camp grounds and to provincially-supported institutions such as Ontario Place, the Ontario Science Centre, art galleries and museums.

"In my opinion governments and the private sector must co-operate more and more in devising means of utilizing a tremendous pool of valuable experience and skills possessed by senior citizens that is currently going to waste," said Mr. Taylor.

Band Needs Members

Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps, gearing for another summer season of parades and competitions, can not only use more young people as buglers, drummers and color guard or rifle team members, but also welcomes more adults to assist in any capacity.

The corps rehearses each Sunday afternoon and Wednesday after 7 p.m. in the old St. George's Mission building on Station St. at Emily St., and all interested people are invited to drop in.

"We do at least five field competitions out-of-town plus our own show here in August and then we go to the Red Carpet championship in Eire, Pa.," said Director Hugh Bondy of the corps' itinerary.

Facelift Ruled Out

Five Hurt In Crash

Five people were treated and released with minor injuries after a three-vehicle collision Tuesday afternoon on Highway 14 at the 4th Concession of Thurlow.

Police said that the following people were taken to hospital: Wayne Hasler, 18, of Flinton, David Inwood, 22, of McArthur's Mill, Ont., who are two of the three drivers, and passengers Ross Godfrey, 25, of Everett St., Belleville, Larry Vardy, 23, of Bancroft and Deborah Carroll, 17, of Highland Dr., Belleville.

The driver of the third vehicle was George James of RR5, Belleville. Amount of damage to the vehicles involved was not available.

Students Aid Deaf

MADOC — The staff and students of Centre Hastings Secondary School and the Madoc Public School are planning to join Sir James Whitney School in a program to help deaf children.

The program, which will hopefully be under way by March or April, will provide an opportunity for the totally deaf and hard-of-hearing children to establish contact with reality.

The staff and students are presently working on an integration program between regular school systems and deaf school systems on a regular basis. A series of training sessions between the Madoc School and the teachers of the OSD have already taken place. Since communication is the basic key, staff and students are learning sign language. This is to aid a handicapped person in understanding a deaf person's situation.

The method used will be a twinning or matching' setup. A Madoc student will spend one weekend in the OSD with one deaf student, and later the deaf student will visit the Madoc student for one weekend in his or her home.

On the Road

Some more thoughts on the recent visit of the Canadian Opera Company, noting for one thing the Globe and Mail's extensive coverage of the Belleville and Hastings county segment of the tour.

The company's gruelling schedule was mentioned here the other day, and just how gruelling was evident from John Kraglund's report from The Friendly City quoting soprano Barbara Collier (who shared the role of Mimi with Ann Cooper in the La Boheme production.) as saying, "Oh for the good old days of one-night stands."

But then she agreed with tenor Barney Ingram that the old routine of one-nighters had tended to become a bore. Now there is a sort of renewed pioneering spirit abroad in opera in Canada, reflected by this successful new format of combining a full opera performance from city to city with mini presentations of opera extracts in schools and plant canteens by day.

The cast did not go so far as to say the schedule was "murder," as Billie Jean King in her autobiography says of a 30-day grind of one-night pro tennis appearances in Europe. It was hard enough work, but probably all would agree much more rewarding than in the past when the schedule would be the some every day, and the audience limited "to the same 300 people in each town."

That was tour director Jan Rubes speaking, and he noted also that some of their audience was "beginning to die off"

An intriguing sidelight, on the physical aspect of such a tour: Rubes is quoted as saying: "By rights, we should function like a hockey team, with a curfew for the performers." But Kraglund tells of some loss of sleep incurred — in addition to travelling hither and yon, through joining the entertainers in a motel bar. No harm in that maybe, rather a sort of charming revival of the old wandering minstrel days, but . . . early to bed and early to rise has its advantages.

In any event Kraglund believes this was as well balanced a cast as he had heard in sometime, and he says Belleville "is already talking about next year."

And a footnote: the company stayed at a motel in Trenton because according to Kraglund "Belleville's inns were not prepared to provide affordable accommodation."

And why, pray? In this sphere, Trenton's gain was our loss.

Winter Wind

The weather. Oh yes. . . !

Like death and taxes it's with us all the time. Varied, fickle, unpredictable.

But where are the signs of that ice age scientists say might catch up with us?

Those of us who are happiest weather wise when the wind blows — a rare enough occurrence in these parts — and subscribe to the poet's contention that it is not as unkind as man's ingratitude — would have been in their element Sunday morning.

Even then it was not that cold. Still, the weather is all-encompassing, something that shapes our lives in myriad ways.

Another ice-age though . . . that's something else.

Half-a-century ago, as our Looking Backward column testified in recent days, the temperature in Belleville dipped to 29 below at night, and by noon the next day was still a chilly six below.

About the worst we have experienced this winter so far is 12 below zero, and let's not forget those days of late when it was in the fifties and more like spring.

Can spring be far behind? We are nearly into the relatively swift passage of February, with warmer days not far beyond that.

Meanwhile, it's the everlasting topic (well one of them) staring at us daily from the front page of the newspaper come what may in this uneasy world, and from the boob tube when evening comes.

As for that ice age . . . well we shall likely see 1984 first; survive it, hopefully, and let the future take care of itself.

Lumber Industry Stands to Gain From Decline in Interest Rates

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Canada's lumber industry, hit hard by construction cutbacks, is fervently hoping that the decline in interest rates will continue.

The connection? House-building is directly affected by the cost of borrowed money. So when residential mortgage rates reached record levels in 1974, the market for houses—and the lumber that goes into them—began to dry up.

But interest rates have been coming down (prime lending rate has been cut to 9.75 per cent) and the federal government has introduced new inducements for home buyers.

Lumbermen don't look for any dramatic upswing in sales or prices. On the other hand, however, they don't anticipate any further deterioration in market conditions.

Latest figures show that Canada's lumber exports in 1974 were running well below 1973, which was a poor year. By volume, exports were down 11 per cent during the first 10 months of 1974, and by value, 13 per cent.

—In the U.S. market, January-October sales of Canadian lumber were off 18 per cent because of the slump in housing starts and the resulting downward pressure on lumber prices. The price of a dry white western spruce two by four delivered in New York, for instance, fell 37 per cent between last March and the year-end, to roughly its average 1971 price.

—In the important U.K. market, demand for Canadian lumber started off strongly in 1974, then went downhill through the year as importers' inventories of Canadian lumber became top heavy. In October, sales were running 26 per cent below the level of the same month in 1973.

—In Japan, the downtrend during 1974 was similar but not as steep. Our lumber exports to Japan in October were off nine per cent from a year earlier.

British Columbia has suffered the most from declining sales and consequent unemployment in the lumber industry, because of its role as the primary supplier of export markets.

The Maritimes and Quebec lumber industries, although not as heavily dependent upon exports, have also had to cut back operations—in part because of added competition from British Columbia lumber.

In Ontario the effects of the market decline have been blunted to some extent by the chronic shortage of forest-industry workers, and by the fact that there is a higher degree of integration of lumber operations with pulp-and-paper production.

The prospects for 1975 remain mixed.

Positive factors include not only the anticipated recovery in housing construction, but also the substantial increase in demand for chips, sawdust and shavings. Previously waste, these items have a growing cash value as part of the fibre in pulp and paper products.

On the other hand, the important U.S. housing market remains in a slump and it is by no means clear, so far, whether the Ford administration's efforts to revive the American economy will take hold this year.

Pay Cut Would Hurt Some MPPs

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — So are we to have a new breed of five per centers?

Negative five per centers.

Instead of taking a commission they will take a deduction.

Led by management board chairman Eric Winkler it now is being proposed that cabinet ministers and MPPs take a five-per-cent cut in pay to show the country that they are inflation fighters.

Mr. Winkler, who was a Diefenbaker Conservative in Ottawa, would not have been unaware of the havoc his proposal would cause with the Trudeau Liberals who have been bumbling along with their projected pay raise like Liza crossing the floes.

The Gray South member is very much a political pro and knows the angles.

Still aside from this his proposal, gimmick or not, would seem to have merit.

Certainly there has been little enough surface indication that the Davis administration is really an inflation fighter.

There have been some statements about cutting down but when you look for the evidence very little is apparent.

Those who will take the beating if this cut does go through, and at the point of writing this is still a bit upin the air, will be the private members.

Cabinet members with their $40,000 plus perquisites really aren't badly off.

But many private members with their $22,000 really aren't that well off.

This may sound like a fair chunk of money, but with their heavy expenses many of the routine MPPs aren't all that prosperous.

This annual stipend may sound like a good bit of money, but in our thinking on money these days we tend to think of the dollar of a few years ago.

We don't often realize just what the value of the dollar actually is today.

The $22,000 of the present really amounts to not much more than $15,000 a few years ago. And there are many people who are making the equivalent of that $15,000, and without the responsibility or the hazards and expenses of an elected provincial representative.

An elevator technician, for example, makes close to the $22,000 of a member. And cleaners in some plants are doing considerably better than $200 a week.

Finally an across-the-board reduction would not be equitable in that it would hit opposition members more than government supporters.

Most of the Conservative MPPs get extra income through parliamentary assistantships or work on commissions which pays extra.

For the most part opposition members have to live mainly on their stipend.

Relative Values in Canada

Pensioner's $1,440 a Year Meagre Beside the Job-Quitter's $7,800

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA— How about that $1,440 a year for the old-age pensioner, retired from a lifetime of toil, and the annual $7,800 for the young job-quitter, taking off 51 weeks from work?

Yes, that's how it is.

The old age pensioner is getting his basic $120 a month.

And the young loafer is drawing $154 a week.

That's the way the current old age pension and Unemployment Insurance rates read.

"Something," says Allan McKinnon, Conservative MP, back at work on Parliament Hill after the year-end recess in Victoria "has to be dreadfully wrong."

He says he knows what it is: "The total philosophy of Prime Minister Trudeau and his government's sense of values ..."

They're both, he says, completely crazy.

First the old age pension.

It's simple. It pays a basic $120 a month. Just $1,440 a year. And even with supplemental payments made in circumstances of need, the true story of many pensioners existing close to the edge of chronic hunger is sadly familiar.

And that, says Allan McKinnon, a compassionate man, "is bad enough, God knows."

But what makes it worse and even more unacceptable in a decent and just society, is the raw contrast with the comparative affluence of the minority of the indolent young men who manage to con the Unemployment Insurance Commission for a well-paid year of ease at $154 a week, or, putting it another way, an annual "salary" of 7,800.

Pogey is more complicated than the pension.

But this is the way it works.

The top-of-the-line with Unemployment Insurance right now is $123 a week.

On top of that, the UIC people allow part-time jobs up to 25 per cent of the pogey payment itself.

That figures out to almost $31 weekly, or a total $154.

If everything goes smoothly — the pogey ripper applies for jobs but doesn't get them, but the UIC thinks he's really trying — he can collect for 51 weeks.

Last year the best the UIC could do was $113 and the pogey artist had to be making $170 a week or better on an honest-to-goodness working job.

This year the take goes to $123 and the job that the young worker is free to quit has to be worth at least $185 weekly.

But there's a penalty for simply quitting — a wait of five weeks instead of two for the UIC payout.

Statistics Canada reported in November that 760,000 or so persons were on the UIC "payroll," and while figures to be disclosed next month will show an increase, nobody officially is saying by how much.

Will the new, higher pogey benefits inspire more people to pop off the job and hop up to the UIC pay window?

That's the kind of question the UIC officials like to skirt, but the increasingly disillusioned staff can get fired up enough to suggest that "it all depends on your view of work."

If you like the idea of a paid 51 weeks off with the easy odd job on the side to pick up the permitted extra $31, then the $154 a week for loafing is for you.

And if you're really committed to this casual no-sweat life-style, and everything slips into place smoothly at the UIC office, a year-long $7,800 paid vacation is yours at the taxpayers' expense.

Any way you look at it, says Allan McKinnon, it's "pretty disgusting," especially when you remember those old age pensioners who hacked it all their lives, through good times and unspeakably bad, and now are scrimping along on a monthly $120.

"That's Pierre Trudeau's 'just society,' as he once called it," says Allan McKinnon.

"It's utterly out of balance. It's upside down. It's totally wrong.

"But it's Pierre Trudeau's philosophy that the universe is unfolding as it should, and that if you don't feel like working, fine.

"Just take it easy, courtesy of the working taxpayer, and fulfill yourself, as he phrased it, enjoy life at someone else's expense — including the often hungry and usually deprived pensioner."

Political Hiatus in Franco's Spain As Monarchist Formula is Debated

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Time is standing still in Spain at mid-decade, a dangerous hiatus in a nation where politics before the long Franco era, were volatile and changing.

This spring, Generalissimo Francisco Franco will celebrate 36 years of supreme power, and 40 years but one since he proclaimed his "national crusade" in late 1936.

He has decreed a post-Franco Spain, a state without him, making the classic move of all strongmen to perpetuate himself after his death.

The formula for a future-without-Franco is the restored monarchy with Juan Carlos, a grandson of Alfonso XII, Spain's last king, as his chosen candidate.

Technically the heir and successor to Alfonso XIII should be Don Juan de Bourbon, one of his sons and Juan Carlos' father. But he is unsuitable to Franco because of his known liberal views and determination to restore constitutional monarchy of the British model to Spain.

In a paradox of politics, typically Spanish, the Spanish monarchists around Juan Carlos, including his candidate for a royalist prime minister, believe strongly in constitutional monarchy.

All of which means that Franco's so-called "National Movement," an alliance of army-church and Falange party through which he has ruled in Spain cannot survive after him, even though he has made Juan Carlos pledged to uphold it.

If there were Spain's only future political hang-up in a time without the general around, times could be difficult enough. But millions of Spaniards we can only surmise, don't believe in monarchy, many want the republican formula tried again, others want a strongly socialist Spain.

Political parties of the kind familiar in other European states, for example Christian Democrats and Socialists, have been banned in Spain, but are now surfacing with self-style leaders.

They might work initially within a constitutional monarchy, but in the long run would want a republican government again.

If time is standing still for the political process in Spain, it is not doing so for labor and the church. The former is in growing revolt against the straight-jacket of Fascist-style state trade unions or syndicates.

Spain in 1974 was a land of chronic labor unrest, 200,000 industrial workers on strike in October and two car plants worth about $15 million between them, burned to the ground. And all this in a country where strikes have been illegal since 1939.

The major move away from the Franco tripartite formula of power, army, Falange party and the church is the Roman Catholic church.

About 60 per cent of a once deeply conservative hierarchy of bishops and cardinals want an end to the church's allegiance to the Franco state and have given their support to badly-needed social reforms and civil liberties in the country.

Blood Clinics

Those Life-saving Transfusions

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I started giving blood when I was 17 years old and I never did know what happened to it, but it was the thing to do, so I kept on giving it. I recently found out what happens to it and I thought some of your readers might be interested.

Despite the fact that everyone says I am not the ulcer type, I developed myself a great big beautiful ulcer which kept on bleeding like crazy. In the meantime, I had ruined the clotting factor in my blood by taking aspirins for some arthritis and therefore my blood would not clot.

Therefore, since you ordinarily have about seven litres of blood in your body and since I remember getting 10 litres of blood before the operation, I would have been left in a deficit situation if it had not been for blood transfusions. I don't know how many transfusions I received after the operation, but I was certainly grateful for any which I was given.

I realize there are some people who don't believe in blood transfusions and, so far as I am concerned, they are quite entitled to bleed to death if they want to, but I am happy to be alive and I would like to thank Bruce Parkes, his volunteers, and all of Woodstock's blood donors for their gifts of time and blood.

To anyone who is not a blood donor I would like to suggest that he become one because you never know when you are going to want it back. It is like putting money in the bank. If I had not been a blood donor, I don't suppose I would have had any right to expect there to be blood when I needed it

I got into trouble from taking aspirins, but they tell me that I could have had as much trouble from drinking alcohol, although it would have cost me more money. I would therefore suggest to anyone who takes aspirins, to anyone who drinks alcohol, to anyone who ever rides in an automobile or ever crosses the street that they would be well advised to start putting blood in the bank because they never know when they are going to want to draw it out.

I would suggest to anybody who ever thinks he or she might possibly want a blood transfusion that he or she should attend blood clinics. A little prick in the arm, a 15-minute rest and a cup of coffee on your part could mean that you have helped to save somebody's life and the thought that you have done that will make you feel good all over. If the time comes when someone does the same for you, it will make you feel even better.

Political Trends in the Province

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Apropos "Provincial Scene" in The Intelligencer of Jan 21.

It would seem the fear currently pervading the legislature that Bill Davis' tory reign and the tory dominance of 30 odd years is about to come to an end, has permeated into the columns of The Intelligencer. Fear not! Whatever happens in the rest of the province there is not likely to be any change on the Belleville scene. For if the Tories run a chicken with a blue ribbon tied around its neck it will undoubtedly get elected.

Long live the backward loyalist Quinte area. It matters not in these parts of the conflict of interest running wild in the party or the complete failure of the educational system, the Quinte area people will once again put on their masks at election time.

Doctors Using Acupuncture Report Satisfying Results

OTTAWA (CP) — While a national conference on acupuncture carefully avoided any suggestions that the technique can have a curative effect on medical disorders, physicians already practising acupuncture have a far more optimistic view.

Dr. Jack Richman of Oakville, Ont., says he and other physicians have had results both in relief of pain by acupuncture and in terapeutic treatment of diseases.

"Although in clinical practice we find it works in a variety of medical conditions, as yet there have been no 'double-blind' clinical studies to prove this," he said.

"Double-blind" sutdies would involve three patients, one treated with acupuncture technique, the second with needles similar to it and the third with techniques not resembling acupuncture but intended to let the patient think it was acupuncture.

Dr. Richman is chairman of the acupuncture section of the Ontario Medical Association and program director of the Acupuncture Foundation of Canada.

He said delegates at the two-day conference felt that until such scientific studies are carried out, it would be "foolish to jump on the acupuncture bandwagon."

The Acupuncture Foundation now has plans to carry out such research. It is to set up a clinic in Toronto by March 1 both for research and education of physicians and medical students in acupuncture techniques.

Dr. Richman said he began using acupuncture after a three-day training course from the foundation and found beneficial effects on patients who had not responded to conventional treatment.

But he warned against unqualified practitioners. Doctors have encountered punctured lungs, bowels, bladders and cases of infectious hepatitis and other complications caused by acupuncturists who are not medical doctors.

Get Familiar with Good Fish Recipes

Given a pound of hamburger or a couple of pounds of stewing beef you can easily conjure up three or four favorite recipes with very little effort. But faced with a pound of fish fillets, most people either fry it or fry it because fish cooking just isn't as much a part of our culture.

The best way to get around that is to familiarize yourself with some good fish recipes, try them once or twice and then develop your own methods using your own favorite ingredients.

Mushrooms and Sole

The Mushroom Garnish:
1 pint fresh mushrooms
¼ cup water
three tbsps. lemon juice
1 tbsp. butter or margarine

Wash mushrooms quickly under cold water. Dry thoroughly. Remove caps from stems, and set stems aside. Boil the water and lemon juice. Add mushroom caps and butter. Cover and cook about five minute. Set aside in a warm place.

The Sole:
Mushroom Stems — Chopped
one tbsp. chopped onion
1½ lbs. sole fillets
salt and pepper
½ cup white wine
one tbsp. lemon juice
one tbsp. butter or margarine

Sprinkle the bottom of a well buttered large shallow oven-proof dish with chopped mushroom stems retained from mushroom garnish and the chopped onion. Over this, lay fillets close together in a single layer. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Bring wine and lemon juice to a simmer; pour over fish. Dot with butter. Place in a moderate oven, 350F. for about 20 minutes, or until fish flakes easily and is done.

The Sauce:
one tbsp. flour
one tbsp. butter or margarine
Hot wine liquid from fish
one tablespoon chopped parsley

In a sauce pan, blend flour and butter. Carefully pour in hot wine liquid, stirring continuously until thickened. (Keep mushrooms and fish in warm oven.) Add chopped parsley to sauce.

To Serve: Place mushroom and fillets on a warm platter. Spread sauce over fish. Drain the mushroom caps, and arrange on top of sauce. Serve four.

Salmon Party Plate

1 small can B.C. Salmon
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 large onion, chopped
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
½ teaspoon curry powder
1 can (10 oz.) stewed tomatoes
2 tablespoons seedless raisins
1 tsp. sweet basil
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Flake salmon with its juice, crushing the bones. Melt butter or margarine in saucepan; add onion and garlic powder; cook until onion is tender. Stir in curry powder. Add the entire contents of the can of salmon and remaining ingredients. Bring to the boil; reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Serve over rice or noodles. Serves three to four.

Lemon Butter Salmon Steaks

four salmon steaks, cut one inch thick three tbsps. butter or margarine
three tbsps. flour
⅞ cup chicken bouillon
one tbsp. lemon juice
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup buttered bread crumbs

Place salmon streaks in lightly greased shallow baking pan. Melt butter or margarine in small saucepan. Stir in flour; simmer until mixture turns to light brown in colour. Gradually add hot chicken bouillon, stirring until thick and smooth. Add lemon juice, salt, and pepper. Spoon mixture over salmon steaks. Bake at 450 degrees F. for 10 minute. Cover steaks with crumbs; return to oven and bake 3 minutes longer, or until fish flakes and crumbs are lightly browned. Makes 4 servings. (If using frozen salmon steaks double the first cooking time.)

Fish A 'Americaine

1½ pounds fresh water fish fillets
two tbsps. butter or margarine
Salt and pepper
one ripe avocado, peeled and sliced
one cup water
¾ cup chopped chives
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
one can sliced mushrooms, drained
one tbsp. cornstarch
¼ cup sour cream
¼ cup sauterne wine
three cups hot buttered rice
Chopped chives for garnish

Arrange fish fillets in a buttered heavy skillet. Brush fish with butter and season with salt and pepper Top with avocado slices.

Add chives, salt and pepper; add mushrooms. Pour water around fillets. Heat to boiling; cover reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes.

Remove fillets to a heated platter.

Thicken broth with cornstarch, if desired. Blend in sour cream and wine. Pour over fillets; garnish with chopped chives. Serve at once on bed of hot buttered rice. Serves 6.

Baked Fillets With Seasoned Rice

2 pounds fish fillets (sole, haddock or cod)
one lemon
½ cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
two tablespoons butter or margarine one can (1 pound 4 ounces) tomatoes
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon celery seed
¼ cup dry white wine
3 cups cooked rice
½ cup seasoned green peas

Arrange fish fillets in a lightly greased two-quart casserole; squeeze lemon juice over fish.

Saute onion and green pepper in butter until transparent. Add tomatoes, seasonings and wine. Pour over fish. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 20 minutes or until fish flakes easily.

Combine rice and peas. Heat. Season to staste.

Serve baked fish over rice and peas. Serve 6.

Grilled Halibut Steaks

four halibut steaks, cut one inch thick one-third cup cooking or salad oil
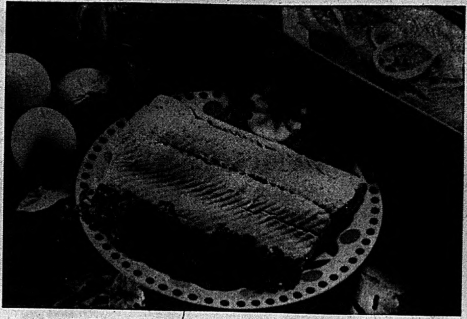
one-third cup lemon juice
1 tsp salt
two — three drops Tabasco
eight bay leaves

Place halibut steaks in shallow baking disr. Combine oil, lemon juice, salt, and Tabasco. Pour over fish. Cover ... hours, turning at least one. Remove steaks from marinade, place on aluminum foil on boiler rack. Place 2 bay leaves on top of each steak. Broil three inches from source of heat for six minutes. Turn steaks, placing bay leaves back on top. Broil four minutes more, or until fish flakes when tested with a fork. Discard bay leaves. Serve steaks garnished with lemond wedges and parsley. Serves four.



Bay leaves, onion, pepper and parsley complement the flavor of fish fillets.

..TWEED SENIORS

Wednesday, January 22 the Tweed Senior Citizens Club met in St. James Anglican Church Hall, with 95 members in attendance.

Before the business meeting, one minute's silence was observed in memory of William Murney Booth.

Harold Varty reported on an advisory board meeting held in Napanee, regarding the New Horizons program and other clubs in the area.

Merritt Metcalfe reported on the Hastings Manor committee who have visited Tweed residents there.

Plans were made for a bridge party February 21, since recent euchre parties have had great success.

.FOSTER PARENTS HONORED

Members of the Board of Directors, and staff of the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County met with 75 foster parents at Stirling on Monday night.

The occasion was the Board's annual tribute to the families in Hastings County who share their homes with the children entrusted to its care. The social evening and dinner, chaired by Alan Bronson of Bancroft, (Chairman of the Board) was arranged by a committee under the direction of Nan Morgan of Belleville.

Following a sing-song led by staff member Alan Payton and a magic act by Scott Ward of Stirling, certificates were presented to the foster parents who have served the community for ten or more years. Receiving framed scrolls were:

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Allen of Lonsdale, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anderson of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Broekema of Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hagerman of Eldorado, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Holden of RR 1 Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McGee of Harold, Mrs. Ellen Price of Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Thompson of Harold.

Special recognition was afforded Mr. and Mrs. Harold Holden for their more than 18 years of association with the agency, and Mrs. Ellen Price who, over the years, has provided initial care for thirty-nine infants.

Ann Landers

Ridiculous Concern Over Measurements

Dear Ann Landers: You printed a letter from a woman who was gypped by a company that advertised they could enlarge her bustline. That letter was the major topic of conversation at a meeting I attended recently.

I was amazed that so many women were truly concerned about the size of their breasts and arguing the merits of various techniques for enlarging same—including surgery.

One woman (who was more than amply endowed), turned to me and said, "Isn't this conversation ridiculous? What good are voluptuous bosoms if a woman's mind is flat and small? Isn't that an insult to a man's intelligence?" Please comment.—Everage and Content.

Dear A and C: Unfortunately, dear, most men can see better than they can think.

Dear Ann Landers: I have held off writing for months—hoping someone else would send you my problem, and today I saw it. I am in total sympathy with the woman whose minister husband didn't want any more sex. My husband thinks the same way—and he's no minister. Far from it.

We enjoyed sex for over 30 years, then suddenly he went completely impotent. This happened a year ago. He gets angy if I mention my needs. Finally he went to a doctor—alone. The doctor said he was OK physically and gave him some pills. They didn't help.

Now my husband thinks I should forget it. But I am being destroyed by his rejection. He doesn't show any affection whatever. I can find no proof that he is running around. But it doesn't make sense that a man who has enjoyed sex for 30 years should drop it like a hot potato.

My anxiety is showing in my work. I have thought of divorce. What do other women do when their partner (at 50 years of age) wants to call it quits on their sex life?—Married in Name Only

Dear Name Only: Maybe you'll find your answer in the next letter. It's there.

Dear Ann: This letter is in regard to the woman who divorced her husband because he became impotent at 42. The same thing could have happened to me, had it not been for my wife.

She became more affectionate and understanding than ever before. She turned into the aggressor and showed me that we could still have a satisfactory sex life in spite of my impotence.

At first I was quite passive. Then I began to be the giver as well as the receiver. Many women don't realize that a man's sexual desires don't vanish just because he becomes impotent. Nor should the wife feel that she is unattractive to him and therefore responsible for the problem. But some women know what to do about it—and some don't. Lucky for me, mine did.

A psychiatrist wasn't able to help me, but my wife, with her 10th-Grade education, was an expert on this serious marital problem. I might add, I am still impotent, but happy, satisfied, and more in love with my wife than ever.—Most Happy Fella

Dear Fella: That was a most timely letter. I hope the woman who wrote ahead of you can read between the lines and get the message. It's a good one and it could save her marriage. Thanks for writing.

Clergy Support Lang: No Abortion on Demand

TORONTO (CP) — The rector of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church said Monday that abortion should only be granted when the mother's life or health is endangered, as the Criminal Code states.

Rev. Alex McCombie told a news conference that the anti-abortion position has always been shared by the Protestant, as well as Catholic communities. He said the 11 clergymen at the conference were not official spokesmen, but represented large segments of their congregations.

Supporting federal Justice Minister Otto Lang's strict adherence to the Criminal Code, Rev. Desmond Hunt, rector of the Church of the Messiah, said Mr. Lang "has been vilified for just doing his job of protecting the law."

Mr. McCombie, who organized the news conference, agreed and said: "There have been attacks on him and his stand beause he is Roman Catholic. In his position I would do the same as he has done. He was trying to do his job.

"We are uniform in our opinion that abortion should not be given on demand. We are divided on how the law can work better."

Rev. Wayne Smith, an associate secretary of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, said: "The word health in the Criminal Code needs to be changed." The medical profession, theologians and citizens must work towards a better definition of who should be granted an abortion.

"A woman may feel utterly abandoned when making a decision about an abortion," Mr. Smith said. "The Presbyterian Church in Canada is encouraging the notion of helping consultation for those making it."

Rev. Melvin P. Sylvester, district superintendent for the Christian and Missionary Alliance said those in the medical professon, "find themselves in a real dilemma over the life-saving ethic," and abortion.

'Why Not!' Slogan Stirs Controversy

OTTAWA (CP) — Only persons with sexist minds find anything wrong with the flashy "Why Not!" buttons proclaiming International Women's Year, Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Monday.

"Most people don't think that at all," he said in response to critics who see a sexual connotation in the button's message. "Adverse reaction has been minimal."

So far more than 33,000 of the buttons have been distributed and only five critical letters have come in, he said in an interview outside the House of Commons.

The slogan was suggested by an advertising agency headed by a woman and approved subsequently by Mr. Lalonde and the secretariat co-ordinating government programs for women's year. Mr. Lalonde is the minister responsible for government programs affecting women.

Two women Liberal MPs, Simma Holt and Iona Campagnolo, have criticized the button, saying Mr. Lalonde was misled into approving it by "his office full of surrogate wives."

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, also said the button is sexist.

Mr. Broadbent appeared in the Commons Monday wearing a badge with a different message.

Distributed by a Saskatoon women's group, it read: "Otto Lang Is Two Four-Letter Words."

The justice minister smiled from his seat when Mr. Broadbent walked across the House floor to display it. The slogan is a protest against Mr. Lang's firm stand against easing abortion laws.

Marriage Laws to Be Updated Says Clement

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — John Clement, newly-appointed provincial attorney-general, told a gathering of the Catholic Women's Niagara Deanery Monday that marriage should be recognized as a social and economic partnership and that married persons should be entitled to share in the assets acquired by either or both of them during marriage.

Speaking at the mid-winter conference, Mr. Clement said the Ontario Law Reform Commission is trying to update laws concerning the dispersement of family property on termination of a marriage.

"Meetings like this are being held all across the province," he said. He noted the recommendations were purely for the purpose of discussion and have not been implemented in law.

Doris Clark

Two-time Loser Must Start New Life

Dear Doris: I am living with a man I though truthful — now I find that he lies like a rug.

Now he does not want to have all my four children or anyone in the house except me, him and my youngest son.

When I had my other son (15 years) and daughter (20 years) over for dinner he said after that he works hard for his money and doesn't want to feed anyone at all.

Won't buy clothes for himself, works from eight to five and sleeps from seven at night to six in the morning. Won't buy my clothes without a fight.

The saying goes, "If it didn't smell he'd eat it twice!"

One can get to hate such a person for lying and scheming. He is 69, so it's time he grew up — isn't it? My first husband was an alcoholic and a Number One liar.

I know this is too little to be able to advise me, but I don't know if I am to try and get welfare or go to work or drown myself — I am —

Forty-four.

Dear Forty-Four: How you could fall for a liar twice puzzles me. There are surely signs! You must have been desperate, and he must have been very smooth. And it's not clear whether you are married to him.

If you are not, you can leave without ceremony, once you have found a job. Or get government assistance. If you are married, you still do not have to live with a man who does not properly provide for you.

The sooner you start the better; the older he gets the harder he is going to be to break away from — and there is more than a generation between you. Consult your family counsellor as to how you stand and th deep feelings that are really involved.

Dear Doris: Our daughter, 14, is going around with a boy 19 just out of training school. She plays hookey from school to be with him.

We accepted him and tried to help them see the importance of an education, but he is full of the devil. Last night she went to sleep on the couch and when we came down this morning he was there. When I told him to leave, he didn't.

I am not well and she plays on that.

Concerned Mother.

Dear Mother: Your daughter will be the loser if she does not soon get the control - as well as the love - she needs, from both parents. Perhaps your illness has taken up much of her father's time and concern; perhaps she feels you play on her sympathies, when what she badly needs is firm, loving control from a mother who is in physical and emotional shape to give it to her.

When an aggressive young man of 19 takes an interest in a girl 14, he may be hard for her to resist - another indication that she is needing and expecting love.

There is a very fine child care agency where you are. A social worker there is the one whose personal help you need.

Vanclief Says Farmers Need Guaranteed Return

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

World consumers have to realize there must be a guaranteed return on investment for the farmer or the agriculture industry will cease to exist, a federal government appointee to the Food Systems Branch said here Tuesday.

Lyle Vanclief, appointed to a branch committee one year ago to study the pork industry in Canada, told Belleville Kiwanians food prices must increase to offset skyrocketing costs in farm equipment, sprays and fertilizer.

"There is a big investment and risk in agriculture today by the individual farmer," pointed out Mr. Vanclief, a RR 1, Ameliasburg resident, who owns Willowlee Farms Ltd.

"Because farmers are producing food, the people and governments of the world are realizing that there must be some guaranteed returns for this investment and risk or there will be no agriculture industry," he commented.

Material input costs have jumped over 50 per cent in the last two years, but farmers are unable to charge more for their produce to avoid a loss, said Mr. Vanclief.

"We produce perishable products, using set input costs, then offer them for sale and must take what we are offered for them," he noted.

Mr. Vanclief, a Quinte branch member of the Ontario Institute of Professional Agrologists, said the final management decision in the farming business comes down on one person — the farmer.

"He looks, listens, ponders and makes a decision that locks himself in for the next 12 months," he said.

This decision will be more difficult this year due to changes from the productive years of 1973-74, he said.

Although 1974 was a poor crop year because of a wet spring and summer and early winter, "a lot of the usual feed grains for livestock are going into the world food market because of the world food shortage," remarked Mr. Vanclief.

And yet farmers must keep pace with the increased demand for milk, which was up three per cent last November alone, he said.

In addition, recent United States quotas on imports of Canadian beef means Canada must find a new market for 43 million pounds of beef at a time when there is a world surplus of low class beef, pointed out Mr. Vanclief.

Over-all, pork consumption in North America will decrease 10 per cent this year as well, with U.S. farrowings down 15 per cent alone he said.

As for the labor situations, "I don't think it's as bad as it used to be," commented Mr. Vanclief. But he warned it might worsen if food prices drop and the farmer cannot pay the going wage.

Mr. Vanclief, 31, a father of two children, is a member of several agricultural organizations in the Belleville area, including president of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Pork Producers Association and the Quinte Exhibition and Raceway, and is a trustee of the Prince Edward County Board of Education.

Point on Farming

Lyle Vanclief, a RR 1, Ameliasburg farmer and member of several Belleville area agricultural organizations, is presented with a pointer as gift for speaking to the Kiwanis Club of Belleville Tuesday on problems facing farmers. Jim Stansfield (right), who made the presentation, said Mr. Vanclief could use it to point out the good aspects on being in the farming profession.

Bemis Confident Work Available for Jobless

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville Industrial Commissioner Fred Bemis said today, "I'm very concerned but I'm not pushing any panic buttons," in regard to renewed layoffs at Northern Electric.

Since November, the company has pared 342 employees from its operation.

Norther Electric Tuesday announced the layoff of 200 employees. A company spokesman said 100 of these would be laid off for 12 weeks and the remainder laid off "indefinitely." The company laid off 142 employees in November due to "a softening of economic conditions."

"It may have quite an impact," said Mr. Bemis. It will depend on the duration of production slowdown at the plant.

Mr. Bemis said, "the company is the big loser."

"We're (industrial commission and city labor leaders) going to find jobs for these people," said the industrial commissioner.

"Northern will lose money as trained staff, who have been laid off, find other jobs in the community."

While Proctor and Gamble are not ready to open now, it is the company's projection that 200 employees will be requird for start up, said Mr. Bemis.

"There are definitely opportunities in the city for Northern employees to be absorbed into new jobs," said Mr. Bemis.

In the past year, Belleville has experienced strong industrial growth, which Mr. Bemis said he feels will take up the slack.

Belleville firms S. A. Armstrong Ltd. and Poli-Twine Ltd. have begun hiring with each expected to take on approximately 35 employees.

Several others will start staffing within the next two months and Proctor and Gamble — the only plant large enough to completely handle the Northern Electric layoff — will begin hiring in April, said Mr. Bemis.

All companies verging on hiring are on or slightly ahead of schedule, he said.

"Northern layoffs have happened before," said Mr. Bemis. "It just puts the company's staff back to a 1973 level."

Mayor Robin Jeffrey, attending an Ontario Milk Marketing Board conference in Toronto today, said she could only "echo" the sentiments of Mr. Bemis.

"Belleville is fortunate to have had the industrial growth in the past year," she said. "I'm not happy about it but I understand the economic reasoning of the company."

Mrs. William Finkle, left, has added to the scope of the art program at Holy Rosary School by volunteering to teach oil painting to 10 to 12-year-old pupils. Among her pupils are Kim Shipman, Susan St. Denis, Angela Gannon and Anna Dicesare.

Experts Offer Advice To Young Art Students

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Holy Rosary School in Belleville has added a new dimension to its art program.

It is bringing in volunteers from the community to share their talents with the students in Grades 4 to 6.

The program began three years ago when Gerry Bibby, now vice-principal at St. Micahel's Academy, was principal of the school.

"We have enlarged upon it," says Holy Rosary principal Greg Dubec.

Two artists now are giving a half-day a week to the program. They are Bob Keegan of R and K Studios, who is teaching silk-screen techniques and Mrs. William Finkle, who is teaching oil painting. Arrangements have been made to offer woodworking next month, when a teacher-craftsman is available.

The special art classes are optional for the 10-to-12-year-olds in the school. In Mrs. Finkle's painting classes the children will complete two paintings from a picture before painting a subject of their own choice from life.

To hold the youngsters' interest, Mrs. Finkle has them tackle a complete painting from the start, building in techniques as they progress.

Mrs. Finkle has painted since she was 12, and thinks that's a good age to start with oils. But even five-year-olds, she finds, can master oils.

"I'm glad they are so enthused,' she says of the children in her classes.

Mr. Dubec says the classes are designed to give children experience in various art forms, so that the talented have an opportunity to recognize their abilities and build on them in the future.

Sidney Construction Up Sharply in 1974

Building permits issued in 1974 for new construction in Sidney Township topped $9.6 million, according to inspection department statistics.

This marks an increase of $2 million over 1973.

While Sidney Reeve Gordon Wilman expressed surprise when he learned of the figures, he said there is no need for concern that the township may be growing too quickly.

He said there is adequate "regulatory legislation" to control this development.

The bulk of 418 permits issued during 1974 were for residential development, a township spokesman said. The average township residential permit was issued for $25,000 in building value.

Expanding Service New Society Goal

Methods of expanding present services of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society should be investigated "where they are most needed in the Quinte area," said Murray Workman, branch president, to his group's annual dinner meeting at Sun Luck Gardens Tuesday.

"It is necessary for the Red Cross to change as the world changes," he commented. "Services may be jointly conducted to serve needs."

Mr. Workman related in his president's report he had set three goals last year. "The first one involved making sure that each of us became more aware of the other services," he said. "I'm not sure we have met that one to any great degree and would like to continue it next year."

"The second one involved expanding services in first aid and youth," he continued. "You have a first aid service and youth programs are increasing although not yet under branch conrol."

"The third goal was to improve our relations with the United Community Services," remarked Mr. Workman. "Although there are still serious problems, I sincerely feel that with the new director, the atmosphere has changed for the better and hence I feel we can overcome our problems."

Tools, Saw Taken

City police report two cases of theft occurring in the past few days in which items worth a total of over $1,000 were taken.

In one, Glen Carrol of Corbyville, police said, had his pick-up truck parked behind the Canadian Hotel between 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. Tuesday.

When he came out he discovered that a floor polisher and jig-saw worth a total of $1,030 were missing.

In a second incident, occurring sometime Monday night, a van belonging to Ralph Plane of Walton Place was entered through a rear window. The truck was parked on N. Park St. Taken were tools worth $283 and a transit level worth $150 was smashed.

Farmer Says Lifestyle Adding to Food Costs

Overindulgence and the 20th Century way of life in affluent countries has contributed greatly to escalating food costs, a RR 1, Ameliasburg farmer told the Kiwanis Club of Belleville Tuesday.

Lyle Vanclief, 31, owner of Willowlee Farms Ltd., commented, "we must remember that our 20th Century way of life has led greatly to this increase in food costs ... not to say anything of our just plain overindulgence of food."

He said he wondered if there is confusion over the term "food costs" which might be misleading the consumer. "Are they really food costs or service costs?" he asked.

"Our demands for packaging, built-in maid services, waste in home kitchens, restaurants, desire to eat out ... all are included," he pointed out.

Mr. Vanclief, a 4-H Club leader in Prince Edward County, stressed people should not think food costs are high. "They should say food costs are higher," he said.

"The cost of actual food does not take as big a piece of the weekly wage or is not as high compared to the hourly wage as it was a few years ago," he explained.

Part of the reason for the food cost misconception is a change in stock sold by grocery stores. "Food stores of today are a great place to market a lot of things we used to buy only in drug stores, hardward stores and clothing stores," outlined Mr. Vanclief. "That bill you get is not all food."

In addition, when the price of food goes up, "there's a big hue and cry," he remarked. "But when the price of tobacco and liquor goes up, there's only a little cry."

A director of the Prince Edward County Vegetable Growers Association, Mr. Vanclief emphasized he was not necessarily defending the farmer or criticizing the consumer.

"They both have valid points and they both have foolish points,' he said.

He cited a communications problem between urban and rural dwellers, especially in the large metropolitan areas. "There is not the family connections between urban and rural and vice-versa that there was at one time," he elaborated.

"Especially in the larger areas, the urban population has a pre-conceived idea of what a farm is like and many times this idea is far from the proper picture," said Mr. Vanclief.

"The reverse is true, too," he noted. "Rural people don't really understand city life, either."

However, Mr. Vanclief said the problem is being rectified. "This is evident in the fact that because of the food situation in the world of the present time, people are listening to what our consumer representatives and ministers of agriculture are saying."

Hospital Still Open Despite Flu Outbreak

Both the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit and Belleville General Hospital are on the alert for an outbreak of an influenza-type illness which has restricted hospital visitors to patients' families in Peterborough.

"Here, we don't see anything terrifying at present," commented Dr. C. R. Lenk, medical officer of health, in an interview today. But he added, "we are keeping our hand on the pulse'.

He said the health unit has surveyed area schools, industries, and practitioners to determine any increase in the amount of illness following the Peterborough report, "but so far, there have been no cases of particular danger or concern".

There has been a great deal of influenza cases recently, noted Dr. Lenk. The victim is usually afflicted for a few days, overcome by an over-all feeling of nausea, vomitting, fever and a soreness of the bones.

However, he pointed out, "I don't think at present it is unusual for this time of year."

"I have been in touch with Dr. A. A. Hosein all the time at BGH," said Dr. Lenk. "He was not aware of any particular troubles."

Dr. Hosein, a general practitioner in Roslin, said at the hospital today, "There is a fair amount of it (flu) I wouldn't say it's out of hand."

He said as far as he knew BGH was not planning any restrictions to visitors.

Flu cases have not been a point of concern here, particularly among children who are most susceptible, because many people have gone for treatment at the first sign of trouble, explained Dr. Hosein.

"Most people take the trouble to take their children to a doctor fairly early,' he said. The concern begins when they wait until the last minute and "their children slide lower and lower".

Oops — Wrong Number

In a story which appeared Saturday on the first page of the second section of The Intelligencer about the move by Revenue Canada Taxation's audit division from the federal building to the new Royal Bank Building on Applewood Dr., an incorrect telephone number for the information division was printed.

The correct number for all public inquiries regarding income tax information is 962-8611.

Wade Honored

Over 125 guests honored Harry Wade, Ontario Board Master of Grand Lodge for the Oddfellows' organization at the lodge hall here recently.

Among the invited guests were Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey and family, Judge Honey of Hastings County, noble grands and past noble grands of neighboring lodges.

Grand Master Wade spoke on Oddfellowship and paid tribute to Lodge 81 for its hall. He emphasized the 25-year sponsorship by lodges of students to the United Nations. Robert Miller of Belleville was sponsored by the local lodge last year.

District Deputy Grand Master Harry Way presented Mrs. Wade with a bouquet and Mr. Wade with a gift. Head table guests were piped into the hall by piper John Croxford of Trenton. Master of ceremonies was Bev Hackett.

Mess Tin Meal

Former members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, especially those who served during the Second World War, must have thought they had escaped from eating out of mess tins when they retired. However, for Saturday's dinner during ceremonies to honor former regiment commanding officer Lt.-Col. The Lord John Tweedsmuir at the Belleville Armories, they enjoyed a nostalgic moment when served spaghetti and meatballs in mess tins in remembrance of Lord Tweedsmuir's wartime command in Italy.

Morgan Guest Speaker

The wit of Henry Morgan will be on display this Saturday as the Chamber of Commerce holds its annual meeting at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall.

Mr. Morgan, for many years a panelist on the popular television show I've Got A Secret, and a guest on several talk shows, is guest speaker at the Chamber's annual function.

Tickets for the event, which besides the dinner and the speaker will include dancing to the music of The Commodores Orchestra, are $12.50 each and available from chamber members as well as from the chamber offices on Front St.

Mr. Morgan within the last few years moved from the U.S. to Toronto where he has a regular radio show and a newspaper column.

Cocktails will be held at 6 p.m., dinner is at 7:15 p.m. and dancing starts at 9:45 p.m.

Red Cross Considering Regional Branch Setup

The Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society is following the lead of the province in regional government with a proposed regional branch system to accomplish its objectives as economically as possible.

Daniel King, a division development officer, said in an interview following the Belleville branch's annual meeting Tuesday, the scheme, patterned after the regional government setup, still requirs approval from the division executive.

He emphasized it will not mean the formation of another level of administrative management "because that represents an increase in costs." It will be developed through existing staff and resources he said.

Still required are input from people in the province and a study of the problems between high and low-density population areas, such as transportation in Northern Ontario, noted Mr. King.

Implementation will not be mandatory, but will depend on the wishes of each branch, he said. "It will happen almost naturally," he added.

Blood Clinic Service Honored

Representatives of three Belleville service clubs display citations they received from the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society during the branch's annual dinner meeting at Sun Luck Gardens Tuesday, for their assistance at blood donor clinics in the past year. Turner Says Labor Is Not Scapegoat

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner moved hastily Tuesday to recover from what Progressive Conservative critics saw as an embarrassing slip in his fight to control inflation.

"Labor is not to be the scapegoat of any understanding," he said in the House of Commons as the Conservatives pressed him for details of his attempts to get voluntary pay, price and profit restraint.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe) took Mr. Turner to task for his comment Monday that the major inflationary force is "the rapid escalation of wage and salary costs."

The minister quickly explained he believes it is understandable that there is a wage push as labor attempts to catch up with rising prices.

Both Mr. Stanfield and Mr. Stevens sought in vein for word on whether Mr. Turner is seeking agreement on specific guides for voluntary restraint in his current series of talks with labor and business leaders.

Talks on inflation are at "an exploratory stage" with the government hoping for an evolution of mutual understanding, replied Mr. Turner.

Earlier, Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the minister's comments about wage and salary demands might have jeopardized his restraint talks.

Mr. Stevens said in an interview later that Mr. Turner's remarks about the talks indicate

Tighter Abortion Law Bill Halted in House

OTTAWA (CP) — An attempt by an Ontario MP to tighten federal abortion laws was stopped in the Commons Tuesday.

Perrin Beatty (PC—Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo) presented a bill that would have limited abortions to cases where the physical life of the mother is endangered.

The law, amended in 1969, allows hospital committees to approve abortions if the mental or physical health of the mother is in question.

The bill was talked out without coming to a vote in the hour allotted for private member's business. The government has said it will not change the existing law.

Boat Tax Off

OTTAWA (CP) — Boat builders, already facing higher production costs, got some tax relief Tuesday from Finance Minister John Turner.

Criticized by members of all parties during two days of debate on excise tax measures, Mr. Turner said in the Commons he will remove a 10-percent federal sales tax imposed on boats in his Nov. 18 budget.

Seek Advice

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons privileges and elections committee wants expert legal advice before examining charges that Parliamentary Press Gallery reporters have been bribed by politicians.

The committee voted unanimously Tuesday to hear testimony from the Commons law clerk before studying allegations made last month by Social Credit Leader Real Caouette.

PCs Do Not Like Riding Changes

TORONTO (CP) — Progressive Conservative backbenchers joined opposition members of the legislative Tuesday in levelling criticism at proposed changes in Ontario electoral boundaries.

However, their objections, for the most part, were in sharp contrast to opposition comments which stressed the departure from representation by population and commission's failure to adhere to its legislative guidelines.

Robert Eaton (PC-Middlesex-South), among 16 backbenchers who signed a resolution seeking debate on the final commission report, said insufficient consideration was given to those affected by suggested changes prompted by the commission's first report.

The 16 also said the commission failed, in some cases, to give sufficient weight to traditional boundaries and disparities of requirements between urban and rural seats.

Opposition members, on the other hand, argued many rural votes would be worth two to three times the vote in most urban areas, according to the proposed changes.

Right to Exclude Immigrants Upheld

OTTAWA (CP) — The right of the solicitor-general and the immigration minister to exclude immigrants from Canada if they consider it against the national interest was upheld in an unanimous judgment Tuesday by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The court said that certain discretionary powers given to the Immigration Appeal Board do not apply when both cabinet ministers file certificates based upon security or criminal intelligence reports which lead them to the opinion that deportation orders should be issued.

Three immigrants ordered deported from Canada on the basis of such reports had asked the high court to order the appeal board to hear their appeals.

They said they had the right to ask the board to exercise its discretionary powers of quashing a deportation order on either compassionate grounds or belief that the deportation would result in unusual hardships.

They also argued that they were entitled to a hearing under the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Mr. Justice Ronald Martland, writing the court decision, said the board was stopped from using its discretionary powers when the federal ministers issued a certificate based on public interest.

Freeze Opposed

Oil Price Too High

TORONTO (CP) — The manager of the Canadian Petroleum Association says a proposal to freeze world oil prices at current levels is "unacceptable" because those levels are too high.

Hans Maciej, of the Calgary-based association which represents about 200 Canadian oil companies, said in an interview Monday that the proposal by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) would not save Canadian taxpayers any money.

"It's a hopeful move towards stability, but it still has to be unacceptable to industrial nations because the price would be frozen at too high a level," Mr. Maciej said.

He said Canadians must "go to work at making sure of our own self-sufficiency in oil" to avoid playing into the hands of the OPEC countries.

The proposal to freeze oil prices at current levels—close to $12 a barrel—for the rest of 1975 and tie increases over the next five years to a world inflation index was made at an OPEC conference Sunday.

Kidnapping Victim Doubts Accused His Abductors

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — The 14-year-old victim of a kidnapping in which two investigating police officers were killed, testified Tuesday that there was a greater height difference between the two men who abducted him than that of the two men charged with the crimes.

Raymond Stein told a preliminary hearing for the two men charged with kidnapping him in December and with the murders of the police officers that he did not see his abductors' faces on the night of Dec. 12, but he heard their voices.

He said he heard one of the same voices a few days later as he stood outside a door at RCMP headquarters here.

The boy's testimony came during the first day of the preliminary hearing for James Lawrence Hutchison, 43, and Richard Ambrose, 22, charged with kidnapping and with the later murders of Cpl. Aurelle Bourgeois, 47, and Constable Michael O'Leary, 33, of the Moncton city police.

Asked to look at the accused, Raymond testified that on the basis of height he believed Hutchison and Ambrose were not the two who abducted him from his home.

Recounting the night of Dec. 12, the Stein boy testified he was confronted by two masked and armed men when he arrived home with his grandmother.

He said the taller of the two kidnappers was taller than either of the accused.

The boy said he didn't know if Hutchison looked like one of the abductors. Ambrose appeared "similar" to the smaller man, Raymond said.

Indians Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — The James Bay power project in Quebec was back before the Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday.

Lawyers for the native people in the area asked the high court to review a decision made last November in which the Quebec Court of Appeal said there was no legal grounds to grant them a temporary injunction against the project.

The Quebec court said there was no proof that the natives held clear rights to the territory involved.

The Supreme Court reserved judgment on the motion to appeal.

Opera in Jail

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Opera Touring Company has become the first opera company to go voluntarily to prison.

The company signed in Monday night at Collins Bay penitentiary, passed through the electrically-controlled iron gates and filed into the prison gym.

Director Jan Rubes, warned that the audience might walk out on the full touring version of Puccini's La Boheme, started the program with folk songs.

The audience surrounded the company after the performance, shaking hands and asking questions.

Big Steel Profits Up 92 Per Cent

PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. reported Tuesday a 92-per-cent increase in earnings for 1974. Both earnings and revenues for the year were records for the largest U.S. steel-maker. Income for 1974 was $634.9 million, or $11.72 a share, on sales of $9.34 billion. Earnings in 1973 were $325.8 million, or $6.01 a share, on revenues of $7 billion.

Wheat Subsidy Bill Gets Okay

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons agriculture committee, despite some last-minute objections from Progressive Conservative spokesmen, finished detailed study of a two-price wheat bill and sent it back to Parliament Tuesday.

The bill is designed to stabilize the price of bread wheat until the middle of 1980 through federal subsidies to millers of up to $1.75 a bushel, ensuring they would not have to pay more than $3.25 a bushel, regardless of how high international wheat prices climb.

Review Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue Minister Ron Basford is reviewing a decision to apply a 15-percent withholding tax on the incomes of foreign entertainers visiting Canada, an aide said Tuesday.

The rule, which took effect Jan. 1, has been criticized by foreign show producers and impressarios in Canada for severely limiting the Canadian theatre market.

Power Off

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — More than 600 residents of the Bracebridge area were still without electrical power Tuesday following a 14-inch snowfall that struck the southeastern Georgian Bay region Saturday.

Seven thousand persons in Bracebridge, Parry Sound and Penetanguishene had been affected, but by Monday, Ontario Hydro crews had restored power to all except 200.

Change Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The Construction Safety Act should be changed so that directors of companies violating the act can be jailed, Provincial Court Judge Jean-Pierre Beaulne said Tuesday.

Judge Beaulne suggested the act should be altered as he doubted fines accomplished much. A company probably just passed the fine on to the public.

Report Praised

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Judge Donald Scott, chairman of the Niagara Regional Police Commission, said Tuesday the commission and Police Chief Albert Shennan, "owe an apology to any persons not only inconvenienced, but, more important, embarrassed" by certain aspects of the drug raid on the Landmark Motor Hotel last May.

Judge Scott termed Judge John Pringle's royal commission report into the raid "extremely fair" and said its recommendations are accepted by the commission and will be acted on immediately.

How's That?

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Fred Hofheinz normally is an articulate speaker.

But commenting Tuesday on reports of low morale among policemen because of the emphasis on recruitment of policewomen, he said:

"We're going to offer police jobs to qualified women regardless of their sex."

Beautiful Faces

Harold Pfeiffer an Ottawa old Pfeiffer an Ottawa sculptor, is shown with Eskimo artist Kalvak and the sculpture of her that he ececuted for Museum of the North in Yellowknife, N.W.T. Pfeiffer says the Eskimos are "beautifully ugly, like old walnuts." (CP Photo)

Last of Pure-blood Eskimos Are Rapidly Dying Off

OTTAWA (CP) — The last of the old Eskimos whose bloodlines and lives have not been affected by white men's civilization are fast dying off and their features need to be captured quickly in sculpture.

Harold Pfeiffer, an Ottawa sculptor who has been working with Eskimo models for more than 20 years, says the younger generation of Eskimos can never resemble their parents because they have not lived the same rugged life.

Pfeiffer, whose works have been exhibited in the Royal Academy and the National Portrait Society in London, said the features of the older Eskimos are "beautifully ugly, like old walnuts."

He has executed bronze sculptures of the heads of two prominent Eskimo artists, Kalvak of Holman Island, who was elected to the Royal Canadian Academy last year, and Kenojuak of Cape Dorset, who received the Order of Canada in 1967 and has also been elected to the academy.

Pfeiffer first went to the Arctic in 1954 with a medical x-ray survey team and was struck with the character lines in the faces of the older Eskimos.

His works have been commissioned by the Museum of the North in Yellowknife, the Riveredge Foundation in Calgary and other museums and government agencies.

"So many of these people are very old and have lived such a rugged life that their faces have great character,' he said in an interview. "They've gone through the long winters and cold nights, hunting and fishing and fighting for a bare existence.

"The younger people will never resemble their parents. They can't possibly, because they're having a soft life, living on tinned goods and all the other good things of life. . . . They will never have the lines of joy and sorrow their elders have on their faces."

Pfeiffer said that since the first white explorers visited the Arctic no one can be sure of the purity of the old bloodlines.

Facial tattoos used to be a mark of beauty among Eskimo girls — Kalvak has them—but that custom has disappeared.

Pfeiffer recently returned from Greenland, where he was commissioned to sculpt the heads of a number of Greenland Eskimos.

But these people do not call themselves Eskimos and are, in fact, different from the natives of the Canadian Arctic because of their association with Scandinavians and others for hundreds of years.

He said he hopes arrangements can be made for him to visit northern Russia and Siberia to sculpt the heads of native people there. The Museum of the North is interested in collecting a representation from all northern areas.

New Way Discovered To Make Methanol

LONDON (CP) — Britain's major engineering honor—the MacRobert Award—has been presented to a team of five scientists whose research led to a new method of making methanol. Methanol—also known in North America as wood alcohol—has wide industrial uses in such things as building materials, plastics, resins and paints.

The scientists—from the agricultural division of Imperial Chemical Industries (ICI)—received the award for "brilliant and painstaking work" on the development and manufacture of high-activity catalysts to produce the methanol. Catalysts assist a chemical reaction without being consumed themselves.

ICI started research in the early 1960s because it was believed that methanol manufacturing costs could be cut if the process was operated at lower pressures. It took four years and cost £500,000 ($1.15 million). The new catalyst was found to last three years while speeding up the reaction of basic chemicals millions of times.

Methanol plants using the new catalysts have produced lower capital and operating costs than earlier plants. ICI has built two such plants and 23 of the 29 methanol plants built or designed in the world since 1966 use the ICI process. Together they will account for more than one-third of the total world production of methanol and have brought £18 million to Britain in licence fees and catalyst sales.

The team—Dr. T. J. Pearce, Dr. J. T. Gallagher, Dr. D. Cornthwaite, Mr. G. W. Bridger and Mr. P. Davies—received its prize money from the Duke of Edinburgh, president of the Council of Engineering Institutions, at Buckingham Palace. Prince Philip also presented the award's gold medal to Sir Jack Callard, ICI chairman.

Many Talked into Old Age Senior Citizen Declares

OTTAWA (CP) — The 78-year-old head of the Ottawa senior citizens' council says people are "talked into old age" by employers and well-meaning relatives.

"It starts with the relatives who say you shouldn't shovel that snow or run for that bus because you'll have a heart attack," Walter Turnbull said in an interview. He runs for buses, shovels snow and skates every chance he gets.

"I personally feel that it is a lot better to die of a heart attack shovelling snow than it is to turn into a vegetable sitting in an armchair."

But he reluctantly agreed with the need for a mandatory retirement age.

"I realize for the sake of job turnover that telling people the parade is over in that particular area is reasonable," said Mr. Turnbull, who served as a personal secretary to former prime minister Mackenzie King and later as deputy postmaster-general.

"What I can't understand is the attitude that when a person retires on a Friday, by the following Monday he has somehow become obsolete and redundant with no value to society except as sort of a sentimental attachment.

"I think that senior citizens can and should continue to function and they should work if possible. But, above all, they should get organized so as to offer help to those within their ranks who need it."

Mr. Turnbull said Ottawa should assist senior citizens in setting up a national organization.

"The government could add a modest fee, say $3 a month, to the pension of every senior citizen and that added amount . . . could be put into an organizing and operating fund."

Eighty per cent of such a fund "could be used by local groups to promote local enterprises—sort of LIP or New Horizons funds in the hands of competent senior citizens instead of bureaucrats who cannot possibly be so directly involved in the problems."

He said he knows what he is talking about in that regard "because I was a bureaucrat myself for more than 40 years."

The other 20 per cent of the fund would be used to pay for provincial and national meetings of senior citizen representatives — "representatives of 10 per cent of the population, drawn from every walk of life."

The labinet should be prepared to meet at least annually with senior citizen representatives.

"We'll tell them what should be done and they'll tell us their problems and if we buy their story, we'll help spread their gospel.

The purpose of his proposed national organization would not be "to create a big voice to yell for more money."

"More money will not solve loneliness; it will not solve the problems of getting help," Mr. Turnbull said. "That takes organization."

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

Rain conditions can create one of the most hazardous threats in driving, yet this highway danger is among the easiest to avoid.

Remembering, and putting into practice, only a few basic guidelines should enable most drivers to avoid the predicament associated with varying depths of water, ranging from sudden skids in rain squalls that often result in collisions to being caught in a submerged vehicle.

Here are some guidelines for avoiding rain-caused driving problems and accidents.

It's never wise to drive in heavy rain if it's not essential. But if you must, the first rule is to reduce your speed. This will greatly lessen the chances of hydroplaning, a condition that occurs when a wedge of water builds up between the tires and road surface, causing the car tires to lose contact with the road surface. When your car hydroplanes, it's literally riding on a film of water. Because of this loss of traction, the conditions are ideal for an uncontrollable and unpredictable skid and possible accident.

Your best defence against this condition comes during the tire tread depth inspection that should be part of your fall and spring car check-up, and always before you set out on an extended trip. At these times, make certain your tires have at least one-16th of an inch of tread depth.

Equally critical is tire inflation. Tires should be properly inflated in order to maintain good squeegee effect, thus forcing water too flow through the grooves between each tire rib. If tires aren't properly inflated, the treads will become squeezed together, forming a "pocket" in the centre of the tread area and forcing water to flow underneath the tire. When this happens, tires can actually ride up on the surface of the water like water skis — hence, the term "hydroplaning."

The second guideline to follow is to switch on your headlights and windshield wipers. Wipers and headlights should be cleaned and checked each time you gas up your car, and always before a long trip. Windshields that are in poor condition can severely impair your visibility. Headlights provide you with greater visibility and make you more vsible to others.

Since extremely heavy rain always carries the threat of flooding, the first rule is never to start driving under this condition. But if you are caught in a torrent of rain on a trip, follow this advice.

When visibility permits, it's generally best to continue driving, but at a slow speed. Make certain your seat belts are securely in place.

Be certain though, to look ahead for signs of rapidly rising or rushing water. Under no circumstances should you attempt to drive into such a condition. If you do, your chances of entrapment are great, and those for escape are very poor.

Cattle Sold to Cuba Make Castro Grateful

VALLE de PICADURA, Cuba (CP) — Canada has contributed to the success of a plan to make Cuba self-sufficient in milk production and Ramon Castro says Cubans will be grateful forever.

"We have to appreciate what the people of Canada did for us," the elder brother of Cuban leader Fidel Castro said in an interview. "They sold to us when we didn't have cattle."

He has glowing words for Canada's decision to continue trade and diplomatic relations with Cuba following the 1959 revolution which brought Communist government to the island. Many countries, led by the United States, participated in an economic blockade against the new regime.

Canada, saying politics should not interfere with trade beneficial to a developing nation, has sold Cuba thousands of top-grade cows and bulls to help create a viable dairy and beef industry.

Ramon Castro, 49, started the program from scratch six years ago and today oversees 330 square miles of rocky hill country now transformed into lush pastures for breeding and raising cattle.

It's called the Picadura Valley Plan and the idea is to find, through breeding, animals that give maximum production of beef and milk. The best animals bred are shipped to other parts of the country to establish new herds.

Since 1970, Canada has sold Cuba more than 20,000 cattle, worth about $7 million. Some Canadian holsteins in the valley are valued at $15,000 each.

The Picadura Valley is about 40 miles east of Havana, nestled in high, palm-dotted hills overlooking the Caribbean. It actually is a series of valleys and, except for the tropical plants, resembles the rolling cattle country of southern Alberta.

Temperatures are cooler than at sea level and are good for cattle raising, yet warm enough for the cattle to graze outdoors 16 hours a day.

Grasses are being bred to find nutritional strains that can grow without much moisture.

Castro directs everything in the valley, including construction of farm homes, schools and roads, and said the plan already is a success.

Animals bred in the valley even are being exported, mainly to Peru and North Viet Nam.

He said Cuban cows are good enough to compete in Canada now. Canadian holsteins brought here have acclimatized, he said, and their daughters give more milk because they are totally conditioned to the tropical climate.

"We have proved that holsteins can live in the tropics. We now are trying for a breed from holsteins to produce half meat and half milk and resistant to the tropics."

They even are trying to breed a Canadian buffalo with holsteins but Castro said any success with this experiment will take time.

"Genetics is not a matter of two days," said Castro, who lacks university education and who at first glance looks like a farm laborer.

Now, the valley is dotted with man-made ponds, modern cattle stations and new homes and schools for workers and their families. There also is a veterinary medicine and agriculture college at which students receive a salary.

Atop one of the highest hills is an elegant guest house for visiting dignitaries and Castro said he plans to build another on a neighboring hilltop.

Ramon Castro's Farm Oasis Stocked with Canadian Cattle

VALLE de PICADURA, Cuba (CP) — His penetrating eyes squint against the sharp tropical sunlight as he moves by tall strongly-built frame, clothed in common work garb, among the men ditching a road in rugged hill country east of Havana.

He speaks easily with them. When he pulls a battered cigar from between his teeth, his mouth forms a warm smile that softens the weather-worn cheeks of his bearded face.

"There he is," the interpreter says, a hint of excitement in her voice. "Because of this man, our children have milk."

Ramon Castro, older brother of Cuban leader Fidel Castro, appears to be a simple working man. He wears green cotton pants, a denim work shirt, dusty boots, the familiar army fatigue cap, and a happy-go-lucky air.

But beneath that exterior is a more complex nature—that of an energetic planner and builder who creates success from the tough assignments his 48-year-old brother gives him.

Before the 1959 revolution that led to Communist government for Cuba, Ramon Castro, now 49, ran a profitable farm for the Castro family. He now heads an ambitious state plan designed to give all Cubans enough meat and milk.

He is director of the Picadura Valley Plan which has turned 330 square miles of rocky hill region into an agricultural oasis for raising top-grade milk and beef cows.

He began the assignment in 1969 with Canadian cattle and now the plan produces herds for other parts of the island nation.

"We had the necessity to do this plan because at the time of the revolution, 95 per cent of the children in our country didn't have much milk," he says in Spanish.

The plan is to provide maximum milk and beef production so that Cuba's 8.5 million people never again will be short of these foods.

When there is a cattle-breeding station to be built, more pastures to level and plant, or a new road to be laid, he is there.

He races throughout the valley in a Jeep, stopping often to lend a hand or to give instructions. He hugs the elderly, walks with his arms around the shoulders of workers, hits them up for cigars, and talks a lot. But those who know him say he works harder than any of them.

They say his brother scolds him for not getting medical checkups and for not taking vacations.

The Castros were a well-off family before the revolution, he says. The children lacked nothing and went to the best schools.

"But other children could not study," Ramon Castro recalls. "They lived in the worst conditions, they didn't have medicine and they went barefoot."

"So it was because of our consciences that we have worked for those who didn't have the opportunities. The revolution wasn't for people like me."

He was not active in bringing about the revolution, but says he would not go back to the old way of life.

The Castro farm was the first taken over by the government after the revolution. Ramon was sent by his brother to be chief of sugar production in Oriente province on the eastern end of the island.

He speaks with pride about setting a sugar production record in 1967. About two years later Fidel asked him to create the Picadura Valley scheme.

Ramon Castro says the Picadura Valley is creating work for people once employed only five months a year on the sugar harvest.

In one part of the valley, four apartment buildings, a clinic and a primary school have just been completed.

When he speaks of these things, Ramon Castro becomes excited.

"I feel pride to see the faces of the people when they are given a house with a refrigerator and television."

His own home is in Havana, but he spends little time there. In the valley, home for himself and his wife is a mobile home built on the back of a truck.

Twice a week he directs construction of two other plans on the other side of Havana. But it is evident that his heart and pride lie in the Picadura.

"The happiest thing is to create."

Trenton Bids for Acceptance as Headquarters of EOBA

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

When the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association (EOBA) held its annual meeting in Kingston, January 11, delegates from Belleville and Trenton took a calculated risk.

Certain that Belleville's Vi Christopher would be a sure bet to become EOBA secretary for 1975, the representatives from the neighboring communities discussed the possibility of nominating another baseball enthusiast from the Bay of Quinte area for office.

The man the delegates agreed had the credentials for the position of third vice-president wasn't at the meeting. He was coaching his hockey team at a tournament in Aurora.

That created some problems.

Those nominated for office are required to signify in writing whether they will stand for election. Somehow, that requirement was circumvented.

Then, there was the possibility that should their man be elected, he may have been forced to turn down the responsibility.

As it turned out, Trenton's Jim Whyte was elected. And although he was not completely satisfied with the manner in which his services were "volunteered", Whyte accepted.

Learning that the EOBA was interested in establishing a "permanent home' and that Port Hope, Belleville and Trenton had been mentioned as possible locations, Whyte got busy.

When he and other members of the EOBA executive held their first meeting in Port Hope, January 16, Whyte was able to report that Trenton's Community Gardens was available for meetings.

"Deno Gettas (director of parks and recreation for Trenton) will provide rooms for meetings, and space for storage of EOBA property, as a community service," explained Whyte.

The next EOBA meeting is scheduled for February 27. Members of the executive will gather in Trenton and if attendance is good, it is expected Mr. Gettas will be taken up on his offer.

Certainly Belleville will support the move to Trenton. And it's a cinch that EOBA second vice-president Joe Hawkins; registrar-treasurer Bob Scott, and director Jim Hare, all from Kingston, will go along with the idea.

Hawkins, a Kingston Alderman, has already made his feelings known on the subject. He favors a meeting place in Belleville or Trenton since it would be a central location and would cut down considerably on travel for Kingston executive members.

Another item high on Whyte's list of priorities, is a special discipline section for the EOBA Constitution.

"I'll have to be patient on this, since it will have to come up at an annual meeting but we certainly need to have rules for discipline, in writing," he said.

"When it's all down in writing, no one has room to argue. It's all there in black and white."

"I think Jim has a lot of good ideas," says Mrs. Christopher.

"And more important, he'll listen," she adds.

Both Mrs. Christopher and Whyte are impressed with new EOBA president Sanford Haskill of Port Hope.

"Sanford really takes charge of a meeting. There is already a real sense of togetherness with the executive," observes Whyte.

A former senior baseball coach in Belleville, Whyte coached the Trenton Legion Branch 110 team to the Ontario Baseball Association Peewee C final last year.

Both Belleville and Trenton are pushing for changes designed to appeal to prospective EOBA coaches and managers, this year.

"We're in favor of getting away from weekend games as much as possible and splitting our operation into divisions to cut down on travel and get many of our games played through the week," explains Mrs. Christopher.

JIM WHYTE

A division including teams from Kingston on the east to Trenton on the west would accomplish this in Mrs. Christopher's opinion.

"Even if we had to travel to Port Hope through the week, we could get games in, providing our proposal to limit games to seven innings is supported," she observes.

At the January 16 meeting, appointments to the executive were made. Accepting the positions were Ed Christopher of Belleville; Bob Whitehill, Peterborough; George Spalding, Sr., Cobourg, and Bob Martin, Lindsay.

Oshawa's Jim Lutton, former EOBA second vice-president, and Art Parry, a charter member who has served in various executive positions with the association, will be the nominations for office at the Ontario Baseball Association's annual meeting March 14-16 in Sarnia. Lutton will be nominated for president and Parry, third vice-president.

Rollins Peewees Aiming To Create a Heat Wave

SLICES — It's off to the annual Bon Soo Peewee Hockey Tournament for Belleville Rollins, early next month.

With commitments in Ontario Minor Hockey Association AAA play over with, Rollins' manager Ron Culloden and coach Bob Cook can now focus their attention on the ambitious program of events in Sault Ste. Marie.

The youngsters make their first tournament start, Saturday, February 8 when they meet Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan in a 9 a.m. match.

Other communities represented in the Peewee division of the tourney are Sudbury, Espanola, Wawa, Elliott Lake, Point Edward, Sarnia, Hanmer, the host city and Marquette, Michigan.

The three-day program winds up Sunday, February 8.

With the pressure of OMHA playoffs behind them, Rollins could go a long way in tournament play

The team did not set its OMHA group on fire but the kids showed more than once that they've got the stuff.

Like most minor league teams, Rollins ran hot and cold.

Culloden and Cook are hoping to hang a heat wave on the good citizens of the Sault, on their February visit.

It appears as if all systems are "go" for the Provincial Women's Softball Union senior tournament, a first for Belleville, being planned by the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League.

Originally, the event was tentatively scheduled for July 4-5-6. Since those dates conflict with the annual Golden Bat Bantam Baseball Tournament staged annually here, the women's teams will have at it June 27-28-29.

League vice-president Bernice Ryan has taken over added duties. She is now treasurer, replacing Dan Mathews who resigned from the position recently.

Efforts are being made to interest Trenton women's softball officials in entering a team in the league for the 1975 season.

A recent publicity release from the Belleville Minor Hockey Association states that Austin Watkin has resigned as president "for personal reasons."

Taking over for the balance of the season, is vice-president Ed Whyte.

Two of the competitors in mixed double, Bruce and Diana Faulds, are representative of the general roster that will participate in the Central Ontario Badminton Association's C Tournament February 7 and 8 at Centennial Secondary School. Diana has only been with the Belleville Badminton Club for for two years and Bruce has been playing for one year. The general idea behind the C Tournament is to give beginners and the less accomplished players a chance at some good competition.

Beginners Get Chance In Badminton Tourney

Once again, the Belleville Badminton Club will host the Central Ontario Badminton Association's (COBA) C Tournament, this year.

The 1974 edition of the tourney was the most successful in recent years and Belleville Club president, Len Cleaver, is expecting as good if not a better turnout this year.

"More people are beginning to realize that you don't have to be a star player to compete in a C class tournament," said Cleaver. "This is where players begin to get good, the ground floor so to speak."

A tournament of C calibre is for those players looking to gain COBA rating or even just looking for some competition. Most of the participants are beginners and the Belleville tourney will be their first competition.

"We're hoping for a larger turnout from our own club," said Cleaver. "Belleville was rather poorly represented, at least in numbers, last year."

The local club has about 150 members. To date about 20 members ranging from first year right through to 25-year veterans of the game have signed up for the tourney.

"If people are ever going to get interested in competitive badminton," said Cleaver, "a C tournament is the place to start."

Cleaver also points out that a C competition draws participants for other reasons.

"Some people come for the social aspect. They get to meet people from out of town. Others come for the competitive experience while some just turn out for a weekend of entertainment," he said.

The tournament goes on Friday and Saturday, February 7 and 8, at Centennial Secondary School and there will be competition in five groupings.

Friday, the men's and women's doubles are scheduled.

Saturday afternoon comes the mixed doubles and Saturday night all competitors and Belleville Club members re invited to the closeout dance.

City's OFL Entry

Entry Fee Paid, Plans Being Made

Though the wheels are still missing a few cogs, Doug Adams has them turning anyway.

He and an anonymous handful of cohorts gathered together the $1,500 needed to secure the Ontario Fastball League (OFL) franchise for Belleville and sent it to the league.

"We had to have it in by January 21," said Adams, "the franchise money was no problem to raise; now I'm concerned with getting the necessary sponsorship money."

Adams figures he will need in the vicinity of $10 thousand for the first year of operation. He also feels he will have no problems hitting that figure. He said he already had a couple of interested sponsorship parties.

"That will cover the cost of general expenses," said Adams, "players salaries will be on a share the wealth basis from gate receipts."

The team will play at the Alemite Park. Seven Saturday nights and seven Sunday nights have been secured. They are also working on the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League for four Wednesday nights. The ladies league has all Wednesday nights booked a year in advance. Most of the Saturday and Sunday night games will be doubleheaders. The team has 27 home games in all. They play 54 games through the regular schedule.

"The league already okayed our playing nights," said Adams, "and the OFL opens in mid-May."

Adams and his team will begin workouts in the second week of February at Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Rick Locke, physical education instructor at Quinte Secondary School, is compiling two training programs for the team. One is for the club to do while they're working out together and the other is for the team members to do on their own. Locke has had much success whipping his Quinte Saints football teams into shape with the same type of programs.

Adams still hasn't signed any players. He says he'd like to work with local talent and build the club around it.

"We'd like to set up some form of farm club system with the Quinte Fastball League," he said, "there is a lot of local talent just waiting to be tapped in the QFL."

Nevertheless, Adams has already made some out of town contacts. He was in touch with star pitcher, Ted Hoy, of Cardinal.

"He was in favor of joining the team," said Adams, "or at least he was quite interested."

The lanky Hoy was the chucker who single-handidly stopped Rollins Construction a couple of years ago in Ontario Amateur Softball Association playoffs.

Should Hoy come to town and the club pick up a couple of local hurlers from the QFL they would have the nucleus of a winning team just on their mound strength.

Nicholson 2 for 3

Nicholson Catholic College (NCC) took convincing wins from Moira Secondary School (MSS) teams at the senior and midget level in Bay of Quinte High School Basketball League play, Tuesday but in the junior match, Moira finished on top.

Sparked by Jeff Boyle and Mark Soule with 20 points each, the senior NCC squad rolled to an 82-35 win. Chris Kalnay threw in 14 points for the winners. Al Jeffery and Rob Chase each hit for 10 Moira points.

NCCs midget team got a 12-point effort from Tim Coates on the way to a 47-32 win.

Bernie Trumpour had nine points Pat Hurley, seven, and Mark Crawford, six. Tops for Moira were Ray Gee and Fred Lang with eight apiece, and Mik Cote, seven.

Moira's 43-36 junior win was triggered by Kent Manning's 20-point production. Scott Sisson hit for 12 points and John Lowe was good for 11.

Top junior shooters for the Nicks were Lloyd Kalnay and Ernie Rainbow with 10 each; Martin Seemungal, eight, and Paul McAlpinel six.

Southern Ontario Finals

Anne Acton Rink 3-0

ST. CATHARINES (Special) — Defending champion Peggy Lawrie of Unionville fell 9-6 to Quinte Curling Club of Belleville's Anne Acton here Tuesday in Southern Ontario Senior Women's Curling Championship play.

It was the Acton-skipped rink's third win in as many starts and put the foursome in a tie with Shirley Pilson of Chatham in the ranks of the unbeaten.

The three-day event ends today with the top three rinks qualifying for the all-Ontario final in Ottawa, in February.

Mrs. Acton's rink, with Jessie Barber, vice; Helen Lewis, second, and Kay Pape, lead, scored two in the final end Tuesday, after taking a 7-6 lead with one in the ninth.

Mrs. Pilson ran her record to 3-0 by defeating Elaine Adams of Hanover 10-5 and Florence Mowat of Hamilton Glendale 9-4.

Six other rinks remain in contention for one of the qualifying spots with two wins and one loss each

Bantams Outlast Peewees

Kingston scored a 6-3 Ontario Minor Hockey Association minor atom win over Belleville McDonald's here Tuesday and in exhibition action, Frankford Bantams outlasted Belleville Rollins Peewee Majors 8-6. Both games were played at Memorial Arena.

Tony Maraczi led the Kingston attack with a pair of goals.

Counting for McDonald's, were J. Archer, R. Strathern and J. Monaghan.

In the bantam-peewee contest, the Belleville Rollins youngsters, after two convincing losses to the older Frankford team, appeared to get the message: they began to hold their own.

The final Frankford goal was scored on an empty net as the peewees iced an extra attacker in the final minute, in an effort to secure at last a tie.

Rollins led 4-2 early in the second period but the Frankford skaters bounced back with five consecutive goals to take charge.

The Belleville front line of centre Greg Horwood and wingers Louie Crawford and Danny Rose, three of the smaller puck chasers on the squad, sparked a late rally to pull Rollins to within one goal of the visitors.

Horwood finished off a pair of three-way moves with his linemates.

Team captain Tony Parks was another two-goal shooter for Belleville. Jim Nobile and Robbie Soule had the others.

Joe Collins led Frankford with four goals.

Sunday, the Rollins team hooks up in an exhibition match with Kingston Township at the Cataraqui rink.

House League Hockey

2 Teams Win Big In Atom Section

William Belch and Sons along with Cherney's Furniture picked up convincing wins in Belleville Minor Hockey Association minor atom house league play on the weekend. Maher Shoes, the other atom minor winner, got an argument.

While the Belch squad was blanking Belleville Yardmen 12-0, and Cherney's scored an 11-1 win over Quinte Rentals, Maher needed a third period goal from M. Allen to shade A and D Esso 1-0. C. Becker chalked up the shutout.

B. Baragar and K. Mead were three-goal shooters for William Belch. A. Bunnett fired a pair. Cherney's got a four-goal effort from J. Thompson while D. Conlon was right in step with three.

In major atom play, Fry Ford got a pair of unanswered goals by D. Martin to earn a 4-4 tie with Red Barn. Three goals by M. Horwood sparked Clayton's TV past Dairy Queen 5-1.

M. Labarge notched both his team's goals in a 2-1 squeaker over Hawkins Chips. In another 2-1 match, Ellis Printing nipped Home Builders. And in the third 2-1 game of the day, Eastern Business squeezed past Bowes and Cocks.

In the novice division, Local 1,000 edged Whitley Rentals 4-3 as Tim Murphy connected for a pair of goals. Jeff Plane had two for the losers. Brian Clarey's five goals paced ixie Lee past Manpower 8-2 and Uniroyal shaded Credit Union 3-2. Stephen Licence topped Beaver Lumber 4-2.

Belle Cleaners keeps rolling along in the bantam major section, leading the league with a point total of 23. The Cleaners team got three goals from Scott Hubbs and a pair by John Armstrong in a 7-4 defeat of Sidney Inn. Rob McKinney shot two for the losers.

Belleville Toyota whipped Allied Chemicals 5-3, and Avis Rent-A-Car out-lasted J. F. Nelles Real Estate 8-7 with Dave Bennett whipping in three goals and Glen Donaldson connecting for a pair. Gary Clapp scored once and three assists. Jim Belch led Nelles with a pair of goals, one coming on a penalty shot.

Standings: Belle Cleaners, 23 points; Belleville Toyota, 16; J. F. Nelles, 13; Avis, 10; Sidney Inn, five and Allied Chemicals five.

Chris McKay potted three goals to lead first place SACO to a 9-1 win over Ross Royals in the midget division. Jan McCutcheon had a pair. In Red Shark's 5-1 defeat of Tim Horton Donuts, John Hipwell clicked for two goals.

In other games, Demark Construction and Sun Luck Gardens tied 1-1; Belleville Yardmen slipped past Uptown Billiards 2-1; Garnet Juby Electric tripped ANAF Dukes 4-3, and Stirling Sheet Metal, on the strength of Dennis Quinn's three goals, topped Canadian Legion 5-4.

The Arthur Sills team defeated Belleville Plaza 8-3 in juvenile action. Steve Kirby had two counters for Sills. Fred Meens hit for a pair of Plaza goals.

Kerry Lucas notched all three of his team's goals but it wasn't enough to keep Warwick and Weeks from a 5-3 loss to Harvey's Drive-In. Kelvin Wheeler scored two for the winners.

Nine players shared the goals as Lou Williams scored a 7-2 win over Sir James Whitney.

Spartacus Blanked

The recently-formed Indoor Soccer League held its first doubleheader Monday night at Loyalist College with John's Variety Store and 211 Front St. Barber picking up wins.

Franka Spada converted a pass from Dario D'Anna for the only goal the Variety Store needed in a 1-0 defeat of Trenton Spartacus.

In the other game, the Barbers overcame an early 2-0 deficit on the way to a 5-4 win over Cosy Grill.

Ernie Brown was a two-goal man for the winners. Singles went to John O'Neill, Kevin Kirby and Chris Johnson.

Coming through with a three-goal performance in defeat, was Dave Langman. Charlie Nesteroski had the other Grill counter.

Mahovlich Shoots Less, But They Count More

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

FRANK MAHOVLICH

Frank Mahovlich can't figure out why he's scoring more even though he's shooting less.

"I can't understand it, you figure it out," the Big M said Tuesday after scoring three goals to lead Toronto Toros to a 6-4 victory over Quebec Nordiques in World Hockey Association play.

"I had four shots tonight and three goals. Against Edmonton I had three shots and two goals. Before that I had eight in New England and Minnesota and didn't get a goal."

Mahovlich may not have been shooting much but his teammates pelted Quebec goalie Richard Brodeur, with another 47 shots while the Nordiques had only 29 shots.

The win pulled the Toros back to within six points of the leading Nordiques atop the WHA Canadian Division.

In other WHA games Tuesday, Phoenix Roadrunners defeated Indianapolis Racers 3-1, Chicago Cougars edged Cleve- Oilers beat Houston Aeros 7-5 and Winnipeg Jets defeated San Diego Mariners 9-7.

Mahovlich, whose two goals helped the Toros beat Edmonton 7-5 on Sunday, helped the team to a 5-0 lead with his 21st and 22nd goals of the season before Quebec made a comeback, starting with Marc Tardif's 29th goal of the season midway in the second period.

The Nordiques closed to within one goal, with Tardif adding his 30th and 31st in the third period, but Mahovlich's third goal of the game with less than two minutes remaining ended the Quebec threat.

"It's hard to understand why we play so well in the first two periods and then fall apart," said Mahovlich. "The same thing happened to us Sunday night. We forgot what we were doing right and they took over. We went into a shell."

Goals by Dennis Sobchuk and Don Borgeson in the first two minutes of play at Indianapolis gave Phoenix its fourth win of the season over the Racers.

At Chicago, Bob Liddington's goal with only four seconds remaining gave the Cougars the victory, ending a five-game losing streak. The Crusaders twice came from behind to tie the score after Chicago had taken leads of 2-0 and 3-2.

Liddington earned the winning goal simply by standing in front of the Cleveland net where Ralph Backstrom's shot deflected off Liddington.

"Ralph took the shot and it deflected in off my body. I was just in front of the net trying to make a screen and the puck went in actually off my pants."

At Edmonton, Bruce MacGregor scored a short-handed goal and assisted on two other goals to lead the Oilers against Houston.

The Oilers win, before a sell-out crowd of 15,326, lifted them to within four points of the second-place Toros in the Canadian Division while Houston's lead in the Western Division shrunk to four points over the expansion Phoenix club.

Winnipeg's Anders Hedberg scored three goals and Bobby Hull added two to lead the Jets against the Mariners at San Diego.

The Jets also had a small skirmish with fans who threw debris on the ice while Winnipeg players were leaving the playing area after the game. On of the spectators doused Jets players Alain Beaule and Perry Miller with beer, and they headed into the stands waving their sticks.

Referees managed to get the two players away while police held back the fans and no injuries and no arrests were reported.

Andre Lacroix scored two goals for the Mariners.

Big Names Go Fast

NFL Draft Degenerates After Three Rounds

NEW YORK (AP) — By the time Tuesday's session of the National Football League draft was half over, the thing had once again degenerated from a announcment of a player selection was greeted by "Who's he?"

The Steve Bartkowskis, the Randy Whites, the Ken Huffs, the Walter Paytons . . . all were long gone, gobbled up by the talent-hungry and talent-rich teams in the opening round.

Only occasionally did a name strike a familiar chord. Place-kicker Steve Mike-Mayer of Maryland, kid brother of Atlanta Falcons' kicker Nick Mike-Mayer, was 72nd to go, chosen 20th in the third round by San Francisco. Roosevelt Leaks, Texas' star running back had to wait to become No. 105, Baltimore's pick leading off the fifth round.

Leroy Jones, a defensive end from Norfolk State now with Edmonton Eskimos in the Canadian Football League, was picked by Los Angeles Rams in the second round.

Noah Jackson, an offensive tackle with the CFL Toronto Argonauts, had his NFL rights dealt by Baltimore to Chicago for a seventh-round choice.

The draft was to continue today with the remaining 10 of the 17 rounds to complete this annual 442-player draft.

There were few surprises, if any, in Tuesday's pickings. Atlanta Falcons started off by naming Steve Bartkowski, the all - American quarterback from California.

Dallas Cowboys then took defensive end Randy White of Maryland, the Outland Trophy winner as the top U.S. college lineman in 1974.

Baltimore picked guard Ken Huff of North Carolina. Chicago Bears followed by naming running back Walter Payton from Jackson State, then Cleveland took defensive end Mack Mitchell of Houston.

Payton's team-mate, linebacker Robert Brazile, was picked next by Houston, New Orleans chose wide receiver Larry Burton of Purdue, then came a trio of defensive tackling by San Diego, Mike Fanning of Notre Dame by Los Angeles and Jimmy Webb of Mississippi State by San Francisco.

Los Angeles, which had three first-round picks by virtue of past trades, took tackle Dennis Harra of Miami, New York Jets dealt away their No. 1 to New Orleans for defensive end Billy Newsome and the Saints picked Ohio State tackle Kurt Schumacher.

Completing the first round, Detroit took guard Lynn Boden of South Dakota State; Cincinnati got linebacker Glen Cameron of Florida, Houston picked Texas A and I running back Don Hardeman; New England went for tight end Russ Francis of Oregon; Denver took defensive back Louie Wright of San Jose State; Dallas picked linebacker Tom Henderson of Langston; Buffalo grabbed linebacker Tom Ruud of Nebraska; Los Angeles used its third choice to take tackle Doug France of Ohio State; St. Louis picked defensive back Tim Gray from Texas A and M; San Diego chose defensive back Mike Williams from Louisiana State; Miami got Tampa tackle Darryl Carlton; Oakland selected defensive back Neal Colzie of Ohio State; Minnesota picked Colorado State defensive end Mark Mullaney, and the Pittsburgh Steelers, 1-13 just five years ago but now Super Bowl champions, completed the opening round by choosing Michigan defensive back Dave Brown.

Davis Does Well At Starting Spot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When the public address announcer called off the starting lineups at Tuesday night's National Basketball Association game in New York, Knicks forward Mel Davis got a surprise.

"I didn't tell him he was starting,' said Knicks coach Red Holzman. "He heard it for the first time when they announced his name. But he's a pro and if he's called upon to play, he should be ready."

Davis was ready. He scored 16 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and helped the Knicks to a 115-111 victory over Atlanta Hawks.

Guards Talt Frazier and Earl Monroe produced the bulk of New York's offence, as usual. Frazier had 39 points, all but four in the first three periods, while Monroe added 22.

In other NBA games Tuesday, Chicago beat Cleveland 125-97, Houston defeated Los Angeles 104-89 and Portland defeated Phoenix 115-107.

In the American Basketball Association, the East beat the West 151-124 in the annual all-star game.

Bob Love's 37 points led Chicago to an easy triumph over Cleveland Cavaliers.

Five Houston players scored in double figures, led by Rudy Tomjanovich's 19, as the Rockets jumped off to an early lead and never were really threatened in the match against Los Angeles. Gail Goodrich paced Los Angeles with 22 points while Happy Hairston added 21.

Goal Ends Islanders' Six Week Drought

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

ANDRE ST. LAURENT

It was a long time between goals for Andre St. Laurent.

The 21-year-old centre with New York Islanders scored his fourth goal of the National Hockey League season on Dec. 22 and then went scoreless until Tuesday's game against Minnesota North Stars when he beat goalie Pete LoPresti with a slapshot from the point in the first period.

St. Laurent then scored again in the third period and helped set up another goal by Bob Nystrom, leading the Islanders in a 6-2 victory over the North Stars.

Elsewhere in the NHL, Guy Lafleur scored twice to lead Montreal Canadiens in a 3-1 win over Vancouver Canucks while Los Angeles Kings beat New York Rangers 5-2 and Detroit Red Wings tied St. Louis Blues 4-4.

"I'd say this was my most satisfying game," said St. Laurent, a third-round draft choice from Montreal Juniors in 1973.

"I hadn't scored in a long time. I've been splitting the centre job with Bob Bourne. I like to play but it's better that we have two players getting more experience.

"That first goal gave me a big lift."

Denis Potvin added his 17th goal of the season while Eddie Westfall chipped in three assists for the Islanders who ran their home-ice record to 15 wins against two losses and seven ties.

Lafleur's 39th and 40th goals of the season at Vancouver pushed him up to second place in the scoring race. The Montreal right winger now has 83 points, one more than Boston defenceman Bobby Orr and eight behind leader Phil Esposito of the Bruins.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman praised Lafleur for playing an excellent game and said the improvement in the winger's play this season is due to the fact "he's really shooting and playing both ways."

Lafleur's first goal led to a dispute after the goal judge did not put on his light and referee Lloyd Gilmore eventually awarded the score after consultation with linesman Neil Armstrong.

"If it went in, then they really deserved it," said Vancouver defenceman Dennis Kearns.

"I thought from the bench that it hit the goal post and went out behind Smitty (goalie Gary Smith). I thought it was his glove that hit the back of the net."

The win kept Montreal tied with Los Angeles for the Norris Division lead while Vancouver remains just three points ahead of Chicago in the Smythe Division race.

At Los Angeles, former New York players Gene Carr and Tommy Williams each scored once against their former Rangers team-mates as the Kings took a 2-0 lead in the second period and stayed in front. The Kings had lost 3-2 at New York on Sunday after opening a 2-0 lead.

"We got our retribution," said Kings coach Bob Pulford.

Defenceman Jean Hamel's goal with less than five minutes remaining at St. Louis gave Detroit the tie against the Blues.

Now kids can look it up in their own Funk & Wagnalls.

After 60 years of making encyclopedias for adults, Funk & Wagnalls has learned enough to make one for children.

It's called the Young Students Encyclopedia. And it's designed to do something more than just get them through the next homework assignment—to make them want to learn on their own.

Instead of burdening your children with tons of forgettable detail, it appeals to their native curiosity. The article on Airplanes, for example, illustrates an experiment children can perform at home showing how things fly. There are hundreds of other drawings, games and puzzles that not only teach but provoke, involve and entertain in the process.

In other words, it's an encyclopedia children will actually use. They'll also use it a long time. It's designed to be simple enough for children just learning to read and comprehensive enough to serve until they're ready for an adult encyclopedia. They can't outgrow it the way they do shoes.

Which brings up another nice point about the Young Students Encyclopedia: it's intended exclusively to help children, but it helps grown-ups too.

Future Looks Bright on Canadian Figure Skating Scene

QUEBEC (CP) — If Canadian figure skating were an iceberg, only the very tip would be visible as 176 young skaters began competing today for 12 national titles.

Beneath the select group of seniors, juniors and novices who have made it to the Canadian championships is the hidden mass—an army of youngsters hoping to be the Toller Cranstons and Lynn Nightingales of the future.

Optimism about the prospects for Canada in coming years was expressed Tuesday by Stanley Allen of Ottawa, president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association.

Allen said that with almost 200,000 skaters affiliated with the CFSA, there are more registered in Canada than in the rest of the world put together.

He noted that Canada has been strong in singles in recent years, the highlight having been Karen Magnussen's 1973 world championship, but that "the novices coming up show promise and there should be a revival in pairs and dance competition in a few years."

Canada has won 13 world titles since 1947 when Barbara Ann Scott captured the first of two consecutive gold medals.

Frances Dafoe and Norris Bowden won the pairs in 1954 and 1955, Barbara Wagner and Bob Paul held the title from 1957 to 1960, Maria and Otto Jelinek were the 1962 champions, then the singles took over again.

Donald Jackson, the first man ever to execute a triple Lutz in competition, won in 1962, Don McPherson was the 1963 champion, Petra Burka won the women's crown in 1965 and Magnusson captured it eight years later.

Cranston, the 25-year-old Toronto skater who has held the Canadian championship the last four years, is regarded as a sure bet to retain his title here and is also given a good chance of winning the world championship at Colorado Springs, Colo., in March.

Cranston was third in the world last year at Munich after a tremendous free-skating program that earned him marks as the best free-skater in th world.

He had been eighth after the compulsory figures but has been putting a lot of work into perfecting them and will get a chance to display his improved form on Thursday.

Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa, who also begins competing in the compulsory figures Thursday, is strongly favored to retain the women's title she won last year.

But after that the senior competition is wide open, with dance champions Louise a Barry Soper having retired and Sandra and Val Bezic unable to appear here because of an ankle injury to Sandra.

Allen said the figure skating association's total budget for the year ending March 31 is $600,000 but the showpiece of its activities is a $125,000 national development program.

This program, started with a $100,000 profit made when the world championships were held in Calgary in 1972, concentrates on Canada's top 100 skaters.

Although parents are expected to contribute to the cost of programs for their children, the development fund provides additional benefits.

It is used to send skaters to international competitions, to sponsor seminars and to provide special assistance for promising skaters. For example, Allen said, the association might pay a professional to help a skater with a specific problem.

The program now is five years old and Allen said the aim is to strengthen it in all parts of Canada, especially in areas that have not been notably strong in figure skating.

One such area is the Maritimes where two technical directors have been appointed—Allen's daughter Patricia, an accredited judge and former skater, in Moncton, N.B., and Mary McGraw, a former pro, in Halifax.

A technical director has also been named for Saskatchewan and one has been appointed to a part-time post in Manitoba.

In Ontario and British Columbia, where figure skating is already strong, the technical directors are not so much concerned with developing programs as with co-ordinating them.

Quebec has no director yet because, Allen said, the job requires a person who is bilingual and also has the necessary technical knowledge. But the association is looking.

There are only 11 Quebec competitors here and although some are French-speaking all are in the Montreal area.

"It is difficult to get an English-speaking teacher who can communicate with French-speaking skaters," Allen said.

But a first step in strengthening the Quebec program will be the production shortly of a French rule book which "will permit French-speaking skaters to understand skating fully and will also help instructors."

Allen, a financial adviser at the department of transport whose accounting background has helped him in the financial end of his skating job, was elected president last May for a two-year term.

He became involved with skating when his children were growing up in the Toronto-Oakville area. His son Derry is a figure-skating teacher in Ottawa.

Allen said that, unlike the Soviet Union, Canada cannot bring all its top skaters to one centre for training. As a result, it has had to depend on regional programs.

A new level was introduced last year when divisional championships, leading to the nationals, were held for the first time.

"Previously we had only the sectional and national levels, and the additional level has helped improve competition by giving skaters another chance to judge their own progress."

At present there are three division—the Western covering British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and the Yukon and Northwest Territories; Central covering Manitoba, Northern and western Ontario; and Eastern covering the remainder of Eastern Canada.

The association hopes soon to split off the Atlantic provinces into a fourth division.

Olympic Questions Still Unanswered

AMSTERDAM (Reuter) — Top executives of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) conferred here Tuesday with their Canadian representative on problems threatening the 1976 Summer Olympics in Montreal.

Lord Killanin, the Irish president of the IOC, and his three vice-presidents—Herman van Karnebeek of the Netherlands, Juan Antonio Smaranch of Spain and Willi Daum of West Germany—met James Worrall of Toronto, the IOC member for Canada.

Canadian organizers have faced controversy over rising costs of the Olympic facilities in Montreal and strikes by construction workers threaten completion on schedule of the main stadium.

Van Karnebeek said they were reviewing the troubled state of the preparations with Worrall but added: "We will not make any decisions. We could hardly make any firm decisions until the Canadian authorities have finished their own talks on the arrangements."

West Ham Beats Swindon Town the Hard Way

LONDON (Reuter) — West Ham of the English League's First Division made hard work of ejecting Swindon Town, a Third Division club, from Football Association Cup play Tuesday night.

West Ham won the fourth round replay 2-1 to reah the last 16, but wacs trailing 1-0 at halftime and did not score the winning goal until the 85th minute.

Trevor Brooking had equalized for West Ham, Pat Holland netted the late winner.

The only other English Cup match, between Fulham and Nottingham Forest, ended in a goalless draw.

The replays between Arsenal and Coventry and Wimbledon and Leeds United were both postponed because of waterlogged pitches.

The Arsenal march is to be played today but the clash between non-league Wimbledon and the First Division champions, Leeds, has been put back until Monday and will be played at Crystal Palace's London ground rather than at Wimbledon where lack of space raises safety problems.

Trophy in Honor of Hanley

TORONTO (CP) — A Bill Hanley Trophy has been acquired by the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A Series to be presented each season to the league's most gentlemanly player.

The trophy honors Hanley, who retired recently after 27 years as OHA business manager. It was unveiled this week at a dinner attended by about 250 persons.

Tip Dan Wins Mile

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Tip Dan won the featured $3,000 mile pace Tuesday at Windsor Raceway after holding off a late bid by Tuxedo's Pride.

Tip Dan, driven by Dale Dufty, finished ahead by three-quarters of a length in 2:06 3-5. The five-year-old son of Dancer Hanover, owned by Ed Wisniewski of Saline, Mich., returned $4.70, 3.40 and 2.80.

The daily double of Sampson Hal and Plantagenet paid $51.30.

The fourth-race triactor of Graf Spee, Dream Along Bird and Mighty McSilk returned $1,541.10. The triactor of King Duncan, Emily Opal and EDU in the seventh paid $97.90.

The ninth-race exactor of Tip Dan and Tuyedo's Pride returned $38.90 while in the 10th race Southern Coquette and Indo Hanover paid $31.20.

The crowd of 4,891 bet $507,462.

Make meaty meals six saving ways.

Joan Fielden tells how:

Joan Fielden, Dominion Home Economist Consultant
Jerry Aupers, Meat Manager

Beef is an important food and necessary for a well balanced nutritious diet. It contains high quality protein which helps build, maintain, and repair body tissue. It's an excellent source of nutrients to strengthen bodies against infection and disease. When buying meat, watch for advertised specials. They can save you money. If you have a freezer and your weekly budget permits, buy one or two extra cuts and freeze them well wrapped, labelled and dated.

Another secret to getting good value is to calculate "the real cost per serving." Remember some cuts may appear more inexpensive than others but may serve less people than a more expensive cut. So the trick is to calculate the cost of each serving.

Round Steak Roast with Spicy Barbecue Sauce

Serves 8 plus

For this week's recipe I've selected a round steak roast. This particular recipe is one that I find goes a long way to keeping down the cost of meals for large families.

3-3½ lb. round steak roast
1 tbls. catsup
1 tbls. vinegar
1 tbls. butter or margarine
1 tbls. Worcestershire sauce
½ tbls. cayenne pepper
1 tbls. lemon juice
2 tspns. prepared mustard
1½ tspns. salt
1 tbls. paprika
1 tspn. chili powder
1 tbls. brown sugar
¾ cup water

1. Place meat on rack, fat side up in a roasting pan. And cook in 300-325°F. oven until desired degree of doneness. (Use a meat thermometer.)
2. Meanwhile combine remaining ingredients and simmer 10-12 minutes.
3. To serve: Slice roast and arrange in a shallow ovenware serving dish. Cover with hot sauce. Bake in 325°F. oven until meat and sauce are hot.

SOME TIPS ON ESSENTIAL NUTRIENTS

Protein

Meat. The lean portion of meat, poultry and fish is important for its protein content. And is needed for growth and repair of body tissues. (Foods from the meat counter also provide iron and some of the B vitamins.)

Eggs. Eggs are also a good source of protein and like meat, add a plus in B Vitamins.

Vitamin C

Vitamin C is needed by everyone, everyday for healthy gums and body tissues. You'll find Vitamin C in: Citrus Fruits, like grapefruit, oranges, or their juices. Cantaloupe, Strawberries, fresh Broccoli, Green Peppers, Sweet Red Pepper.

Vitamin A

Vitamin A is needed by everyone for growth, normal vision, healthy skin and other body structures. Remember to choose dark green and deep yellow vegetables and fruits. Broccoli, Cantaloupe, Carrots, Watercress, Squash, Spinach, Lettuce.

Calcium

Milk. Milk and cheese are our leading source of calcium and phosphorus which we need for bones and teeth and other important body functions. Remember milk includes Cottage Cheese, Buttermilk, Evaporated Milk, dry milk products, Ice Cream, processed cheese, and Cheddar Cheese.

Stirling Official Suggests Pledges for District Arena

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — With time running out on getting a new Stirling district arena in time for next season's hockey, the Stirling Minor Hockey Association held a meeting Tuesday night to try to get families to make $1,000 pledges.

Deputy-reeve Fred Brandt said he is in favor of a completely new arena in a new location since he found out the ground is not suitable where the present arena stands and it is zoned hazard land due to Rawdon Creek.

"Last year's council committed $25,000 for the project. We have got to think about sewers, but I would hope that council would for the next few years put $25,000 annually into a new arena," Mr. Brandt said.

"I have talked to old age pensioners. They don't seem worried, they have got their cheques coming in," the deputy reeve told about 150 persons. "I hope council will see fit to do it."

"It is just like our schools," Mr. Brandt said. "We now send our children to Belleville. We don't want to send them there to play too. We want to keep them here and can do this by making the arena a community and district effort."

Belleville solicitor John C. Miller attended the meeting to provide legal advice and said he agreed with Mr. Brandt about the need for an arena in Stirling.

"The tiny place I came from had 400 people and they built a new arena. You can't tell me you can't get enough interest in the Stirling area to put up an arena," the lawyer said.

"I have been active in the Belleville Yardmen. The plans for their arena are well advanced and time is committed. Twenty-five per cent of the free time is largely taken up by the Belleville kids. There won't be a nickle's worth left for Stirling kids," Mr. Miller said.

Deputy-Reeve Brandt said that for Stirling council to borrow the money to build an arena, it would have to go to the Ontario Municipal Board and have a hearing.

"That would be a burden against the village only, and we can't afford it," Mr. Brandt said.

He suggested those groups using the arena, such as the curling club members and hockey players, make pledges.

"I just grabbed the $1,000 figure out of a box," he told the emergency meeting. "One dollar a day over three years — a pack of cigarettes a day, that comes to $1,000."

The meeting, which started at 8 p.m., ran until 10.15 and many aspects about a new arena were sounded out as well as how much and how money could be obtained through pledges in one way or another. Most persons present indicated they would donate manual labor on the project, thereby "saving $60,000 in construction costs".

It was urged that municipal, federal and provincial elected officials be written to so they would know how the people felt, since many local councils, Stirling included, have not committed themselves yet this year.

County Home for Aged Blends Old and New

PICTON — Prince Edward service clubs this week toured the H. J. McFarland Memorial Home for the Aged in advance of an open house to be held Sunday, Feb. 2.

Members of the Picton Kiwanis Club visited the new home Monday night and Tuesday Picton Rotarians toured the 84-bed facility.

Chairman of the building committee, Allan Anderson, said residents of the present home for the aged will be moved to the new building next weekend.

"They will have breakfast in the old building and dinner in the new one," he said.

Mr. Anderson said it was decided to move residents on a weekend because relatives would then be free to assist in reassuring them in their new surroundings.

The new home was constructed at a cost of $1,751,000 and will be completely paid for within the next three or four years without debentures.

The provincial government supported the home with contributions totalling $850,000.

The modern two-storey building features an auditorium, a chapel, barber shop and beauty shop, tuck shop, an infirmary and office space for the county home's attending physician.

Mr. Anderson said the kitchen features a potato peeler capable of peeling enough "spuds" for all of the residents in just three minutes.

To avoid congestion in residents' rooms there is a large storage area where their winter clothing may be stored in the summer season and vice versa.

Mr. Anderson stressed the prime concept of the home is to present the building as a home, not an institution. Any fixtures or designs that might lend the aspects of an institution have been eliminated.

He emphasized the building belongs to the community, telling Rotarians, "It's yours."

The official open house for the home is scheduled Sunday, February 2 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Named in memory of Picton's mayor of 21 years, the late H. J. McFarland, the home's entrance foyer features a tribute to the construction magnate.

A large glass showcase has been set in the wall and in it will be displayed the late mayor's chain of office and other memorabilia.

Ice-making Unit Needs Overhaul

STIRLING — The situation look "very grim" at the Stirling arena, deputy-reeve Fred Brandt told about 150 persons at a meeting Tuesday night to raise money for a new arena. The ice-making unit is broken.

The meeting was told that it might take six weeks to fix and cost $4,000 or more.

Gary Mason said there are 17 teams in minor hockey, it costs $20 an hour to rent ice, plus the referees' fees, and there is only $500 cash on hand.

If the weather stays cold enough ice can be made without the artifical ice making machine. In the past, gate receipts for the playoffs paid expenses. Last year $3,000 was spent to take the teams around to other towns during the playoffs.

Plaque Presented

Homemaker Honored For Years of Service

STIRLING — Debra Seeley wasn't always the homemaker and 4-H leader. Along the way she learned judo and contributed time and effort to the Stirling Community School Association (SCSA). This was appreciated so much by all concerned that Hastings County School Board trustee Don Williams gave her a plaque recently which stated:

"Community Service Award, presented by Stirling Community School Association in recognition of four years of service, 1970-74, to Stirling and Community, by Debra Seeley."

Mrs. Seeley, 22, lives at 84 James St. with her husband, Peter, and son, Michael, age 10½ months.

Mrs. Seeley signed up to take a course in sewing, but when it was learned she could already sew, wound up being an instructor. She was asked to meetings of the SCSA and wound up being its chairman for two years. Prior to that she was the secretary for two years.

Besides sewing she took ceramics, and then judo, which she gave up to have Michael. She recently sold her hairdressing salon to await the arrival of another child.

But she is still busy with community work.

Mrs. Seeley has been involved with the 4-H for 11 years. She is presently leading her 13th homemaking club. Mrs. Ruth Callery has been with her for 12 projects. Mrs. Seeley moved into Stirling from Wellman's Corners, bringing the 4-H spirit with her.

She completed county, provincial, and advance honors as a member, and has been a leader for 6½ years.

During the presentation ceremony, Mr. Williams said that the Stirling Community School Association is one of the largest and strongest in Hastings County. He said it was developing the school board's philosophy of seeing that the schools are used for many purposes.

Newsmaker

Rep Named

City engineer Joe Angelo will be Belleville's representative on the provincial government technical group studying a new route for Highway 14 across the Bay of Quinte. City council this week approved the appointment to the transportation and communications ministry group which is to study replacement of the Belleville-Rossmore Bay Bridge Rd. link.

High School Musical Involves Entire School

TRENTON — The Boy Friend has more than one close girl friend or one close boy friend at Trenton High School.

The school is full of them.

Jack McDonald, marketing teacher at the secondary school, said Tuesday nearly every student is helping in the production of the school's big-budgeted musical.

Carol Beecroft, the show's producer, says the musical, a product of Englishwoman Sandy Wilson, is a spoof of the 1920s written in the '50s.

It's going to be a professional production, says Mr. McDonald.

Some 100 students in his marketing classes will sell the production as such.

And it'll be the real thing, he insists. Everyone will approach the promotion for the show in a business-like manner. A management structure has been established. Upon student heads will rest the success of failure of the musical.

But it doesn't end there, he says. Music students will do what comes naturally. Students in the technical studies will build sets and produce props. Girls in home economics will sew costumes.

Take 2

Mr. McDonald said Tuesday details outlining all the work have still to be completed for the March 13-15 show.

None the less, it is likely the first advertisements for the show will be seen by Trenton residents shortly. The teacher says plans for the first outside-school work will begin this week.

Horse Club To Meet

PICTON — The Prince Edward Horse and Pony Club will hold a nomination night Thursday, Jan. 30 at Cherry Valley Hall to fill the offices of president, vice-president and secretary treasurer. Four directors also will be nominated.

An election will follow on February 13 and all club members 14 years of age or over will be allowed to vote. Officers of the club must be residents of Prince Edward County.

Pledges Sought

Time is running out to build a new Stirling district arena in time for next winter. Since local councils have not committed themselves, a move is afoot to get $300,000 in pledges so building can start immediately. This group of Stirling Minor Hockey parents is but one of a series of meetings taking place. Others, such as the curling club, will be meeting as well.

Benefit Planned For Fire Victims

Plans are under way to hold a benefit party Feb. 7 for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McGrath, RR 1, Marmora, who lost their home to fire last Wednesday.

The party will be held at Sacred Heart Church Hall, starting at 9 p.m. An admission charge of $5 per couple will be made and ladies are asked to bring items for a lunch.

A canvass of the neighborhood also has been undertaken by some neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. McGrath lost their home early Wednesday when a fire in a wood stove in the kitchen resulted in overheated pipes, setting fire to the two-storey wood frame house.

Only a few pieces of furniture were saved.

The family now is staying with relatives.

Trustees Back Full School Use

BLOOMFIELD — Picton school trustee Ruth Hart, who is also a director of the Ontario Public School Trustees Association (OPST), says the association will support additional funds for community use of schools.

Larger boards of education have no problem in funding extra curricular and community use of schools but smaller boards such as the Prince Edward board of education may face difficulties she says.

The OPSTA supports additional assistance to these less wealthy boards.

Prince Edward County's board of education has applied for a $10,000 grant and if extra funding is approved it would be additional to this amount.

'Newfie Bullet' Among Astra Parade Entries

TRENTON — The "Newfie Bullet" was probably built Tuesday faster than it ever travelled when it was Newfoundland's main form of land-based transportation.

While David Parsons painted the cow-catcher black, other members of his crew were building the caboose and the passenger car.

The Bullet will be finished by Sunday. It has to be, it's one of the entries in the Astra Winter Carnival, CFB Trenton's biggest week-long festival of the year.

The train, made of cardboard and lumber, and held together by staples and nails is one of 10 floats in the Sunday's carnival-opening parade.

It is also one of the more striking.

Members of the committee building the float indicated Tuesday, the train is a legend in the small island province.

It was known for its leisurely pace. The approximate 600-mile trip from St. John's to Port aux Basque took about 22 hours. One Newfoundlander gave the reason: "It stopped at all conveniences along the way."

The train no longer exists. The provincial government took it out of service in the late 1960s. The float is being built to commemorate its passing.

Not to be bypassed, other provinces were building equally ambitious floats at Hanger 11 at CFB Trenton Tuesday.

Prince Edward Island representatives were erecting the structure in which the Fathers of Confederation first me in Charlottetown in 1864. The 25 Fathers will sit inside debating as the float moves through Trenton's streets this Sunday.

Alberta is recreating the Rockies and the Conestoga wagon that took settlers that far west.

Manitoba, not to be outdone, is building a stage coach.

The various modes of transportation will displayed to Trenton for the first time this year as the Astra Carnival parade will move through town streets. In its two previous year, the parade route was confined to the base.

Trenton Revamps Committee

TRENTON — Seven Trenton residents have been appointed in an advisory capacity to a revamped industrial and economic development committee.

The committee's core group now is composed of three council members and the town clerk-administrator Aubrey Sharp.

Until this year the committee was composed of ten town residents, only one of whom was a council member.

Appointed to the advisory sub-committee are: Paul Tripp, Vagn Lange, Eben James, Charles DeLong, Al Claney, William Saunders, and Robert Prentice.

Under Construction

Decked out in a hat, Herb Johnson with co-worker Keith Prime tackle the paper mache chore of rebuilding the Canadian Rockies in preparation for CFB Trenton's Astra Winter Carnival Parade Sunday. Highlight of the British Columbia float will be a Conestoga wagon built completely with thousand of tissue paper flowers. The parade will begin at Trenton Community Gardens at noon.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In memory of my beloved mother, Ivy, who passed away January 29, 1963 and my beloved father, Harold who passed away August 8, 1973.
—Sadly missed by daughter June, son-in-law Jack and granddaughters Suzanne and Karen.

VANCE — In loving memory of a dear mother, Olive Marion Vance, who passed away Jan. 29th, 1973.
There is a sad but sweet remembrance.
There is a memory fond and true.
There is a token of affection, Mother,
And a heartache still for you.
—Always remembered by David and Linda.

WILSON — In loving remembrance of a dear mother, Margaret Ann Wilson who passed away January 29th, 1974.
And while she lies in peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.
—Always remembered by daughters Lily and Ethel.

WILSON — In loving memory of a dear grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Ann Wilson who passed away January 29, 1974.
Sunshine fades,
Shadows fall,
But sweet remembrance,
Outlasts all.
—Fondly remembered by John, Joan, Sherrie and Michele Anderson.

VANCE — In loving memory of a dear wife, Olive Marion Bance who passed away two years ago January 29, 1973.
My heart still aches with sadness,
And secret tears still flow,
What it meant to lose you darling,
No one will ever know.
When days are sad and lonely,
And everything goes wrong,
I seem to hear you saying,
Each time I see your photo,
You seem to smile and say,
Don't cry I'm only sleeping,
Cheer up and carry on,
We'll meet again some day.
—Sadly missed and deeply mourned by husband Donald.

OSIER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father George M. Osier who passed away January 29th, 1961.
We little knew when we woke that morn,
The sorrow the day would bring,
The call was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear,
Sometimes its hard to understand,
Why somethings have to be,
In His wisdom God has planned,
Beyond our power to see.
—Sadly missed by wife and son.

OSIER — In loving memory of a dear father, George M. Osier who passed away January 29th, 1961.
What we would give if we could say,
Hello Dad, in the same old way,
To hear your voice and see you smile,
To sit with you and chat awhile,
So you who have a father,
Cherish him with care,
For you'll never know the heartache,
Till you see his vacant chair.
—Sadly missed by daughter Violet and son-in-law Wallace.

VANCE — In loving memory of a stepmother Olive Vance, who passed away January 29, 1973.
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days,
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.
—Sadly missed by Doug, Betty Ann Vance and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank relatives, neighbors and friends for flowers, gifts and cards - the Albury Ladies Aid, Rednersville Womens Institute, Rev. Maurice MacLeod, Drs. Horne and Allore, nurses and staff on 5th level for all kindnesses shown to me while I was a patient in Belleville General Hospital. Your thoughtfulness was very much appreciated.
Mary Dawson.

I would like to express my many thanks to the nursing staff on third level and a special thank you to Drs. Allen and Berry of Tweed. Also my friends and relatives while in Belleville General Hospital.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

IF YOU HAD —
A little modern cottage (winterized), on Oak Lake would you enjoy life more? The fresh air, view of the snow covered lake, friendly neighbors, are bound to give pleasure, but so is the dear little cottage, all panelled and carpeted, beautiful kitchen, along with lots of new cupboards, big bathroom, Cascade 40 water heater, electric heat, plenty of windows — There is 50 feet of waterfrontage and a dock for summer; communal beach close by. In winter all expenses shouldn't run over $130.00 a month if you have $3,000. down payment. Owner will hold mortgage. Happy to show. Thirty day possession.

THIS HOME LOOKS STATELY —
Outside and inside. Brick two storey, aluminum storms upstairs (so no nuisance with ladders) and regular wooden storms downstairs. Quaint vestibule, fireplace in living room, built-in china cabinet; altogether a very pleasing property. At present it is a duplex which can be very easily converted to a single family home with separate dining room and four bedrooms. Detached garage; on the West Hill. Asking $35,900. Terms can be arranged. (Present rental income as investment property is $330. per month. Enquiries welcomed. Mrs. Jo Grieve 968-8347 Res.

ONLY TWO LEFT

Our four bedroom condominium townhouses have proven to be very much in demand, so much so only two are left. At only $750.00 down to first home buyers, is it any wonder? Monthly payments range from $197.00 total monthly payment which includes taxes and all outside maintenance. The three bedroom units could start as low as $182.00 total monthly payment with only $600.00 to first home buyers. Monthly payments are based on income.

RURAL RANCH READY FOR RESIDENTS

We have two larger bungalows from which you can choose. Each has a family room with fireplace. One has a two car garage, the other a single. These houses offer quiet enjoyment away from city traffic, but on a first class road. Each has three bedrooms and 1½ baths.

YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR HUSBAND!

"If only Tom didn't drink so much . . ." "If Dick would just stop worrying about money . . ." "If Harry would pay more attention to the children . . ." Marriage counselor's offices are full of wives asking how they can get their husbands to change. And full of husbands who have the same question about their wives! Do your mate's habits sometimes make you furious? He can be changed, say family counselors—but first you must make some changes in yourself! Read how YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR HUSBAND. Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Thursday, January 30

Aries (March 21-April 19) Usually you're a self-starter. Today, it will be difficult to get up a full head of steam where your work is concerned.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) If you cater to your desire to overindulge, your waistline will suffer. You'll not fit into your new wardrobe. No extra helpings!

Gemini (May 21-June 20) It's likely your opinions will represent the minority today on important family issues. Don't fight city hall.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You'll jump to conclusions based upon what you want to hear not on what's really said. Listen carefully with both ears.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 2) Be sure what you buy isn't contributing to inflation; instead of fighting it. Shop till you get a good price.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're normally extremely aware of small details others overlook. Today, you'll base decisions on a faulty overview.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can't depend upon others to pick up after you and do things that you should do for yourself. Be your own man.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You won't be at your best if you have to deal with too large a group. Pass up any large, noisy gatherings.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't take bows prematurely for something not yet accomplished. You'll be embarrassed if it doesn't work out.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep your plans in perspective or you'll jump ahead of yourself and leave out some small, but necessary, steps.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you don't have cash to guy what you want, it would be wise to wait till you do, not shoulder installment payments.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) A companion who has taken advantage of your generous nature in the past will try to lower the boom again. Be careful.

Mobile Laboratory Aids Carleton Team

OTTAWA (CP) — Carleton University scientists, lacking all the equipment needed to study high-energy nuclear physics at Newport News, Va., solved their problem by building a mobile laboratory and driving it 850 miles to the Virginia City.

Karl Hafner, chief technician in the Carleton department of physics and designer of the mobile laboratory, said it has been in Newport News since November and will be hooked up for a second run in March to an atomic particle accelerator once used by the United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The accelerator is immobile and too expensive for the Carleton physicists to duplicate. But the mobile laboratory seems to have overcome the problem of moving the scientists to the site of the experiment.

Physics professor A. L. Carter said a similar experiment at Newport News two years ago involved a great deal more time and resulted in minor damage to equipment. The Carleton researchers had to borrow equipment or transport their own and reassemble it at the experiment site.

Now the computer, instrument racks, work desks and other apparatus are all housed in a 28-by-eight-foot Carleton University truck trailer. The trailer has been nicknamed The Experimenter's Dream, or TED, in honor of Dr. Edward Hincks, a member of the research team who had the first idea for such a lab 10 years ago.

ORDER OF THE BATH

SEVENOAKS, England (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Harold Osborne were delighted when told they could have a bathroom installed in their subsidized council house if tey paid 50 pence ($1.15) a week extra rent. Now, 18 years and almost £500 ($1,150) later, they're still waiting. But district council in this London-area community has promised Osborne, 69, that the job will be done in eight or nine months.

Male Menopause Does Not Exist

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please write a column on male menopause, its symptoms, and what can be done to make it easier?—Mrs. A.

You are begging the question by assuming there is such a thing as male menopause. There isn't. I've commented on this stubborn misconception before.

Women menstruate from puberty onwards till about the age of 50. The point at which menstruation stops atogether is called menopause—no periods..

Men have no equivalent physical phenomenon.

The confusion arises because many men go into a physical as well as psychological decline in their 50s. Anxieties over business or marriage and sexual frustration can occur at this important stage of their lives.

For women in menopause, supplemental female hormone helps overcome some of the problems associated with it. But for men male hormones will not help.

But men can—in their anxiety—experience hot flashes, be irritable and feel out of sorts generally, all symptoms similar to those reported by some women going through menopause.

When women ask me whether men go through menopause, I usually answer, "No, it only seems that way," and that's the best answer I can give.

Men who have such symptoms as I've describe need a thorough physical and psychological examination. Many are found to be working too hard, and a good vacation can do wonders. Developing problems — hypertension, diabetes, overactive thyroid or whatever—should be treated.

Most men eventually come to terms with their midddle-agedness and the problem ends.

Dear Doctor: Can hormones such as estrogen be used to increase breast size?—J.H.

The natural estrogen in your body when you were an adolescent girl did exactly that. It made your breasts as large as they were genetically intended to be or ever likely to become, short of plastic surgery.

It is doubtful whether introducing estrogen from outside sources would have any appreciable effect on their size now that you are a fully grown woman. Breasts do tend to enlarge further during a pregnancy, but this again is in response to secreation of natural hormones in the body, a temporary condition.

You mention in your letter that you have had an adverse opinion with regard to plastic surgery, so why don't you compromise with an appropriate bra?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a complete physical and my blood pressure was slightly high, but the doctor said it was nothing to worry about. Later I was found to have a non-functioning gall bladder.

The x-rays showed no picture and they assume I have gall stones.

I was advised to have the gall bladder removed. I am a healthy 75 and have no complaints. This advice seems ridiculous to me. What could be the difference with a non-functioning gall bladder or none at all? What is your opinion?—A.L.R.

Depends on who's giving you the advice—whether they are friends or doctors.

About the picture. There is a substance (iodophthalein sodium) which, when injected into the blood stream, eventually ends up in a normally functioning gall bladder. This substance shows up in an x-ray.

If it doesn't, it may be inferred that the gall bladder is not functioning. The majority of non-functioning gall bladders are either infected or have stones—in other words, are diseased.

I would ordinarily recommend removal of the gall bladder, especially if infection is present. But under the circumstances you mention, and considering your age and your apparent good health, that might not be necessary.

The important thing to find out is why your doctor (if it is your doctor you are talking to) advises taking it out.

Photos Fight Pollution

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A new technique for looking at smog may help track the pollution to its source, officials say.

The Los Angeles County Coroner's office recently made a set of electron microscope photos for the county air pollution control district (APCD).

The photos show the particles magnified hundreds or thousands of times.

Thus far, the photos have been used mainly for demonstrations. But APCD spokesman Dan Madden said the technique has the potential to identiy bits of pollution that can't be labelled and this may help track the smog.

Dr. Ron Taylor of the coroner's office made the photographs from samples given him by the APCD. The samples were collected at various places around the country where complaints had been made about dirty air.

Small glass plates were left out overnight in the area concerned. The next day they were retrieved and examined for any particles that had fallen on them.

A small bit of coke dust appears as a large, sharp-faced rock in one photo. The coke came from Los Angeles harbor, where the substance, a byproduct of petroleum processing, is loaded on ships.

A white, porous substance shown in another photo came from the burning of fuel oil with a high sulphur content.

One substance that fell on the glass combined with moisture to form a solution that etched its way into the glass. In the photo, the substance, called sodium metasilicate, a byproduct of glassmaking, seems to have eroded a wide valley into some lunar surface which is simply the glass plate.

Top Brass at School

The Royal College of Defence Studies, London, is where the brightest and best officers in Britain and overseas are roomed for high rank. The purpose of the college is to provide the opportunity for joint study of problems of national and international strategy, international relations and security. Officers are shown descending the marble staircase at the college. (CP Photo)

Defence College Prepares Officers

LONDON (CP) — In 1922, a cabinet committee under the chairmanship of Winston Churchill recommended the foundation of a college at which senior offices could study defence of the British Empire.

The Imperial Defence College opened its doors in Buckingham Gate five years later. One of the first group of officers was Lt.-Col. C. J. E. Auchinleck, later to become one of Britain's most famous generals.

In 1939 the exigencies of war suspended studies. But the next six years were to prove the value of IDC training so conclusively that British and Commonwealth officers unanimously asked that the college be reopened. It was, in 1946, at new, more House, an elegant early Victorian mansion in Belgrave Square.

Renamed the Royal College of Defence Studies (RCDS) about four years ago, it continues to reflect the serious intent and professional attitude of the British armed forces.

The purpose of the RCDS is to provide the opportunity for joint study of problems of national and international strategy, international relations and those aspects of other policies which are related to the whole question of international security.

The emphasis have changed over the [illegible] problems of the Commonwealth are only one of many subjects for study, including the relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, Britain's relations with mainland Europe and the implications of technological advance.

In Britain the RCDS provides the senior of a series of courses which an officer must pass if he is to reach the rank of major-general.

About 75 attend the course each year. About 40 are British—10 from each of the three uniformed services, 10 from the civil service—and 35 from overseas. Countries which send officers to study there include Nigeria, India, Ethiopia, Malaysia, Iran and Australia as well as most countries in Western Europe and the U.S. Average age of the students is 45.

The five lectures and seminars they attend each week are geared to broadening their outlook. Even so, the means by which this is achieved are open to considerable differences in interpretation.

Friday Hearing Set

Engineers Here Await Ruling

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Canadian National Railways engineers in Belleville are awaiting the findings of a Canada Labor Relations Board hearing in Ottawa Friday before calling a back-to-work vote, a union source said today.

The vote could take place Friday afternoon, the source said.

Earlier this week, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in Toronto filed an application with the board to determine the legality of a contract signed by engineers Dec. 11. The contract provided a Jan. 1 15 percent cost of living raise to 17 other unions which signed the document but not to the engineers. The engineers have been told they must wait until May for the raise.

Jack Histed, chairman of the Belleville local's grievance committee, will attend the Ottawa meeting as one of the appeal applicants.

Ian Brady, lawyer and elected spokesman for the engineers, said today that he was not in a position to "advise engineers to continue the walkout," and that "if we win (the appeal) we'll be in a much stronger negotiating position

"There should be some local decision early next week — and possibly as early as Friday afternoon," depending on the duration of labor board deliberations, said Mr. Brady.

Belleville engineers met this morning to discuss the appeal situation, with a second meeting scheduled with legal counsel this afternoon.

In the meantime, train service from the Belleville terminal continues to be operated by supervisory personnel, a CN official said today. While engineers in the western portions of Canada have returned to their jobs, CN is still without working engineers in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Belleville and Niagara Falls.

Belleville supervisors are manning the evening Bonaventure trains between Montreal and Toronto, with the eastbound train passing through Belleville at 6:44 p.m. and the westbound train at 8:25 p.m. Some freight service is also being handled by supervisors.

Despite the work stoppages, in Ontario CN announced Wednesday, the super transcontinental will resume service following the return to work of western engineers.

A CN statement said the company was functioning "to 85 per cent capacity." About 400 members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE) were estimated to be off duty.

W.D. Piggott, CN vice-president of rail operations, said trains were operating normally west of Toronto and east of Montreal.

A CN spokesman said transcontinental service between Montreal and Vancouver—with the first train scheduled to leave Winnipeg—could move through Toronto because crews from Northern Ontario manned all trains through that city.

Although direct service between Montreal and Toronto was impaired, transcontinental trains are normally routed through Ottawa, he said.

Meanwhile, an official of the BLE, which represents 3,164 enginemen in Canada, said he was told Wednesday by J.F. Roberts, vice-president of CN's St. Lawrence region, that "CN will commence as of 4:30 p.m. Thursday to seek injunctions against people (in Quebec) who are off the job."

About 100 of CN's 275 enginemen in Montreal booked off sick following a meeting Tuesday.

The injunctions, said the union official, would require the enginemen's return to work by Feb. 7. He estimated the strike had "about 30 per cent of the men tied up."

Tulip Carpet Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The Royal Canadian Legion hopes to have what its president calls a carpet of golden tulips blooming from coast to coast next year to commemorate 50 years of fighting for the rights of veterans. The legion hopes that at least four million bulbs of a Netherland-bred Royal Canadian Legion Tulip will bloom across the country in the spring of 1976, part of a year-long celebration by the organization.

Co-habiting Held No Bar To Custody

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal has ruled that a separated woman cannot be deprived of her children merely because she has taken them with her and moved in with another man.

The court upheld a woman's appeal from a trial judgment awarding her custody of the children on the condition she move out of the man's house and deny him access to the children, aged 6 and 10.

The appeal court, which did not name the woman in making its decision public Wednesday, said that the trial judge was wrong when he decided the custody issue on the basis of the wife's "continued adulterous relationship."

The woman, 35, and her husband, 39, separated in 1972.

Shortly afterwards, she took the children and moved into another man's house.

Her husband went to court to try to get custody of the children, but lost. However, the trial judge ruled that unless the wife complied with the court's conditions, the husband would get the children.

Eight Provinces Seek Higher Housing Target

OTTAWA (CP) — In an unusual show of unity, eight provincial housing ministers Wednesday called on the federal government to raise housing production targets and remove some of the strings on federal funds.

On the eve of today's federal-provincial housing conference, the ministers said in a joint statement the federal government should aim for at least 250,000 housing starts this year.

Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said recently the government has set a "realistic target" of about 200,000 to 210,000 starts this year.

Along with the higher goal, the federal government should increase its housing budget, the ministers said. Ontario Housing Minister Donald Irvine said later the budget should be raised to $2 billion this year from last year's $1.3 billion.

All provinces except New Brunswick and Quebec were represented at the afternoon meeting which reached agreement on the housing statement.

Federal sources said earlier Wednesday they didn't expect major new agreements to merge from the one-day conference on the country's growing housing problem.

EXPECT RESULTS

But Mr. Irvine said the provinces expect concrete results. "We had better get them all," he said of the provincial demands.

The provincial ministers renewed a demand made two years ago for freedom to spend their allotment of housing funds the way they wish.

They said the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. should hand out federal money for housing programs that provincial governments consider necessary in their regions.

The provincial ministers were critical of mid-year changes in CMHC budgets reducing spending in some programs.

"The allocation of these priority funds should be at the discretion of the individual provinces," the provincial statement said.

"The ground rules on existing programs are being varied by Ottawa in different ways in different provinces, with the result that provincial costs are escalating or the flow of funds from Ottawa to the provinces appears to be deliberately delayed," the statement said.

Mr. Irvine said the federal government should move out of the neighborhood improvement and residential rehabilitation fields in Ontario and leave these to the provincial government.

Big Stick Is Raised

Whelan Says Farm Bodies Must 'Shape Up' Over Eggs

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Wednesday he will have to take drastic action if the farm products marketing council and Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) do not shape up.

However, answering a Commons question from James McGrath (PC—St. John's East), he did not say what kind of action he expects from the two bodies.

Mr. McGrath, saying two provinces have given notice of their withdrawal from CEMA, asked if the government intends to disband the agency.

The Conservative consumer affairs spokesman also asked if Mr. Whelan is satisfied that CEMA has disposed of current surpluses and has production under control.

Mr. Whelan replied that CEMA must have "the full co-operation of provincial marketing boards . . . to do these things."

"Until they have this authority, they will not be able to achieve the kind of operation we all desire they should have."

Before accepting the "responsibility and blame for this agency," he would insist on it having "the central authority to report to me."

Newfoundland recently joined British Columbia in announcing planned withdrawal from CEMA, which first got into hot water last summer when it had to destroy 28 million eggs that went rotten becaus of faulty storage.

In the first two weeks of this year, CEMA accumulated a 40-million egg surplus but said it has disposed successfully of the eggs. Mr Whelan, while not expressing disbelief, has said he wants some proof.

Health Board Is Said Spreading False News

TORONTO (CP) — A request to explore the possibility of laying criminal charges against members of the Toronto board of health for allegedly spreading false news was rejected Wednesday by the Ontario Environmental Hearing Board.

The board was asked by Ian Outerbridge, lawyer for Canada Metal Co. Ltd. and Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd., to consult with Attorney-General John Clement over possible charges.

Spreading false news is an indictable offence under the Criminal Code and carries a penalty of up to two years in jail.

Mr. Outerbridge objected to statements Monday by health board members about his clients and the conduct of the hearing board's inquiry into lead pollution.

The hearing board has no power to punish for contempt and hears witnesss not under oath.

Britain Ready to Intercede But---

Canada Told to Make up Mind What It Wants from Euromart

OTTAWA (CP) — British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan said Wednesday they want to help Canada achieve its desired special relationship with the European Economic Community (EEC.)

But Mr. Callaghan added that while the EEC probably would welcome a relationship with Canada, and while Britain would act as an "interlocutor," Canada must be more precise in what it wants.

The two, stopping here on their way to Washington for talks with President Ford, made the offer in a news conference following a working lunch with Prime Minister Trudeau and other ministers.

Mr. Wilson said Britain would like to help Canada in its bid for a contractural relationship but there are complications, mostly procedural and resulting from the way the EEC does business.

Mr. Callaghan, who discussed the matter earlier with External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen, was more precise.

He thinks the EEC would like to find an organizational basis for a relationship with Canada.

He said Britain is prepared to act as an "interlocutor" on Canada's behalf but added that "we all" have to make more precise the type of relationship desired, whether it be trading or political.

The external affairs department announced earlier Wednesday that talks will begin shortly in Brussels between Canadian and EEC officials seeking to make the ideas presented by Canada more precise.

The contractural arrangement was the subject of talks between Mr. Trudeau and French, Belgian and EEC officials during his European tour last fall, and again will be discussed in March when he visits London, The Netherlands, West Germany and Italy.

Other matters at the news conference:

—Mr. Callaghan, discussing current British negotiations with the EEC, said Britain is anxious that the market be as open as possible so Commonwealth countries can have a good relationship.

—Mr. Wilson said the Commonwealth heads-of-government meeting in Jamaica in April will be important because it provides the opportunity of consultation that is not easy at the United Nations.

Italy's Public Hospitals Reported on Critical List

ROME (AP) — Beset by debts totalling $7 billion, Italy's public hospital service is on the critical list. Officials say a breakdown in the health insurance system is responsible and that the government is to blame.

"There are beds in the corridors and no bells to call for help," said a patient at Rome's San Camillo Hospital. "There are no trays for meals and no bags for dirty linen. Filthy sheets are thrown down by the beds."

Maresca Hospital in Naples, the first to diagnose the cholera epidemic last year, is closing. Supplies have been cut off because it can't pay its bills.

Doctors in Fidenza, in northern Italy, walked out for a week because they hadn't been paid.

Hospital authorities in Verona will auction a triptych by Andrea Mantegna, the 15th-century master, and apply the proceeds to their $72-million debt.

Officials disclosed recently that the hospitals owe the banks $2.7 billion, suppliers $2.9 billion and the government treasury $1.4 billion.

They estimate that health insurance programs, which are operated by companies controlled by the government, owe the 1,3:0 public hospitals $5 billion.

The insurance agencies are in debt because the government has rejected their requests for higher rates to be paid by employers and employees, promising a new state insurance plan merging all the companies and substantial subsidies in the meantime.

The hospitals are public, some run directly by the state but mostly under provincial and municipal administrations.

They receive no subsidies from health insurance plans but the health agencies are billed for subscribers treated at hospitals.

Otherwise, the hospitals receive funds from bills paid by and special subsidies from their local administrations when they have to buy special equipment.

The agencies are in the red because of overemployment, lack of administrative efficiency and abuses by patients who prompt doctors to prescribe medicines which are generally wasted, several official inquiries have determined.

REAL ESTATE:

Postponement Clause Like Aspirin

Ed. McKinney
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

Often, a buyer of real estate will have to take out a second mortgage in order to finance the purchase. Mortgage seniority is determined by the date and time of registration in the land registry office. If the length of the second (normally the smaller mortgage) has a longer period of time to run than the existing first mortgage, there could be a problem.

Why? Because the first mortgage cannot be renewed or replaced without the express permission of the holder of the second mortgage. But there is a solution. The second mortgage should contain a postponement clause which would automatically allow the borrower to renew or replace the first mortgage when it becomes due. However you couldn't increase the first mortgage and pocket the difference. Any increase in amount must be used to reduce the second mortgage.

The moral here is to know your mortgage expiration date and use the postponement clause if required. It could save you a financial headache.

King's Mill May Become Education Resource Centre

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD — A century-old mill in the King's Mill Conservation Area will undergo yet another change in the long list of alterations it has already seen.

What precisely the change will be is not yet known. However, it seems unlikely that it will be returned to its original state.

Ultimately, the decision rest with the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority which acquired King's Mill and the surrounding 62 acres for a conservation area about four years ago.

The groundwork for that decision now is being done by David Hollands, a University of Waterloo architecuture student.

Essentially, Mr. Hollands said Wednesday, his work in drafting alternatives for refurbishing the mill will only present options to the authority.

Six miles northwest of Stirling, the mill sits on Squire Creek just off Hastings Cunty road 8A. It now is being used as a workshop and equipment storage area by the authority.

Structurally, it is sound, Mr. Hollands said. At least, "it hasn't fallen down yet, but it certainly isn't trustworthy for large number of people."

It just might be used for large groups. It's one of the options Mr. Hollands is considering.

Jim Kelleher, authority general techologist, said one posibility being considered is redesigning the mill interior to act as a display and educational centre.

It would be used as a resource centre. School children would tramp the area fields, picking flora and fauna and then bring them to the mill for closer examination.

Background information and possible minimum labratory facilities would be available at King's Mill.

The mill, said Mr. Kelleher, would act as the centre for what is hoped will become a wildlife area.

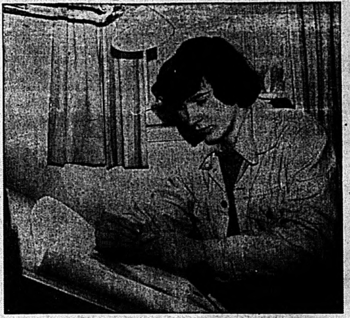
A study is being planned to examine the disrepair of mill's dam and possibly build another to create a mill pond in which Canada Geese and other wild fowl settle.

It may not be possible to rebuild either the dam or the mill to their original states — repairs would be too costly.

Mr. Holland said the mill, used as a grist mill and later as a saw mill, may not be completely restorable. Over the years, large chunks have been cut out of beams to install equipment. Much of that equipment now is missing.

With the high cost of refurbishing in mind, Mr. Hollands said the mill might become "an outdoor education centre that features historic aspects of the structure."

He said he suspects the two-storey building was erected by Scottish masons. As evidence, he cities the limestone rubble used to fill in walls between the exposed wooden frame of the mill. Such a practice is not native to the eastern Ontario area, but is one that would have been familiar to Scottish immigrants of the late 1800s he said.



Drafting the Options

University of Waterloo architecture student David Hollands defies the structural options available for improvements to the former grist-cum-saw mill at the King's Mill Conservation Area. The mill, north west of Stirling may be slightly refurbished and turned into a education and resource centre for the conservation area.

Ice Unit Repairs Topic of Debate

STIRLING — Councillor Ruby Tompkins got right down to the nuts and bolts about the ice-making machine breakdown at Centennial Arena in Stirling during a meeting Wednesday night attended by members of three bodies — town council, Stirling district arena building committee, and Centennial arena committee.

The equipment still has to be stripped down to know the extent of the repairs required to restore it.

Mrs. Tompkins told the other eight elected and appointed officials that so far all that is known to be wrong with the unit is the condensor, not the compressor, a less serious situation.

Once an expert can remove the controls, the compressor can be taken apart and checked, she said. It is thought this might be done by the weekend.

Mrs. Tompkins also told the meeting that machines tubing does not have to be made of expensive copper costing $8,000, but a replacement could be used for $1,580.

The present system used Freon gas as a refrigerant, but Stirling owns an ammonia system and can get two more units. If the system is switched to ammonia, it would be cheaper and everything could be used in a new arena, the meeting was told.

Most Officials Favor Present Arena Site

STIRLING — When it comes to financing a new Stirling district arena, Stirling reeve Ray Shortt and councillor Ruby Tompkins are concerned about those on fixed incomes ... the senior citizens.

"That is why we need government grants," the reeve said after a meeting Wednesday between council, Centennial arena committee and Stirling district arena building committee.

The biggest age block based on the census breakdown is those aged 70 and up ... 231, of which 89 were males and 142 were females.

This was the first meeting between the combined groups during which the proposed arena was discussed.

Members of the building committee recently toured arenas from Kingston to Peteborough and found out many problems to avoid in new construction. To save on costs, it is felt four dressing rooms would be adequate, the trend being towards six.

The ice surface would be a regulation 85 by 190 feet, dwarfing the existing ice surface. Various sites have been considered, but nothing definite has been decided.

The sites are outside Stirling, behind Stirling Lumber, in the fair grounds, near the new senior public school and on the present arena site.

Regarding deputy-reeve Fred Brandt's statement at another meeting held Tuesday night, councillor Tompkins said Mr. Brandt was wrong in saying the present arena is on hazard land. "It is zoned public,' she said after consulting the official plan for the village.

Building committee chairman Wieger De Jong said that when the floor was poured in Centennial Arena they ran into quicksand. "Some places we went down seven feet," he said.

Reeve Brandt, finance committee treasurer Bert Bastedo, and Mrs. Tompkins said they favor an arena at the Henry St. location where the existing arena has been for 47 years.

Mrs. Tompkins pointed out that the land behind the arena was once offered for sale for $3,000. This land would be good for parking, some feel. The land is held in the estate of the late Frank Stapley. The reeve said she would like to see the road beside the arena closed, increasing the site in size, as well as purchasing the Stapley land.

West Huntington deputy-reeve Harold Thompson pointed out that since there is five feet of gravel already underneath the ice surface, the site was suitable.

Driver Faces Four Charges

MADOC — Charges of careless driving, impaired driving, driving with 80 milligrams of alcohal in 100 millilitres of blood and driving while prohibited were laid against George Gilbert Dafoe, 33, of Elorado by Madoc provincial police Thursday. The charges followed an early morning an accident on Highway 62, a half mile north of the Deloro Rd., when a truck owned by Gerald Rose of Marmora and driven by Dafoe slid on the pavement and took out three guardposts.

Patrick Sees Little Harm In New Industrial Park

TRENTON — The 10,000-acre industrial park at Edwardsburg Township, north-east of Prescott will not affect Trenton, provided the provincial government sticks to its promise of attracting only large-scale industry to the site, Trenton mayor Robert Patrick said Wednesday.

The industrial land banking scheme was announced in Toronto by Housing Minister Donald Irvine earlier this week. He said the 10,000-acre site will be kept for large industries.

Mayor Patrick said Wednesday, "If they stick to that I don't think it would affect us. Trenton couldn't accommodate industry that size anyway.

"f they get into smaller industry that could be located in smaller centres, that would be bad."

Mayor Patrick said he couldn't "knock" the government's program. Although it will be several years before industry is likely to locate at the site, he said when it does it is likely Trenton, Belleville and other cities in Eastern Ontario might experience a form of industrial "fallout".

Smaller industries needed to supply those at Edwardsburg Township could locate in Trenton and other eastern Ontario centres.

Twinned with this week's announcement was indication that a program to provide funds to smaller centres for land banking and the installation of services now is under study by the ministry of industry and tourism.

The mayor said that Industry Minister Claude Bennett indicated the study may be finished by March or April of this year. "That's what Trenton needs and what Belleville needs," said the mayor.

"It would go a long way towards solving our problems.'

He said Trenton now has to assume a debentured debt to finance the installation of services. If the province can make money available at a more reasonable interest rate, Trenton taxpayers would benefit.

Mineral Sites Prime Bancroft Attraction

BANCROFT — Bancroft municipal council met this week with Dr. Donald Gorman of the minerology department of the University of Toronto, Carl Bosiack of the Bancroft Gemboree and Ivor Mcleod of the local Chamber of Commerce to discuss the marking of historical mineral sites and the development of others in the North Hastings area.

During the meeting to discuss the type of markers and plaques to be used and the priority of sites to be marked, Dr. Gorman told council "Bancroft is listed in every major geological report and every textbook on minerology. Other than the National Museum in Ottawa, there is no place in the world more fitted for a minerological museum than Bancroft."

Dr. Gorman has been associated with the Bancroft area for a number of years and acts as a mineral identification expert at the annual Bancroft Gemboree.

Carl Bosiak of the Gemboree said he feels the marking of the sites is not a sufficient gesture to induce more rock collectors to come to Bancroft.

"Minerals are the number one attraction for tourists in the Bancroft area," he told council. 'We have been trying for years to get the provincial government to set up crown-operated mineral collecting sites. If we don't do something soon, no one will be coming to Bancroft because nothing will be available."

"Freshening (blasting, guarding and maintaining) the Bancroft sites has the backing of professional minerologists and geologists from all around the world,' said Dr. Gorman.

Council decided to prepare a report on the freshening of area mineral sites for submission to the provincial secretary Allan Grossman during a meeting on resource development to be held in Belleville February 17.

Telling Time Fun

BANCROFT — The Grade 2 classroom that Sharon Lott teaches at Bancroft Public School is buzzing and ticking this week with a learning to tell time project that involves teacher, students and resource people from the community.

North Hastings trustee Earl Hawley attends the class to help the sevn and eight-year-old children play games centred around the clock watching project.

According to teacher Sharon Lott, time was spent earlier teaching the children formal lessons on telling time and then the students are turned loose to work it all out in a series of 16 independent activities.

The children are so involved in the games that there are no behavior problems with the students.

Some of the activities included in the program are a bingo-like game called Time-o, a matching game called Tick Tock around the Clock and the manipulation of the hands of a huge wall clock.

Picton Salutes Chief of Police

PICTON — Picton police chief George Pitt, whose recent retirement ended a 30-year career in police work, was saluted Wednesday night by members of the Picton Police Association and community friends.

The retired chief and his wife, Lillian, were guests of honor at a dance held at the Elks Hall in Picton.

Among special guests was Jack Taylor, a representative of the Ontario Police Commission, who commended Chief Pitt for his years of service.

"In police circles he was a credit to his department at all time," said Mr. Taylor.

Jesse Mason, chairman of the Picton Police Commission, said George Pitt joined the town police force as a constable in 1943 and in 1955 was promoted to chief.

Mr. Mason presented the retired chief with a wooden shield mounted with his cap badge

James Taylor, MLA Prince Edward-Lennox, remarked Chief Pitt had provided "a tremendous service to the community". He added the chief had tempered justice with compassion in his years on the force.

Mr. Taylor presented the chief with cuff-links in tribute to his carer in police work.

A recliner chair then was presented to Chief Pitt by Constable Ronald Roblin on behalf of the Picton Police Assoication friends attending the gathering.

The retired police officer expressed thanks for his gifts noting the past 30 years on the beat had represented "hard times and good times."

"Its nice to know a person has friends — they are the main thing in this world as far as I'm concerned" said the retired chief.

Building Site Studied

Wednesday night Stirling council, the Centennial Arena Committee, and the Stirling district arena building committee met to launch the beginning of a series of meetings for the proposed new arena to serve Stirling and four townships, and to discuss the breakdown of the ice machine at Centennial Arena. Looking at a proposed site map are, left to right, West Huntington deputy-reeve Harold Thompson, Rawdon councillor Burton Sharpe, Stirling recreation committee chairman Lloyd Jones, Stirling deputy-reeve and Centennial arena committee member Fred Brandt, and Wieger DeJong, chairman of Centennial arena and chairman Lloyd Jones, committee.

A Damaging Decision

Everybody loves a parade . . . and parades means bands among other attractions.

Among our finest bands are those of the military which budget-conscious philistines in the federal government and/or the bureaucracy are now attempting to phase out.

Did we say "budget-conscious?" Then why pick on this element of the military establishment? Is there absolutely no other fat — including those high salaries — that could be trimmed instead? Wouldn't a few tanks less — they are pretty obsolete anyway, and their worth to Canadian defence dubious — mean the bands could be maintained?

Military bands might not hold up an enemy in the field, assuming conventional warfare to be still in the cards somewhere, sometime — unlikely as it would seem — but they do fulfil a vital inspirational function.

Douglas Aselstine, music director of Quinte secondary school, puts the case for the military band in a letter on this page today. It is well said, and we endorse his sentiments.

To try and eliminate the music tradition of the armed services has a sick ring to it. It will be as damaging and demoralizing to forces morale as was then Defence Minister Hellyer's unification program years ago.

Bilingualism's Thorns

There is some irony in the thought that the Trudeau government is still pushing bilingualism, at a time when competence in English is in decline in high schools in Canada.

A Carleton University professor is the latest to comment on this aspect of the communication gap. He says the students now entering university have less mastery of English than those who went before.

Something has to be wrong in circumstances such as these. There are clues in the observations of parents; a father for instance complains of a two-year effort to obtain advice or help for his son in the midteens. A slow learner, the student had been given help at home but the school discouraged this. Tests finally showed he was about a year-and-a-half behind in reading ability.

How many others are there like this? The same parent claims a teacher told him 25 per cent of his students should have been failed, but he was told by the principal to "get it down to eight per cent."

And they are trying to teach them French in Ottawa, and in the schools! The way things are going, if there is no competence in English in the first place how can youngsters — as the adult generation of tomorrow — be expected to learn French?

More Violence

So what became of the rumor that the truce would be resumed in Northern Ireland. Now the ugly and cancerous campaign of violence is showing further signs of spreading to the rest of Great Britain.

Either it was just that, a rumor, or else the IRA — not for the first time — is guilty of duplicity.

Political murder does not just come to a halt overnight, especially when the stakes are so high, where Ireland's future is concerned.

The old antagonisms remain — and a settlement is probably as remote as ever.

Long Trail

The movement of mail is a complex operation and when all is said and done it is a marvel that so much of it gets to its destination and in reasonably short order.

All the same, delays do occur that give rise to questioning. Consider two air letters: one mailed in Belleville January 2, and it did not arrive at its destination in Britain until January 17. Another took 18 days to get to New Zealand when the minimum in the opposite direction is three or four days.

Sometimes it's a long long trail a winding, as mail wends its way around the world.

Banks Consider Public's Attitude

Ottawa Takes Bureaucratic Route to Cashless Society

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Picture this familiar scene: You are at the supermarket check-out counter buying the week's supplies.

But when the cashier rings up the total you don't hand over cash or write a cheque.

Instead you produce a plastic card, the cashier zips it in and out of a machine and hands it back.

In that instant your bank account has been reduced—and the supermarket chain's increased—by the amount of your grocery bill.

That little card, and the vast computer system that it activates, may eliminate a great deal of today's cash-handling and cheque-writing before this decade is finished.

But then, on the other hand, it may not.

The Canadian Bankers Association has just concluded an industry-wide conference on what it calls the "payments system," and the federal government has set up its own committee to study the future of the system.

(When the concept of electronic funds transfer was first dreamed up a decade ago, it was called "the cashless society." The bankers are trying to replace that phrase possibly because of its unpleasant association with the condition most of us find ourselves in just before pay-day).

Opinions are decidedly divided on the revolutionary change in the system.

A certain amount of public resistance is inevitable. It's not just that most people have a deep, almost primordial need to hold money in their hand—there's the practical advantage that in writing a cheque, you retain control of the money for two or three days until the cheque reaches your bank.

And there's also a widespread skepticism about computers. If your bank's computer makes a mistake that's to your disadvantage, how long will it take you to persuade the bank to correct it?

But the president of the bankers' association, J. Allan Boyle, is aware of the objections and says the banks are taking them into account in their planning.

"Our business has been built on the basis of confidentiality with our customers and we intend to keep it that way," he says.

Mr. Boyle, who is executive vice-president and chief general manager of the Toronto Dominion Bank, is critical of the federal government's approach, described in a policy statement from Ottawa as taking "the lead to ensure the orderly development of the payments system."

In taking the lead in such a far-reaching development, however, the federal government is displaying a form of self-confidence that approaches arrogance.

Its committee to write the rules for the cashless society is made up exclusively of bureaucrats. No representatives of the grubby world of commerce or banking—who might be tainted by the profit motive—will apparently make any significant contribution to the "orderly development."

If anyone is proposing to replace the system that goes back to the time of the Phoenicians, it would be only prudent to look at the ramifications of the move as fully as possible.

Expert opinion is essential before any group, in either the public or the private sector, attempts to revolutionize the established system.

The electronic-transfer system can only be acceptable to the public if it is shown, beyond question, to be efficient and economical, and to carry with it undoubted advantages over existing methods of payment—such as a modest discount for users and a sure-fire method of clearing up errors.

Prime Minister Shrugs Off Outcry Over Gift of Indoor Swim Pool

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA— Prime Minister Trudeau can't understand why people — in and out of Parliament — keep bugging him about that $200,000 indoor swimming pool.

There are questions about it in the Commons, Honorable Members of both the Conservative and New Democratic opposition parties move resolutions in the House calling for him to "tell all," and letters to the editors of newspapers all across the land, and open line radio shows alike clamor for what is known by politicians as "full disclosure."

People want to know who is putting up the money — first estimated at some $30,000 but now topping $200,000 — what conflict of interests might be involved, and what could be in it in the way of income tax deductions.

The Prime Minister has said publicly that if Parliament wants to know, then Parliament will be told.

But it is not working out that way.

For the Liberal majority, which dominates the Commons, is making sure it doesn't.

It could be taking its cue from the Prime Minister himself.

Because, despite his protestations that there is no reason for concealment, he has made it clear to all that he considers the controversy about the costly pool pretty picayune.

Doesn't everybody have a pool? he has asked reporters.

Isn't some place to swim almost standard household equipment for most Canadians, he has shrugged.

Well, maybe for some it is.

But there is a big difference, whether the Prime Minister sees it or not, between a $200,000 installation with sauna and solarium, and potted palms and other tropical verdure around the deck, and one of those economy - family-size above - ground jobs that come for anywhere from $400 to $2,000.

The English-speaking press, as it usually does, handles the prickly Prime Minister with kid gloves, out of respect both for the office and for the cutting edge of his tongue.

But the French - speaking press, perhaps enjoying the close intimacy of language, is a good deal less caring of his sensitivities.

The pool, prodded the representative of a Montreal daily, wasn't exactly a shining example of personal restraint on the Prime Minister's part, was it?

Well, the PM allowed as he hadn't thought of it that way.

And then came the deathless remark that didn't just about everybody have a pool? So why all the fuss?

While the Prime Minister's office has said that the pool is the gift of a group of Mr. Trudeau's well-heeled Toronto admirers, New Democratic House Leader Stanley Knowles worry that some of the cost could be coming out of the taxpayers' pocket.

Mr. Knowles might have gone for the story that it was all coming out of the goodness of heart of those open-handed Torontonians when the price was a mere $30,000.

It is that $200,000 that concerns him now as he wonders how much, if any, of the $170,000 price difference is being covered by the federal Treasury to which you and everyone else soon will be making the annual tax contribution.

Both Conservatives and New Democrats insist it is not just the pool that bothers them, it is the whole expansively self-indulgent life-style of the Trudeaus . . . the two Cadillacs worth $158,000 ... the gifts from Hong Kong millionaire and Arab king ... the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent on furnishing, decorating and equipping the official residence, the summer place, and the Parliament Hill offices.

It is a "princely life-style," as Stanley Knowles sees it, and "an affront to all Canadians" who are not only being jawboned by their government, but compelled by its rising inflation and unemployment to cut back on their own living standards.

Meanwhile, Maritime Conservative MP Robert Coates is compiling what he calls "a catalogue of the Emperor's extravagances," which he promises will reveal the enormous cost to Canadians of maintaining the Prime Minister in the opulent style to which he insists he must remain accustomed.

Lougheed Marking Time on Energy

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — There was some surprise here last week when the throne speech of the Alberta legislature had practically nothing to say about energy.

The speech was mostly concerned with social programs, presumably looking for an early election.

Of course the question being asked after the omission of energy was does this mean that Premier Peter Lougheed is giving up on his aim to have a major petro-chemical industry established in his home province.

And the informed answer to this one is hardly likely.

Most probably, it would appear, that the western premier is simply biding his time, while presumably carrying on behind-the-scenes negotiations.

It does appear that he probably has given up hope of killing the half-billion dollar Polysar development in Sarnia.

This now is definitely going ahead.

Ottawa insisted that it do so. And Lougheed apparently decided that it was no use in trying to buck city hall.

But at the same time he made it clear that he was not at all happy about the development.

And though he may still have a few cards in his hand in that Polysar will need Alberta feedstock, the chances of his trying to play these don't appear strong.

But we can be sure that his own domestic industry is still more than a gleam in his eye.

Incidentally on this serious energy question when Premier Davis put Dennis Timbrell, at 28 the youngest member of his cabinet, in the energy portfolio there was some eyebrow lifting.

Surely, it was said, this was a very important and critical post for such a young man.

However, this is discounting Timbrell, a former schoolteacher and with five years experience in municipal politics.

He may be only 28, but it is a mature 28.

And if the thought of him trying to face up to Peter Lougheed and his case-hardened veterans may be a bit frightening, we may be sure that he will have the former minister and now Treasurer Darcy McKeough by his side.

And McKeough has shown he belongs in the Lougheed league.

The British Soldier On

The Spectator

We are all expecting inflation to continue; oil prices to rise; government to be helpless in the face of events: the price of everything to soar ever upward. There is a greater sense of impending calamity abroad than at any time in the nation's history. Behind all this caterwauling lies our instinct that Britain is a nation in irreversible decline. Yet there is nothing irreversible about our decline, and nothing whatever to be depressed about in the New Year, once we are properly determined to deal with our own problems.

Thieu in Struggle for Survival

By KEVIN DOYLE
The Canadian Press

As the conflict in South Vietnam enters what seems to be a decisive stage, the Saigon government of President Nguyen Van Thieu is caught up in a desperate struggle for survival.

An offensive launched by the Viet Cong with the support of the North Vietnamese during the last several months shows no signs of weakening.

Meanwhile, in the South Vietnamese capital, Thieu is coming under burgeoning domestic criticism and pressure to resign and turn over the government to a more acceptable leader.

Most observers now believe his only real hope of staying in power in the long term rests with United States President Ford's recent request to Congress for an additional $300 million in aid to South Vietnam. The Congress has yet to debate the issue and the eventual decision seems far from clear.

The Viet Cong and North Vietnamese have steadily expanded their grip over large sections of the countryside although seasoned observers say they are unlikely to make any immediate dramatic push to grab large towns and cities.

Their objective instead seems to be to block main roads and isolate government positions while consolidating control over the rich, rice-producing Mekong Delta area to the south of Saigon.

The aim of the offensive ultimately appears to be not the complete defeat of the South but to gain enough strength to force Thieu's resignation and to compel his successor to reopen negotiations on the Paris ceasefire agreement which was to have ended the war when it was signed two years ago.

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have held the initiative in the most of the fighting since the middle of 1974. Their artillery and armor has been steadily increased while that of the Saigon government has dwindled.

The guerrilla forces lack any aircraft but they have enjoyed considerable success in the use of surface-to-air missiles in reducing the strength of Saigon's air force.

The huge expenditures which Thieu has to make to try to re-equip his forces, in the light of decreasing American aid, has caused economic chaos in the countryside where inflation now is running at more than 60 per cent a year.

This in turn has brought Thieu's critics in the South—politicians, priests, monks, students and others—onto the streets in violent anti-government demonstrations.

Evidence of large-scale corruption in his government has worsened his plight and opposition forces seem to be gaining strength.

Many observers now believe that if the U.S. Congress refuses to increase aid to the South, Thieu's days as leader are limited.

Politics of Oil

Weapons Purchases by the Arabs Could Be Used Against the West

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Oil and guns. An explosive mixture and increasing in potential to create a conflagration nowhere more so than in the Persian Gulf.

The oil-rich and now dollar-rich Arab states around the Persian Gulf are purchasing weapons at a rate which almost outdoes the historic arms races of the old European powers.

In one instance, Iran, there is even an offer to help bail out a major American military aircraft manufacturer namely Lockheed Aircraft threatened with bankruptcy.

The countries involved include Iran as the largest arms buyer at a staggering rate of about $2 billion in announced contracts down to the lesser oil states of Kuwait Bahrain Qater Oman not, to forget the sprawling mainly desert kingdom of Saudi-Arabia.

The mania, call it insane, to buy Western weapons, usually ones of the most sophisticated variety is that these countries appear to be arming themselves not against Israel but against a future outside enemy who might challenge their growing hegemony in the world through petro-dollar acquisitions.

And who might that enemy be? Why the very countries United States, Britain, France and West Germany from whom they are buying the weapons.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's slip about taking military action against oil-producing countries if they turned off the oil tap, intentional or oherwise and made only as Jan. 9, has probably convinced some of the more nervous Arab oil states that a country which could pull a Vietnam in Asia, could do the same in the Persian Gulf.

Or else, why all the weapons? After all such tiny Arab states in the region as Qater Oman and South Yemen are also bitter enemies of Israel. But they are a long way from that country and can supply only moral support to warring Arab neighbors of Israel like Syria or Egypt.

The same is true of Saudi-Arabia major oil power in the region, though in the past she has claimed to have supplied aircraft and jet pilots to the Arab side in the Yom Kippur war of late 1973.

As for Iran, it is not, I repeat, not an enemy of Israel to begin with. Nor is it an Arab state. Its version of Islam is quite a different sect than the fundamentalist ones adhered to by the other Persian Gulf states.

The Iranians do have differences with next door Iraq, also building up its arsenal courtesy of the Russians and with tiny Kuwait next door, but nothing to justify the huge amounts of arms they have bought or ordered.

So who would be invaded by the big Chieftain British-built tanks or attacked by the growing squadrons of late-model American jet fighters which are becoming the military muscle of the Shah's empire?

Perhaps the Russians, traditional enemies of Iran? That seems unlikely since the Russians could obliterate Iranian cities, oil refineries and that country's emerging industries in one or two well-placed pre-emptive strikes.

The Persian Gulf arms race is both weird and very dangerous.

Belleville Boosters are a real live aggregation not only for Belleville but for every other good cause, local, provincial or national and are making a success of their club rooms in the Ritchie Block which are open every evening for the entertainment and advancement of the members.

Burglarizing a brewery may have been a popular pastime in the dear, dead days of long ago, but it has its drawbacks these days. Last night Roy's Brewery was entered and a number of bottles of beer discovered. The joy of the discoveries must have changed to sadness when they found the bottles held only near beer and not very near at that - in fact it was less than the legal 2¼ per-cent. Nothing was stolen.'

Military Bands' Cut Is Protested

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Last weekend the Department of National Defense announced that, as part of their program to reduce costs in the Armed Forces' Budget, the decision was made to disband the Air Transport Command Band based in Kingston, Ontario.

I protest this decision, as a music educator, on the basis that it represents a negative attitude on the part of the Government toward Canadian culture in general and to instrumental music in particular.

The motivation this fine musical organization has given to all high school students through their excellent performances in the Secondary Schools is something which would be sorely missed by all.

Let us not fail to realize also the contribution made to all members and their families throughout the Armed Forces wherever they may be stationed. In times of an uneasy world peace, music does maintain morale and helps to restore a sense of balance, psychologically, to our professional troops in their efforts on Canada's behalf.

Upon hearing a concert given by this group one senses a Canadian unity and a pride in our Armed Forces creating a deeper respect and understanding for them as well as a sincere respect for a musical organization of inter-national fame.

Therefore I respectfully request the authorities concerned to reverse this decision and retain the Air Transport Command Band as a valuable cultural unit which must not be lost to Canadian music.

DOUG. ASELSTINE,
Director of Music,
Quinte Secondary School.

Lennox Oil Contract Is Signed

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Taylor, Ontario Hydro chairman, said Hydro will announce today that it has signed a contract worth at least $900 million with Petrosar Ltd. of Sarnia, Ont., for the supply of fuel oil over 15 years.

Under the agreement that begins late next year and renewable for three-year periods, Petrosar will sell Hydro 20,000 barrels of residual oil a day from its petrochemical plant now under construction at Sarnia.

The oil will be moved by train to Hydro's proposed Lennox and Wesleyville generating stations.

Lennox, being built on the shore of Lake Ontario 20 miles west of Kingston, will be Hydro's first oil-fired station, with the first of four 500,000-kilowatt generating units expected to be in operation this year.

Pot Priority

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to abolish jail sentences for persons charged with possession of hashish and marijuana has received Senate priority over another that would require registration of all firearms.

Labor Defended

REGINA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Wednesday that only in recent months have real earnings by manufacturing workers edged ahead of inflation.

His remarks, in a prepared text for speech to the Regina Chamber of Commerce, came only two days after Finance Minister John Turner labelled wage and salary increases as a primary cause of inflation.

Indians Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — The right of the elected band council to govern the Six Nations reserve near Brantford, Ont., in place of the hereditary chiefs, as well as the validity of the Indian Act, will be the subject of an appeal later this year to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The court Wednesday granted a motion by the hereditary chiefs to appeal a decision of the Ontario Court of Appeal that the elected band council legally run the reserve.

Drafting Error

TORONTO (CP) — L. R. Eadie, an assistant deputy minister of transportation and communications, said Wednesday that a discrepancy over a highway route in Oakville, Ont., was caused by a drafting error.

Last week, a map distributed by government officials outlined in detail the route of the proposed Highway 403 and the road connecting the new highway with the Queen Elizabeth Way at Ford Drive.

The map placed the connector road several hundred feet to the west of the land, which was purchased for about $1.5 million for road purposes in March, 1973. But a designation plan of December, 1972, says the road is supposed to run through the purchased land.

The province said Wednesday the designation plan is correct.

Olympic Contract Review Is Ordered

QUEBEC (CP) — The Olympic organizing committee (COJO) may be able to offset part of a massive deficit expected from construction of facilities for the 1976 Games.

COJO and a contracting firm building a permanent Olympic village to house about 10,000 athletes were told by a Quebec legislature committee Wednesday to renegotiate their contract and report back Feb. 5.

The surprise order came after it was revealed COJO may lose more than $21 million, depending on how the contract is fulfilled.

The municipal affairs committee is looking into the financing and construction plans for the Games now expected to cost between $600 million and $644 million, with a minimum deficit of $209 million.

COJO officials and a spokesman for Terrasses Zarolega Inc., the contracting firm, told the committee that COJO could lose all its investments in the village.

The complicated contract for the $55-million village was signed in a rush last October, Roger Rousseau, COJO commissioner general, told the committee.

"I don't like the contract," he said, later confiding to reporters the legislature committee's order would help COJO.

The contract called for Zarolega to rent apartments in the buildings for the Games, if 51 per cent in sales of condominiums was not attained. After a five-year period, the profits of the most profitable year, multiplied by 10, would be turned over to COJO. The apartments would then come under COJO ownership.

But if there are no profits, COJO's investments would become valueless, and Zarolega would end up owning the village for only a $2-million investment.

COJO has also been told to study two proposals for a temporary village, one costing $28 million, and the other $38 million. Both proposals were rejected during the planning stages of the Games.

Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau said he needs time to improve his self-financing scheme to satisfy everyone.

The mayor has maintained that Montreal taxpayers will not hve to pick up the tab for a deficit because the Games will be self-financing through the sale of Olympic coins, stamps and lotteries along with revenues generated through increased economic activity.

Wiretap Ruled Admissable At Moncton Murder Hearing

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — A preliminary hearing for two men charged with the murder of two Moncton policemen and the kidnapping of a 14-year-old boy enters its third day today following arguments Wednesday over the admissability of some testimony.

James Lawrence Hutchison, 43, and Richard Ambrose, 22, are charged with kidnapping Raymond Stein Dec. 12 and murdering Cpl. Aurelle Bourgeois, 47, and Constable Michael O'Leary, 33, who were investigating the abduction.

Detective Robert Pettigrew of the Moncton police force testified Wednsday he watched and listened on an extension telephone at RCMP headquarters Dec. 17 as Mrs. Hutchison placed a call to her husband at the provincial jail. A jailer said Hutchison took a call from a woman identifying herself as his wife at about the same time.

The voice he heard in conversation with Mrs. Hutchison was the same voice he heard as he monitored two telephone calls to the home of the abducted boy, Detective Pettigrew testified.

He said it was a voice he will never forget. "The voice was soft and I would say not excitable . . . very cool."

Defence lawyer Edward Bell objected to the testimony on the basis of the privilege of husband-wife conversations but Provincial Court Judge Henry Murphy ruled it admissable.

Mr. Bell said that under Canada's new wiretap legislation evidence involving "illegal interception" was not admissible either.

Judge Murphy ruled the testimony could be admitted if it involved the tone and demeanour of the two parties rather than the content of their conversation.

He said it could be important since crown prosecutor Donal Friel has indicated it will be necessary to piece together circumstantial evidence.

Nixon Thinks Government Dodging Industrial Problem

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) —The province's purchase of 10,000 acres of land in Edwardsburgh Township near Prescott, Ont., reprsnts an attempt at a spectacular solution to a complex problem, Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday.

The government wants to build its own industrial site rather than help municipalities attract industry according to local plans, he said.

He told the Peterborough Liberal Association that a recent Financial Times of Canada survey showed the nine largest municipalities in eastern Ontario have about 4,200 acres of vacant serviced land in industrial parks.

The Edwardsburgh park, he said, "no more reveals a commitment to attack the underlying problems than the cabinet's five-per-cent pay cut represents a meaningful commitment to fight inflation."

The association nominated Michael O'Toole, 38, former reeve of Otonabee Township and a township farmer, to represent the Liberal party in the riding in the next election.

The riding has been held by the Progressive Conservatives since 1937. The incumbent is John M. Turner.

Talks Fail

OTTAWA (CP) — Th Public Service Alliance has applied for conciliation for a group of 1,000 communications employees following the failure of contract talks with treasury board.

The employees, whose previous contract ended Dec. 29, operate communications equipment for external affairs, national defence, environment and transport departments.

Land of Low Prices

Portugal's Algrave province is one of the last places in Europe where prices have not skyrocketed and the February - March temperatures range from 50 into the low 70s. The area offers sandy beaches, ruined castles, luxury hotels, quaint inns, new condominiums and old houses. Mule-drawn wagons are used to gather water in Estoi, which also features a palace and formal park. (CP Photo)

Former RCAF Man In African Police

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (CP) — Halifax-born Bob West has become the first Canadian to be promoted to the rank of section officer in the British South African Police (BSAP).

West, 26, was a service policeman in the RCAF until the integration of the Canadian armed forces.

He applied to the RCMP and was accepted but the prospect of more schooling and a desire to travel ended that plan and four years ago he moved here and joined the police.

Before this he worked in the mining country at Keno, Y.T., and Cassiar, B.C. His parents live in Richmond, B.C.

His rank of section officer is equivalent to sergeant. As a member of the criminal investigation department, West is based in Salisbury as a plainclothes policeman.

Rhodesia's police force gets its name from the origins of the country back in 1890. When the British South Africa Company was granted a royal charter to explore, mine, farm and trade in Rhodesia, it was also empowered to establish and maintain a police force.

Thus the British South Africa Company's Police came into being. Although the word "company's" has been dropped the force still bears its title in honor of the mounted riflemen who escorted the first settlers here.

For many years the force double as unarmed civil police and as a small, trained standing army, with two of its members receiving the Victoria Cross for gallantry.

"The police here have a tremendous spirit," West said. "It's like the RCMP as far as I'm concerned—they have the select few."

West joined the BSAP for an initial three years and has signed on for a further seven.

West said compared with Canada the crime rate in Rhodesia is low.

"I'm involved mainly with the drug section. The drug scene here is quite low. In fact, compared with Canada this place doesn't exist as far as drugs are concerned."

West recently spent six weeks on vacation in Canada introducing his Rhodesian bride to his parents.

Rhodesia now is home for West. He says he couldn't see himself living in Canada again. But in a country where the hot African sun beats down almost 365 days a year he admits to missing snow—and hockey and football.

West finds Rhodesia's low cost of living attractive. "A soft drink is six cents and a paper five cents. Here if you have a cent in your pocket you can spend it; back home you might as well throw it away."

West supervises a 15-man section and at Salisbury's central police station he is second in command to the inspector in charge.

"Since I was a military policeman I always wanted to be in the police," he said. "Police work is my business."

Algarve Is Warmer Than Costa del Sol

ESTOR, Portugal (CP) — Portugal's Algarve province, stretching 100 miles along the south coast and protected from north winds by a mountain range, deserves to be better known as a late winter or early spring vacation spot.

The February-March temperature ranges from 50 into the low 70s, warmer than the Riviera or the Costa del Sol.

The area offers sandy beaches, ruined Moorish castles, luxury hotels, quaint inns, new condominiums and old white houses huddled together in hillside towns.

Algarve is one of the last places in Europe where prices have not skyrocketed. A room and bath in a four-star hotel on the beach is available at the price offered by a medium-class hotel elsewhere. And the resorts are uncrowded.

The Algarve provides a combination of restful sunning and leisurely sightseeing. Spend a few days at the eastern end of the coastline taking half-days to see neighboring resorts. Then repeat the procedure at the western tip.

A half-hour flight avoids the 300-mile drive from Lisbon to the provincial capital of Faro, where a tourist can arrange to have a rented car waiting at the airport.

Faro itself is not a beach resort but is worth a couple of hours' sightseeing.

For lunch with a local atmosphere, drive some 16 miles north to the Coiro de Burra (Donkey's Hide) at Sao Bras de Alportel. It looks like a poor country grocery store but has a small dining room off the old-fashioned kithen where the food is delicious. Partridge cooked in oil was on the December menu.

A less primitive alternative for lunch or for an overnight stay is the pousada de Sao Bras. Pousadas are government-run inns, popular and reasonable. A double room with bath can be booked before leaving Canada for about $5 a person with breakfast around $1.

Nearby at Milreu (pronounced Mill-rell) are the ruins of the home of a wealthy Roman family. Some of the rooms and baths have been excavated. Then drive on to Estoi to see a charming palace and formal park, still belonging to the formerroyal palace and formal park, still belonging to the former royal family..

Near Estoi at Tavira, a town of 3,000 inhabitants famed for its sardine and tuna fishery, is a ruined 11th century castle on a hill with a good view of the red-tiled town and Algarve's characteristic Moorish chimneys of pierced white mortar, looking like miniature minarets.

Monte Gordo, almost at the Spansh border, is worth a stop of three or four days. Two excellent luxury hotels are the Vasco da Gama on the beach and the Alcazar, a block from the sea, although there is also cheaper accommodation. The town, 80 miles from Faro, has a lovely beach with adjacent pine forests.

There is a wide choice of beach resorts in the region west of Faro. Vale do Lobo has the five-star Hotel Dona Filipa and a number of luxury villas on three large developments, all with their own golf courses.

The quaint little town of Albufeira has narrow streets hugging the hillside and a short sea esplanade reached through a solid rock tunnel built under a hotel. At night, fishing boats are strung out at sea so that their lights give the impression of a coastline of houses.

A side trip on the drive west is to Loule, a typical market town in the hills 11 miles north of Faro, a good place to shop for wickerware, baskets, furniture and pottery.

A number of interesting towns are within easy driving distance of the western resorts. Silves, military and administrative centre of the province during the Moorish domination, has a huge, red sandstone fortress which withstood two Christian sieges, subsequent capture and a later earthquake.

Camels Help Draw Tourists To Tunisia, Country of Contrasts

TUNIS (CP) — "Here come camels," the guide called out, and there they were, some 20 of them, heading towards the tour bus on the main road. The passengers piled out, cameras at the ready.

In Tunisia the tourist is right in the centre of normal activities. Swaying camels, trotting donkeys and their white-robed riders share the roads with modern cars and buses.

The souks (markets) in the small towns and villages carry on as they have for centuries, offering better bargains than modern shops for the customer who is willing to haggle.

Tunisia is a country of contrasts. In the south, a Berber village clings high up the mountainside. Its streets are ledges so narrow that in some spots two pedestrians cannot pass, one having to back up. This is the village of Chenini-Tatouine with a population of more than 2,000.

On the coast, some 200 miles from the capital of Tunis, are seaside resorts with promenades and fine hotels, complete with pools and gardens. And right beside them are old fortifications and mosques.

The pit village of Matmata consists of some 700 homes dug two storeys into the ground with rooms burrowed off a large central courtyard. From a neighboring hillock, the village looks like the target of a bombing attack.

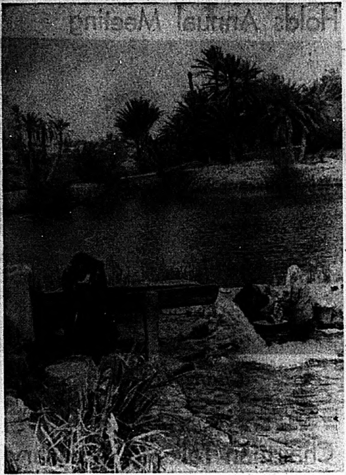
At the Tunisian Touring Club a set of pits has been converted into a hotel. A guest reaches a second-storey bedroom by footholds and a rope, much in the manner of a mountain climber. In striking contrast is the luxurious red-brick Sahara Palace Hotel, standing out in the desert like a mirage in an artificial oasis on the outskirts of Nefta.

Then there is Roman Tunisia, where cities and fortifications were built to keep control of the granaries that supplied food to the empire.

At Sheitla are the ruins of Diocletian's Arch and several temples. At Dougga there is a whole Roman city, including an open-air theatre where performances are given every June. There are Roman ruins all over northern Tunisia.

Beautiful mosques are found in every Tunisian city or town. One of the most spectacular is the Great Mosque at Kairouan with its 600 columns brought there from Roman and Byzantine ruins and a three-tiered minaret like a wedding cake. Only Moslems are permitted to enter the inner mosques.

Bargaining is expected at the souks, where about half the first price mentioned is about the right amount to settle for.



Be Sure to Bargain

Women washing clothes at an oasis is one of the many sights to see in Tunisia, a country of contrast. Avoid modern vendors who have set up shop and scout around for the old souke (markets) where there are cheaper prices and be sure to bargain. It's expected. (CP Photo)

Battle Crazy Ants

LONDON (CP) — In an attempt to control and contain the "crazy ant" in the Seychelles, Britain will spend about £30,000 ($69,000) during the next 2½ years as part of a technical assistance program. The small red ants probably were introduced by accident in some shipment from the east and now show in large numbers in four isolated areas. They are called crazy ants because of their habit of running around at high speed without apparent purpose. The ants do not bite or sting.

BAYFRONT STUDY

The Moira River Conservation Authority, in co-operation with The City of Belleville, Thurlow Township, and Sidney Township, has commissioned a planning study of the Moira River and the shoreline of the Bay of Quinte.

The study team is interested in hearing from individuals and groups wishing to contribute data and ideas, or wanting to know more about the project. Please contact:

The Bayfront Study,
Crysler & Latham Ltd.,
Box 68,
[illegible], Ontario.

The Bayfront Study is concerned with the future development and conservation of the mouth of the Moira River, and the shoreline of the Bay of Quinte between the Aiken Road and the Thurlow-Tyendinaga Townline. As well as land and water conservation an dice control, the study will consider future public recreational facilities (on land and water), and the degree of public access to such facilities that should be developed and maintained.

Would You Apply To Be a Housewife?

A mock advertisement appeared recently in the Newsmagazine put out by Humber College's Centre for Women.

Written by Claire Hobbs, it offers a chuckle or two, and more than that, food for thought and discussion. Women may laugh out of recognition ("Yes, that's exactly how it is!") and men may be amused because they feel the humor is exaggerated.

But ask yourself: Is it really funny?

This ironic approach is quite different from the hard-edged style of another brochure obtained from the Centre for Women.

In this piece, entitled "Marriage? — Don't Get Married" women are advised that the laws of the land do not work in their favor.

"Men have money, women are property,men buy property, women bargain for security" begins the article, which lists the various ways in which one sex is considered inferior to the other by the courts.

The law says, for example, that a wife can spend her husband's money, but only to the extent that he chooses. If he's rich, but chooses to live like a miser, she must live like a miser too.

What the law means is that although she works for him, the money is really his, according to the author of the article.

The law says that a wife must live wherever the husband chooses. If she doesn't she can be classified as a deserting wife. She will lose her dower rights and right to support, and he can divorce her.

What the law means is that she must be physically available.

A woman's dower right is the legal provision to one third of her husband's property even if it is in the husband's name alone.

And how does a woman earn her dower right? As a housewife and mother, she works in the home (whether she also works outside the home or not) but without any contract to protect her rights.

Think about it. If you're a woman, would you feel better about tedious house chores if you had a regular salary for that work? If you're a man, how would you feel about working out a system of payment for chores?

This pamphlet ends with a fascinating thought.

"Men could not afford to run the world the way they do, without using wives and mothers."

Hospital Auxiliary Holds Annual Meeting

A year that saw the deletion of the word "women' from Belleville General Hospital Auxiliary's name and three major purchases for the hospital was brought to a close Tuesday when that group held its annual meeting.

Selma Bochnek was elected president. Other new officers for 1975 elected at the meeting are Jean Wilson, first vice-president; Phyllis Smith, second vice-president; Ethel Stewart, third vice-president; Shirley Matthies, recording secretary; Jean MacLeod, corresponding secretary; Pat Bools, treasurer.

At the meeting retiring president Lillian Ashley told members and guests that she was ending her second year as president of the auxiliary with mixed emotions.

"We have used our money in a great variety of ways. We have purchased modern machines to add to the safety and efficiency of the hospital and other equipment was purchased to lighten the work of the nurse and add to the comfort of the patient," she said.

"I shall never forget serving on the board of governors of our hospital. This close connection with the hospital has given me a great insight into the work of a very find institution and this auxiliary is an integral part of our present day hospital."

In her report, recording secretary Marjorie Bateman told the members that during the year a new consitution had been approved and the name of the organization had been changed.

Approval of the purchase of a mammograph at the cost of $30,000 was made. The purchase of a gastroscope and I.V.A.C. were major expenditures of the year, she said.

Mrs. Bateman reported that 400 puppets were made by nine committee members and placed in the pediatrics ward of the hospital during the year.

Volunteers who work in the hospital number 612, members of the auxiliary were told, and they donated 23,032 hours visiting 2,080 patients and distributing more than 5,000 books and more than 14,000 magazines.

In-hospital volunteers this year opened a Samaritan Cupboard in the chronic care unit providing pyjamas, robes, bed socks, lap robes, shawls and the like.

The Gift Shop sold more 1,129 sweet trees, baskets and arrangements completing a second successful year. The coffee shop, also two years old, expanded its service to include a coffee cart which services waiting rooms in emergency and radiology departments.

The group's largest fund-raiser, the opportunity shop, this year raised $13,700 for the auxiliary.

Aided by 4 States

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Honduran victims of Hurricane Fifi are being aided with clothing, supplies, medicine, tools plus more than $10,000 cash from the people of four U.S. states. Supplies and money were collected in Vermont, Louisiana, Oregon and Tennessee through the Partners of the Americas people-to-people organization which links U.S. states with Latin America.

Changing Over

Chairman Talks to Auxiliary

Carl Bateman, chairman of the board of governors of Belleville General Hospital, told members of the hospital auxiliary that Ontario faces future health costs of $1,000 per person per year unless checked.

"As a taxpayer, you and I have to agree that a system of checks and controls will have to be devised," he said.

Mr. Bateman outlined the health care system in Belleville and its changes over the last decade from a time when "the hospital was something less than a true credit to this community."

He told members of the auxiliary that public demand, the decision of the city and the county to provide a major share of capital costs and the introduction of a government sponsored insurance program all contributed to today's comprehensive health care system.

"There were many other related factors, of course, and these included a growing affluence, an increasing number of graduates in the medical and paramedical professions, an urbanizing society and an aging population. In any event and whatever the reason, today we have a much more sophisticated, comprehensive delivery and maintenance system than we had a very few years ago."

However, he pointed out, these changes are expensive.

Public education to change the habits — overeating, drinking and smoking — that contribute to high health care costs, will take time, he said, and in the mean time answers must be sought.

Mr. Bateman told the auxiliary that co-ordination of all related health delivery activities might be an answer, and suggested the creation of a health planning council which would include the hospital as a nucleus of a comprehensive system.

"Shared services, mergers, consolidations, health maintenance organization all have to be considered and I suggest the best vehicle to consider the total needs of the community may be a health planning council."

Social Notes

Michaud—McCoy

Kathryn Anne McCoy, of Ottawa, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCoy, was united in marriage to Gregory Lee Michaud, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Michaud, in St. Augustine Church, Ottawa, on December 28. After a honeymoon in Austria the newly-wed couple are residing in Ottawa.

She Found Her Past

NORWICH, Conn. (AP) — Barbara Faulkner found her past in the phone book.

After a 12-year search she stumbled upon her natural mother and her brothers and sisters right in her own town.

Barbara grew up in New Haven, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ives Sr.

She found out she was adopted at the age of 9 9when she ran home and asked: "Mommy, what's an adoption? The kids were talking about ti." Her mother explained it to her after dinner.

Not until she was 19 did she see papers with her original name, Sharon Lynn. "But what stunned me was that there were five other children. I wondered what they looked like. I wondered how many were brothers, how many were sisters. I wondered if they looked like me or had feelings like I had."

Although she knew she was born in a car on a California highway, she knew her natural mother had returned to New Haven. She concentrated her search there and continued it after her marriage to Leroy Faulkner. But it was in vain until the couple and their four children moved to Norwich to be closer to Leroy's job.

While visiting with new neighbors Mrs. Faulkner flipped through a telephone directory. "We were just getting acquainted, and as I joked that I was born on a California highway this name popped right out at me." It was her mother's unusual first name and middle initial.

She thought, "What will I do with this name? Shall I call and say, 'Hi. This is Sharon. You left me on a highway in California. Are you coming back for me? Should I joke about it? Should I cry?"

With the aid of her husband, they tracked down one of her natural brothers living in the Norwich area. Ten minutes later he was knocking at Mrs. Faulkner's door.

"It had been almost 30 years and he said he didn't want to wait another day. I showed him the papers I had and he showed me a picture of his mother."

Both brothers visited her the enxt night and explained that whenever they had asked about a "little girl" their mother put them off.

People and Events

REDNERSVILLE W I

The January meeting of the Rednersville Women's Institute took place at the home of Edith Cairns.

Plans were made for the 4-H club project. Clothes for Leisure. Albury club leaders are Fay Wetherall and Jean Hawley, and Centre-Victoria leaders are Laura MacDonald and Edith Cairns.

During a discussion of possible ways of making money for the branch, Audra Brickman told of Rednersville W.I. and volunteers making 189 quilts for overseas during the Second World War.

Frances Young gave a cultural program, opening with several songs and then speaking about art shows in Picton and Belleville libraries.

An English illustrator, William H. Bartlett, was the subject of Mrs. Young's talk. Since he sketched scenes along the water routes from the east coast to Niagara during his visit to Canada in 1838, many of his sketches were of places in this area.

Mrs. Young also talked about Corneilius Kreighoff, another artist who chose Canadian scenes as his subjects.

To close the meeting, members read two poems by Edgar A. Guest, and then lunch and a social hour followed.

TWEED HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

The January meeting of the Tweed and District Horticultural Society was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wood, where the members were shown slides of Mr. Wood's moose-hunting trips in the Kapaskasing area.

On behalf of the nominating committee, Jenny Moffat read the list of officers for the coming year: Mary Wilson, president; S.H. Connor, vice-president; treasurer, Grace Parks; Mrs. Moffat and Fran Harris, auditors; Irene Brough, Hazel Connor, Blanche Countryman, Edith Griffin, Jane Hughes, Fran Harris, Rita Holmes, Irene Lynn, Arthur McCarey and Harold Varty, directors.

Prior to the meeting, several members called at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R.S. Berry of Tweed, to admire the dieffenbachia which has five spikes ready to bloom.

Poste—Kerr

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Trenton, was the scene of the December 28th service which united Susan Patricia Kerr and Kenneth Aubrey Poste in marriage. Rev. D. Wilson performed the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kerr, Belleville, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Poste, Trenton. Following the wedding a dinner was held at the Four Seasons.

Window Cleaner

EDMONTON (CP) — Bertha Holden goes to great heights to achieve her goal of letting sun into people's lives. The 62-year-old spinster has been in the window-cleaning business for 22 years, often working as high as 16 stories.

School Cut Short

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Students at St. John's College received an unexpected holiday when they were sent home early. The boiler which supplies heat to classrooms went off during the night because of dirty nozzles. School principal Rev. J. L. Shanks said that Brant County Roman Catholic separate school board policy is that if the temperature is not at least 60 degrees by 10 a.m. classes can be dismissed.

Toronto Artists Plan Festival

TORONTO (CP) — A group of prominent Toronto women artists, writers and entertainers has asked the federal government for $150,000 to stage a festival promoting women and the arts this year.

Unveiling plans Monday, the women said that so far as their requests for federal assistance have gone unheeded, but they had been given some assurance by at least one Liberal member of Parliament that some funds would be available for the project.

The festival is planned to mark United Nation's International Women's Year 1975. The group's idea is to promote women artists both professional and non-professional in an effort to show the cultural contribution they are making in Canada.

Gloria Heller, festival co-ordinator said that "our goal is to celebrate the achievements and creativity of women with special emphasis on the often ignored and undervalued grass roots elements of the lives of people generally, and of women in particular."

John Roberts, member of Parliament for the Toronto riding of St. Paul's, who has taken a personal interest in the women's project, said he was hopeful adequate federal funding would be available for the festival.

"I'm confident there will be funding, especially as the government is taking a second look at its original plan to hold regional conferences across the country," he said. "That idea wasn't acceptable to Canadian women, therefore I think the government will want to support the sort of projects women want to do."

The federal government announced last April it would hold a series of national and regional conferences and a public information and education campaign for women.

But women across the country criticized the plan saying it would be a repeat of the royal commission on the status of women. Instead, they asked the government to use those funds for special projects initiated by women.

The Toronto group plans to hold a month-long exhibition of the visual arts, an historical display of women and the arts in Canada, events in the performing arts, workshops, lectures and cultural seminars.

Among well - known Canadian women lending their names and talents to the festival are folk singer Sylvia Tyson; artist Maryon Kantaroff; Doris Anderson, editor of Chatelaine magazine, and television producer Margo Lane.

The festival will begin with a special women in the arts week May 31 to June 8 in Toronto.

Ann Landers

Ann Thinks Atheist Immature

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the girl who had read her little sister's diary and wrote, "Sis and her boy friend are involved in some very heavy petting. What's even worse, my sister's boy friend does not believe in God."

I am a 16-year-old atheist and I'm not ashamed of it. Atheism is not evil, nor is it immoral, it's just another way of thinking. Some of my best friends are either atheists or they seriously doubt the existence of God. I did not choose them as friends because of this common bond. They are decent, honest people. They don't use drugs and they've never been in trouble with the police.

Atheists do not want or need help in becoming Christians. I feel God is just a crutch and even though H is comforting to others I cannot use Him.

Please print this letter, Ann. I've never seen anything in your column about atheists and I think it's about time.—Not Ashamed

Dear Not Ashamed: I respect your right to be an atheist, but I would not be surprised if you changed your mind by the time you reach adulthood. Sixteen is a tender age to make such a big decision.

You say, "God is just a crutch and you cannot use Him." None of us knows when we will break a leg and need not one crutch—but two.

Speaking strictly for myself, I can't imagine excluding God from my life. I need all the help I can get. So do you, dear, but you don't know it—yet.

Dear Ann Landers: Here is my bit of Monday-morning quarterbacking for some young guys out there who are playing some pretty risky games without knowing the turf, the score, or the league. I learned the hard way.

If you don't want children, don't order any. Sounds crazy? Well, get smart. There are from 500 million to two billion sperm in a single male ejaculation.

When you go to bed with a girl, if she is anywhere from 13 to 42, the order might be filled. Never mind what she says about the precautions she has taken. She could be lying, uninformed or just plain mistaken. The result may be an unexpected, ill-timed, loveless marriage. I know because—It Happened To Me

Dear You: It has also happened to millions of others. Thank you for putting it into a few crisp, well-chosen words. (Are you listening, students?)

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago a woman entered my husband's life and caused me no end of grief. She took my husband away. I was so full of hate I spent almost every waking hour wishing she was dead. I really believed that if I wished hard enough it would happen.

Within seven months that woman died of a broken blood vessel in her head. They called it an aneurysm. She had never been sick a day in her life. It was totally unexpected.

My husband came back to me and I accepted him. It wasn't easy but we were able to make a go of it. Then six months later, my brother dropped dead of the very same thing. Now I am so filled with guilt I am miserable. I think God is paying me back. Please say something to help—Wretched and Grieving

Dear Friend: God doesn't "pay people back." Both deaths were a coincidence. Your wishing the woman dead had nothing to do with her dying. Your brother's fatal aneurysm would have occurred regardless.

I suggest counselling—either by your clergyman or a therapist. You must get this monkey off your back or you'll crack up. Get going.

Doris Clark

Life Is Like a Rainbow, Beautiful But Incomplete

I am blind and I have never seen a rainbow, but I have been told of its beauty. I know that its beauty is always broken and incomplete. Never does it stretch across the heavens in full perfection.

So it is with all things as we know them here below. Life itself is as imperfect and broken for every one of us as the span of the rainbow.

Not until we have taken the step from life into Eternity shall we understand the meaning of Browning's words: "On the earth the broken arcs; in the heaven, a perfect round."

Helen Keller.

Dear Doris: I happened to open an old billfold of my husband's and in it were pictures of his old girl friends. I asked him why he kept them and he said he wasn't worried about them being there.

Why do you think he has kept these pictures all these years? The last one is married now and he knows where she lives. We have been married one year and we have a baby boy four months old. My husband is not the kind to chase other women. I'm 25 and he's 44. He said if anything ever happened to me it would be like the end of the world for him.

Do you think I'm -

A Jealous Fool?

Dear Fool: Yes, I do. You got your man, didn't you? Have you no fond memories of early romances you would hesitate to wash out of memory?

There is something about snapshots which bring back youthful happy times, and this may be particularly the case in a man who is older.

When you have been married a little longer you will be a little older and a little more mature too. You will gain the poise which will put such thoughts as yours into their proper perspective. Meanwhile, forget it.

YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR HUSBAND!

"If only Tom didn't drink so much . . ." "If Dick would just stop worrying about money . . ." "If Harry would pay more attention to the children . . ." Marriage counselor's offices are full of wives asking how they can get their husbands to change. And full of husbands who have the same question about their wives! Do your mate's habits sometimes make you furious? He can be changed, say family counselors—but first you must make some changes in yourself! Read how YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR HUSBAND. Some Advice and Answers

As one gets to know people in this column, one learns more about their personal attitudes towards many things. For example, Clint Vader, owner of Vader's Car Sales, 142 North Front St. (at the corner of College) has some good advice about 1975. He thinks that frightened approach to 75 isn't going to get anyone anywhere. In his words, "75 will be only as good as we make it." And he's right. That's also why Vader's have ordered more 75 Datsuns which they can sell to you with 74 savings. If you need a good new car and at savings, do something about it now. Now isn't the time to do "nothing". Thanks Clint.

New Number

If you've been calling the telephone number I gave you for Superior TV, 103 Cannifton Road, (and I'm sure you have after all the great things I've told you about them), you have been getting one of Bell's charming representatives telling you the number has been changed. It has. It's now 962-9516. And now that we have that matter cleared up, we can go on to the goodies — in this case Superior TV's sale of 75 Fleetwood and Hatashi TVs and Nordmende AM-FM radios and cassettes. Superior TV's sale prices are: A Nordmende AM-FM small radio for $34.95 or an AM-FM radio with cassette for $99.95. There's a whole bunch of great numbers.

Saying Goodbye to January

I don't know whether it's true with you or not, but for me and my friends, January has been a real downer of a month. Even if things went right, they were tinged with grey it seemed. Well, here's a remedy — dinner in a mansion at Inn on the Bay Tavern in Picton. This is the most pleasant way I can think of to spit in January's eye and start February off on the right foot too. Call 476-3114 for reservations So there January!

Carpet Jambourée

Wray's Home Furnishers, 306 Front St., have decided to take the matter of pre-spring, mid-winter blues and do something about them — something nice like a carpet sale. Wray's carry a fine range of manufacturers, textures, colors and fibres. And they also have their own staff of carpet installers. Waiting for spring isn't going to get the job done and it's not ging to make you feel better about achieving something. See Wray's now. Do something. They'll throw in the smile for free.

Fantastic Reductions

Now, most times when I see that phrase in any advertising, I'm somewhat suspicious. But here I am using the term myself. And I'm using this term in connection with Studio 231 at 231 Front St. because it applies. A 50% reduction on all winter clothing can be and is classed under "fantastic reductions". You have such manufacturers from which to choose as "Mr. Leonard" and "Jonathan Logan". The merchandise is good; the style is good, and the prices are great. Go and see for yourself.

"The Whole Works"

That's how Mrs. Sherwood of the Tropical Garden Pet Shop, 301½ Front St. describes the store's collection of aquarium equipment and this weekend the Tropical Garden Pet Shop will be receiving a new shipment of many different fish varieties. So, novice fish-appreciator, now is your time to get started. (Parents please note: pets aren't permitted home without parents' consent). And you fish enthusiasts can get down to the Tropical Garden and see what's new for you too.

Who Says So?

Who says you can't have aluminum doors and windows installed in February? Well, Belleview Glass and Mirror, 354 Pinnacle St. says you can. It takes only about a half an hour to put on a new aluminum window which will take care of March, lamb or lion, quite nicely. And then comes April and May, and "no more of the storm window" on and off struggle". You'll be all ready for spring, summer and next winter, all in one step! Why don't you start being a winter and summer winner with some help from the people at Belleview Glass. Call 968-7531 and start winning.

Just What's Involved

This week I asked Gord Roblin of Gord Roblin Real Estate, 117 North Front St., just what is involved in getting one's house sold The first thing you do is call one of the salespersonnel at the Gord Roblin office: 968-6475. The salesman will come and look at your house and estimate its market value. Then you will sign a listing agreement. Your home will then be advertised and prospective buyers who would be interested in your home are shown through. Financing can also be arranged. You pay nothing for these services. Gord Roblin Real Estate has to sell your house for you before you pay anything. Advertising is their responsibility. You just sit back and let Gord Roblin handle everything.

Somewhere to Go

When I called Sidney Inn this week, I was told owner Al Whitney was sick. I fear he has lots of company, for we seem to be in our peak flu season. But it just so happens that Sidney Inn doesn't keep drug store hours, right? It's open every night until 11 p.m. so when you feel headachie, and bones and muscles you never knew existed start aching and groaning, you know where to go — the Sidey Inn. They've got name-brand cold treatments, and lots of fruit juices and tea bags — everything but a bed and a doctor. You'll have to handle those yourselves. Get better soon, too, won't you?

Cancer Socially Unacceptable In Today's Society Is Claim

MONTREAL (CP) — Cancer . . . the evil eye.

The two concepts are not far apart in the supposedly sophisticated society of 1975, says Dr. Phil Gold, co-discoverer of a new test for cancer.

Dr. Gold told a reporter that grief surrounding cancer is in a class by itself because—unlike heart disease, for instance—cancer remains a "socially unacceptable" disease.

"People don't want to talk about it," said the 38-year-old scientist-physician. "They call it by a variety of terms. It seems almost as though the evil eye has to be warded off if you say the bad word."

That is one reason why Dr. Gold wants lay people to know more about the "unfolding story" of the war against cancer:

"It is unfortunate that in most minds cancer remains a terminal illness despite the fact that it is curable in many instances."

Statisticians say that medical science can cure nearly one of every two cancer victims and the key to successful treatment is early detection.

This is the field in which a major contribution was made by Dr. Gold, senior "investigator" of the division of clinical immunology at Montreal General Hospital, professor of medicine and physiology at McGill University and senior physician in the department of medicine.

Phil Gold was only 26 and an intern in 1963 when he and Dr. Samuel O. Freedman, director of the immunology clinic, began the experiments that resulted in the first blood test for cancer.

By 1965 the Gold-Freedman team demonstrated by immunological techniques that a substance known as CEA—carcino-embryonic antigen—is present in cancerous bowel cells, pinpointing for the first time a constituent of cancer cells that does not exist in normal tissues.

An antigen is a substance that stimulates production of antibodies and, strangely, CEA is known otherwise only in normal human embryos, vanishing before birth and not reappearing during normal healthy life.

Why did the discovery of CEA in cancer take place here?

Dr. Gold, a Montrealer of energetic, outgoing personality, said he was fortunate to have worked at McGill as a graduate student in physiology under Dr. Arnold Burgen, now director of Britain's Medical Research Council.

"I have always been interested in the investigative aspect of things and probably would have stayed on in research but Dr. Burgen suggested I should gain some background in medicine," said Dr. Gold.

"As an intern at the Montreal General I attended two evening lectures in rapid succession. I heard at one of them that after all those years of research we still did not know what was different about a cancer cell.

"In the second lecture, someone discussed the phenomenon of immunologic tolerance, which was then new and exciting. The penny dropped. It seemed to me that the phenomenon might be applied to the investigation of cancer."

He took the idea to Dr. Freedman, immunologist at the hospital, and that was the beginning of a fruitful professional and personal friendship.

"Dr. Freedman thought the idea might be feasible and from that time forward, the project came into being," said Dr. Gold.

"We asked ourselves: Is there some component, function, constituent, in the tumor cell that distinguishes it from the normal cell from which it presumably comes? Scientists had looked at this problem through innumerable other techniques but the immunologic approach seemed promising because it is oriented toward specific things.

"We then asked ourselves: If we immunize rabbits with normal and tumor tissues under different circumstances, will the antibodies that these animals produce show us something specific about the tumor system that is absent from the normal system?

"In other words, we raised antibodies in animals against the tumor cells, then used the antibodies as a probe to point out or identify their corresponding antigens. That is how we found CEA.

"Then we asked: Is there any situation where the tumor cell releases this CEA into the blood? To our complete surprise, after several years of work, we did find this material in the blood circulation. Again the penny dropped: My God, since we can find this stuff in the circulation, is it of any value for testing people for tumors, and testing them particularly after tumors have been removed? Will the CEA go away? Will it come back before the patient has clinical recurrence of a tumor?"

It was in 1969 that Gold and Freedman—joined by Dr. D. M. P. Thomson—observed CEA in the bloodstream and began devising blood tests to detect the presence of cancer before traditional signs of the disease appeared.

"Hundreds and perhaps thousands of laboratories now are doing the tests in various parts of the world," Dr. Gold reported.

They use various forms of technology, the most widespread probably being an "assay" kit produced by Hoffma-La Roche Ltd. and marketed since early last year.

Dr. Gold said it now appears the test in its various forms will pick up evidence of cancer in such areas as the breast and lung as well as the bowels.

"It is not too much to hope that over the next few years, wih a better understanding of the chemistry of the molecules with which we work, we will be able to specify whether it is a bowel tumor antigen, a lung tumor antigen or a breast tumor antigen. It is an unfolding story."

Trials conducted co-operatively by the National Cancer Institute of Canada and the American Cancer Society confirmed the validity of the test, amid predictions that the discovery would merit the Nobel Prize.

Dr. P. G. Scholefield, assistant director of the Canadian institute, told a reporter in a telephone interview from his Toronto office that "what Phil Gold and Sam Freedman have done is open up a new avenue of research against cancer."

But Dr. Scholefield said the institute has no present plans to conduct a national study—as proposed by Dr. Gold—to determine how far in advance of clinical evidence the CEA blood test can spot a recurrence of cancer.

The institute, financed largely through public donations, had no plans beyond a followup of some patients involved in the original evaluation study.

Dr. Gold described this field as the "most exciting application of the CEA test at the moment" and he reported recurrence of the disease has been detected by blood tests from two weeks to 10 months before clinical evidence.

A national study might establish how quickly a recurrence can be determined by biochemical means and whether this would permit better treatment of patients.

In what percentage of cancer cases is the CEA test effective?

"We know that over-all, if we take the three important areas, bowels, breast and lung, we can pick up all types of cancer—local and disseminated—to about 80 per cent," said Dr. Gold.

Within the other 20 per cent, the test sometimes misses an actual tumor and sometimes gives positive readings where there is, in fact, only a liver disease.

Dr. Gold said another question of profound importance is the biological function of CEA. Such knowledge might enable scientists to block the antigen's action—and perhaps cure cancer.

Tourists Returning

Visitors stroll past the Old City in Havana, dating back to the days when irates sailed the Caribbean. Tourism in Cuba is becoming major industry again for the first time since the 1959 revolution. An estimated 12,000 Canadians will visit Cuba this winter and those who expect all the conveniences of the Bahamas or Hawaii might be disappointed but the price is right— Tours cost about $330 a person for one week, including hotel meals and return air fare from Montreal or Toronto. (CP Photo)

Tourism Returns

Holiday in Cuba Demands Change in Some Attitudes

HAVANA (CP) — Tourism is returning as a major industry in Cuba, but visitors are discovering that a holiday here involves a change of attitude.

An estimated 12,000 Canadians will fly to the Caribbean island this winter and those who expect all the conveniences of the Bahamas or Hawaii may be disappointed.

Havana, a city of about two million people, is run down and its hotels are somewhat the worse for wear. The paint is peeling, the drapery is soiled and old and toilet seats, basin plugs and other fixtures often are missing.

They have not been maintained at the level of the pre-1959 revolution days when Cuba, with its Mafia-controlled casinos and entertainment, was the fleshpot of the Americas. However, they are clean and relatively comfortable.

Facilities at Varadero, a former millionaires' hangout 84 miles east of Havana, are considered better and many Canadian tour groups stay there.

Those who have holidayed in Cuba recently report some small discomforts but say the splendid winter climate, sun-bleached beaches and unpolluted ocean are adequate compensation.

Also, the price is right. Tours cost about $330 a person for one week, including hotel, meals and return air fare from Montreal or Toronto.

Visiting Cuba does require a different frame of mind and some advance planning.

The island has suffered shortages since the economic blockade against the Castro government. So, if you've forgotten something at home, it might be difficult to find in Cuba.

Anyone bent on a mad shopping spree can forget it. Small boutiques in the tourist hotels sell rum, liqueurs, tobacco and some souvenirs but there are no large stores glittering with consumer goods.

Twenty-six ounces of rum cost about $2 but cigars, once inexpensive, sell for $12 to $15 and up for 25.

Some tourists complain about the food, usually that it is not first class or that the selection is limited.

FORGET ABOUT STEAK

A typical hotel meal in Havana is cream soup, beer, fish steak, rice, local vegetable, and cheese and marmalade or rich Cuban ice cream. Chicken or pork ribs are substitutes for the fish and steak is scarce.

A meal like this costs $7 to $9.

Some Canadians say they have enjoyed excellent shrimp and lobster dishes, but the food seems to depend on what's available at the time.

Night life for the tourist is not as varied as in Canada but a lot of it is spectacular.

Havana's cabarets offer floor-show extravaganzas similar to those popular in Montreal night clubs 15 years ago. Chorus lines of girls, dressed in magnificent costumes, flow over the stage as a variety of singers and dancers entertain to the background music of Caribbean bands.

The Tropicana, in an outdoor paradise setting, probably is the most famous cabaret. It has layers of stages rising as high as 40 to 50 feet into the trees, and the lighting, special effects and costumes are dazzling.

During one Tropicana act, a thunderstorm over an Aztec village is simulated. It is complete with thunder, lightning and fog.

Cabarets at the Hotel Nacional and Havana Libre boast some of the better singing talent.

The Cubans are a happy, music-loving people and anywhere there's a band, there's plenty of dancing.

The cabarets serve mainly liquor. A Cuba libre, rum and cola, costs about $1.50. Beer is about $1 a bottle, but many places stop selling it at 5 p.m.

There are bars with entertainment ranging from a singing pianist to small bands or guitar trios playing Spanish music. Some bars are deliberately dark and waiters use matches to guide patrons to their tables.

Aside from the delights of the beaches and the night life, entertainment is dependent on what the Canadian tour companies are able to organize. Rental cars are not available and taxis and buses are difficult to find, restricting individual sightseeing.

There's some red tape involved in a trip to Cuba. Customs forms are in Spanish and passports are taken away and returned later.

A slip of white paper is given to anyone exchanging dollars for Cuban pesos bearing the amount received. Bars, restaurants and boutiques often will ask for this so the amount spent can be subtracted from the total. The form must be handed in when exchanging pesos for dollars.

This is a check against tourists who might want to sell clothing or other goods to Cubans. If a tourist's form shows he received 100 pesos, spent 50 and he has 125 to exchange back for dollars, he's in trouble with the authorities.

The rate of exchange is simple: $1 Canadian equals 83 centavos and 100 centavos equals one peso.

There are a few other points that tour organizers try to impress on Canadian tourists. They warn against taking pictures of restricted areas such as Revolution Square military installations, harbors and airports.

Also, children on the streets pester for pens, candy and gum and the organizers say tourists should not give them anything.

One tour company reminds its clients that they are among the first North Americans to visit Cuba in many years. It asks that they consider themselves ambassadors and avoid any activity that might bring them into dispute with the law.

Havana Antique Car Capital of All World

HAVANA (CP) — Remember the old 1956 Ford hardtops with the custom continental kits, the tasselled window decorations and purple love lights?

Or, how about the ones with the glass roof panels for letting in the sunshine? And the sleek 1952 Buicks that everyone thought were close to the ultimate in luxury?

Well, they're all here in what is becoming the antique car capital of the world. Not only are they here, but they're still purring, chugging or groaning along on their everyday chores.

Since Fidel Castro's 1959 revolution ended friendly relations with the United States, there have been no imports of cars from the U.S.

This and the advent of Communist government on the island meant that people had to make do with pre-1959 models. They've kept them on the road one way or another, be it with They've kept them on the road one way or another, be it with hay wire or a piece of tin salvaged from a scrap yard.

Some of the old clunkers run admirably but breakdowns are common. Service stations aren't as available as in Canada and every owner appears to be a mechanic with at least enough knowledge and inventiveness to keep his own model going.

No one worries about paint jobs or interiors. A good car is one with an engine that runs and brakes that work.

The majority of the old cars are early-and mid-1950s models. Buicks and Oldsmobiles seem to have hellz;8f,;t-l but there also are plenty of Dodges and Plymouths around.

Visitors immediately are struck by the sight of so many old machines. After a few days, however, the relics of the past become a part of everyday life.

Remarked one Canadian tourist:

"Kind of makes me wonder how I got talked into trading in my 1969 Chev last fall!"

This relic from the past is part of everyday life in Cuba. The 1959 revolution ended trade with the United States and people had to make do with pre-1959 autos. Paint jobs or interiors are unimportant, as long as the cars run. (CP Photo)

Affects Heart

VANCOUVER (CP) — Even if one doesn't smoke, the presence of smokers nearby presents a danger to health, a heart specialist said here. Dr. Arthur Dodek, a Vancouver cardiologist, said "smoking is not only personal, but public pollution." He said smoking made the blood "more sticky," possibly an explanation for sudden heart attacks among young smokers.

Oil Pipeline Spills Are Unusually High

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Canadian and United States government agencies are investigating an unusually high spill rate on the oil pipeline between Alberta and Ontario.

In a Washington story by Ross H. Munro, the newspaper says the agencies' investigations were prompted by six pipe ruptures that have spilled more than five million gallons of crude oil on to the ground in Alberta and Minnesota during the last 17 months.

Pickering Airport Report Is Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet is expected to begin deciding today whether to accept the recommendations of a federal inquiry into proposals to build a second Toronto-area airport at Pickering, Ont.

Transport Minister Jean Marchand told reporters Wednesday that he thinks the report of the inquiry, headed by Mr. Justice Hugh Gibson of the Federal Court, will be before the regular weekly cabinet meeting Thursday.

If a decision is made, both the decision and the report would be made available to Parliament.

"My inclination is not to release the report until a decision has been made by cabinet," said Mr. Marchand.

Meanwhile, radio station CHUM in Toronto says the inquiry commission will recommend the building of an airport at Pickering, plus an expansion of Toronto International Airport. Pickering is on the eastern fringe of Toronto.

Since the government announced plans and expropriated property for a Pickering airport, there has been bitter controversy. The commission was established last year to investigate all aspects of the proposal.

The radio station report said the commission will recommend that a third terminal be established at Toronto's airport, along with another runway, to handle growing traffic until the new airport is ready in about 10 years.

Scouts Plan to Plant 40,000 Trees in Quinte District

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

The scouting movement in Belleville will be contributing to the greening of the Quinte area this year.

This comes about through the Trees for Canada program by which the city's beavers, cubs and scouts hope to plant about 40,000 trees in a 40-acre area in Hastings county.

Fran Moon, chairman of the seven-member committee which met for the first time Wednesday night in Corbyville, said she hopes the community will get involved in the venture.

Trees for Canada is a national project designed with four objectives: Reforesting Canada and reclaiming waste areas; involving boys in the outdoors and furthering an awareness of the need for conservation; providing an opportunity for boys to be involved in community service and to raise funds for scouting.

The trees, consisting mainly of red pine or blue spruce depending on the soil conditions of the particular area, will be provided by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

The exact location of the area to be planted was not announced at Wednesday's meeting other than that it would be in a conservation area. A future meeting has been set up for sometime in March for additional discussion.

Mrs. Moon said a day called "Dig Day" would be set aside once the ground is ready for planting sometime in May in which all the scouts, beavers and cubs armed with a spade and water would plant the trees.

The boys would be paired up and it is hoped that each boy could plant between 60 to 65 trees. said Mrs. Moon. There will be supervision from scout leaders, parents and the Conservation Authority.

Attending Wednesday night's meeting were Jon Johnson, a resource manager with the Moira River Conservation Authority and Alex Denies, with the ministry of natural resources from Tweed.

Mr. Johnson termed the idea an 'excellent' one.

"I think this is a worthwhile project and we are behind it 100 per cent. It's good for scouts to have the experience of being outdoors planting trees."

The tree planting scheme in Belleville will involve the scouts collecting pledges for each tree planted. Money raised will go towards such activities as sending scouts to Jamborees, two scouts from the Belleville area will be attending the world-wide jamboree in Norway, and to help provide training sessions for leaders at a province-operated camp at Blue Springs.

Mrs. Moon said: "I think this is the greatest project that Belleville District Council (of Boy Scouts) can get involved in. It doesn't matter how many trees are planted, the important thing is that everyone is going out in one unit to do this thing together, cubs, beavers, scouts, parents and leaders.

In Belleville, there are about 600 boys involved in the scouting movement and well over 100 leaders.

Brant Says Bylaw Will Control Reserve Growth

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TYENDINAGA — A bylaw which bans public use of Tyendinaga reserve buildings without council approval and puts far-ranging control of private homes in council's hands added fuel to the fires of unrest here Wednesday night.

At a general meeting of the Tyendinaga Reserve, Band Council Chief William Brant was told by dissident Mohawks the controversial bylaw passed in mid-January is "dictatorial."

Brant Maracle, spokesman for the dissident group, said the bylaw "infringes on personal rights."

"This bylaw gives council the power to regulate the use of public buildings and private homes and I'm not willing to grant council that power," said Mr. Maracle.

The focus of the bylaw is the controlled use of public buildings — council's answer to frequent meetings of Mr. Maracle's group which has battled council since the announcement of Tyendinaga Mohawks Ltd., a reserve corporation producing shoe parts for Bata Footwear.

With this bylaw in effect, the group will not be allowed to use the reserve community centre without council authorization.

In the control of private homes, Chief Brant explained the bylaw as being similar to residential maintenance bylaws.

He said the bylaw provides council with the power of asking homeowners to maintain the appearance of their buildings.

"It's a bylaw for the protection of the people," said the chief.

While protest mounted at the meeting, Chief Brant told the group. "You have the right to challenge it in court."

As protesters continued to argue the points of the bylaw, one homeowner blamed the protesters for bringing the bylaw into the reserve.

Referring to fall protests over the corporation, Chief Brant agreed and said, "If it hadn't have been for the events of the past, we might not have had this law."

In comment following the meeting, Chief Brant said there is a tremendous amount of people coming back to live on the reserve.

"This bylaw is necessary to keep subsequent growth in perspective," he said. The bylaw will tend to control where homes and industry may locate, similar to a zoning bylaw.

"We can't operate without some changes."

Dissidents, whom the chief estimated at approximately 20 per cent of the reserve's population, gave no indication what course they now will follow. One saying, "we have to break the law and get thrown into jail before we can test the bylaw in court."

Chief Brant said, "we intend enforcing the bylaw," which carries a 30-day jail term and or a $100 fine for offenders.

Happy Huskies

Jane Burrell of Centre Street appears to listen attentively as one of her Siberian Huskies tries to get a canine point across. Jane and her husband Bob plan to race their four huskies at the Gravenhurst winter fair this weekend and have won points in dog shows. The huskie team also provides an alternative to snowmobiling.

Meals on Time

School buses took children home early, night classes were cancelled and meetings delayed Wednesday when snow and sleet turned city streets into icy strips.

But at least one group — besides the storied postmen — struggled through to complete their tasks.

They were Belleville's Meals On Wheels volunteers who managed to get to Victoria Avenue Baptist Church to prepare 52 hot meals for the elderly and then deliver them hot and on time.

The women who shopped and cooked were Carol Soble, Mary Bird, Grace Sprackett, Myrna Clark and Evelyn Knudsen.

Drivers who braved the streets to deliver the meals were Julie DeWart, James Ritchie, Ken Matthews, Frank Mulrooney and May Brown.

The meals on wheels program is run by Wilhelmina DeBoer and Joan McCullogh.

Couple Takes Huskies Over Snowmobiles

Walking the dog is no common nightly chore for Bob and Jane Burrell.

Their household pets need a good run — about three miles — and the Burrells live in the city.

The couple are owners of Siberian Huskies, now popular for both the gentle refinements of dog shows and the rougher demands of sled-racing.

There's also something else about the breed says Bob: "They just love a real, rugged good run. They need it."

This could be a problem living in the city.

But the Burrells are fortunate. Their home is the last house at the end of Centre St. on the flanks of the city's northeast industrial park. Right beside them, sits 22-acre field slated for — but still awaiting — residential development.

When they bought their first husky pup three years ago to start their current count of four Siberians, the Burrells solved the exercise problem by leasing the field.

So, now each night when the 32-year-old printer returns home, the Siberians are hitched to a 7-lb. runner sled and taken round a three-mile trail in the field.

Jane also has been lucky in exhibiting the Siberians in dog shows where they won championship points.

The dog team also gives the couple an alternative to snowmobile travelling. They're hopeful of using the Quinte-Hastings Recreational Trail for longer, outdoor runs.

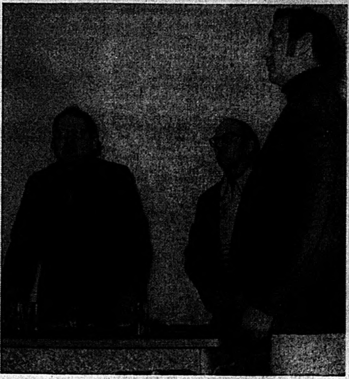
'I like snowmobiling, but I think it's going to become expensive," said Bob.

His wife has another reason. The Siberians—not to be confused with Arctic huskies which are a hybrid rougher breed — have their own characteristics that encourages communication between pet and owner.

"You can't talk to a machine," said Jane.

The Subject Is Salmon

More than 30 fisheries experts have gathered at the Glenora Fisheries Research Station to discuss the future of Pacific salmon stocking programs in the Great Lakes. The meetings opened today and will continue through Friday. Among those taking part are Dr. Larry McDermott, department of microbiology, University of Guelph; James W. Warren, fish pathologist, U.S. fish and wildlife service, Genoa, Wisconsin; E. W. Burridge, fisheries and marine service of the federal department of environment, Ottawa, also a member of the Great Lakes Fisheries Commission and William A. Pierce, supervisor, Great Lakes Fisheries, New York State department of environment and conservation, Cape Vincent, N.Y.



Bylaw Debated

Tyendinaga reserve residents protested a council bylaw Wednesday night which gives council broad powers over public and private buildings. Discussing the document are (left) Chief William Brant, Councilman Elwood Brant and Councilman Clell Maracle.

Lecture on Meditation Stirs Local Interest

About 25 people attended an introductory lecture in transcendental meditation at Moira Secondary School Wednesday, sponsored by the International Meditation Society.

Linda Bullock of the society's Kingston centre outlined general aspects of the technique which she said can dissolve stresses built up through pressures of the everyday world.

Those interested in continuing with the course can attend another free public preparation lecture at Quinte Secondary School Friday, 8 p.m., in Room 210.

Following the lecture, they can sign up for the course which will run initially Saturday through Tuesday at QSS. All fees for the basic two-year course go to spreading the technique of transcendental mediation, commonly referred to as TM.

The fees are 50 for high school students, 60 for colleges or university students, $115 for adults (non-students) and $180 for families.

The society is chartered by the federal government as a non-profit educational organization. It has centres throughout the world, including 90 in Canada and 500 teachers.

It was founded in 1966 by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, who has personally trained all teachers.

Belleville instructor Jytte Hansen, a student at Loyalist College esimates there are almost 50 meditators in the Quinte area.

Thurlow Rescue Unit Frees Trapped Woman

A rescue unit from Thurlow Township worked for 15 minutes trying to free a woman trapped in a car following a two-car collision on Highway 14, near Stirling, Wednesday.

Gwen Logie, 48, of RR 5, Campbellford — a passenger in a car driven by Audrey Brown, 50, of the same address, is in satisfactory condition today at Belleville General Hospital with a fractured pelvis.

Bob Pearce, captain of the Quinte Rescue Squad, said he and two members of the squad had to resort to a cutting torch to remove the car door freeing the woman.

Driver of the other vehicle, John Patrick McGrath, 27, of Dundas St. W. in Napanee was treated and released from hospital. Mrs. Brown was uninjured in the mishap.

The Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the accident occurred about 10.30 a.m. Wednesday on ice-covered Oak Hill on Highway 14, two miles south of Stirling. They added that total damage to both vehicles amounted to about $2,000.

Damage Minor

TWEED — William Winstanley 16, of RR 2, Stirling has been charged with careless driving following an accident Wednesday at White's Service Station in Thomasburgh, seven miles south of Tweed.

Earl Beatty of Thomasburg was scraping ice from his car, parked on the service station lot when a truck pulling into the station, bore down on him. Mr. Beatty jumped out of the way and escaped injury. Damage to the Winstanley truck was $200 and to the car was $100.

Realtors Want to Upgrade Trade

Stiffer requirements should be imposed on would-be real estate salesmen, says Phil Bennett, president of the Quinte and District Real Estate Association.

"We (realtors) are trying to upgrade the industry by making it more difficult to enter," said Mr. Bennett in an interview Wednesday.

The quality of people coming into the business would improve through "stiffer requirements," he said. "Salesmen have to be knowledgeable in all aspects of the business including pertinent provincial, federal and municipal regulations," he said.

The move for more "professionalism" in the real estate industry goes hand-in-hand with the thinking of regional vice-president Bill Lowry, who said recently in Belleville, "the industry is facing the most crucial year in its history."

"We are being watched more closely than ever by the consumer and government," he told a meeting of the Quinte association.

Touching off the vigorous interest in the trade is an association request to the province for self-regulatory powers.

"We want the power to regulate ourselves," said Mr. Bennett. "Essentially, we want to handle our own problem."

At present, the Ontario Real Estate Association monitors the province's real estate industry but if self-regulatory powers were granted, "the association would have more control," said Mr. Bennett.

In a draft proposal to the province which now is under discussion, the Ontario association follows the guidelines set down for professional groups such as engineers and calls for a 29-member council to administrate the business.

By self-regulation, "this doesn't mean we'd be out from under the gun," said Mr. Bennett. On the council would be 11 appointees of the province's Lieutenant-Governor. The Lieutenant-Governor would have final approval power according to draft outlines submitted by the industry.

This council, with 18 licensed realtors, would establish "comprehensive disciplinary educational and ethical requirements for the industry." As a preamble to self-regulation, a completely re-vamped educational system is being arranged for July, "to indicate professional thinking,' said association vice - president Gord Roblin.

New people coming into the industry will first go through a 30-hour program — serving as an initial applicant screening device — followed by two, 60-hour courses.

Standard Lays Off 12 More Workers

Belleville's Standard Paper Box Company laid off 12 workers this week, bringing to 16 the number of employees laid off since November, superintendent Miro Tretina said Wednesday.

The company — one of the newest arrivals on Belleville's industrial scene, in operation for a year — employs 28 people in the manufacture of corrugated packaging.

Mr. Tretina said the layoff is "temporary" and that employees would be called back as required.

He said "a general decrease in demand for packaging" was behind the layoffs.

"We are really feeling the pinch on orders from companies connected with the automotive industry," he said. The Belleville firm produces packaging for automotive replacement parts.

He said the slowdowns at Northern Electric and Picton's Proctor Lewytt also are significantly affecting his firm's business.

Bennett Critical Of Bill

Phil Bennett, president of the Quinte and District Real Estate Association said Wednesday area realtors will continue to oppose the province's controversial Bill C-55, a bill said to take away "a seller's rights".

The bill, if passed, would allow a real estate purchaser to back out of a deal with only 24 hours notice.

On Monday, the bill was tabled by the government — the result of strong realtor opposition. "All the realtors got hold of their legislative members last Friday," said Mr. Bennett.

"The bill is absolutely stupid," he said.

"Such a bill would impeach the seller's rights," said Mr. Bennett, during a telephone interview. "It would be a massive, retrograde step to pass such a piece of legislation."

Mr. Bennett said the association will "absolutely oppose the bill and lobby legislative members whenever the bill re-appears".

Moderator Guest Speaker

Dr. Hugh F. Davidson, MA, DD, Moderator of the 100th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada was the speaker recently at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Belleville.

The evening was in conjunction with the 216th Birthday Anniversary of Robert Burns and was under the auspices of the Centennial Committee and the Women's Guild of St. Andrew's.

Dr. Davidson spoke to 170 people on the mission of the church, current politics and current culture.

He said, "All religion comes from the same root, but varies in the fruit" and he called for a strengthening of religions to get back to the root.

The evening was called a Burn's Supper which consisted of the old Scottish tradition of piping in the Haggis which was done by Doug Burns of Belleville, with the address to the Haggis by Dr. Leslie Summers of Picton.

Car Stolen

City police are seeking a light blue 1973 Vega stolen from Trudeau Motors on Station St. sometime Wednesday.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said police have no leads on the car noticed missing at 5 p.m. from in front of the body shop. He said the licence number is EDU 058.

Salming's Return Boosts Leafs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs, back from a disastrous West Coast road trip but bolstered by the return of defenceman Borje Salming, defeated California Seals 4-2 Wednesday night.

Meanwhile, Leaf goalie Dunc Wilson may be traded and possible disciplinary action is pending against forwards George Ferguson and Dave Williams following losses in Los Angeles, Oakland and Vancouver.

In other National Hockey League games, Pittsburgh Penguins extended their home unbeaten streak to 16 games with a 6-1 win over Chicago Black Hawks, New York Islanders edged Minnesota North Stars 4-3, and Atlanta Flames tied Kansas City Scouts 4-4.

Wilson, who missed a team bus on the road trip, said after talks Wednesday with Leafs general manager Jim Gregory that he expects to be traded. He was told to take a couple of days off and goalie Pierre Hamel was called up from Oklahoma City Blazers.

Dunc Wilson – Days Numbered?

Gregory, who would neither confirm or deny attempts to trade Wilson, said he still was considering what to do about Ferguson and Williams. Ferguson broke his right hand at Vancouver when he punched Williams in an argument over breaking curfews.

Gregory said he may impose a small fine.

Meanwhile, Salming, recovered from a rib injury, returned to lift the Leafs' sagging defence while Gary Sabourin scored twice to lead the offence.

"Having him back made a big difference,' coach Red Kelly said of Salming's return.

Still missing from the Leafs blueline corps are Bob Neely with a bruised ankle, Jim McKenny with an eye abrasion and Ian Turnbull with torn knee ligaments.

Vic Hadfield scored one goal unassisted and set up three other scores to lead the Penguins against Chicago.

Defenceman Denis Potvin scored the winning goal for the Islanders at Bloomington, Minn., completing a home-and-home sweep over the North Stars who have won only once in their last 14 games.

At Kansas City, Atlanta salvaged the tie with Tom Lysiak's goal with less than two minutes remaining in the game.

Attempts to Intimidate Rile Hull

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New England Whalers held their ground against Cleveland Crusaders in the World Hockey Association's Eastern Division race Wednesday while Bobby Hull of Winnipeg Jets took a stand against rough tactics in the league.

The Whalers maintained their 10-point lead over Cleveland in the East with a 4-3 victory over Baltimore Blades while the Crusaders defeated Phoenix Roadrunners 6-2.

Player-coach Hull sounded off after Tuesday night's game when Winnipeg visited San Diego Mariners and 85 minutes in penalties were called.

Hull took exception to what he thinks is an attempt by some clubs to intimidate the Jets' European imports such as Swedes Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg. Both Nilsson and Hedberg were forced to defend themselves during Tuesday's game, said Hull.

"That's not hockey, that's brutality," said Hull. "If anybody did that on the street, they'd get the book thrown at them. Ulf looks like ground hamburger.

"The Europeans came into our league to add finesse and whatever else, but not brutality. We're supposed to be upgrading the calibre of play in our league, not downgrading it. You don't see them running at the Canadians, just the Swedes."

Hull said the referees could not control the situation completely and added that individual players were not all to blame. "It's right in the management and coaches with some teams."

A crowd of 7,562 at the Whaler's new home in Hartford, Conn., saw Larry Pleau score the winning goal with less than five minutes remaining the game.

Pleau's 20th goal of the season came after Tom Webster scored his 24th to tie the game at 3-3, wiping out a brief Baltimore lead.

It was the 22nd road loss for the Baltimore club, recently moved from Detroit.

At Cleveland, Al McDonough scored twice in the first period and Russ Walker added two more in the second to lead the Crusaders over Phoenix.

A Cleveland crowd of only 4,409 saw Crusaders goalie Gerry Cheevers stop 33 shots, including 13 in the final period. Phoenix netminder Jack Norris made only 20 saves.

Reliefer Must Finish for 'Save'

NEW YORK (AP) — Relief pitchers must finish a game in order to qualify for a "save," say new baseball rules announced today.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn also said the playing rules committee has approved new regulations dealing with specifications for bats and for errant throws by a pitcher which end up out of play.

Proposed by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, the new pitching rule now requires relief hurlers to qualify under three categories in order to get credit for a save.

The rule stipulates that a relief pitcher is credited with a save when he is the finishing pitcher in a game won by his team and is not the winning pitcher.

He also must enter the game with a lead of no more than three runs and pitch for at least one inning; or enter the game with the potential tying run either on base, at bat or on deck; or he pitches effectively for at least three innings.

Prior to now, it was possible for more than one pitcher to qualify under the previous provisions. If that happened, the scorer was to credit the save to the pitcher he judged to have been the most effective, or not to credit a save at all.

The new bat specifications were caused by some players using a "cupped" bat—one with an indentation on the thick end. At its annual convention in December, baseball approved legislation to eject from the game and give a three-day suspension to any player using an illegally filled or doctored bat.

Another rule change directs umpires to eject any pitcher who is found to have a foreign substance on him or in his possession. The previous rule had allowed for a warning prior to ejection.

The other rule clarification allows a runner or batter-runner to advance two bases if a ball pitched to the batter or thrown by the pitcher from the rubber to a base "remains on the playing field, and is subsequently kicked or deflected into the dugout, stands or other area where the ball is dead."

The runner is entitled to only one base if the ball goes directly to a dead ball area without additional impetus.

Changes in Winter Rally

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Winter Rally, a traditional two-day, 1,100-mile event, will be changed this year to a more demanding 700-mile format.

Organizer Bob Lindquist said Wednesday the rally, starting Saturday, Feb. 8, will head north from Toronto to the Haliburton highlands and return the next day.

The cars, with two-man crews, will leave the starting ramp at one-minute intervals and should take 27 hours to complete the trip.

Fifty-nine entries have been received for the British Empire Motor Club-sponsored event, including last year's winners—Jean Paul Peruss of Montreal and Toronto's John Bellefleur.

HARRELSON AGREES

NEW YORK (AP) — Shortstop Bud Harrelson, who slumped to a .227 batting average last season, has signed his 1975 baseball contract, New York Mets announced Wednesday.

Acton Rink Earns B Title

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Anne Acton compiled a 4-1 record over the past three days to skip her Quinte Curling Club (QCC) rink to the 'B' Flight Championship of the Southern Ontario Ladies Curling Association (SOLCA) senior playoffs in St. Catharines.

The Acton rink, comprised of Jessie Baber, vice, Helen Lewis, second, and Kay Pape, lead, won their first three matches in the double-knockout competition before losing to Chatham 9-7 Wednesday morning. The loss dropped the Belleville rink into 'B' Flight and gave Chatham the SOLCA Championship, in the 15-rink event.

"We felt our chances were as good as the next rink's," said Acton, "we got a few breaks in the early going and they boosted us on."

Acton was referring to the breaks her rink got in their opening match Monday against St. Mary's. The locals came from behind to tie the match in the ninth; then won it 8-7 in the 10th.

"That was probably our worst game of the bonspiel," said Acton, "to be honest, we were lucky to win it."

The breaks the locals got in their opening match must have given them quite a boost. In their second match, also played Monday, they trounced Fenelon Falls 13-2.

Tuesday, the Acton rink faced a stiff test when they took on the defending SOLCA champs from Unionville. Both rinks had compiled 2-0 records to that date, but the Belleville foursome came out on top 9-6.

While Acton was winning her third with a single match on Tuesday, Judy Pilson was setting the stage for the 'A' Flight playoff with a pair of wins on Tuesday to run her Chatham rink's record to 3-0.

Pilson defeated Oshawa — the defending Ontario women's senior champs — on Monday, and downed rinks from Hanover and Hamilton Glendale on Tuesday.

Wednesday, when the two undefeated rinks hooked up, Pilson finished on top by a narrow 9-7 margin.

"They had a good rink," said Acton, "they were the toughest competition we faced."

The loss left Belleville in a tie with Toronto Cricket Club. The Toronto rink had absorbed their loss in the early going of the bonspiel, but had three wins to their credit in 'B' competition. The Acton rink had no trouble winning the 'B' playoff as they disposed of their opposition 10-5, to rack up a 4-1 record.

Brampton, who also lost a game in the early going finished up with a 4-1 record, as well, to win 'C' Flight.

Belleville, Chatham and Brampton now travel to Ottawa, February 15-18 for the Ontario Ladies Curling Association's Senior Championships at the Ottawa Granite Club.

The three SOLCA rinks will face representative rinks from northern, northwestern and eastern Ontario for the seniors title of the province. The Ontario champion will represent the province at the Canadian Championships in Swift Current, Saskatchewan.

Cats in Home Stretch

When the Belleville Bobcats meet Kingston tonight at the Cataraqui Arena it will be the start of their most important and probably their toughest game stretch of the season.

Belleville has to win against Kingston if they are to catch the Voyageurs in the standings. Kingston is five points up on the Cats in third place. Belleville needs to take over third spot to earn home ice advantage in the opening series of the playoffs — probably against Kingston.

After their game tonight, the Cats will cram another five games into nine days to finish off their season.

Friday they meet Wexford Warriors at 9 p.m. at the Memorial Arena. The Warriors currently hold down second place in the Central Division of the Metro Junior B League.

Following the Wexford contest, the Cats take on Pickering Panthers in their final home game of the season. Pickering is riding on top of the East Division of the Metro League. The Panthers are in town Sunday for the 8 p.m. game.

Cats then take to the road and finish off their regular season with three out-of-town games. Tuesday they're in Scarborough to play the Whitby Bruins. A game against the Bruins is never easy since they are rough and ready. With the playoffs coming on the Cats must be careful of injuries.

Next Friday (February 7) Belleville is in Markham to take on the East Division's second place Royals.

The final game of the season comes against Oshawa. The Legionaires are in last place in the East Division, but the last time Belleville was in the Motor City they lost their coach, Bob Boyle, and their general manager, Jim 'Snipe' Matthews on two game suspensions. They also lost the game.

Squash Club Members Have First Tournament

The current Canadian upswing in squash has reached the local scene. The Belleville Squash Club is ready to hold their first club championships.

The Club has about 125 members, including 30 women, and the best of the members will be playing off for titles in A, B, and C categories.

"The players evaluate their own skills," said club president, Dr. O'Boyle Kelly. "They choose which category they will participate in. Naturally the club's best will be playing off in A class. B class is for the average player and C is more or less for beginners."

The tournament is open to the public. It begins tonight at 6:30 p.m. with the semi-finals of each class held early Saturday afternoon, followed by the finals.

About 50 male members will be playing off for the club's three division honors, while 10 of the female members will hook up for their title. Women will have only an A competition.

Presentation ceremonies will take place late Saturday and all club members and guests of club members are invited to attend.

City Honors Champs With Awards, Banquet

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

The City of Belleville honored its 1974 sports champions Wednesday night in a ceremony made more imposing by its simplicity and the expeditious manner in which it was carried out.

With an absence of long-winded oratory, Mayor Robin Jeffrey, members of the city's Honors and Awards Committee; Wilbur Purcell, city manager, and Cliff Beich, director of recreation, went through a lengthy list of presentations quickly and efficiently, at the recognition banquet at the Oddfellows Hall.

Special awards recognizing the contribution of Jim Driscoll (judo) and Ken Carr-Braint (weight lifting) were presented.

Champion lawn bowler J. Bruce Miller, a participant in the Commonwealth Games at Christchuch, New Zealand; weightlifting champions Ron Hayes and Paul Barrett (Ontario) and Gary Walt (Canada), members of the Apollo Barbell Club; provincial senior curling champions William Riley, Vaughan Storey, William Spinelli and Chris Glithero, along with Ontario junior Olympic archery development champions Donna Kearney and Wilma Stokmans, were honored.

Coaches Herb Coltman and Ken Brooks, manager Elaine Brooks and team members Ronald Begley, Darrell Coltman, John Henry, Paul Soule, Clarence Broekema, David Gee, Tony Millar, Tim Soule, Allen Brooks, Robert Hedge, Andy Rossit and Donald Turner, the SACO Ontario Amateur Softball Association Peewee A champions, received awards.

From lacrosse came the Ontario Midget E champions. Receiving awards were coach Keith Kaine, manager Al Waterson, Bill Greer, John Geen, Brent Walmsley, Wally Inwood, Joe Bourette, Kent Manning, Duncan Boyce, Andrew Tipper, Jeff Gow, Peter Barrett, Chris Rutledge, Sandy Waterson and Jamie Kennedy.

Committee chairman Alderman Arthur Keegan was in charge of proceedings. Members of the committee making presentations were Alderman Jean Smith, Ken Carr-Braint, Jack Devine, and Tom Neill.

Earlier this month, at a ceremony at William R. Kirk School, recognition was given to several outstanding athletes who distinguished themselves during Canadian Special Olympics activities.

In that group are coaches Wally Dever, Sue Clarke, Lynn Curtis and Ron Moffatt. The young athletes are Marlene Prescott, Rick Vesterfelt, Nancy Hitchon, Shirley McInroy, Greg Parkhurst, Ricky Johnson, David Brickman, Ron Vesterfelt, Linda Rose and Carol Ann Claus.

Berezowski and Porter – on Their Way

Young Canadians Sparkle In the Dance Competition

QUEBEC (CP)—The dance competitions held the spotlight at the Canadian figure skating championships Wednesday and the performances of young skaters showed that Canada may be on the verge of becoming a world power in this elegant specialty.

Barbara Berezowski and David Porter of Toronto took the lead, as expected, in the compulsory senior dance and appeared on their way to the gold medal after finishing second to Louise and Barry Soper of Vancouver the last three years.

The Sopers have retired and Berezowski and Porter, 15th in the world in 1974, are their heirs apparent, skating with increased confidence gained in international competition.

But it was among the novices that the improvement in Canada's fortunes was best indicated. Julie Hammonds and Bruce Carmichael of Vancouver gave a stylish performance in the waltz, for trot and tango to win the first gold medal at this year's championships.

Marijane Strong who along with Ron Ludington is coaching the Berezowski-Porter dance team, said the fact that both the novice and junior dance competitions have a full complement of 12 entries, each shows the strength that exists at the lower levels.

The second gold medal awarded at the 1975 championships went to Sherri Baier, a tiny 11-year-old from Mitchell, Ont., and 15-year-old Robin Cowan of Waterloo, Ont., in the novice pairs.

Miss Baier, four-foot-10 and 83 pounds, teamed up with the five-foot-seven Cowan only nine months ago and they have developed quickly, winning the central division title at Brandon two weeks ago to qualify for the nationals.

Second place in the novice pairs went to Barbara Underhill and Jim Sorochan of Oshawa, Ont., the Eastern division champions, and third to Josie France of Cambridge, Ont., and Paul Mills of Sheffield, Ont.

The senior dance competition was cut to just five pairs when Ginnie Grieco and John Rait of Toronto had to withdraw because Miss Grieco has not fully recovered from a bout of mononucleosis.

Berezowski and Porter were placed first by all seven judges in the Viennese waltz and quickstep and by wo judges in the Kilian. Porter said they were a little tense because they skated last in the Kilian and let down a little but both were generally satisfied with their performance.

Second after the compulsory three dances, which account for 30 per cent cf the total marks, were Susan Carscallen and Eric Gillies of Toronto. They had 104.7 points to 109.4 for the leaders.

Third were Shelley MacLeod and Bob Knapp of Cambridge, Ont., fourth Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., and fifth Debbie and Randy Burke of Chilliwack, B.C.

The senior dancers tonight perform the set-pattern competition, which makes up 20 per cent of the scoring, and wind up with free skating and the remaining 50 per cent Friday night.

The senior men's and women's compulsory figures are scheduled for today, with Toller Cranston of Toronto and Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa expected to take the first step toward successfully defending their crowns.

In the compulsory figures of the junior men's competition Wednesday Jimmy Szabo of Coquitlam, B.C., took a narrow lead over Gary Beacom of Toronto. Also in contention is Ken Moir of Vancouver, third, and Brian Pockar of Calgary, fourth.

Compulsory figures make up 40 per cent of the singles program, the compulsory free-skating scheduled for tonight 20 per cent and the free skating, slated for Friday afternoon, the remaining 40 per cent.

Szabo, who turned 17 a few days ago, was fourth in the Canadian novice competition in Moncton last year and, after moving up to junior, earned a spot in the 1975 championships by winning the Western division title in Victoria two weeks ago.

Beacom, also a first-year junior at 14, won the Eastern division crown at Oshawa, Ont.

Heather Anderson, 13-year-old skater from North Vancouver, B.C., was ahead after compulsory figures in the junior women's competition. The 1974 novice champion was ranked first by seven judges and had a clear lead over Julie Bowerman of Woodstock, Ont., second, and Kathy Fahlgren of North Bay, Ont., third. Heather Beaton of Brandon, was fourth among the 12 juniors, who compete in compulsory free-skating tonight.

Player Leads

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (Reuter) — Gary Player shot a four-under-par 68 Wednesday to take the first-round lead in the South African Open golf tournament.

Player, trying to win the title for a ninth time, had four birdies.

Rhodesian Simon Hobday was second with a 69, one stroke ahead of Bill Brask and Hal Underwood, both from the United States.

Three-pointer Turns Tables

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nate Archibald's three-point play led Kansas City-Omaha Kings to a 106-102 National Basketball Association victory over Milwaukee Bucks in one of five league games Wednesday night.

With the score tied 99-99, Archibald drove down the centre lane and challenged Milwaukee's centre, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Archibald scored the layup and was fouled by the 7-3 Abdul-Jabbar, converting the three-point play.

Abdul-Jabbar then got two points back with a hook. But Jimmy Walker sank an 18-foot jumper to give the Kings a 104-101 lead.

In other NBA games, Philadelphia defeated New York 98-92, Detroit edged Golden State 93-90, Los Angeles stopped New Orleans 112-108, and Seattle downed Phoenix 99-85.

Interim Coach Gets Tie

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds, under interim coach Angelo Bumbacco, snapped a four-game losing streak as they salvaged a 7-7 tie with Ottawa '67s in an Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game Wednesday.

It was announced prior to the game that manager Bumbacco would take over the coaching duties because of the firing of coach Jim Farelli.

The Greyhounds, behind 4-1 in the first period, rallied for five goals in the second to take a 6-4 lead, then held off the surging '67s for the tie.

Syncrude Hesitates To Delay Decision

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiations to keep a proposed Alberta oil sands project alive seemed at an impasse Wednesday, with Syncrude Canada Ltd. officials hesitating over requests to delay a decision on cancelling the plant.

Consortium chairman J. A. Cogan said the company will go ahead with plans to halt the project Friday unless the federal and Alberta governments can give "adequate assurances" it will get new partners.

But as Energy Minister Donald Macdonald left the Commons en route to meetings with company officials in Toronto Wednesday evening, he said he would not offer such an assurance and declined further comment until after his talks.

Both Alberta and Ottawa say they still are interested in providing some of the $1 billion Syncrude says it needs to complete the project, but need more time to decide.

But the company, faced with costs running at $1 million a day, says it can't put off the decision unless assured the plant will go ahead after the extension ends.

But Mr. Cogan said no matter what the results of the meetings, he did not anticipate a decision on the future of the plant before Friday.

Take New Look at Diabetes Drugs

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller said Wednesday that Ontario will take a second look at oral diabetic drugs linked in an international study to premature deaths through heart disease.

Mr. Miller said he was "faced with two conflicting sets" of evidence—one from a government drug advisory committee which said it remains unconvinced of any proven hazard.

A study published Monday by United States, Dutch and Italian scientists estimated that between 10,000 and 15,000 persons using the pills die prematurely each year of heart disease.

"Obviously we have to take a very close look at (the opinions)," Mr. Miller said.

BIRTHS

BRUYEA — Greg and Faye (nee Robinson) are pleased to announce the arrival of their daughter Amy on Sunday, January 26, 1975, weighing 6 lbs., 5 ozs. at the Belleville General Hospital.

BRANT — Harris and Laurel are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter Wendy Lynne, weight 7 lbs., 3¼ ozs. at Belleville General Hospital on January 24th, 1975.

IN MEMORIAM

PRINGLE — In loving memory of a dear Dad and Grandpa, Lyal W. Pringle, who passed away so suddenly on Jan. 30, 1972.

O happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a loneliness,
The world can never fill.

—Treasured memories - daughter Carol, son-in-law Fred and grandchildren Lyal and Garth.

ADAMS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Clifford Adams who passed away Jan. 30, 1973.

Sadly missed along life's way,
Quietly remembered every day,
No longer in our life to share,
But in our hearts he's always there.

—Sadly missed by wife Carrie and family Ronald, Lewis, Jane and grandchildren.

HILL — In loving memory of our dear daughter Betty Hill who died January 30, 1972.

The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well.
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.

—Sadly missed and ever loved by parents Charles and Isabel Dickens.

HILL — In loving memory of a dear sister Betty Marie Hill who left us on January 30, 1972.

Asleep in God's beautiful garden,
Away from all sorrow and pain,
Someday when life's journey is ended,
We shall be brother and sister again.

—Always remembered by brother Ray, Elaine and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to send a sincere "thank you" to relatives, friends and neighbors for the many lovely cards, flowers, gifts, telegrams, telephone messages and best wishes we received on our 50th Wedding Anniversary. Special thanks to those who honored us by attending Open House held at our home; to Mr. Clarke Rollins who came and presented us with an Ontario Plaque from the Premier, Mr. Davis and to everyone who helped in any way make it such a happy and memorable occasion for us.

Sam and Sara Jones.

ARE YOU THE KIND OF PERSON

Who could make use of a panabode cottage and metal barn on an acre of land? The cottage is basically walls, ceiling (roof) and floor of good cedar wood. It was moved there to be winterized for winter fun and the owners have had to make other plans. The land is flat and dry and the surrounding area is very scenic. There is a dug well on the property. Call anytime for inquiries. Price is flexible and terms are possible.

Terms and Conditions — Each item will be sold without warranty on an "As Is - Where Is" basis. At no time shall any claim be allowed against the Ministry with respect to any material or equipment.

Vehicles will be sold without licence plates. In order to obtain plates the buyer must have the prescribed inspection carried out by a licensed Motor Vehicle Inspection Station and a Safety Standards Certificate issued. Vehicles cannot be removed from Ministry property until paid for in full and then only under the following conditions: (a) with a Dealer's Transit Licence Plate (b) with an Out-of-Province Licence Plate (c) using proper towing or car transporter.

The Ministry will not be responsible for any damage or accident involving a vehicle following the acceptance of the vehicle by the new owner or his agent.

The successful bidder will be required to load and/or transport his purchase at his own expense.

Amount of $100.00 or less, being the full bid price must be paid at the time of sale. A deposit of $100.00 on each item sold over $100.00 must be paid at time of sale. This deposit will be held by the Ministry as security for the due performance of the contract of sale and as part payment of the purchase price. Failure to comply will result in the item being re-auctioned.

NOTE: Buyers may, before the start of sale, deposit with the cashier an amount equal to or greater than the amount that is deemed sufficient to cover deposits or full payments.

Each successful bidder will be required to pay to the Ministry the bid price, plus 12% Federal Sales Tax and 7% Ontario Retail Sales Tax, where applicable. The Ontario Retail Sales Tax will be based on the total of the bid price and the Federal Sales Tax.

Within five (5) working days after the date of the sale, the successful bidder must pay in full the balance owing for his purchase and remove it from Ministry property. Failure to complete payment within the five working days, the deposit will be forfeited and the item held for resale.

All cheques, money orders, or bank drafts must be made payable to the "Treasurer of Ontario". All cheques must be certified.

Items may be inspected at the above location from 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. on February 3rd, 4th, 5th and Thursday, February 6th, 1975 until time of sale.

Dairy Products Up Sharply While Most Other Foods Decline

By JUDY CREIGHTON
The Canadian Press

For consumers who like a bit of butter on their bread and cream in their coffee, a Canadian Press survey of grocery prices for the month of January shows all four to be the costliest items in the food basket.

The Cross-Canada Survey of 17 basic food items in 12 major cities revealed that a pound of butter jumped six cents to $1.05 in St. John's, Nfld.

Average cost of the over-all basket showed a drop to $17.35 from $17.55 last month. The food bill went down in eight cities, but climbed in Saint John, N.B., Montreal, Ottawa and Edmonton.

All cities showed a continuing decline in sugar prices.

In Vancouver, sugar dropped 46 cents to $2.39 for a five-pound bag.

Mr. Ellard Powers, chairman of the Canadian dairy commission, Ottawa, blamed rising production costs for the higher cost of dairy products.

"To compensate for this increase passed on by the producer, we had to raise the price to wholesalers from $9.41 per 100 pounds to $10.02," he said. "Five cents a pound of this price is on butter and skim milk powder."

The commission deals only with such items as milk powder, butter and solid dairy products. Fluid milk production is under the jurisdiction of the provinces.

Items surveyed for the food basket are priced on the last Tuesday of each month at the same supermarkets in individual cities. It shows the lowest regular price for the same items, or nearest comparable items.

The basket contains a pound of sirloin-tip roast of beef, all-beef wieners, centre-cut loin roast of pork, first-grade chicken, ground chuck, frozen cod fillets, first-grade butter, tomatoes, frozen green peas, McIntosh apples and drip coffee.

It also includes one dozen medium eggs, one quart of whole milk, a 24-ounce loaf of sliced white bread, 10 pounds of first-grade potatoes, a 24-ounce can of first-grade halved pears and a five-pound bag of white granulated sugar.

Some findings follow, compared with last month, as well as the total price in January, 1974, where they were available:

Halifax: Pork dropped 57 cents to 78 cents a pound, chuck 19 cents to $1.09 and eggs seven cents to 81 cents. Whole milk increased two cents to 84 cents a quart, potatoes nine cents to 84 cents, tomatoes four cents to 59 cents and apples 17 cents to 40 cents a pound. Sugar decreased by 34 cents to $2.75.

Total price was $16.69, down from $18.01 in December.

St. John's, Nfld.: Butter was highest of all cities surveyed, climbing to $1.05 from 99 cents a pound. Chicken rose three cents to 89 cents a pound, apples 10 cents to 39 cents a pound and milk two cents to 59 cents a quart. Sugar slid 30 cents to $2.99 and pork five cents a pound to 94 cents. The total was $18.29, down from $18.44 in December. The January, 1974, total was $15.50.

Charlottetown: Milk went up three cents to 53 cents a quart and butter four cents to $1.03. Chicken lost 10 cents to 85 cents and sugar 21 cents to $2.78. Cod fillets, $1.05 last month, rose to $1.29 a pound.

The price of other items was unchanged for a total of $18.04, compared with $18.12 in December and $15.94 in January, 1974.

Saint John, N.B.: Pork was down 10 cents to $1.18, chuck 20 cents to 88 cents, eggs eight cents to 82 cents, and sugar 44 cents to $2.75. Chicken was up 11 cents to 79 cents, milk five cents to 54 cents and coffee 25 cents to $1.44.

Total: $17.03, an increase from December when it was $16.89 and from January, 1974, when it was $15.04.

Quebec: Sirloin-tip roast dropped 40 cents to $1.68 and eggs seven cents to 74 cents. Cod climbed seven cents to $1.27, butter five cents to 94 cents, tomatoes 31 cents to 89 cents and coffee nine cents to $1.28. Sugar lost 25 cents to $2.64.

Total cost was $17.30, down from $17.62 in December.

Montreal: Chicken rose 20 cents a pound to 79 cents, pork and cod 10 cents each to $1.69 and $1.20 respectively, milk two cents to 48 cents, butter three cents to 92 cents, bread two cents to 38 cents and tomatoes 20 cents to 58 cents. Sugar dropped 25 cents to $2.64 and eggs four cents to 76 cents.

Total: $16.03 in December, $16.32 in January and $15 in January, 1974.

Ottawa: Potatoes jumped 42 cents to 89 cents, bread 12 cents to 48 cents, tomatoes 15 cents to 64 cents, coffee 43 cents to $1.50, eggs eight cents to 76 cents and butter two cents to 91 cents. Wieners lost 13 cents to 86 cents, pork 13 cents to $1.36 and sugar 23 cents to $2.64, a drop of 23 cents.

Toronto: Pork dropped 75 cents to 98 cents a pound, tomatoes 10 cents to 69 cents and sugar to $2.85 from $3.29. Chicken rose 12 cents to 84 cents, bread two cents to 50 cents and coffee 46 cents to $1.65. Milk remained at 47 cents.

Total: $16.58; December, $18.07; January, 1974, $14.50.

Winnipeg: Beef dropped 10 cents to $1.98 a pound, pork 20 cents to $1.28 and chuck six cents to $1.06. Milk rose one cent to 47 cents, butter one cent to 98 cents. Sugar lost 22 cents to $2.65.

Total: $16.57; December $17.14; January, 1974, $14.20.

Regina: Milk was up three cents to 48 cents but butter remained at 98 cents. Wieners dropped four cents to 95 cents and eggs 16 cents to 73 cents. Sugar lost 40 cents to $2.93.

Total: $17.04; December, $17.06; January, 1974, $14.98.

Edmonton: Sirloin tip dropped 10 cents to $1.99 a pound. Wieners rose four cents to 99 cents, pork four cents to $1.33, chuck four cents to 99 cents, cod fillets 10 cents to $1.29 and butter five cents to $1 a pound. Sugar declined 14 cents to $2.85.

Total: $17.53; December, $17.41; January, 1974, $14.62.

Vancouver: Sugar dropped 46 cents to $2.39, eggs 23 cents to 66 cents, pork 34 cents to $1.15, chuck 10 cents to $1.09 and chicken two cents to 93 cents. Milk rose four cents to 58 cents.

Total: $17.46, down from $19.51 in December. The January, 1974, total was $16.93.

Race Tightens In Gas House

While Stanley Structures continues to ride way out in front of the Gas House Hockey League pack, things are beginning to jam up in second, third and fourth place in the standings.

Wednesday night, fourth place Chuckwagon Foods edged second place Rollins Lumber and third place Belleville Generals blanked the Belleville Yardmen 3-0. The loss left Rollins just one point ahead of the Generals and only three up on Chuckwagon.

Grant Sage was tops for Chuckwagon as he scored twice and added an assist. Singles went to Dave Middleton and Terry Casselman. Al Walker drew three assists.

Larry Pascoe's two goals and an assist weren't enough for Rollins. Dan Garlick tallied the third marker for the losers.

Ken Genereaux recorded another shutout in the Generals nets. Hyalie Bryant scored twice and added a helper and Dave Skelton scored the other Generals goal.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Friday, January 31

Aries (March 21-April 19) One whose co-operation is essential to your immediate aims will throw some roadblocks in your path. Keep cool at all costs.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Be extra-careful if you're using tools today. Also, if you're working with another, remind him to work in a safe, orderly way.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You're not especially lucky today when putting out cash for risky or chancy ventures. Buy nothing sight-unseen.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Be extra-watchful of those in your charge and of your material possessions. Don't deal with persons you mistrust.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) There's just a thin veneer over your patience and temper. A slight provocation could cause you to overreact unflatteringly.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't spread yourself too thin where your resources are concerned. Your purse can't handle a spending spree.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Know when to back off today if you run into too much opposition. Discretion is the better part of valor.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You could be taking on more responsibilities right now than you can handle. Ease up or you'll shortly be boxed-in.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's to your best interest to refuse to aid one who's gotten to you before materially, then forgot you till his present dilemma.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you try to bowl over your opponents now, it will only stiffen their resistance to your aims. Be tactful, considerate.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't blame your mistakes on others rather, reexamine your own ideas. See if that's where the fault lies.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be spending more time today shouldering burdens and problems of others than you will solving your own.

HARE BOWLS BETTOR

LONDON (AP) — Percy Breckell was so excited when the greyhound he bet on came in first at a dog race that he ran onto the track and was bowled over by the mechanical hare. The hare, travelling at 40 miles an hour, broke the 64-year-old man's leg.

Freight Rate Rollback Decision Is Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission Wednesday temporarily rejected a bid by the three Prairie provinces for a roll-back of freight rates increased last week by the railways.

And Transport Minister Jean Marchand, speaking in the Commons, spurned a proposal that the government re-impose a freeze on the rates.

The commission decided to hold over the Prairie request until a recent Federal Court of Appeal ruling on freight rates is reviewed Friday.

But the commission said it was not ruling on the legality of the increase and left the door open for a similar provincial request at the Friday hearing on implications of the Federal Court decision.

The Federal Court upended Saturday a commission decision postponing half a 25-per-cent freight rate increase to March 1 from Jan. 1. The railways raised their general commodity rates—which affect about 52,000 shippers and 22 per cent of rail freight traffic—to the full amount only hours after the court decision.

The Federal Court unanimously said the commission had no power to postpone the effective date of part of a rate increase, but three of the five judges said the commission should look again at the case which led to its Dec. 31 move to delay it.

They suggested the commission could achieve the same result by extending the time for filing and publishing the rates, a procedure necessary before they take effect.

After the original commission ruling, the railways filed new reduced rate increases with a condition that the tariffs would rise to the full amount if the Federal Court overturned the commission decision.

Gordon Blair, counsel for Manitoba and Saskatchewan, said the provinces will ask for the rate rollback again Friday.

To Your Good Health

Timing Cataract Operation Issue

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am blind in one eye due to cataracts and my other eye is getting worse. My doctor will not operate.

I am still working. My cataracts began eight or nine years ago. Why does the doctor insist I wait until the other eye is worse?—Mrs. R.W.

It's difficult for me to tell why your doctor is delaying surgery on the eye in which you have lost sight. However, there are many factors to be weighed before the decision for surgery is made.

Some doctors believe that as long as reasonable vision is present in one eye, there is no need to hurry into surgery on the other eye.

Your occupation, which you don't mention, is another factor. The fact that you are continuing to work indicates your vision has been adequate for your purposes.

Cataracts progress slowly, as you are aware from your nine-year experience. They do not progress evenly in both eyes.

These also are other factors to be considered in deciding when to operate. The main thing is that the surgery be timed to leave the patient with the maximum possible vision, and I'm sure this is what your doctor is thinking.

I advise you to see your doctor again. Tell him you are anxious and ask him why he is delaying. There may be other factors you do not mention in your letter.

Note to Mrs. R.A.C.: If you have followed my comments on gout over the years you would not find any conflict between myself and the gout clinic you mention. I have written repeatedly that diet is not the sole answer, but that medications are more effective. I believe it wise for a gout patient to avoid excessive use of high purine foods, however. That is different from "dieting" in your use of the term.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In an answer to a lady whose husband had prostate surgery and whose testes were removed, you implied that he would no longer be interested in sex.

Does removing the testes take away all desire? Will all thoughts be removed from the mind?—T.Y.

The thoughts may not vanish, but the ability or desire to perform is greatly diminished.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Someone told me that if you take two teaspoonfuls of polyunsaturated oil every day it helps you lose weight because something is in it which eats up your body fat.

I was wondering if this is true. If it is, why don't doctors tell their patients to do it when they are on a diet?—C.C.

For a very good reason—it's not true.

While there is divided opinion on this point, some authorities believe polyunsaturated fats help reduce blood cholesterol which in turn can be a factor in hardening of the arteries.

But remember that polyunsaturated fats contain calories which could exceed the calories you would want to get in a well-ordered, sensible diet. Calories, from whatever source, are a main consideration in weight gain.

Polyunsaturated is a nice word, long and important-sounding, and it rolls nicely off the tongue. Unfortunately, it has, as in your case, created more misunderstanding than sensible knowledge about weight control.

Socreds In Two Hassles

OTTAWA (CP) — The Social Credit party, which has only 11 members in Parliament, was at the centre of a major uproar in the Commons Wednesday and at the first meeting of a special committee investigating bribery charges.

Six of its members managed to hold up Commons business of procedural tactics to protest of prorcdural tactics to protest what they said was the "partial, non-objective" attitude of Speaker James Jerome.

Then, at the committee hearing into party leader Real Caouette's charges that some Parliamentary Press Gallery members had accepted bribes from his party and possibly also from Progressive Conservative Roch LaSalle, they unsuccessfully tried some legal wrangling.

Mr. Caouette was not present in the Commons or at the committee hearing. Except for one or two brief appearances, he has been absent from Parliament since he first raised the bribery charges early in December.

In the Commons, the Social Credit members presented motions and speeches on subjects ranging from an alleged breach of their privileges to the closing of a Canadian Forces air base at Val d'Or, Que.

"We had a message to give to him (Mr. Jerome) and we think he's got it now," Gilbert Rondeau (SC-Shefford) told reporters later. "Now we'll see if he's changed his attitude."

Social Credit MPs are upset at Mr. Jerome's method of giving the floor to MPs during the daily 40-minute question period.

Distribution of oral questions is based generally on the number of members each opposition party has in the 264-seat Commons. The Social Credit party argues that questions should be based on the number of seats the parties hold, not the number of members present.

"We want an impartial Speaker," said Mr. Rondeau, one of the participants in the procedural squabble. "It's not his duty to count the number of members here each day."

After the uproar had gone on for 45 minutes with no sign of ending, Robert Coates (PC— said the Social Credit members were making a farce of Parliament, but this only set off Andre Fortin, Social Credit House leader.

Mr. Fortin (Lotbiniree) said Mr. Coates' remark showed the Conservatives are neither interested in nor understand Quebec.

This prompted Mr. LaSalle, one of three Quebec Conservatives, to dismiss Mr. Fortin's accusation as "Creditiste stupidities." He said the delaying tactics likely were intended to force cancellation of the bribery hearing scheduled later in the day.

WAGES OUTMATCHING COL

LONDON (AP) — The government reported some British wages are rising faster than the cost of living. It said basic hourly wages of manual workers went up 28.6 per cent in 1974 while prices rose 19.1 per cent.

Western Guard Leader Acquitted of Assault

TORONTO (CP) — Donald Clark Andrews, 32, leader of the right-wing Western Guard party, was acquitted in county court Wednesday of assaulting the white wife of a black musician last June 16.

He was charged with assaulting Teri Gabriel, 26, in a scuffle during the CITY-TV show Free For All.

Andrews, a public health inspector and former candidate for mayor of Toronto, had denied the charge. He said Paul Friedman, another member of the party, told him he did it because Mrs. Gabriel slapped his face.

Mrs. Gabriel, who is pregnant, had told the court that Andrews kicked her in the stomach after another man yelled "nigger lover" at her.

Parole Board Said Expert In Controlling Dangerous

OTTAWA (CP) — The national parole board has demonstrated "a high degree of expertise" in keeping dangerous convicted criminals off the streets, board chairman William R. Outerbridge said Wednesday.

In a closed meeting with police chiefs here, he defended the national parole system against what he said was inaccurate criticism by politicians, police and the public.

He told the liaison sub-committee of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police and the parole board that the number of prisoners who breach parole was down to 20 per cent last year from 26 per cent in 1973. A text of the speech was obtained by The Canadian Press.

He said the reduction means that of about 4,200 persons on federal parole during the average week, eight will be convicted of indictable offences.

Alberta May Reduce Corporation Taxes

EDMONTON (CP) — Incentives for small business, including a provincial tax reduction of almost 50 per cent on $500,000 of a corporation's taxable income, were recommended Wednesday in an Alberta government position paper.

The reduction, to six per cent from 11 per cent, would apply to Canadian-controlled, Alberta-resident corporations. The paper was presented in the legislatur by provincial Treasurer Gordon Miniely.

Chess Tourney Held

Youngsters from nine schools competed Thursday afternoon in the third annual chess tournament at Queen Victoria School for pupils in Grades 3 through 6. A second tournament will be held in May for Grade 7 and 8 students. Martin Bond organized the tournament for 72 pupils from Queen Victoria, Queen Elizabeth, Harry J. Clarke, Cannifton, Madoc township, Bayside, Hillcrest, Prince of Wales and King George schools. Winner was Madoc township with a score of 98, followed by Queen Elizabeth with a score of 92. A total of 576 games were played during the tournament.

Bancroft Mine Reopening

Faraday to Supply Uranium for Italy

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Faraday uranium mine at Bancroft will be re-opening, possibly as early as April, it was confirmed by federal energy minister Donald MacDonald Thursday.

The mine at its peak employed about 400 North Hastings workers before it was closed in 1962 following six years of operation.

The Faraday Corporation is reported on the site now, preparing it for re-opening.

News of the re-opening broke with a question in the House of Commons from Hastings MP Jack Ellis. His question concerned a reported deal between the Federal Resources Corporation, Canadian Consolidated Faraday (owners of the mine) and the Italian State energy supply agency, AGIP.

For the purpose of the contract, FRC and Faraday will be forming a new company which will probably be called 'Madawaska Mines'.

The contract, according to Ottawa sources, is to run for six years with an option for a six-year extension for supply of uranium at $14 a pound. An escalator clause is included in the price. It is expected the mine will employ 150 workers and produce one million tons of ore annually. This supply will be comparable to the mine's performance in 1962 when the operation employed 250 men working underground.

The announcement Thursday concludes a year of negotiations between the federal ministry of energy, mines and natural resources concerning foreign ownership regulations. In a news release today, Mr. Ellis said negotiations were concluded this week when regulations were met.

Mr. Ellis said: "The agreement must now go to the atomic energy control board where a final determination must be made with regard to safeguards and domestic reserves."

Until energy control board approval has been received, many of the details of the mining venture will not be revealed, said the energy minister.

Mr. MacDonald told Mr. Ellis in the house, "I'm looking forward to early production from the Bancroft mine."

Mr. Ellis hailed the minister's comment as "the best news we've had in a long time."

Mr. Ellis said no announcement has been made by Faraday concerning the position of mine manager but it is expected the job will go to Del Wilson of Bancroft, who was managing the mine at the time it closed down.

Mr. Ellis told The Intelligencer today, "it's likely the atomic energy control board will give approval to the contract providing safeguards are met."

"Canada will still have domestic reserves in the order of 100 years," he said.

As near as I can see, Faraday is in the clear," said Mr. Ellis. "I'm confident the mine will be in early production ... a couple or three months."

Provincial MPP Clarke Rollins said today he knows very little of the re-opening but that his "biggest concern" is the preservation of the environment in the Bancroft area and the pressures placed on the municipality to provide back-up services to the operation. He mentioned the need for housing specifically.

"It will be a great shot in the arm for the area ... but it must be handled under careful supervision," he said.

A Faraday mine development officer said today, "I can't comment. Mr. Ellis obviously knows more than I do."

Bancroft reeve Russell M. Hawley said "I consider this to be very good for the village but I'm concerned that it is only a six-year contract."

Village officials are contacting the provincial ministry of housing concerning aid for housing.

"It has just been dropped on us that they need housing in two months' time," he said.

"We have serviced land ... trailers and temporary accommodation are out of the question as far as the municipality is concerned," he said.

News Briefs

No Survivors

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Rescue workers reported today finding no survivors from a Turkish Airlines plane that crashed into the Marmora Sea off Istanbul Thursday night with 41 persons aboard.

Tankers Collide

MARCUS HOOK, Pa. (AP) — A United States tanker rammed into a Liberian ship unloading crude oil at a Deleware River refinery early today, setting off explosions and fires that left at least two dead. Officials said at least 29 others were injured, and that 22 of the 43 persons aboard the Corinthos were unaccounted for.

Merchant Marine Favored

OTTAWA (CP) — The long-awaited report on possible re-establishment of the merchant marine has urged the government to review its policy on a national deep-sea shipping fleet, abandoned after the Second World War. Transport Minister Jean Marchand said that while the report prepared by H. J. Darling — a consultant studying the shipping industry — makes no recommendation that a merchant marine fleet be re-established, "the impression is that he favors it."

Firemen Sat Idle

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Eli Dubeau says he noticed smoke in his 25-room $100,000 house last Friday but it took four hours for flames to appear. Meanwhile, he said, the Springer Township Fire Department and the Sturgeon Falls Fire Department sat idle because the Dubeau home was in Pedley Township, just outside their jurisdiction. Pedley Township has no fire department.

Amnesty Extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The thousands of military deserters and draft evaders from the Vietnam war era have until March 1 to sign up for President Ford's clemency program. Ford extended the program, which had been scheduled to expire at midnight tonight.

Provinces Annoyed

Federal Housing Policy Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — Manitoba Urban Affairs Minister Saul Miller said it all in two brief sentences Thursday.

Referring to a discussion of the $1.4 billion federal housing budget at a federal-provincial housing conference, Mr. Miller said:

"If a vote had been taken here, it would have been 10 to one against the federal budget.

"However, the one vote has a little more muscle behind it than the other 10."

Mr. Miller and other provincial housing ministers vented their exasperation with the housing budget at a conference-closing news conference. But they made no visible change in the federal position.

Several ministers said the $100 million increase from last year's budget was far less than hoped for. Some said they would have to cut back on planned increases in their own budgets because the federal portion of shared-cost programs rose less than expected.

Provincial ministers used such words as disappointment and shock to describe their feelings about Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson's announcement of the federal housing budget earlier in the day.

Ontario Housing Minister Donald Irvine said the federal budget should have been at least $2 billion.

Mr. Miller said he hoped Mr. Danson could convince the cabinet to put more money into housing later this year through supplementary spending estimates.

Mr. Danson was noncommital.

"Anything is possible," he said. "I'm always hopeful."

The provinces also renewed a demand made two years ago by Ontario and Alberta for freedom to spend their share of federal housing money any way they wish. This time all provinces joined in the request.

Mr. Danson said no. "We have a responsibility for our funds to our taxpayers. We have to look at national standards and national objectives."

But he said that he would be willing to meet with the provincial ministers in May or June to discuss spending priorities if serious problems arise.

Homes Budget Is Increased

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government announced Thursday a 12.5 per cent increase in its $1.42 billion housing budget for 1975.

The Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) will administer the funding of a variety of loan, grant and subsidy programs to supplement private housing construction activity with the increase.

Ottawa May Provide Half Needed Billion

EDMONTON (CP) — The future of the $2-billion Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil sands development was still up in the air Thursday on the eve of the consortium's deadline for raising additional funds.

However it looked a little brighter with an announcement by federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald that Ottawa might invest up to $500 million of the additional $1 billion Syncrude says it needs to keep the project alive.

Mr. Macdonald said, however, Ottawa would prefer to invest only about $300 million.

The federal government also has agreed that Syncrude may sell oil produced from the northeastern-Alberta sands at "internationally-oriented prices."

Engineers Here Hit Union Body

By ROBIN CHASE

All 124 engineers still booked off sick in Belleville are among 350 members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE) off the job at four Ontario centres, Toronto, Ottawa, Belleville and Niagara Falls, awaiting a decision today by the Canada Labor Relations Board in Ottawa on the fate of their contract.

Ian Brady, acting on behalf of the Belleville local, said today the board received an application from the Toronto local of the brotherhood seeking to make a 15-per-cent increase, originally to be in effect May 1, retroactive to Jan. 1.

Commenting on the chances at the hearing, Mr. Brady remarked, "it's up in the air." He said the attitude among local engineers is "reasonably optimistic."

He noted, "there's no rapport now between the union negotiating committee and their members." He explained here is little information being received from the committee and a general lack of support all around.

Robert Burns, Rideau area manager for the Canadian National Railways in Belleville, said the Lakeshore train, operated by supervisory personnel, ran today for the first time this week.

There were two Lakeshore arrivals at 11.22 a.m. from Toronto and 12.55 p.m. from Montreal. He said this is in addition to the Bonaventure which has been running at night as usual.

Mr. Burns said there are some freight trains operating between Montreal and Toronto, "but there is no freight work being done locally."

Full transcontinental service was resumed Thursday and CN said most rail operations across the country, disrupted since locomotive engineers walked off the job Jan. 22, were back to normal.

Montreal engineers, who walked off the job Tuesday, returned late Thursday after CN obtained injunctions from Quebec Superior Court ordering the 78 men back to work.

Ontario Plans Sports Lottery

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario is establishing its own lottery which might raise between $40 million and $50 million a year for physical fitness, sports, recreation and cultural activities.

"In creating a Crown corporation to manage this lottery we are taking advantage of other jurisdictions," Robert Welch, minister of cultural and recreation, told the legislature Thursday.

Mr. Welch, in introducing legislation setting up the corporation, said the government expects sales might reach $100 million within the next couple of years.

"After the return of about 40 per cent of that in prizes and the payment of operational expenses and sales commissions of about 20 per cent, we expect between $40 million and $50 million to be available for physical fitness, sports, recreation and cultural programs," Mr. Welch said.

Mr. Welch said it was clear from statistics that there is wide public support for lotteries in Ontario.

"Residents of this province have already bought more than $40-million worth of tickets for the Olympic Lottery and we have estimates that another $40 million is spent annually on the Irish Sweepstakes and other large provincial and staterun lotteries."

Not Told He Was Fired, Shouldice Kept Writing Ministers

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said Thursday an inquiry is still warranted into the activities of Ross Shouldice, a former Sudbury, Ont., real estate agent and fund raiser for the Progressive Conservatives.

The NDP leader made the remark after letters to cabinet ministers and other high-ranking government officials from Mr. Shouldice were tabled in the legislature.

Some of the letters were dated as late as July, 1972, seven months after Premier William Davis says he decided to no longer accept Mr. Shouldice's help because of his approach to raising funds.

"I make no accusations or charges whatsoever," Mr. Lewis said.

But he added that he did draw one conclusion—"That a provincial inquiry into the affairs and activities of Ross Shouldice is still merited."

Some letters show Mr. Shouldice attempted to exert influence on government awards of contracts and special appointments in the Sudbury area.

Premier Davis has denied earlier suggestions that Mr. Shouldice influenced a $1.5-million government purchase of land in Oakville.

He also has rejected opposition calls for an inquiry into the Shouldice affair, arguing that he told party treasurer William Kelly that Mr. Shouldice should be fired from his duties in November, 1971.

Mr. Shouldice, however, has disputed Premier Davis' statement.

"The first time I found out I was fired was when I read it in the newspaper," Mr. Shouldice said.

Mr. Kelly confirmed Thursday that Mr. Shouldice was never actually told he was to have nothing to do with party activities.

"You don't issue a pink slip to a volunteer," he said.

The letters were addressed to party chiefs, three cabinet ministers, including the premier, and Claude Bennett, then parliamentary assistant to Treasurer Darcy McKeough, and now minister of industry and tourism.

In a Nov. 16, 1971, letter to Allan Lawrence, then attorney-general and now MP for Northumberland-Durham, Shouldice wrote:

"Mr. Morey Spiegel, of Acme Construction refused to contribute, even though the provincial government is his largest tenant in his office buildings which he owns."

Mr. Spiegel is a principal in consultants in the Sudbury development.

In three June 12, 1972 letters to Treasurer Darcy McKeough, Mr. Bennett and Hugh Macaulay, party organizer and confidant to the premier, Mr. Shouldice thanked them for earlier separate meetings and repeated his recommendation "purely on business considerations" that Sudbury Mayor Joseph Fabbro be appointed chairman of the Sudbury region.

Mr. Fabbro, who has denied seeking the appointment, said he was offered the job but turned it down.

"I wouldn't have gone through Mr. Shouldice, anyway," he said.

The appointment was given to Don Collins, a senior official in the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs.

John McDermid, executive assistant to Mr. Bennett, said the appointment "was a decision of the premier, of course."

Mr. Macaulay confirmed Thursday night that he did confer once with Mr. Shouldice about seven months after the premier intimated Mr. Shouldice was in disfavor with the party as a fund-raiser.

Mr. Macaulay said he met Mr. Shouldice in Toronto in June, 1972, and the conversation primarily concerned Mr. Shouldice's advocacy of Mr. Fabbro as chairman of the Sudbury region.

Reached at his Chatham home, Mr. McKeough said it was obvious that Mr. Shouldice had little influence on the selections for Sudbury's regional government.

In an interview Thursday in Montreal with The Globe and Mail, Mr. Shouldice said he saw nothing wrong with the letters he wrote.

He said, however, that he did not receive replies to all of them.

Mr. Shouldice, 49, said he was not prepared to say what was said when he met Premier Davis in November, 1971.

"I won't answer that. You're asking me to go after the big boy himself."

Expanding Trade Helps Create World's Woes

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Expanding trade appears to have helped, unwittingly, to create the world's present economic woes and may in turn fall victim to them.

A United Nations survey of current economic developments suggests that an era of economic isolationism may be on the horizon, as countries try to defend themselves against inflation and the price uncertainty of oil, food and other commodities.

That would shut off the unprecedented expansion in trade that has occurred in the last three years. The world would find itself in a domino cycle going against the exchange of food, oil, raw materials, industrial equipment and manufactured goods.

The survey, prepared by the UN department of economic and social affairs at the request of the General Assembly, traces the problems to 1971. That was the year Western countries began a series of currency realignments, including two devaluations of the United States dollar. These had the desired effect of increasing world trade, particularly for the U.S., which wanted to make up its balance-of-payments deficit.

In 1972 and 1973, the export market became the single most important stimulus to production in a majority of industrialized countries, among them West Germany, Britain, France the U.S., where price controls also made it more attractive to sell goods abroad than at home.

World trade reached an estimated $370 billion in 1973, up 37 per cent from 1972, or a record 25 per cent even if measured in pre-devaluation dollars.

This in turn increased demand for raw materials. However, suppliers were unable to increase production quickly enough to meet the short-run demand, so, the survey notes, "markets remained generally unsatisfied and prices rose rapidly."

By the end of 1973, lumber prices were averaging 50 per cent above 1972, pulp prices 60 per cent higher; the increase in metal prices ranged from 14 per cent for aluminum to a doubling for copper and a trebling for zinc. For the major non-ferrous metals as a group, the price index at the end of 1973 was about 70 per cent higher than a year earlier. The New York price for natural rubber trebled in two years.

Food exports began a similar boom, though for different reasons. The survey attributes the rise in demand to population growth, bad weather and increased meat consumption in rich countries.

Onto this scene came the doubling and redoubling of oil prices.

That gave members of the Organization of Petroleum at least $60 billion in extra cash in 1974. Most of it would otherwise have remained in the control of Europe, the U.S. and other rich countries.

What the survey terms a "general deceleration" of economies is occurring as oil-consuming countries struggle to pay this bill. The deceleration reaches into domestic economies in the form of lay-offs and production cuts. If people losing their jobs begin to put the blame on imports, then governments may react with new trade barriers.

At the same time, the enlarged output of raw materials stimulated by last year's high prices is coming on the market. However, industries unsure of continued foreign markets may be hesitant to buy.

Copper already is becoming available in larger amounts, but demand is sagging because of such things as auto production cuts. So prices have fallen to less than half what they were in April. An organization formed by four major copper-exporting countries—Chile, Peru, Zaire and Zambia—has decided to cut production by 10 per cent to try to boost prices.

Exporters of a number of other commodities have formed OPEC-like organizations or agreed to co-operate to protect or increase prices.

Eccentric Police Official Resigns His Post in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — Brazil's most eccentric police commissioner and self-appointed guardian of public morals is in trouble again.

Commissioner Moacir Bellot first shot into the headlines when he had hundreds of dogs killed because he considered their casual sex in the streets was a bad example to children.

He now has been relieved of his duties "at his own request" after being taken hostage in a bizarre prison escape and then freed.

At a news conference after his release by the eight prisoners who had seized him, 49-year-old Bellot said he had not been harmed because they recognized his machismo—the much-prized masculine virility of Brazilians — and he in turn praised theirs.

Machismo or not, five of the convicts were shot dead during the manhunt which followed their escape. Bellot said he wanted to be released from his duties because of fatigue and showed no remorse about his moral fervor.

"Long hair is a byproduct of homosexuality," the mild-looking, bespectacled commissioner said.

Asked if he was not being a little too square, he retorted: "I don't mind being square. It is by being round, like so many young people today, that one rolls right into the abyss."

It was the latest in a long series of tribulations brought upon the commissioner by his crusade in defence of the moral survival of the world.

In his peregrination through 22 local police districts in Rio de Janeiro state in the last 10 years he has arrested bikini-clad swimmers at a beach resort, banned young lovers from courting after 10 p.m., torn trousers he considered too tight and proclaimed a law banning liquor to those he held to be heavy drinkers.

He has been censured and disciplined several times but returned to the defence of morals and the family as fresh as ever.

Such is his reputation that mothers in some Rio municipalities scare their children into obedience with the threat: "If you don't behave, I'll call Bellot".

Bellot began life as a carpenter but by hard study won two diplomas, one as a primary school teacher and the other in law.

In 1964 he was accepted in an examination for police commissioner and it was not long before the puritanical brimstone of his edicts was searing the newspaper headlines.

In Brazil local police commissioners have wide powers and behave rather like the sheriffs of the old wild west.

Bellot's first major act was the order to poison all the "stray" dogs in Parati.

A public outcry followed the reported killing of some 400 dogs, including the pet of the butcher who prepared special strychnine-poisoned meat for the commissioner. Bellot retorted that only 225 had been dispatched. It was not merely their sexual proclivities but the fear of the spread of rabies which necessitated the measure, he added.

"When I arrived in Parati, I found more dogs than people," he said.

Low-interest Loans Available For High Water and Ice Damage

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Owners of shoreline lands in Trenton are eligible for low-cost loans to repair or upgrade property damaged by the high water levels of Lake Ontario during the last two years.

Properties along the Trent River and the Bay of Quinte, as in the rest of Lake Ontario's shoreline areas, have been subject to flooding due to high levels of water.

A federal government environment ministry official said Thursday this area experienced a 4.6-foot above-average water level last year. The level was only slightly below a 20-year high experienced in 1973 when the lake level was 5.1 feet above normal when it peaker in mid-June.

This year, the rise in lake levels is projected below the highs of the last two years.

The ministry official said if this spring and early summer are excessively wet, the lake will rise only 4.1 feet above the 242.8 feet the lake sits above sea level.

Any damage that could result to shoreline properties can be repaired through provisions of the Shoreline Properties Assistance Act.

The act does not restrict the availability of such loans only to damage done by lake waters. It also applies to that done by all other bodies of water plus damage by ice.

Although Trenton-proper and surrounding municipalities sustained some bank erosion and high-water related damage, its precise extent will not be known until the provincial government releases a definative report later this year.

Damage sustained by Trenton shoreline land-holders can be repaired by applying to the municipality for financial assistance. Through the town, money can be borrowed at an eight per cent interest rate, lower than that now available through commercial financing.

Applications for low-cost funds are made in the following manner:

A property owner calls in a contractor and the town building inspector to estimate the cost of any repairs to damaged property.

Once an estimate has been made, the owner applies to the municipality for a loan for 90 per cent of the lowest estimate. The town in turn, sells debentures to the ministry of economics, treasury and intergovernmental affairs to cover the loan.

Upon completion of the work, a certificate is issued by the building inspector and the job contractor is paid. The property owner repays the loan on his tax bill over a 20-year period at an annual rate of $10.20 per $100 of the total loan figure.

Since the act was first passed in May, 1973, no resident of Trenton has applied for funds under its provisions. A borrowing bylaw to allow town council to act as a go-between for shuttling money from the province to a land-holder has not been passed.

Little Objection Voiced To Trenton's Land Need

TRENTON — The reeves of Sidney and Murray townships are willing to sit down at the table with Trenton to discuss the release of some township land to the town for industrial use.

Both Murray reeve Harry Lafferty and Sidney reeve Gordon Wilman said Thursday they are receptive to a suggestion by Trenton councillor Ron Price to hold semi-official preliminary talks over a possible land deal.

"We're always wide open for anything," said reeve Lafferty.

Reeve Wilman said "We're willing to sit down and talk to see what they want."

He said Sidney township, which has an agreement with Trenton for the supply of town water but does not have one for sewer services, will need to decide what it wants in return for any land it may give Trenton.

Reeve Lafferty said his township would co-operate with any as-yet undisclosed requests from the town, but such land would have to be used for a specific purpose.

"As far as taking a chunk of land and letting it sit there, that's not good for anybody," he said. He didn't feel his council would be receptive to such a suggestion.

On the other hand, if such land is needed for a specific industry that would be of benefit to the entire Quinte region, it would likely receive little opposition from his council, he said.

The reeve said his township has previously co-operated with Trenton, as in the case of the FBI Foods Ltd. plant on Dufferin St., and will likely continue to do so.

Should any plans for annexation develop from the talks, he sees no opposition coming from the provincial government if both municipalities are in agreement.

As yet, no date has been set for an initial meeting.

Trenton's industrial and economic development committee is to meet today to discuss what overtures it will make to the two neighboring townships.

Councillor Ron Price, a committee member and the man who first suggested the semi-official meetings, said Thursday he does not expect any firm decisions to be made at the meeting.

Museum to Add Exhibits

AMELIASBURG — The museum board preparing for the re-opening of the township's historical centre May 18 (the Sunday before Victoria Day this year) has planned several surprises for visitors.

Harry Bisdee, starting his seventh consecutive term as curator, following a meeting of the board Wednesday night, reported changes in the displays would include new showpieces of interest while some of the others would be enlarged.

The board's budget for new construction and renovations this year has been greatly reduced although later on two small buildings may be added, the spokesman said.

The 1975 museum board comprises Harry Bisdee, curator; Rev. Maurice McLeod, Mac Wallbridge, Frances Young, Reg Barber and council members, Deputy-reeve Gordon Babbitt, and Councillor Paul Boyd.

Pancake Supper Planned

WELLINGTON — A pancake supper will be held on February 11, Shrove Tuesday, at St. Andrew's Parish Hall in Wellington. Proceeds from this annual event will be used to suppor at child in Kenya, Africa.

Stirling Prepares For Bash

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — This town will never be the same after the first annual Homecoming Weekend is over. Stirling is noticeable for its dryness, but when the four-day weekend comes February 27 — March 2, it will be quite wet.

The Beckoning Arms Tavern will be serving frothy, bubbly brew at the community hall.

The festival has grown from two days and an evening to three-and-a-half-days. At a meeting held Thursday night by organizers of the occasion, which will raise money for a new Stirling district arena, former deputy-reeve Bob Fallis told the group there is going to be a pub set up Thursday night, February 27.

"What are you going to call it?" school board trustee Don Williams enquired.

"The Beckoning Arms Tavern," Mr. Fallis replied.

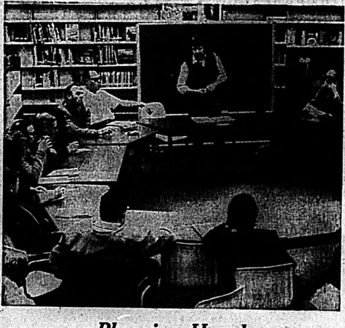
Mr. Fallis went on to say that it was his personal feeling that the local teen recreation club should not be moved out of the community hall Friday, Feb. 28 so something else could be held there.

"They have contributed to the village, and I don't want to see them bumped," he said.

School principal George Patton solved that problem by saying the teens could use the Senior Public School, where the meeting was being held by the homecoming weekend committee.

So that means the tavern will be in operation Friday night as well. Otherwise, the only local oasis would have been the legion.

The committee said it wants the whole town to turn out for the torchlight parade. Doug Patterson said "Everybody should dress up in whatever goofy costume you can get, and bring a noisemaker. We want the people participating in the parade, not watching it." The parade will be held Saturday evening, March 1.



Planning Hoopla

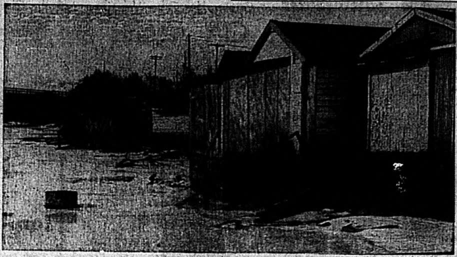
Ted Reid, president of the Stirling Rotary Club talks to the committee organizing the first annual Stirling Homecoming Weekend (February 27—March 2). The group met at the senior public school Thursday evening. The weekend will be highlighted by the Family Brown at the Fiddlar Mills Jamboree. The fun-filled weekend is to raise funds for a new Stirling district arena.

Four Charged In Melee

MADOC — Three Belleville men and a Shannonville man were charged following a bottle-throwing melee at the Madoc Hotel Thursday night.

William Thomas Barlow, 20, 6 Elgin St., Belleville was charged with causing a disturbance; Melvin Douglas Baptiste, 19, Shannonville, charged with being intoxicated in a public place; David Charles Irwin, 23, 25 Albion St., Belleville was charged with causing a disturbance, impaired driving, and having a blood-alcohol content in excess of .08; and Gordon William Graham, 23, 52 North Front St., Belleville was charged with having liquor in a place other than his residence.

The four men [illegible] charges in Madoc court March 17.



Money Available

Owners of these boathouses along the Trent River in Trenton can get low-cost loans from the provincial government to repair or rehabilitate properties damaged by ice or high water levels. A 1973 provincial act provides for loans at eight per cent for up to 90 per cent of the cost of any work done by a contractor on a property. The act applies to all lands bordering on provincial bodies of water.

Paper Drive Continues Despite Price Slump

MADOC — The Tri-Town Paper Drive, sponsored by Madoc High School, will celebrate its first anniversary this weekend with hopes of a successful coming year and a return to normal prices for waste paper.

Carl Winterburn, a Madoc High teacher and project organizer, will be at the Madoc depot at the IGA food store parking lot Saturday with his crew of students and boy scouts to begin another year of work.

Mr. Winterburn said Thursday additional help is required to assist in loading and anyone interested is welcome.

Hours of collection are from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the first Saturday of each month. "Even though the price has been lower, we are experiencing some return to the normal prices, expected by spring," he said. "In the meantime, this causes another change. In order to maintain our price, we must load the van while it waits to eliminate a second trip," he pointed out.

Several changes were necessitated over the past year "to make the operation practical," outlined Mr. Winterburn. The dropoff depot at Tweed has been moved to just behind the Red and White food store lot near the Red Barn.

And the Marmora dropoff now is at the town building by the tennis courts, he said.

Mr. Winterburn said the drive has received "generous support" from Centre Hastings citizens. All kinds of paper are needed, but newsprint is preferred.

Education Priorities Need Consideration

BLOOMFIELD — Quality education is a main goal of the Prince Edward County Board of Education and priorities must be assigned to school programs says board vice-chairman Harmon Montgomery, trustee for Ameliasburg.

"Over the next few months we will be struggling to stretch the limited number of dollars available to make the best possible use of our human resources," he says in The Froum, a board news publication.

"Then we must decide which programs are of first importance. Society is expecting more and more services from education."

Mr. Montgomery commented the education dollar is fixed, so a limit must be placed.

"For certain, there must be adequate emphasis on the mastery of the basic skills," he said.

"All of us want one thing — a system of education whose chief aim is the good of our children. Young people crave genuine leadership and useful training. Education is not only a matter of training the mind, but of training conduct too. So, education must include moral education," he added.

Mr. Montgomery concluded, "Probably one of the most God-pleasing things we can do is provide conditions in whcih students can grow physically, mentally, morally, emotionally and socially."

Picton Teens Get Centre

PICTON — After-school recreation centre for teens will be promoted this winter through activity programs at the County Centre and Prince Edward Collegiate Institute in Picton.

In the upstairs hall at the County Centre a youth drop-in centre opens today. Activities will be programmed for high school aged groups. Recreation at the arena is offered Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

At PECI teens are invited to play badminton, volleyball or basketball each Monday night beginning at 7 p.m.

The Publishing Field

Eric Segal wrote a book called Love Story which was made into a film and both book and film won wide acclaim.

The book's literary merit may have been ordinary enough, but for many who lean to soap opera the bit about love meaning never having to say you're sorry ensured its place in contemporary writing.

Whether a work by Moose Jaw native Earl L. Knickerbocker, currently on the bookstands, will achieve similar impact, is another thing. Entitled Love Affair, it is Mr. Knickerbocker's first novel.

(We're told in the bibliography that Mr. Knickerbocker, a handsome man with a beard, has been alternately a teacher and an educational consultant, and lives on a farm near London with his wife and four children, grows corn and soya beans and, by way of contrast, operates a private tennis club. For good measure, he is also a portrait painter.

In short, a man of creativity, initiative and determination.

But there is something of modesty and humility too, for the book is dedicated to Paul, a fellow dreamer and striver."

There is some of Mr. Knickerbocker's own poetry, by way of an introduction to the book, and if there were nothing else these lines of verse alone are memorable. About a girl on a beach somewhere, the poem has an ethereal, haunting quality.

Oh yes . . . the book is a Pocket Books edition from Simon and Schuster of Canada Ltd.

Which is the kind of thing that has been the subject of discussion by publishing people at Trent University in recent days, and it's ironic but the constituency of State Secretary Hugh Faulkner, who is in the doghouse because his proposals for helping Canadian publishing are seen as inadequate, is up Peterborough way.

That aside, there seems to be general agreement that Canadian sovreignty in the publishing field is a good deal less than absolute, even allowing for the government's plan to add another $1.5 million a year to the Canada Council's $4-million aid program for publishers and writers, along with other measures.

There was talk too of "literary pollution" — by the executive of an established Canadian publishing company — on the part of some of the small new publishing houses . . . of publishers who were merely "hobbyists."

So there are jealousies as well, and an element of superiority among some, in what in large part is a struggling industry in Canada, and these could be further hindrances to achieving that greater degree of national control over what is written and published here at home. Clearly, we have not heard the end of the debate in this branch of the communications field.

Western Know-how

Notice the distribution of some of that bilingualism know-how among the potential leaders of the Conservative party?

Parliamentary correspondent Stewart MacLeod was running over the possibles the other day and among them were two from the West who either speak French or soon will.

First the one who speaks it fluently is Joe Clark, 34, the MP for Rocky Mountain, Alta., and a former president of the PC party's student federation.

The other is John Fraser, a 43-year-old Vancouver lawyer who is taking one of those immersion courses. A fact which as MacLeod observes astutely, might or might be of significance.

In the leadership stakes that is. After all, Robert Stanfield labored mightily at the French fact, and the language as well, so that he might understand, and be understood, in La Belle Province.

Note also that here we have two westerners — and no evidence of western antagonism to the learning of French.

As it is, you don't necessarily have to plunge into those immersion palavers. There is so much from the grocery store and in the mail these days that is couched in both languages — from the breakfast flakes packet to the family allowance cheque.

With what is left of the high school French, and with both the English and French text in front of you, there is a lot that can be picked up in spare moments at home.

Ottawa Has Other Worries… Like the Olympics

CIA Agents are Small Bananas Beside Communist Spies

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Mel Hurtig, Canadian nationalist, book publisher and the former chairman of the Committee for an Independent Canada, charges there are about 50 CIA (Central Intelligence Agency) agents working in Canada. He hasn't proved it, probably can't and this columnist doesn't believe it.

Given the disastrous record of CIA activities in other hemispheric countries like Chile, Bolivia and Uruguay, I am less worried how many are here, than I am about the other side of the street, the ever-present professionals in intelligence in the Communist-bloc embassies in Ottawa.

If nationalist Hurtig is genuinely concerned about espionage in Canada, he should concentrate on intelligence operations which have remained quiet and as far as we can tell, are much more efficient than the over-publicized CIA. Here are a few revelations:

Does he know the Chinese have a full general of army intelligence in Ottawa or that the Soviet naval attache there is believed to be a nuclear submarine specialist or that Ottawa tossed out a Hungarian trade official four years ago because he was active as a member of Hungarian army intelligence?

Does he know that all three members of the Soviet Tass news agency attached to the Ottawa Press Gallery a few years ago were middle-rank officers of both the KGB, Soviet equivalent to the CIA and Soviet army intelligence?

Ottawa in late 1945 was the scene of a major post-war spy scandal when Igor Gouzenko, the Soviet embassy cipher clerk almost failed to convince any authority in Ottawa he had enough documents to prove Western experts, including Canadians, had revealed many atomic bomb secrets to the Russians.

Mr. Hurtig claims the RCMP shares files with the CIA. But whose files, Mr. Hurtig? If they are, for example, the records of about 20 world-renowned Marxist intellectuals we have permitted to teach here, either on one-year vias or as permanent residents, then I would be worried too.

But Hurtig should be reminded our limited security and military forces currently face a major problem of surveillance, keeping track of world terrorists who might descend on the Montreal Olympics next year to repeat the Munich atrocities of 1972.

This means we are already co-operating with the FBI, Scotland Yard and other police agencies, if necessary sharing files with them of known terrorists.

The armed forces who already have a contingency plan for coping with possible Montreal terrorists in 1972, now are deeply worried that recent troop cuts will make a possible policing of Montreal in 1976 very difficult.

As a Canadian I'm more worried about the possibility of another Munich at Montreal next year, already being planned somewhere in the world, than about a few roaming and presumably confused CIA agents who won't find many deep dark secrets in Canada.

How about you, Mr. Hurtig?

Cloak-and-Dagger on Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (CP) — A cold feeling of concern is developing over the prospect of a steady stream of spies trooping up Capitol Hill to share their secrets with a select body of senators.

Security was one of the main items of consideration Wednesday as the 11-man select committee on intelligence activities went behind closed doors to hold its first organizational meeting.

The committee—to investigate the activities of such United States bodies as the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and the defence department—will be similar to the seven-man body which peeled the wraps off the Watergate political espionage scandal.

And that is exactly the main point of concern.

Confidential information and testimony leaked in an ever-increasing flood from the Watergate investigation and some sources are afraid that something similar will happen this time.

As a result, the Senate has required its select panel to write rules against any disclosures of unauthorized information.

It also demands rules against "the disclosure, outside the select committee, of any information which would adversely affect the intelligence activities of the CIA in foreign countries."

In addition, an effort will be made to keep the committee staffs as small as possible—despite a general feeling among reporters that more Watergate leaks came from the senators themselves than ever emanated from their clerks and aides.

The matter of secrecy is not the only echo of Watergate.

Senator Frank Church (Dem. Idaho), chairman of the new body, says: "I don't anticipate this investigation is going to be a television extravaganza."

Similar sentiments were uttered when the Watergate panel was set up, yet the Watergate hearings became a long-running spectacular.

Mike Mansfield of Montana, leader of the Senate Democrats, says: "There can be no whitewash in this inquiry, nor is there room for a vendetta."

Similar chords were struck when the Watergate panel convened—yet, toward the end, if no outright vendetta had appeared, there were signs of party-line splits on several points.

Senator Howard Baker (Rep. Tenn.), vice-chairman of the Watergate committee, but only a spear-carrier this time out, is the only Watergater on the new panel and it is clear he hears the echoes.

Already, he has warned the CIA against destroying any files or materials necessary to the investigation.

"I hope we do not have a repetition of the wholesale destruction of magnetic tapes which was done by the CIA just before the Watergate inquiry opened," he says.

The broad question is whether the CIA engaged in illegal domestic activities. There is also the charge that the spy agency kept files on the private lives of congressmen.

'Know-how'

West German information service

Frequently "know-how" is proposed as the industrial countries' major contribution to new schemes by which that know-how would be combined with petroleum revenues and put to work in the least-developed economies.

Precisely what is know-how? Statistics to document it are few, but here is one from the Federal Republic of Germany: It awarded nearly half a million — 491,826 — pattents from 1949 through 1973, the latest count shows.

Davis Now Accessible But Cagey

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Since that startling Gallup poll of a few weeks ago Premier Davis has been having a new love affair with the press.

Often accused over the years of being unapproachable and of keeping information to himself the premier has quite abruptly become Mr. Front Page.

He has welcomed the press into his office and generally has tried to lean over to be accommodating.

Personally I have never been very much one of the anti-Davis news faction.

The leader of a government doesn't have an easy time in handling the press.

He has to be careful in what he says or he could be in trouble.

A few adjectives in the wrong place or a careless slip of the lip and the roof can be off.

And in its part the press very often misses the implications of this.

To large sections of it, news any news, is a sacred right and it can become highly annoyed when it doesn't get everything it wants.

Actually whatever deterioration there has been in news handling here well pre-dates Davis.

Our real blossom time as newspaper men at Queen's Park was during the Frost days of the fifties.

Then we were all print men and there weren't too many of us.

The premier usually called us into the council room after the weekly cabinet session and he would spend an hour or more briefing us.

A good deal of the information would be of a background nature and not to be attributed. But we had a good grasp of what was going on.

But then two things happened. One was that certain papers took the policy of refusing off-the-record information.

The second was that television and radio reporters started swarming in, and their needs were not for interpretation but for quick newsy items.

The calibre of reporting deteriorated and by the time John Robarts took office he pretty well cut out press briefings.

Quite frankly because some of the questioning was inane.

Is the new Davis tactic working?

No, reporters are now complaining that he doesn't tell them anything.

Bankers Get Some Home Truths From American and They Love It

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer-Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

There's no business like the banking business.

What other business would hold a conference for hundreds of its people, invite a U.S. professor to deliver the principal address, and cheer him to the rafters after he has told them that bankers have had a license to steal?

That was Paul S. Nadler's way of jolting the bankers into a realization that a revolution in banking is under way—and that some of them may not survive it beyond the 1980s.

Prof. Nadler of Rutgers University, at the recent conference of the Canadian Bankers Association, put it this way:

"Go into any Canadian town. Who owns the biggest building in town? The biggest bank.

"Who owns the second-biggest building? The second-biggest bank."

Banks grew to their enormous size and power, Nadler contended, through a combination of factors—making the public fear them, ultra-conservative business practices (a retiring employee, asked to name the biggest change in banking during his 50-year career, replied: "Air conditioning"), and super-safe investments (holding 99 per cent cash, plus one per cent government securities to diversify the risk).

Nadler, as you can see, could be called the rich man's Joey Bishop. (His best line: "I'm from New Jersey, and business conditions are so bad there the Mafia has had to lay off six judges.")

But he had a serious message for both bankers and their customers: The age-old routine—ordering a product or service, receiving a bill, writing a cheque, putting it in an envelope, mailing it (the riskiest step) and waiting for the other party to receive it and put it through the second bank—is clearly on the way out.

Why? Because the administrative costs are too high (an average of 70 cents per cheque, according to Nadler), the sheer volume of cheques is expanding so fast (1.3-billion of them in Canada last year), and the incidence of fraud and other crimes is reducing the acceptability of cheques.

"A cheque is no longer negotiable in the United States, and little by little the same problem will come to Canada,' Nadler said—meaning that cheques are not negotiable at banks where the bearer is not known personally.

If Nadler is right, the coming revolution will be welcomed by ordinary Canadians.

Instead of being stuck without funds in an emergency in a distant city, where you may not be able to persuade a bank teller to call your home bank even at your own expense, you could have instant access to your bank account anywhere, at any time, through a card with a personalized magnetic strip.

That card and its strip, when inserted into computer terminals that could be almost as numerous as telephones, will provide instant access to your bank account.

Nadler noted that the U.S. merchandising giants, Sears Roebuck and Co., already has ordered 30,000 such terminals to be used at points of sale. Buy a pair of shoes, insert your card in the machine, and—zip—you are $25 poorer and Sears is $25 richer.

Not everyone will be caught up in the revolution. A sizeable minority will always use cash—and another minority won't be plugged into the system because of unsatisfactory credit.

But on balance, the forthcoming swing to an electronic payments transfer system looks like a boon for an increasingly mobile Canadian people.

Yardmen's Band Seeks More Support

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

As a longstanding member of the Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps I am appalled by the lack of support and acknowledgement we have received from the officials of the City of Belleville.

It is almost heartbreaking to work so hard here at home and then go on tour to do field shows, parades, etc., travelling over 500 miles in Ontario and the United States in which Belleville's name, and our own, was well represented, and to receive more encouragement and enthusiasm for what we are doing than we have here locally.

We have done many things that would discourage the hardiest drum corps enthusiast: practising in the pouring rain three hours before a competition; doing a show with a hurricane warning out in Wisconsin, sleeping on high school and church floors for nine days, doing up to three appearances daily in the meantime.

With all organizational problems solved and foreseeing no other problems we now encounter a lack of support in that the city has purchased the St. George's Mission which we are using as a clubhouse.

They have given a formal okay to the Recreation Commission to use it for storage purposes. At this time it would seriously hamper our training programs as we need all the space available to us.

A lot of people have the impression that we just receive money from the Benefit Fund and do nothing to justify our practices on Sunday afternoons, completely false. Between November and December of 1974 we did many parades just to earn money to help defray our expenses.

If anyone doubts our worth as one of this areas largest goodwill ambassadors, drop down to our clubhouse on Station Street. Watch our practies on Sunday afternoons, talk to our directors and instructors, Mr. Hugh Bondy, Mr. Tony Street, Mr. Bob Peters, Mr. Paul Capobianco, Mrs. Evelyn Monkley and myself, but most of all talk to the 60 to 70 teenagers and young adults that make up the Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps. We are proud of it and work hard for it. And for Belleville.

Why can't Belleville be proud of us?

SALLY FINKLE

Thanks Expressed to Blood Donors

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Last week the citizens of Belleville were asked to share with others their life blood. The tremendous response was very gratifying and indicated to those of us who are involved in this project, that people are willing to co-operate when asked to do so.

From a statistical view, 1083 persons volunteered their blood during the three day clinic and of that number 989 actually made a donation. This exceeds by 400 the number who responded at the same period last year.

I am very pleased to acknowledge this wonderful response on behalf of the Belleville branch and Ontario division of the Red Cross and of people everywhere who benefit from this life-giving blood.

The Belleville branch of the Red Cross recognizes the effort made by the Belleville Jaycees who volunteered their assistance many weeks ago. The Jaycees carried on a complete program to acquaint people with the need for blood and consequently the need for local people to be blood donors.

There are many other organizations and individuals who contributed to the success of these clinics. It is impossible to mention everyone but I would like to express thanks to Loyalist College for permitting a clinic at the College on Tuesday, to The Intelligencer and Radio Station C.J.B.Q for coverage both before and during clinic time, to the many merchants and business establishments who supported our request for donors, to the dozens of volunteers who staff the clinic, but above all to those 1083 people who responded.

I'm sorry to have one word of regret. At certain periods when many donors were present it was necessary for some to wait for long periods. We are sorry this occurred but we do thank you for being so patient and waiting.

Lest you feel that we have surpassed our quota I will give you one other statistic. Last year the Belleville Hospital used 7855 units of blood while the total collected at all clinics held in Belleville, was 1857. We are grateful for the wonderful start we have made in 1975 but we do need blood donors. Our next clinic will be on Thursday, March 27, afternoon and evening, at the Masonic Temple. See you there.

MERRITT M. HACKETT
Blood Donor Chairman.

CSAO and its Retired' Members

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

CSAO President, C.J. Darrow wrote recently of the union's "thousands of loyal dues-paying members" in a context suggesting that the CSAO is duty-bound to uphold these members' rights and interests.

It disturbs me deeply therefore, to realize that the CSAO continues to give only token consideration to the thousands of its loyal servants who are now retired. Servants who have accumulated a combined total of thousands of dues — paying years. Can these retired CSAO members be now so easily forgotten?

Yes, we do receive Topical, and can follow the actions of the CSAO holding out for a 61.5 per cent salary increase and then settling for a 29 per cent increase. Consider how a salary increase like that would have boosted my pension had I not been forced to retire! Compulsory retirement at 65 cheated me of two things — the right to work productively for another five years — and of equal importance it has denied me a chance to substantially increase my salary — thereby qualifying for a higher pension.

Although I received a small pension increase some time ago, it was nothing approaching a realistic assessment of the economic situation and the cost of living in Ontario today.

I would ask those of you who are still working to consider this — one day you will be retired and you will be 'locked in', just as we now are, to a pension system that makes little provision for an escalating cost-of-living index.

Adequate and effective planning for your retirement must take into consideration not only your financial situation at the date of your retirement, but also the many years following — years when you will continue to require comfortable housing, transportation and scores of consumer goods — and years, my friends, when the largest single debilitating factor will be a sense of unutterable helplessness.

Rent Cut Ordered By Court

TORONTO (CP) — A county court judge has ordered Philip Wynn, a Toronto landlord, to give a $20-amonth rent reduction to several tenants who brought an application against him.

Judge Hugh O'Connell also ordered Mr. Wynn's company, Pajelle Investments Ltd., to hire security guards for the twin-tower buildings where the tenants live, repair the intercom and buzzer system, put locks on common doors and garage doors, fix the fire alarm system, repair the garbage chutes, air conditioning, elevators and swimming pool and clean up common areas.

The judgment in favor of Parkdale Community Legal Services, the group acting for the buildings' 700 tenants, some of whom have have refused to pay their rent, is to be appealed in divisional court.

Judge O'Connell said current landlord-tenant legislation recognizes the right of tenants to withhold rent.

Theodore Matlow, Mr. Wynn's lawyer, said he has "never seen anything like this judgment before" and wants the rent issue ruled on in a higher court.

Price Boost Half Forecast

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Dairy officials say consumer milk prices will increase to 34 cents a quart Feb. 10, half the six-cent increase predicted a few weeks ago.

The price of other dairy products will go up at the same time and a further milk price increase may come early in April, they say.

The increase is lower than expected because the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, despite demands from some farmers for "substantial" increases, decided Wednesday to hold the line on prices paid to producers, at least until April 1.

Grading Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — The agriculture department's food-grading system leads to the wasting of good food that might be used to help the poor, Liberal Herb Gray (Windsor West) said in the Commons Thursday.

Mr. Gray, dropped as consumer affairs minister soon after the July 8 election, quoted agriculture officials as saying that an average of between 20 and 30 per cent of produce fails to meet federal government standards, even though nothing is wrong with the produce from a nutritional point of view.

Plans Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Thursday he hopes to propose changes this year eliminating discriminatory clauses from the Indian Act.

"What is required is that final consultation with the Indian people be completed sometime this year," he said in the Commons. "I hope then that we can go forward with the proposed changes."

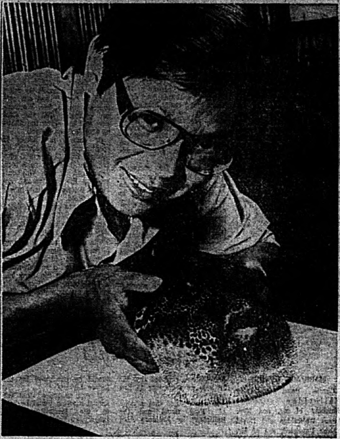
Marchand Offers Seat

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand offered his job Thursday to any opposition critic capable of running the railways without interruptions in service.

"I can't make any promises the trains are going to run 24 hours a day," he said in the Commons.

"If anybody here can make this promise . . . please come and take my seat."

Rail service interruptions, caused by labor disputes, derailments and other factors, are "part of our way of life," he said to cheers from colleagues and jeers from opposition MPs.



Pufferfish

Onlookers would have reason to believe that Tim Low of the Vancouver Public Aquauium is examining one of the aquarium's Hue hue Pufferfish for an extreme case of swollen glands. In fact, the fish is demonstrating its natural defensive reaction to possible danger by inflating itself with water or, as in this case, air. Hue hue Pufferfish live principally near the reefs of Tahiti.

Munro Says Wage Increases Not Primary Inflation Cause

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro, appearing to differ with Finance Minister John Turner, said in the Commons Thursday he does not consider wage and salary increases to be "the primary cause of inflation."

Mr. Turner told a Toronto audience earlier this week that "now the major driving force (in inflation) is coming from the rapid escalation of wage and salary costs. . . ." Later, the finance minister softened the statement by saying that workers alone will not be asked to bear the brunt of any government attack on inflation.

Wednesday, Mr. Munro told a Regina audience that unions "should not, and must not, be viewed as some sort of pariah—or as a whipping boy—for a range of real or imagined sins. . . ."

In the Commons Thursday, Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) asked whether the labor minister would say that "contrary to the view expressed by the minister of finance, that wage and salary increases are not the primary cause of inflation?"

Mr. Munro said that if Mr. Alexander read Mr. Turner's entire speech "I think he would find that the minister was not laying responsibility for the inflationary situation on labor at all."

"He was talking about all sectors of the economy having to exercise restraint in order to bring the situation under control."

Under further questioning, Mr. Munro said that "I would not consider them (wage and salary increases) the primary cause of inflation, but I do believe . . . that every element within the economy has to exercise some degree of restraint if we are to bring inflation under some degree of control."

In his Regina speech, Mr. Munro said that only in recent months have real earnings by manufacturing workers edged ahead of inflation.

Shift of Work to U.S. In Canada's Interest

OTTAWA (CP) — It was in Canada's interest for United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. to shift government - subsidized production to the United States from its strike-bound Longueuil, Que., plant, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Thursday.

Replying to Commons questions from Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, he said the government knew in March that the company intended to move work to its U.S. parent's plant in Hartford, Conn.

The company was struck by the United Auto Workers Union in January, 1974. It moved production from Canada last fall, but has subsequently returned most of it.

Mr. Gillespie said the company move was necessary to protect Canadian jobs and to meet existing orders for turbine engines.

United Aircraft has received $73 million in government development aid, contracts tabled in the Commons Monday show.

Mr. Broadbent questioned how a shift of 75 per cent of its Canadian production by United Aircraft might possibly benefit Canadian employment. Mr. Gillespie replied that if the company could not meet orders, then in the long run there would be fewer jobs in Canada.

Employment at United Aircraft currently is about 350 less than it was prior to last year's strike, when 2,600 left their jobs.

Backs Study

TORONTO (CP) — John Rhodes, minister of transportation and communications, says he will recommend to the Ontario cabinet that it support a study suggestion that the abandoned Spadina Expressway corridor be turned into a four-lane arterial route linking downtown with Eglinton Avenue.

Brother-in-law of Accused Says Abductions Suggested

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — The brother-in-law of James Lawrence Hutchison testified Thursday that Hutchison suggested kidnappings to him about 2½ years ago.

James Wilfred Nelligan, 30, of Newcastle, N.B., said during a preliminary hearing that Hutchison told him at one point if there were any "cops" involved he would have to kill them.

Hutchison, 43, and Richard Ambrose, 26, were charged last month with kidnapping Raymond Stein, 14-year-old son of Moncton restaurant owner Cy Stein, and the murder of two policemen.

Mr. Nelligan, brother of Hutchison's wife, Coleen, said Hutchison told him he wanted to kidnap either J. D. Irving of Saint John or his child.

He said they drove to Saint John and Hutchison checked the city directory at the public library.

They later drove to what he believed was Kennebecassis Drive, where he dropped Hutchison off. Hutchison later returned to the car, complaining of a dog.

Mr. Nelligan said that at a later date, Hutchison mentioned the possibility of kidnapping a Moncton restaurant owner he identified as Cy.

They drove by a downtown restaurant and home in the Jones Lake area several times, he testified.

Mr. Nelligan said he believed Hutchison was "living in a dream world" and would never commit the kidnappings.

In August, 1972, he said, he and Hutchison drove to a wooded area along what he thought was the Evangeline Road and Hutchison carried a shovel into the woods, later emerging without it.

He said Hutchison told him it was to "bury Cy."

Under cross-examination by defence lawyer Edward Bell, he said there had been bad feelings at one point between Hutchison and himself when Hutchison stuck him with a $200 telephone bill.

Mr. Nelligan talked to his brother John about his conversations and the RCMP interviewed him about three weeks after the kidnapping.

Catherine Mazerolle, 17-year-old common-law wife of Mr. Nelligan's brother John, said Hutchison came to their trailer home Dec. 11 and told her common-law husband it would take two men to kidnap Mr. Stein's girlfriend in Moncton. Mr. Stein is divorced.

Miss Mazerolle said her common-law husband attempted to talk Hutchison out of it.

Patricia Anne Donovan, 21, who also lived at the Nelligan trailer, said Hutchison came to the trailer the night of Dec. 12 and left with a pistol after telling her that John Nelligan told him he could take it.

Economic Threats Won't Move Quebec

TORONTO (CP) — The Quebec minister of industry and commerce said Thursday that economic threats will not deter the province from carrying out its language bill.

Guy Saint-Pierre said it would be "destructive, irrational and dangerous if businessmen thought for a single moment to punish Quebec for its acceptance of Bill 22."

"If there is an economic price to be paid for this decision adopting Bill 22 we shall pay it without hesistation," he said at a luncheon of the Empire Club.

The bill requires businesses in Quebec to have French names and requires companies receiving financial help from the province "to respect the French reality of Quebec." It also requires that children of immigrants not speaking English be educated in French.

Mr. Saint-Pierre said nine out of 10 immigrants to Quebec chose to have their children educated in English. The minister said that "too many people were paying token lip service to the French fact."

He said that some people objecting to French as the language of education for immigrants' children had personal reasons for their protest.

"It seems evident that English-speaking teachers who continue to oppose Bill 22 do so for reasons of their own," Mr. Saint-Pierre said. "They see it as seriously affecting them as individuals earning a living and the eventual possibility of them losing their job."

Opposition Fights Civil Service Bill

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition members of the Ontario legislature Thursday fought proposed changes to the Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act which continue to deny civil servants the right to strike.

Ted Bounsall (NDP Windsor West) labelled the legislation "one of the worst bills that I have ever seen in labor legislation anywhere, in any jurisdiction."

Eric Winkler, chairman of management board of cabinet, piloting the legislation, defended it as a "beginning" in the government effort to deal with bargaining in the public sector.

He said he was not putting the proposed changes before the legislature "as something great and final" but as "step No. 1" in the direction of resolving disputes.

The amendments, if approved, would reconstitute grievance boards on partisan lines and provide for selection of arbitration board chairmen on an ad hoc basis by the parties involved.

Mr. Winkler said many of the changes were made at the request of employee bargaining agents and while the changes did not go "as far as I myself might want to go" further changes were being considered by cabinet.

James Breithaupt (L—Kitchener) said his party could not support the bill because it failed to provide the right to strike for many employees.

Stephen Lewis, NDP leader, reviewing negotiations which led to a threatened illegal strike by civil servants Jan. 1, said he was asking the government to reconsider its bargaining process "to make sure that it will never happen again."

He said the Conservatives are systematically alienating teachers, hospital workers and civil servants with their stand and warned it would be part of the downfall of the government.

By a vote of 35 to 23, the amendments were approved in principle.

Mr. Winkler agreed to an NDP request to send the bill to standing committee review.

Trudeau Is Prepared To Talk Games Financing

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he is prepared to discuss the financially-troubled Montreal Olympics when he meets Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa this weekend, but will not raise the issue himself.

He told Roch LaSalle (PC—Joliette) that no agenda has been set for the Montreal Saturday morning meeting requested by the premier, "but I can assure you I won't raise the matter of Olympic financing, though he may."

Since the 1976 Summer Games were awarded to Montreal in 1969, Mr. Trudeau has maintained that the federal government will not pick up any deficit. A Quebec national assembly committee was told last week that a $200-million deficit is anticipated.

The prime minister will be in Montreal to attend weekend meetings of the federal Liberal party in Quebec.

Enterprise Responsible, Not 'Free'

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Thursday that businessmen should recognize that earning a profit is not their only responsibility.

In a pointed speech to a meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Gillespie said the term free enterprise system is out of date and a more appropriate term is the responsible enterprise system.

Success in developing a more responsible enterprise system will rest largely on the degree of confidence which business enterprises are able to establish among sections of the public to which the enterprise is primarily responsible, Mr. Gillespie said.

"I can identify these (sections) as five in number, and they apply equally to any business enterprise—its share holders, its employees, its customers, its suppliers, the community at large."

Making Costumes — Pins, Scissors, and Nerve!

"One thing for certain about this job, you need a lot of nerve," says Jim Westheuser, as his scissors snip across a swatch of gold brocade.

Not only does he need nerve, he needs dash and daring and imagination, grounded in accurate knowledge of fabric. For Jim Westheuser is in charge of the cutting and construction of costumes for the Belleville Theatre Guild's next production, The Knight of the Burning Pestle.

An Elizabethan comedy by Beaumont and Fletcher, the play calls for 17th century dress. And as you might expect, contemporary patterns are completely out of the question. So the Guild has started "from scratch", with a series of pastel sketches by artist Tony Lassing who has designed costumes for plays in the past.

With these drawings in hand, the next person involved is Mr. Westheuser, who talks with the director about the play and its characters, to get an idea of the color and texture that the stage clothing should be.

Mr. Westheuser, who teached grades five and six at Bayside Public School, has also worked for the Guild before, most recently on Oliver!

"Preparing costumes for that large cast was good experience that's really helping me out now," he says. Over the years, producing school plays and working with various theatre groups, Mr. Westheuser has built up a solid base of information about materials.

He knows, for example, what will drape well and what will swish or rustle. He knows when to cut on the bias to achieve a sinuous and sexy effect, and whether to use silk, georgette or crimplene. He avoids velvet — "it absorbs light and goes dead on stage' — and is perfectly happy using a torn-apart party dress to make a dandy's vest.

"Doing a job like this for amateur theatre, you soon learn the virtue of scrounging," he says. "In fact, one of the costumes for this play is made of curtains from the green room of the playhouse."

Sticking to a budget is always a painful task, but especially when you're creating 35 costumes, many of them elaborate theatrical outfits in the 17th century manner. By using bargain "ends" and old costumes re-made, Mr. Westheuser estimates that the total cost will be within the allowed $250 costume budget.

Of course, the money is spent entirely on fabrics, all labor is free. Cutting and sewing are done by volunteers, supervised by Jim Westheuser, and Eleanor Jourard, another veteran costume-maker in the Guild.

"There are probably a dozen sewers in all," says Mr. Westheuser. "I do the cutting, and they do the construction."

The cutting takes place only after a marvellous process of pinning and tucking fabrics into shape on a roughly-made dummy. By a nip here and a fold there, Mr. Westheuser quickly approximates the look he wants.

That "look' is based on hours of research through costume books and history texts. The talent lies in the ability to find an easy and sturdy way to quickly achieve a perfect illusion.

Through trial and error and figuring out and practice, Mr. Westheuser has hit upon a fast no-error way to make the puffy two-tone trousers worn by Elizabethan gentlemen. He has also discovered the advantages of draw-strings that allow the same costume to fit many sizes, and the magic of elastic, for keeping bodices up and trouser legs down.

"I started less than two weeks ago," Mr. Westheuser says, as he pins metallic ropes of fabric around a sleeve.

"It took more than 12 hours to work out the basic patterns, and after that, it's been easier, since the costumes are all pretty well variations of the same idea.

"Hats and boots are the worst to worry about, but we've got some good ideas for those now too. It's amazing what you can achieve with spray paint and glue and a little material!"

The Knight of the Burning Pestle will be presented by The Belleville Theatre Guild March 5-8 and March 12-15.

Many Women Suffer from Monthly Tension

by Alison Goddard

If you're suddenly jumpy, picking fights with your husband and getting impatient with people at work — look at your calendar to see if your menstrual period is near. Premenstrual tension is a valid medical problem for many women, and there are indications it may worsen as they get older.

How does premenstrual tension affect a woman? "She may feel depressed, she'll put on weight, she's 'witchy' for two to ten days before menstruation," observes Robert Kinch, M.D., chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Montreal General Hospital, who personally believes the syndrome accelerates for many women after age 35.

Of course not all women notice changes during their menstrual cycle. But studies show about 60 per cent of normal women do at some time in their lives. Those affected may experience mild discomfort, as water accumulates in the body tissues. Breasts, ankles and hands may swell. A three to five pound temporary weight gain is not all that uncommon.

In some cases symptoms are more severe. Dr. Katharina Dalton, reporting on ten years of menstrual research in her book, "The Menstrual Cycle," catalogues these complaints: dizziness, headaches, backaches — even irrational bhavior.

Studies of female convicts show that most violent crimes are committed one week before the menses. And in France premenstrual tension is a legal defence on the basis of temporary insanity!

two tension

Premenstrual tension differs from menstrual cramps. Surgeon and author William Nolen writes that cramps often "disappear spontaneously after the middle twenties or after a pregnancy. This doesn't happen with premenstrual tension."

In fact, it probably occurs more often. Dr. Dalton suggests the incidence of the syndrome increases with a woman's age and the number of children she has borne. Another British physician, Dr. Eric Trimmer, agrees "there is a steady increase with the age of the patient."

Dr. Kinch says "premenopausal women are very hard to treat," because they are still menstruating — but irregularly. Once a woman is definitely into menopause, he may prescribe estrogen replacement therapy to handle certain change-of-life symptoms related to declining hormone levels.

The problem with treating premenstrual tension is that medical science is not really sure what causes it. Most evidence points to an imbalance between the two sex hormones, estrogen and progestrone, but not all researchers agree. Many believe a woman's attitude toward her own femininity is important. And emotional crises such as money worries, husband trouble or changing jobs can make the syndrome even more acute.

Premenstrual tension can put a strain on the best of family relationships. "It upsets the husband who may not understand what's happening," says Dr. Kinch — himself married and the father of four daughters.

If you're susceptible to once-a-month witchiness, you owe it to yourself and everyone around you to do something about it. Schedule your calendar to avoid important dates and unnecessary pressures. Discuss it with your husband so you can both cope better. And talk with your doctor, who may advise you to avoid salt and cut down on fluids, or perhaps prescribe a diuretic, pain-killers, tranquilizers or other treatment.

TRAVEL NOTES AND NOTABLE TRAVELLERS

"He that would make his travels delightful must first make himself delightful." — Seneca.

* * *

The postman has just come.

Confidently, we put down our cup of morning coffee, happy, content, here at home, with many a wish to be elsewhere, and from the mail pick up the current copy of a favorite magazine, to find it featuring "GLOBAL TRAVEL".

Quite the last subject to capture our interest this wintry day, when we're most comfortable, warm, and - - -

The idly turning pages reveal eye-catching phrases: " - - - student travel - - - popular more than ever," - - - the famed conductor Andre Kostelanetz's first trip "was a walk across Russia", since which time he has completed "a trip around the world in 81 days - - -"

We begin reading with interest, with pleasure, each and all travel articles, and so discover travelling vicariously is for all seasons — and full of enjoyment.

To justify delight in all that pertains to travel, we recall an old Estonian saying: "If you go only once 'round the room you are wiser than he who sits still." Perhaps you also remember:

How Henry David Thoreau declared: "A traveler! I love his title. A traveler is to be reverenced as such. His profession is the best symbol of our life. Going from — toward —; it is the history of every one of us.

While Lord Dunsay says: "I think that travel comes from some deep urge to see the world, like the urge that brings up a worm in an Irish bog to see the moon when it is full."

Though Ella Maillart feels that we all hope to escape routine, which she says, demolishes imagination and enthusiasm, by travel. It enables one "to learn once more how to marvel at life in a child's way."

To be a good traveler, James A. Michener adds: "If you reject the food, ignore the customs, fear the religion and avoid the people, you might better stay home; you are like a pebble thrown into water: you become wet on the surface but you are never a part of the water."

To which Ralph Waldo Emerson further suggests: "To enjoy scenery you should ramble amidst it; let the feelings to which it gives rise mingle with other thoughts ... The beautiful is not to be stared at, but to be lived with."

"A voyage to a destination, where it may be, is also a voyage inside oneself; even as a cyclone carries along with it the center in which it must ultimately come to rest," cautions Laurens van der Post.

Josh Billings says: "I have seen folks who had traveled all over the world, and all they could tell you about it was how much it had cost them."

"I always find it worth my while to make journeys," concludes Horace Walpole, "for the joy I have in getting home again."

Recycle Old Blue Jeans into Fashionable Patchwork!

Stylish Swirls

Andrew Rutland, hair stylist, wears jigsaw denim pants while Stephenie Ruys de Perez, racecar driver and TV hostess, looks chic in jigsaw skirt and vest. Creations are by Hobbit Designs. (CP Photo)

Denim has been fashion news for so long that it's hardly news any more.

There are blue denim pants, jackets, shirts, vests and hats. In fact, the only items of clothing not currently shown in denim are underwear and socks, and even they are apt to turn up denim sooner or later.

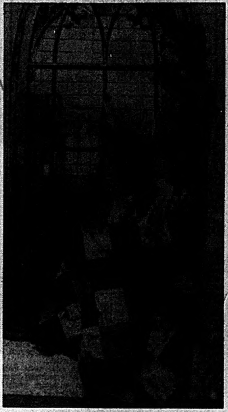
Since denim has become more costly, clothing made from good quality material have become more prestigious as well. And as a result, for the smaller budgets, there are all kinds of "denim look" clothes on the market which simulate the coarse woven appearance of real denim.

Real denim, 100 per cent cotton and 14 ounces to the yard, is still probably the best buy since it wears "like iron" for a very long time. Although among teen-aged jeans-wearers it is often a point of pride to have holes, rips and shredded knees, there eventually comes a point when even the most favored pair bite the dust.

But don't throw those jeans away! Take advantage of a new fashion trend and use the denim to put together a pair of patchwork pants or a jigsaw skirt. Used in conjunction with other fabrics, such as heavy velvet, printed floral cotton or satin, the denim patchwork can look elegant or down-home comfy.

The variety of shades that blue denim turns as it fades make it an especially attractive material to use in patchwork. A perfectly new skirt, vest or even pants can be made from pieces of material cut from the still durable sections of old jeans.

Toronto fashion this winter has hit on denim patchwork as the "new" denim look, and it's seen everywhere, from schools and offices to restaurants and theatres.



Pretty Symmetry

Maria Teresa Kadry, wife of a Toronto doctor, wears patchwork denim skirt and vest. Recycled denims are being worn everywhere in Toronto by just about everyone.

Doris Clark

Parents Should Stay Out Of Daughter's Love Life

Dear Doris: Our daughter of 22 kept company with a young man who showered her with gifts, and when he was moved to another town by his company he kept coming to see her.

Then another man started taking her out. He had been divorced twice; first marriage too young, second time because he got a girl pregnant. He has heavy debts.

Our daughter wants to invite him for a meal, but we are much against this friendship, and have forbidden her to go out with him any more.

If she runs off with him she will get no help from us. The other man - whom we favor - is heartbroken, but she has turned against the whole family and says she is going to move away from home. Are we, as parents,

Right or Wrong?

Dear R. OR W.?: Wrong according to me. You drive your girl straight into the arms of her new love, by being so dead set against him. How do you know he isn't the right one?

Besides, she is quite old enough to make up her own mind, in spite of anything you might do. If she decides to defy you, she marries under a cloud, and unhappily.

If you graciously invite this new boy friend into your home, believing the best about him, until you really know better, you give him a chance. And you give yourself a chance for a happy ending.

Dear Doris: I have a daughter eight years old who has a very good singing voice. With whom do I get in touch to give her singing lessons?

Wondering.

Dear Wondering: You know, don't you, that an eight-year-old voice has not yet developed to the point where it should be trained? The little voice box needs growth first.

Yet there are capable persons who can teach children some of the rudiments of singing, in a way that will protect that precious voice box. They learn how to stand; how to put expression into the words they sing; how to hit the notes square on and to sing against harmony.

The best place to look for the right kind of teacher is your loal conservatory or academy of music. Just be sure you have a teacher who knows that he is doing when he is working with your child's voice.

Dear Doris: When you publish a reader's letter in the column, do you choose the nom de plume?

Wouldn't Miss Your Colum.

Dear Wouldn't Miss: Sometimes I do; sometimes the reader does. The main thing is to protect the anonymity of anything that appears in print. Many questions are pretty personal.

I may pick a phrase from a letter and use it as the signature. I may use a person's first name when I know that person is glad to share a bit of philosophy with us.

But when it is an intimate family dilemma - no names appear that could possibly be recognized!

(We now have some understanding of why people at as they do. Write to Doris in care of this newspaper about your particular human problem, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

She Rhymes for Her Beer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Through the centuries, poems have been written to woo a maiden's heart, to tell of gallant deeds and to praise the beauties of nature.

But Nancy McKerracher is a throwback to the medieval court minstrels. Her verses keep her supplied with beer.

Twice the Vancouver secretary has been confronted by a faulty product from a brewery, fired off a rhyming letter of complaint to the company and received a case of free beer as a reward.

Just before Christmas, one of her friends discovered an empty bottle in her newly purchased case of Molson's Old Style. Remembering that Miss McKerracher had collected a free dozen after sending a poem of complaint to another company, the friend asked her for a repeat performance.

The poem contained six verses, the last of which read:

So I have the job to write this complaint
And I do so with a smile,
Not to be rude, unpleasant or snide,
Just requesting another
Old Style.

The poem and the empty bottle, its cap still in place, were mailed off to the brewery.

Molson's marketing manager, S. C. Cara, rose to the occasion.

Within a few days, Miss McKerracher received a cheque for the purchase price of a dozen pints and the following reply:

We read your poem with mixed emotion.
Those Old Style drinkers sure have devotion.
It's nice to know you really care
But we're sad your bottle was filled with air.

To make amends and even the score
Your bottle will be replaced by 12 more.
To sell an empty bottle
there's no rhyme nor reason.
In any event, have a happy Old Style season.

Suicide Seeks to 'Relieve' Loved Ones

Dear Ann Landers: I disagree with the person who referred to suicide as a planned manoeuvre to cause suffering or punish others. Suicide is an uncontrollable gut-level emotional urge to 'find relief. It is saying: "I'm not good enough. I'm trouble. My loved ones would be better off without me."

To those who are contemplating suicide, let me say this: Nothing is worth killing yourself over. Give yourself time. Remember that old cliche: "There is nothing to fear but fear itself." Almost always the fear is worse than the problem. Any problem.—One Who Knows

Dear One: The next letter may be of interest to you. Please read on.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the person who said, "Those who commit suicide are full of hate (often self-directed) and they want to put an end to their lives in order to punish someone for a real (or imagined) injustice. ('You'll be sorry for the way you treated me.')" That writer was violently one-sided in his appraisal.

I have contemplated suicide many times. I'm in my 50s now and I hate nobody. Nor would I kill myself to make someone sorry they treated me badly. In fact I can't think of anyone who has. My family and friends always have been patient and considerate.

I've had a great deal of counselling over a period of years but it hasn't helped. I guess I'm just tired of swimming against the tide. I'm exhausted and depressed because I can't seem to make anything work. I seem to be fighting a losing battle on every front. Life is joyless. I'm not being fair to my family because I'm a drag—a pessimist, a kill-joy. I believe the world would be better off without me. I contribute nothing.

So please, Ann, print this letter in case I do it one day. I'd hate to have those near and dear to me think I took my life to punish them. They don't deserve to carry such a guilt.—A Long-Time Reader

Dear Reader: Get a little more counselling, please, and a physical examination as well. There might be an organic reason for your depression. You sound like such a gentle soul. The world does need you—whether you think so or not. Stick around. I care.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 13-year-old girl and I hope you can find space for my letter in your column. I'll get right down to the nitty-gritty.

Most of my friends smoke. Not out in the open but secretly when they get together. The reason is they want to be considered "in." They think it makes them look like big shots—grown-up, "with it."

I want no part of that crazy foolishness. When you are 34 and the doctor tells you, "Sorry, the x-rays look like lung cancer," it will be too late. What difference will it make then to those punks you sat around with, showing off?

If I'm going to be looked up to and considered a big deal, it's going to be because I have accomplished something, or because I treat people right. I don't want to make it with a crowd that considers smoking a smart move.—Me From Schenetady

Dear You: I can add nothing to your letter but my thanks to you for writing it. Right on!

IWY:

Regional Conferences Dropped In Favor of Information Program

PARIS (AP) — Jean-Louis Scherrer is a young couture designer with a rising reputation among the moneyed private clients.

The reason apparently is that women who buy couture dresses want clothes that are attractive and on the safe side. Unfortunately, there is a thin line in fashion between the classic and the dowdy.

Scherrer's new spring collection spells money. First, a good part of it is white, from flannel to chiffon, crepe georgette and organza.

When you add up all the cleaner's bills, a white dress will wind up costing double a black one.

The day clothes, when not in white, are in navy or navy and white.

Scherrer has rediscovered the sailor suit, or, should we say in his case, the yachting outfit, complete with cap.

There are lots of white and navy flannel pants, middy blouses and capes. One pretty navy jacket with sailor collar comes in a bulky knit, and some of the sailor suits come with beaded tank tops or middy blouses underneath.

In keeping with the feeling of the last couple of seasons, the designer still is showing big coats and raincoats. The waist is cinched. The rest flows from the shoulders, yoke or skirt.

The models wore 1930s curls under their stiffened berets and thin long chiffon scarfs at the neck.

Sheerrer's dinner and long evening dresses come in all pastels or pale flower prints with matching turbans, big puffed sleeves and fluttering capelets. There was also a group of white organza bridal dresses embroidered in white flowers.

Sand Slimming

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A 50-pound bag of sand helped Mrs. Anne Viggiani lose 50 pounds of weight. She reduced from 191 pounds to 141 pounds during a nine-month period as a member of the Diet Workshop, a group weight-control program. At every weigh-in, she transferred the amount she lost from the 50-pound bag into an empty one until the original bag was empty.

Prostitution Banned

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Prostitution has been banned in Khartoum province. Khartoum, with a population just under one million, has about 100 public brothels. The law previously allowed women prostitutes but banned male prostitution.

Opens New Project

GAZA (AP) — Israel has opened a new housing project in the occupied Gaza Strip and officials say it eventually will provide 1,000 homes for Palestinian refugees at one-tenth the cost a Jewish family would pay in Tel Aviv.

Lighthouse Is Coming

The Four Seasons Hotel is bringing us the entertainment treat of the year. That great Canadian group Lighthouse will be at the Mad Mechanic from Feb. 17th to Feb. 22 inclusive. Tickets for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Saturday afternoon are $4.00 per person (plus tax); tickets for Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights are $800 per person (plus tax). And a Four Seasons special — you can stay at the Four Seasons overnight, Friday or Saturday, and see the show for just one very reasonable price of $29.50. And of course, as a guest at the Four Seasons, you have access to all the Four Seasons facilities such as the all-seasons pool and the sauna. Reserve quickly. Call the Four Seasons at 968-3411.

A Few Predictions

Dave Chalmers of Ruddy Electric's Consumer Division, 291 Coleman St., made a prediction this week about you and your home. This is the year you'll decorate — and you'll have lots of company. Because of the curtailment in building, people are going to take another look at what they have already and decide that even if it's not the castle they thought they wanted, they'll make it into one. And Ruddy Electric can certainly help there. They are expanding their selection of lighting accessories. So you have the resources of Canadian, American, Italian, Austrian, Spanish and Portuguese designers and manufacturers at your fingertips with a visit to Ruddy Electric. (P.S. The clearance on TVs and components will continue after Jan. 31).

Have Your Own Show

Donnah Cameron tells me she is going to be the guest artist at the Ladies' Day at The Belleville Club. That will be a most informative and enjoyable afternoon for those present, I'm sure. But you can have your very own showing of Donnah's work and that of her husband and daughter when you visit the Cameron Gallery, 1½ miles west of Rednersville on the Rednersville Rd. All you need do is visit the gallry on Fridays, Saturdays, or Sundays from 10 a.m. 'til 9 p.m. or Donnah would be glad to see you anytime during the week if you'll just call first at 96-1606. Donnah has a very busy teaching schedule in the evenings but she loves her work and sharing it too. So, to have your own Cameron showing, just pick up the phone.

Make February Work

Well, I'm not going to say that I'm sorry to say goodbye to January. I'm not. And the fact that February is shorter, can help me to fool myself further into a spring-like mood. And you know what happens in 'spring'. We all get urges to renovate and redecorate Highland Construction counsels you to direct a little of that spring-like energy towards making those home improvements right now, avoiding the rush. And a visit to their Home Improvement Centre, 257 North Front St. (go through laundry and down stairs) is a step in the right direction. You can see right in front of you — tile, panelling, cupboard and siding selections. You don't have to rely on a catalogue rendition. You choose and Highland will take care of the rest right now

More of Murray's Convenience

Murray's Food Market on Front St. has a new service available particularly for out-of-town shoppers. Murray cautions that he is not recommending that shoppers use their Chargex to buy groceries, but Chargex is available at Murray's for people who are travelling and require groceries. After all, what good does it do to visit the marvellous recreational and camping facilities of the Quinte area, and starve to death? Murray is thinking about our good name all the time, isn't he? Chargex for emergencies is just another thoughtful Murray way of saying that his customers matter.

Service Master Did It

Last Friday, I told you Service Master was coming to my house to clean the carpets and furniture. Well, they came for sure. It's most obvious they came! My cream shag carpet, which had suffered somewhat during the training of my dog, now shows no hint of canine intrusion; my orange velvet loveseat and chair now shout out for all to see that they are indeed orange velvet; and my green and brown striped sectional chesterfield sits there very proudly inviting someone to sit down upon its very clean fabric. You can see the difference Service Master can make at your house too — for any cleaning job. Just call 967-1672 and Service Master will take care of everything else.

Cruising In Style

Jean Smith has taken good care of your cruisewear needs. I'll tell you A very attractive and practical suggestion of hers is a three or four piece ensemble by Bievle, a German firm. You can have a long skirt, short skirt, jacket and slack combination which you can mix 'n match as the days come and go, or just as the mood hits you. And for tripping the light fantastic, Jean has the smartest and the coolest in an Israeli print or very — packable Knitalia evening dress. And cotton never locked as beautiful as Jean can show it to you in evening attire. Jean has the answers. Just go and see her at her West Wind Boutique on Hwy. No. 7 at Actinolite.

It's Not All In The Price

Gibbs and Son, 37 Albion St., who are vacuum cleaner specialists, have some good advice about buying vacuum cleaners: a high price isn't going to guarantee a good machine. The suction and cleaning power are what matters if a vacuum cleaner is going to do the job. The highest-priced machine may not be the best one. Also when buying a machine, you should enquire as to whether you can get it serviced locally. You can not get all machines serviced locally and that's where Gibbs and Son can help. They know vacuum cleaners and they sell some pretty good ones too. Ask the experts Call Gibbs and Son at 968-5384.

You Don't Have To Wait

Two things which are particularly precious to me about spring are rain (not the kind we had this week, thanks) and the softness of an April breeze. With an Aquafine Water Refiner from Moira Schuster, you don't need to stand out in an April rain to feel that soft wetness on your skin. You can have it everyday in your bath or shower, or in your wash. And winter's harshness won't take its toll in dry skin at your house either. So how can you lose? You can have an April day everyday with Aquafine. And don't forget Aquafine's safety features too for well or bay water. Call for your Aquafine water at 962-4504.

Seeing Is Believing

I dropped into Trenton Optical, 54 Bridge St. E and looked at some of the new glasses frames in that super-light, special optic material, OPTYL. One style in particular, SARDIS, which comes in a mauve-pink, blue and beige, was stunning. Glasses are just as much a part of a woman's wardrobe as her lipstick shade or perfume, and these SARDIS glasses are style personified. Trenton Optical has a glasses shape for any face and any color preference. Visit them and see for yourself. You don't need an appointment and Trenton Optical is open Wednesday afternoons too.

Gremlins At Work

Last week, I fear that the Gremlins invaded my column at the expense of Holiday Car and Truck Rentals at 11 Moira St. West and fooled around with the phone number So everyone including Gremlins, please note: The phone number for renting any fine Chrysler car or truck, or arranging long-term leasing or heavy equipment requirements, is 962-9114. And this is a number you might well keep in mind too if you are having repairs made on your car. Holiday Car and Truck Rentals is well-established with area insurance companies too. No one is hoping tht your car should meet with a mishap, but with this weather, it certainly can happen. Holiday is the firm to remember and 962-9114 the number to match.

$500-million Tax Cut Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A $500-million personal income tax break to stimulate the economy and to restrain government spending was proposed Thursday by Progressive Conservative financial critic Sinclair Stevens.

Such additional personal income tax cuts would provide most individual taxpayers with an extra $60 to $150 in 1975, Mr. Stevens said in the Commons.

The $7.9 billion the government will collect in income taxes in 1974 will increase to $11.3 billion for 1976, the York-Simcoe MP said.

"Let me remind the House that if these big-spending cabinet ministers see that kind of money available, they will think up ways and means of spending it.

"That is why we in the official Opposition say: Cut back that revenue by at least one-half a billion dollars and we will start meaningfully controlling government spending in this country."

His remarks came during debate of an income tax bill that proposes a three-per-cent 1975 tax cut on the heels of a five-per-cent reduction for 1974.

The cuts, proposed in the Nov. 18 budget, need parliamentary approval to become permanent. Aimed at helping low-income earners the most, the 1974 cut would mean benefits of between $150 and $500.

Those minimum and maximum figures would rise by another $50 and $250 respectively with the 1975 reduction taken into account.

Mr. Stevens said the government can afford easily to return $500 million to the taxpayers.

"The money is there. Right now, the government is sitting on almost $5 billion that they have with the Bank of Canada and that is there on deposit."

Cutting taxes further would "help stimulate the economy, restrain government spending and be anti-inflationary."

Mr. Stivens, who has clashed almost daily with Finance Minister John Turner since becoming finance critic last month, said there already are signs that the government's resolve to restrain its spending is weakening.

Originally, Mr. Turner had talked about holding increased spending to 15 per cent, but "I noticed today he is up to 16 per cent."

"Already they are starting to give."

New Democrats Max Saltsman (Waterloo-Cambridge) and John Gilbert (Toronto Broadview) both said the budget is regressive for most wage-earners.

Mr. Saltsman said it opens loopholes for relatively well-off taxpayers, while Mr. Gilbert said the tax proposals can be compared with "giving cake to the upper-income groups and crumbs to the lower-income groups."

If the electorate had seen the budget before last summer's election, it is likely they would have chosen a Progressive Conservative minority government, Mr. Gilbert said. That would have been preferable to the current majority Liberal government.

In addition to the opposition criticism, Toronto Liberal Bob Kaplan (York-Centre) said the budget proposal to remove land carrying costs as tax deductible items would slow the supply of serviced land and increase its price.

There were better ways to stop speculation on land.

Mr. Kaplan said some way of streamlining the required government approval for getting lots on the market should be found. This complicated process, not a deliberate delay by businessmen to drive up prices, was what formed a bottleneck in the provision of serviced land.

If the budget proposal is adopted, housing will be the only industry where inventory costs are not tax deductible, he said.

Mr. Gilbert shot back that the budget provision that Mr. Kaplan complained about was "one of the few things I'll give him (Mr. Turner) credit for."

Cecil Smith (PC—Churchill) called on the government to give an eight-to 10-per-cent tax incentive to encourage people to live in the North.

The government already recognized northern hardships by giving its employees a northern living allowance and extending this principle would encourage unemployed people and welfare recipients to move north for jobs.

Conciliation Report Ready

OTTAWA (CP) — A conciliation report on the contract dispute involving 18,600 federal general labor and trades workers and treasury board will be presented to the staff relations board Feb. 5, and a legal strike can begin seven days later.

The group of employees includes mechanics, tradesmen, laborers and airport runway cleaners, who have threatened strike action in a bid for higher wages.

Steelworkers Want Mine Research Body

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) —The United Steelworkers of America recommended Thursday the establishment of an institute for the development of safety and health; research and technology for the Ontario mining industry.

The recommendation was made in a brief to the royal commission investigating health and safety of Ontario mining operations. The commission was in its last day of a four-day session here. It meets again today in Timmins.

G. H. Gilchrist, northeastern Ontario supervisor for the steelworkers' union, proposed that the royal commission recommend a two-per-cent levy on the gross value of all provincial mineral production.

The money raised—estimated at $40 million a year—should be used to finance the establishment of such an institute, which would be charged with studies and actual solution of all aspects of safety and health problems, he said.

Governing such an institute would be a body formed from management, labor and government, Mr. Gilchrist suggested.

"Its services should be not only be available," Mr. Gilchrist said, "but should by law be pressed upon mine managements in Ontario."

"If the mining companies wish to attract workers they must spend large sums to make the environment humane," he said.

"In addition, management and government must recognize that the miner is a highly—skilled craftsman."

Mr. Gilchrist urged the establishment of an apprenticeship program for miners with official mining certificates such as exists in Manitoba.

This, he said, would ensure top quality experienced miners and also encourage youth to consider mining as a career.

Investigators from the natural resources ministry also came under fire from union officials.

Mickey Maguier, president of steelworkers' Local 6500, said ministry engineers who investigate Ontario Mining Act violations were in general not doing their job.

He said there seemed to be an attitude of non-concern about enforcing the act and unless there was proper enforcement no safety goal could be reached.

Mine workers are frequently instructed to break the mining act so production would not stop, Mr. Maguier said, and the miners now have no respect for the act, the engineers or even safety precautions at times.

Drug Firm Says Peril Not New

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Upjohn Co. of Canada says there is "nothing new" in recent reports that two powerful antibiotics marketed by his firm in Canada may cause serious illness and death.

Lee Smith said in an interview Thursday that United States reports on the drugs, clindamycin and lincomycin, marketed as Cleocin and Lincocin in the U.S. by the Upjohn Co. of Kalamazoo, Mich. were "wildly exaggerated" by the news media.

Firm to Ask Drugs Be Used With Caution

OTTAWA (CP) — The company that markets two antibiotic drugs linked to a number of deaths recently by U.S. authorities is to ask doctors and dentists to limit their use.

Upohn Co. of Canada Ltd., of Montreal markets clindamycin and lincomycin under the brand names Dalacin-C and Lincocin respectively. Both are available in capsules, sterile solutions and paediatric formulation.

A spokesman for the health protection branch of the health department said Thursday the company is to write to doctors and dentists asking that they use the drug with caution and only when there is no satisfactory alternative.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has linked a number of deaths to the drugs, and Dr. Francis Tedesco of Washington University school of medicine at St. Louis has found colitis in 10 per cent of 200 patients taking clindamycin.

Colitis is an inflammatory bowel disease often accompanied by abdominal pain, fever and bloody discharge.

The Canadian health department spokesman said the letter by the Upjohn Co. asks doctors to have patients receiving the medication report any symptoms of "severe and persistent diarrhea."

Excessive Smoking Affects Sex Roles

TORONTO (CP) — Contrary to the image promoted by advertising, men who smoke often exhibit feminine characteristics while their female counterparts tend to have masculine leanings, a study by the University of Toronto's environmental health department shows.

Dr. Roy Shephard said the finding was among results of a two-year study of 600 heavy smokers made by the university and the city's health department during a smoking withdrawal clinic.

He said the heavy male smoker—one who smokes 30 to 40 cigarettes a day—tends to be shy, dependent, imaginative and emotional.

He added that the study indicated women who smoke heavily are "unusually assertive, self - opinionated, forthright and self - sufficient — a very masculine sort of picture, I think.'

Dr. Shephard said he suspects cigarette manufacturers "must look at the psychology of this.

"After all they have $100-million advertising—they speak to the needs rather than the characteristics."

Dr. Shephard also said that another study showed that air in some downtown bars has a carbon dioxide count of 40 to 50 parts per million. Government regulations set the maximum carbon dioxide level in industrial areas at 40 parts per million, he said.

He also said studies have shown "quite substantiated deterioration in (the) lung functions" of non-smokers exposed to smoke for a couple of hours.

Plan Docks

TORONTO (CP) — Pitts Engineering Construction Ltd. announced Thursday it has been awarded a $1,570,000 contract for construction improvements to three ferry service docks near Kingston, Ont.

Work on the Ontario government contract is due to start next month and be completed by October, 1976.

Railways Ask Ruling Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada will be asked today to hear a railway motion to appeal a decision by the Federal Court of Appeal dealing with freight rates.

The Federal Court decision allowed the railways to impose a 25-per-cent increase as of Jan. 1 instead of March 1 as the Canadian transport commission had ruled.

The commission also was ordered to review its decision on the freight increase affecting about 82,000 shippers and about 22 per cent of the rail-freight traffic.

It is this part of the court decision that the railways want the Supreme Court of Canada to review.

City Maintenance Bylaw to Council Monday

Belleville's city council will be presented with a draft copy of a municipal maintenance bylaw Monday.

The Intelligencer learned Thursday the city manager has completed revisions on the text — a document under active consideration for the past two years.

"We (city hall) have been aware of the need for a maintenance bylaw for several years but decided to air the bylaw during official plan discussions," said city manager Wilbur Purcell.

The document's preamble states, " a bylaw for prescribing standards for the maintenance and occupancy of property within the city."

The bylaw — if accepted in its draft form — will give council broad powers over all aspects of building maintenance as these standards apply to public health, fire and accidents.

One section states, "a yard shall be maintained free from accumulations of rubbish or debris from discarded objects and from conditions such as holes or excavations that might create a health, fire or accident hazard."

Residents may be ordered to remove weeds from their yards and if "accessory buildings" are not painted and in good repair they too can be removed under the bylaw's powers.

The draft bylaw will also be sent to several community organizations such as the public health officer, city engineer, solicitor, Quinte Home Builders' Association and the Chamber of Commerce.

"We're seeking input from several areas of the community," said Mr. Purcell.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said "the bylaw is absolutely necessary."

The mayor said she expects the bylaw will be given some discussion on Monday but concentrated debate will be delayed for two weeks giving aldermen the opportunity to read the document.

If the bylaw is dealt with soon, Belleville may be eligible for $103,000 from the provincial government.

The province, last fall, announced the Ontario Home Renewal Program which provides homeowner loans for building repair.

The program goes hand-in-hand with municipal maintenance bylaws and before Belleville can apply, highlights of a local maintenance bylaw must be delivered to the provincial government.

Church Gets New Organ

PICTON— Peterborough organist Brian Snell, musical director of All Saints Church will be guest recitalist at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene this Sunday for an evensong and organ dedication. The Anglican Church will officially dedicate the new organ in an evening service beginning at 7.30 p.m.

City Hall Workers Reject Newest Contract Offer

City hall staff will call a strike vote within the week following a stalemate in negotiations, union president Peter Ouderkirk said today.

The union membership voted unanimously Thursday night to refuse the city offer of a 14-per cent increase over a one-year contract.

Mr. Ouderkirk said his union — an arm of the Canadian Union of Public Employees — made a last offer of 25-per cent raises for city hall clerical staff and 21 per cent for technical staff.

"These proposals are based on the cost of living during the past year and the projected cost of living for 1975," said the union president.

The city's offer would mean an annual raise of $1,150 to union members currently earning an average of $8,200. A fully-subsidized dental plan was also offered by the city.

Mr. Ouderkirk said the four main areas of disagreement are wages, annual leave, car allowance and long service bonuses.

Mr. Ouderkirk said a date will be set later today for the strike vote.

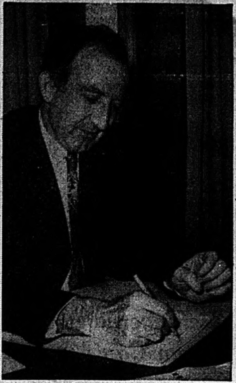
He said he "hopes the vote will carry," in light of his membership's unanimous Thursday refusal of the city's offer.

He said his union could cripple city hall activities "along with a few others."

If a strike is called, city hall will be without the majority of its staff including the telephone receptionist, municipal plumbing and building inspectors, clerks and technical staff.

Left on the job will be secretarial staff to the mayor and city manager, department and deputy department heads.

The union's last contract expired Dec. 31 after two years duration giving 17 per cent and 13.5 per cent raises to technical and clerical staff.



Priority Met

A minimum maintenance bylaw or property standards bylaw for Belleville — one of Mayor Robin Jeffrey's municipal priorities — is ready for council presentation this Monday. City manager Wilbur Purcell, author of the bulk of the bylaw, here puts some finishing touches on the document.

Standards Bylaw Brings Shuffle

City council will soon undertake a re-organizational study of Belleville's building and plumbing inspection department with enlargement predicted by city manager Wilbur Purcell.

Mr. Purcell said during an interview Thursday, the staff of these departments will be enlarged by two, to handle the additional workload connected with a proposed minimum maintenance bylaw. This bylaw will come before council Monday.

While the bylaw is being circulated among a number of community groups, the city will undertake the study to gauge the workload of bylaw implementation.

Within the last city budget, enlargement of the inspection staff was allowed for but "we weren't ready for it at the time," said Mr. Purcell.

Mr. Purcell said re-building the staff to handle the bylaw will be a "minor re-organizational problem."

Lucas Trial Hears Medical Evidence

By JIM SMELLE

Staff Reporter

Five brothers faced with a variety of counts of assault causing bodily harm and possession of a dangerous weapon appeared in county court Thursday.

The charges were laid against five brothers of the Lucas family following a street brawl August 17 in the Hillcrest area in which three city police officers were injured, one suffering a concussion after being knocked out cold with a pipe wrench.

The men charged and their particular charges are: Eric, 22, of 72 Centre St., assault causing bodily harm; Larry Lucas, 25, same address, assault causing bodily harm and possession of a dangerous weapon; Gordon, 33, 35 McFarlane Dr., assault causing bodily harm; Claude, 36, RR 5, Belleville; assault causing bodily harm; and Leonard, 37, RR 2, Shannonville, assault causing bodily harm and possession of a dangerous weapon.

In the first day of proceedings, presided over by Judge Russell C. Honey, following the selection of the jury, four witnesses testified. The first two, physicians with Belleville General Hospital, described the nature of the injuries given to the officers and to one of the Lucas brothers.

Also testifying was Constable Ken Gutoskie, 25, of the city's police department, one of three officers injured at the scene.

Constable Gutoskie testified for almost two hours on the first day of the trial in which Malcolm Robb is acting as defence counsel. The Crown attorney is Ken Stubbington of Cobourg.

Constable Gutoskie testified that at 5.17 p.m. on Aug. 17 he and Constable Paul Smith answered a call to a residence on McFarlane Dr. He said he saw Eric Lucas on the road. Before long the other brothers came along.

Later Constable Gutoskie testified a pick-up truck pulled behind their cruiser on McFarlane Dr. and two of the brothers got out. He said a fight with the three brothers ensued and soon all five Lucas brothers were battling the two constables.

Constable Gutoskie said that other police officers soon arrived and that one of them, Constable Gerry Bull, was struck in the back of the head with a 20-inch pipe wrench.

Defence counsel asked Constable Gutoskie why no arrests were made immediately after the incident. Constable Gutoskie answered that he didn't want to provoke any more fighting. Charges were not laid until the day after the incident.

Constable Paul Smith, 26, said he suffered a cut lip as a result of the fracas and back problems which, he said, continue to plague him.

Constable Smith also testified that after he saw Larry Lucas strike Constable Bull with the pipe wrench he pulled his service revolver and told him to get back.

A torn shirt of Constable Smith was admitted as evidence. The trial continues.

Scanner Folds

DESERONTO — The Quinte Scanner, Deseronto's independent weekly, ceased publication with a final edition Wednesday.

B.Q. Graphics Ltd., the publishers, said in a front page story, "publication ... will be suspended from now on, until the advertising potential increases to the point where it is enough to meet, at least, the cost of production.

The eight-page tabloid was started in February, 1968 by Robert McArton under the name of The Deseronto and Skyway Scanner. The present publishers purchased the business in September, 1970 and changed the name to Quinte Scanner.

The publishers said if the economic scene brightens, the Scanner may resume publication sometime in 1975. They cited "spiralling production costs and reduced advertising revenue" for the cessation.

Resident Must Complain Before City Acts: Purcell

A tenant will have to complain before a proposed minimum standards bylaw for Belleville will be enforced, says city manager Wilbur Purcell.

This Monday, council will be afforded its first glimpse at the document — under consideration for several years and under investigation and compilation for the past two years.

The 15-page document gives council broad power in regulating the maintenance of buildings and yards across the city.

"We won't have the manpower to go around to every building for inspection," said Mr. Purcell. "We are going to have to wait for tenants to complain of a leaking roof or whatever before we go and inspect."

"If the tenant doesn't want to object, he can live with it," said Mr. Purcell.

Presently, the city has no control over building maintenance. "The municipality is powerless to maintain standards," said the manager.

"To assist a tenant at the present, the situation must be bad enough to be a health hazard," said Mr. Purcell.

"The situation would then be dealt with under the Health Act ... a difficult act to work with," said Mr. Purcell.

The maintenance bylaw is being handled to coincide with the city's official plan and is not expected to receive approval before lengthy discussions have been held between council and several community organizations.

Surplus Funds Turned Back to UCS Directors

More than $8,000 in surplus funds was turned back to the United Way by United Community Services when the board of directors held its meeting Thursday.

The funds, which arose from interest, lower net expenses and added income after the 1973 fund drive monies were allocated in 1974, will be distributed on a pro-rata basis to 1974 groups.

The decision is subject to approval of an auditor's report.

Harold Mason, treasurer of the UCS board, explained to members that in part the funds arise from the months during which the group operated without an executive director.

He told members that in theory all United Way agencies are required to turn back unused funds at the end of the year but in practice it rarely happens.

Mr. Mason emphasized that only the 14 agencies which participated in 1974 are eligible for the extra funds.

Roberts Guest Speaker

An article in The Intelligencer on Jan. 24 about a newly-formed club for the deaf indicated that Louise Tigwell Ford was speaking during a meeting of the Quinte Kiwanis Club of Belleville.

In fact, while she was doing the physical speaking, she was interpreting the words of Ken Roberts, who was also present at the club as the guest speaker.

Students Raise Cash For New Tennis Courts

BLOOMFIELD —The students' council of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute has consulted with the county board of education concerning construction of two tennis courts at the high school.

Cost of each court would be approximately $6,000, with extra money required for fencing. Students already have raised $5,000 toward the project. It is expected an additional $2,500 can be raised in 1975 to further offset costs.

Prince Edward school trustees were told this week by assistant administrator for the board, Chris Salt, that is is unlikely the board can lend enough money to assist in completing the project at once.

Ameliasburg school trustee George Cunningham said the students council has been advised the project must be approached in a four-stage program. Quotes must be obtained and Belleville, Trenton and Ameliasburg recreation departments surveyed.

Language Laboratory Speeds Learning Process

By ROBIN CHASE

Staff Reporter

Loyalist College will officially open its new Language Laboratory centre Feb. 6 when college language teachers will demonstrate its operation.

A college press release says, "the new facilities will chiefly aid in the instruction of French, but will also be of use in teaching Conversational Spanish and German."

The Ontario government will be represented by Georges Amyot, executive secretary for the Advisory Council on Franco-Ontarian Affairs for the ministry of colleges and universities, for the 10.30 a.m. opening.

Introduced for students enrolled in any of the college's Modern Language programs, the facilities will mean "the student can spend extra time in the laboratory to upgrade himself or do advanced work on his own," explained the release.

"The laboratory will allow the instructor considerably more time to spend on those students with problems. Three groups of students may be tested at one time under the supervision of one teacher, freeing two teachers for classroom instruction."

The release explains "the instructor is able to monitor the oral exercises of each member of a group of students all of whom can simultaneously work at their own pace."

"The student can also record his own voice, listen to the exercise and compare his response with a master response. This will enable him to correct structural mistakes and perfect his pronunciation and intonation."

All Loyalist's language courses except English are in the form of "Second Language Training," says the release.

The principal language is French, which is currently offered in two programs.

One is Voix et Images de France, a six-year (660 classroom hours) program which includes an optional year of post-graduate studies based on audio-visual and audio-lingual methods of instruction. It has been taught since 1969, but will eventually be phased out for Dialogue Canada, a new program started this year.

The release notes Dialogue Canada is used by the Public Service Commission of Canada, Canadian in both content and approach and more appropriate to English Canadians wishing to communicate in French with fellow Canadians who do not speak English.

A grant for the new centre was received from the colleges ministry, with the laboratory subsidized by the federal government through the ministry. Funds were based on Loyalist's progress in the field of bilingualism.

Other guests for the opening will include Olivier Gibeault, President of Club Alouette of Belleville, and Lieut. Gabriel Tremblay, President of Le Centre de La Bonne Entente, the French Cultural Centre at Canadian Froces Base Trenton.

Dennis Kearns

Defenceman Says Team Can Make It

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dennis Kearns, a defenceman with Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League is not noted for idle chatter.

So when he said, moments after the Canucks lost a game against Montreal Canadiens, that he believes his team has a solid shot at finishing first in the Conn Smythe Division, one knows he is serious.

"We've got the depth and the desire," Kearns said. "I really believe that we can do it."

A few months ago the idea would have seemed preposterous, as the Canucks entered their fifth NHL season after being little more than doormats in the previous four.

But with Phil Maloney as Canucks' general manager and coach, the club bears only a vague resemblance to that of the past. Maloney has made deals, shuffled lineups and built confidence in his young team.

Gerry Meehan, Garry Monahan, Ab Demarco, John Grisdale, Ken Lockett, Leon Rochefort and Mike Robitaille are starters for the Canucks this season. All were with other teams last year.

Harold Snepts and Ron Sedlbauer hadn't played an NHL shift before this season, but Maloney has not hesitated to play them regularly.

Jocelyn Guevremont, Barry Wilkins, Dave Dunn and Bryan McSheffrey, all Canuck regulars a year ago, have been traded and Orland Kurtenbach, Vancouver's captain of four seasons, retired to coach Seattle Totems, Canucks' Central Hockey League affiliate.

As of Wednesday, Canucks had won 25 of the 50 games they played, more victories than in any season since entering the NHL. They were first in the Smythe Division, three points in front of Chicago Black Hawks, who are favored by many to run away with the division championship.

The key man in Canucks' rise is lanky goalie Gary Smith. He has earned all-star recognition for his play this season, being voted to the Clarence Campbell Division second team.

Smith has played more (2,510 minutes) than any other NHL goaltender, has a respectable 2.94 goals against average, five shutouts and the confidence of all his team-mates.

Canucks' lineup now is starting to bear a resemblance to that of last November, when they were more than 10 points ahead of Chicago before a rash of injuries slowed them down.

Dennis Ververgaert (separated shoulder), Paulin Bordeleau (torn ligaments), Bobby Lalonde (bruised shoulder), Andre Boudrias (pulled groin), Robitaille (bruised hip), Rochefort (bruised thigh) and Kearns (charley-horse) are healthy again.

Chris Oddleifson (broken jaw), Bob Dailey (cracked clavicle) and Grisdale (sprained knee) are expected back in the lineup soon.

Orr Pots Three in 6-0 Win

Time Running Out on Espo

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Phil Esposito appears to have run out of time in his race to score 50 goals in 50 games but Bobby Orr has his third three-goal performance of the season and Boston Bruins have ended their three-game winless streak.

Esposito managed only two assists Thursday night while Orr's three goals led the Bruins in a 6-0 victory over California Seals.

Esposito, trying to match or beat Maurice (Rocket) Richard's National Hockey League record pace of 50 goals in 50 games, was left with 46 in 49 games. The Bruins' 50th game comes Saturday night against the Maple Leafs in Toronto.

In other games, Buffalo Sabres beat New York Rangers 6-3, Philadelphia Flyers defeated Toronto 3-1, Detroit Red Wings beat Pittsburgh Penguins 5-2, and Los Angeles Kings beat Washington Capitals 6-4.

Orr ran his season goal total to 30, the fifth season the star defenceman has reached that plateau, and moved back into second spot in the league scoring race with 86 points, six behind leader Esposito.

Bruins winger Johnny Bucyk scored his 21st goal of the season and the 1,200th point of his 20-year career.

Boston goalie Gilles Gilbert had to make only 15 saves for his second shutout of the season.

Jim Lorentz and Craig Ramsay each scored two goals in the Sabres' win over the Rangers at Buffalo.

Ramsay had gone 14 games without scoring until he beat goalie Gilles Villemure in the second period and then put his second goal behind Ed Giacomin who took over the Rangers nets in the third period.

The Rangers' loss, their third in the last four games, dropped them 10 points behind the leading Flyers in the Patrick Division.

At Philadelphia, Reggie Leach's 25th goal of the season broke a 1-1 tie early in the third period and Gary Dornhoefer added an insurance goal on a Flyers power play 10 minutes later.

The win extended the Flyers' unbeaten string to seven games, including six wins.

Four goals by the Kings in the first half of the second period overcame a Washington's 2-1 first-period lead and Los Angeles coasted to victory over the Capitals.

Kings winger Tom Williams scored his 18th goal and added two assists.

Danny Grant's two goals led Detroit against the Penguins. Grant's second goal of the game, his 29th of the season, snapped a 2-2 tie early in the third period.

Parizeau Crushes Cougars

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Michel Parizeau of Quebec Nordiques doesn't get nervous working in a crowd.

"On my second goal I managed to score even though I was being pushed around," Parizeau said Thursday night after firing the puck past Chicago Cougars goalie Cam Newton three times to lead the Nordiques to a 5-2 World Hockey Association victory.

On his third goal, Parizeau added, he had to hustle around three Chicago defenders before spotting a clear path to the net.

The Nordiques' win kept them six points ahead of Toronto Toros atop the WHA's Canadian Division.

In other games, Toronto Toros beat Indianapolis Racers 3-2, Winnipeg Jets defeated Phoenix Roadrunners 5-3, and Minnesota Fighting Saints defeated Vancouver Blazers 6-3.

Anders Hedberg scored twice in Winnipeg's win over the Roadrunners at Phoenix. Hedberg's second goal on a power play in the third period broke a 3-3 tie.

Bobby Hull added his 44th goal of the season into an empty net.

At Indianapolis, the Toros scored their third consecutive win. Vaclav Nedomansky and Paul Henderson scored 76 seconds apart in the second period and Pat Hickey got the Toros' third goal midway in the final period.

Don Tannahill scored two unassisted goals to lead Minnesota in the win over Vancouver and into third place in the Western Division.

Tannahill's second unassisted effort gave the Saints, who moved ahead of San Diego by one point in the standings, a 4-0 margin midway through the second period. He also had an assist.

In off-ice activity Thursday, the league announced that general manager Ron Ingram of San Diego Mariners has been suspended for one game and fined $200.

Bud Poile, WHA executive director, said in a news release:

"Ingram's deportment toward referee Brent Casselman and other game officials following the San Diego-Winnipeg game of Jan. 28 was not in the best interests of hockey in general and the WHA in particular."

Poile said Ingram's action on the bench and on the ice after the game "will not be tolerated, and further such outbursts by any team official shall result in stiffer penalties."

The WHA did not expand on the ruling.

The game, won 9-7 by Winnipeg, produced 85 minutes in penalties and took 3½ hours to play. It was marked by a near-riot involving fans and Winnipeg's Alain Beaule and Perry Miller at the end of the game.

Figure Skating

Junior Champs Move to Senior

QUEBEC (CP) — Marie-Ellen and Bernard Souche may be just about the busiest competitors at the Canadian figure skating championships here this week.

The sister-and-brother team from Thornhill, Ont., won the junior pairs gold medal Thursday night and, after savoring the victory briefly, turned their attention to the senior pairs.

"This was our last year in junior and we also wanted to move up to try senior," said Marie-Ellen, 17, who has been skating with her brother for five years. "We don't expect to do that well in the seniors, however. We'll just try to skate our best."

The Souches, Canadian novice champions in 1971, are a study in contrasts. Bernard, 19, stands six-foot-four, a full 12 inches taller than his sister.

"The height difference is not awkward," Miss Souche said, "but because he's so tall it's dangerous if I fall."

They had no such problems as they skated a polished and acrobatic 3½-minute program that included death spirals, spins and towering lifts.

Today they line up against four other pairs in the compulsory portion of the senior pairs. That event ends with the free skating Saturday.

And there will be new pairs champions because Sandra and Val Bezic of Toronto, the defending title-holders, have been forced to withdraw due to a leg injury to Sandra.

A close second to the Souches in the junior pairs were Karen Newton and Glenn Laframboise of Toronto who scored high despite a fall suffered by Karen. Third were Janet and Mark Hominuke of Calgary.

The junior pairs medal was the only one awarded Thursday but tight races developed in a number of other competitions.

Camille Rebus, a 15-year-old high school student from Edmonton, skated strongly in the compulsory free skating and jumped from fifth to first place after completion of two of the three segments of the junior women's competition.

Heather Anderson of Vancouver, first after the compulsory figures, dropped to second while Kathy Fahigren of North Bay, Ont., remained third.

Compulsory figures count for 40 per cent of the total scoring and the compulsory free skating 20 per cent. The free skating, scheduled for today, accounts for the remaining 40.

The men's and women's senior competitions went as expected with Toller Cranston of Toronto and Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa, the defending champions, leading their divisions after the school figures.

Kelly Suspended

MONTREAL (CP) — J. Bob Kelly of Pittsburgh Penguins has been suspended for two games, National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell announced Thursday.

The suspension resulted from a match penalty assessed against Kelly by referee Wally Harris for deliberate injury to Keith Magnuson of Chicago Black Hawks during a game Jan. 29, Campbell said in a statement.

Kelly and Magnuson both received minor and major penalties following a fight, but the referee banished Kelly from the game after noting that Magnuson was bleeding from the nose and one eye. The Pittsburgh player had tape on one hand around his thumb and little finger, Campbell said.

The injuries sustained were not serious but a new rule "was designed specifically to curtail the practice of wearing tape on the hands or at least to avoid injuring opponents by doing so," he said.

The suspension took effect Thursday and goes to Feb. 1.

Magnuson received a three-game suspension for a similar infraction earlier this season.

Laurie Kreiner Seventh

JACKSON HOLE, Wyo. (CP) — Laurie Kreiner, 20, of Timmins, Ont., stands seventh in CanAm ski series standings after winning the women's downhill event Thursday with a time of one minute 09.90 seconds.

She was one of three Canadian women and two Canadian men who finished among the top 10. Jean Beaulieu, 19, of Sillery, Que., and Elise Martin of Laval, Que., did not ski because of minor training injuries.

Other Canadian women among the top 10 in the downhill were Jeanette Zanier, 16, of Rossland, B.C. sixth at 1:13.[illegible]; John Wilson, 16, of Port Hawkesbury, N.S., seventh at 1:13.68 and Sarah Satow, 16, of Vancouver, ninth at 1:14.37.

The top Canadian male skiier was Bob Miller, 21, of Vancouver, who tied for third place with a time of 1:25.59. Yvon Blackburn, 20, of Chicoutimi, Que., was ninth at 1:26.9.

Other Canadian women finishers were: Susan Aslett, 17, Weston, Ont., 1:15.55; Andrea Esson, 18, Toronto, 1:16.34; and Vanita Haining, 18, Calgary, 1:16.49.

Petes Gamble, Get Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes proved Thursday that gambles can pay off.

Coach Roger Neilson pulled Peterborough goaltender Frank Salive in the final minute of play for an extra skater and Stan Jonathan responded, scoring with 15 seconds remaining, to cap a third-period comeback and give the Petes a 4-4 tie with Toronto Marlboros in one of two Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A games.

In the other contest, Sudbury Wolves ran their unbeaten streak to 11 games with a 5-2 victory over Ottawa '67s.

Red Laurence, Paul Evans and Doug Jarvis got the other Peterborough goals.

The first-place Marlboros had taken a 1-0 first-period lead on Lynn Jorgenson's first of two goals on the night. Craig Crawford and Bill Wells put the visitors up 3-0 after 40 minutes.

However, the Petes struck for two goals 46 seconds apart in the third to close it to 3-2. Jorgenson then scored his second goal, but Evans pulled the Petes to within one goal and set the stage for Jonathan's tying score with a goal at 17:03.

Toronto outshot Peterborough 30-25 with the Marlboros taking two of the three minor penalties assessed.

At Sudbury, Ron Duguay paced the winners with two goals late in the third period. Hector Marini, Rod Schutt and Dave Farrish got the others.

Peter Lee and Bruce Baker replied for the '67s, who trailed 2-1 after the first period and 3-2 entering the third.

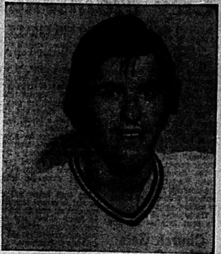
Sudbury outshot Ottawa 45-27.

The Wolves moved past the idle St. Catharines Black Hawks and into fifth spot with the victory, six points back of Ottawa and 22 off the pace of the Marlboros.

The second-place Petes remain 10 points back of Toronto with the two clubs meeting again tonight in Brantford. In other games, Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds are in Ottawa, London Knights entertain Hamilton Fincups, Oshawa Generals meet the Canadians in Kingston and Kitchener Rangers play host to the Wolves.

The Rangers will have a new coach behind the bench. Jim Morrison, a 13-year-veteran of the National Hockey League, was named Thursday to replace Eddie Bush who was fired from the post last week.

Morrison, 44, coached Baltimore Clippers of the American Hockey League until a week ago when the club disbanded to make room for the transfer of the World Hockey Association Michigan Stags.



Chris Oddliefson

Canuck Shooter's Average Is Tops

MONTREAL (CP) — Chris Oddleifson of Vancouver Canucks was the most accurate shooter among players with 10 or more goals during the first half of the National Hockey League season.

Statistics released Thursday by the NHL show Oddleifson had 11 goals on 43 shots for a 25.6 per cent average. Dave Forbes of Boston Bruins was second with 25.5 per cent with 14 goals on 55 shots on goal.

Bobby Orr had the most shots—200—in the first half of the season, scoring 23 goals for an accuracy percentage of 11.5.

Meanwhile the strategy of removing the goaltender in the final seconds of a game in an effort to gain a tie paid off almost as many times in the first half of the 1974-75 season as in the entire 1973-74 campaign.

The 18 teams made the move 122 times and it produced eight game-tying goals—three by Boston, two each by Montreal Canadiens and New York Islanders and one by Vancouver. The strategy was tried 239 times last year and worked nine times.

But while the removal of the netminder worked 6.5 per cent of the time, it backfired 30.3 per cent—37 empty-net goals—and every team except New York Rangers and St. Louis Blues had it happen at least once.

Philadelphia Flyers led all teams with six empty-net goals while the only club which did not score an empty-net goal in its first 40 games was Washington.

In 1973-74, there were 53 empty-net goals in 239 opportunities—a percentage of 22.2.

Scoring the first goal of the game was important to Los Angeles Kings during the first half. The Kings opened the scoring in 28 games, winning 20 of those, losing two and tying six, giving them 46 of the 56 points they gained in the first half.

Of the 28 games lost by Kansas City Scouts in the first half, seven were one-goal decisions and seven were two-goal games.

Atlanta Flames led all teams in one-goal-margin wins with eight.

Sent to Farm

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues' goalie John Davidson, 21, the first goalie picked in the National Hockey League's amateur draft two years ago, was sent down to the club's Denver farm team Wednesday, a Blues' spokesman said. Davidson, St. Louis' No. 1 draft pick two years ago, allowed an average of 3.79 goals in 29 starts this season.

Squash a Hit in Canada

What is reputed to be the fastest growing indoor sport of its kind in North America?

Here's a hint. You play it with a racquet. No it's not badminton.

Another hint. You have to have a ball. Wrong again. It's not tennis.

Last hint. The ball can either be soft or hard and you play the game with the use of walls.

Right. It is squash. The game has picked up more interest in North America in the last 10 years than any other indoor sport. Its growth is particularly notable in Canada, rather than the United States. As a matter of fact the number one player on the continent, Sharif Khan, teaches at the Gracite Club in Toronto.

Probably right now you're saying: "but what about the cost?"

It is true that the game used to be limited to that same handful of people who could also afford to play polo or enter dressage competitions, but the entire light in which squash was seen is changing from black to white.

People are beginning to realize that the game's therapeutic values far outreach its material costs.

For example: Dr. O'Boyle Kelly, president of the Belleville Squash Club, says the game "is a tremendous form of exercise."

After 40 minutes of squash you don't need to go out and jog. In less than an hour, a squash player burns off 1,000 to 1,500 calories. At least those are the figures offered by the late Lloyd Percival's Fitness Institute in Toronto. Those numbers are far above those handed down for jogging and tennis.

A fast game of squash is much more enjoyable than cross-country running or jogging. Let's face it.

There are other advantages to the game as well.

All that smashing and pounding of the ball is a form of psychological therapeutics. It is a means of getting rid of all the anxieties that build up through a tough day at the office, a trying budget, or any of the other pressures today's fast-paced society can dish out.

Getting back to the monetary end of the game. A player can get a good squash racquet, one for beginners, for $10-$15. After that all you need is a tee-shirt, a pair of sweat socks and a pair of shorts.

The most expensive part of the deal, as you probably already know, is a membership to a private club with a court. That is the most varying expense as well.

For example: you can pay up to $1,000 for a membership to the more exclusive clubs located through the country. A bargain in Toronto would be a membership to the Toronto Squash Club. That costs about $400-$500 a year.

Locally, a person interested in the game may obtain the bargain of his life. For $360 a year you have rights to the lounge facilities (unlicensed for the time being), the sauna bath, the whirl-pool bath and locker-area. In the future the use of two courts, relaxing Belleville Club will also house an international sized court, of which there are very few in North America, and a swimming pool. A membership lasts a full year. What makes it even more enticing is the air-conditioning in the summertime.

The Belleville Squash Club can cater up to 200 members and memberships are still open to anyone interested.

Simonds Makes Presence Felt

Russ Simonds proved he was coming back to his old form, Wednesday night, as he hauled down 23 rebounds for the Belleville Collegiate (BCI) seniors and scored 11 points to help give his team an 86-71 victory over Napanee.

In the two other games played at BCI, the home team juniors won 79-36 and the midgets upset the visitors 73-32.

Simonds spent most of the early part of the season recuperating from an operation. Wednesday night the BCI squad was without the services of star forward Larry Wilson, but Simonds picked up the slack under the boards.

Chris Lachman was top point-getter for the Belleville team. He had 22 points. Larry Savage was next with 20 and Gord Wright dropped in 17. Brian Bell added 15 and then came Simonds.

George Eadie led the way for the Napanee crew with 21 points and Rick DaSilva scored 18.

Mike Kirby and Mitch Hannah were big gunners for the BCI juniors. Kirby had 21 points and Hannah got 20. Ron Bell was next with 13.

Rick Davis replied for Napanee with 19 points.

Chris Niblett and Mike Wright led an all-round offensive attack by the Belleville midgets. Niblett had 18 points and Wright got 15. Dwight Begley, Randy Donovan and Ron Doornbos had eight points each.

Greg Mills was tops for Napanee with 14.

Olympics Elect 1975 Executive

The Belleville Olympics, of the Premier Soccer League, laid the ground for their second season of league play Thursday night when they elected a new executive.

John Watson, last season's playing coach, was re-elected president of the Olympics organization. Ted Weber was also re-elected to his post as chairman of the ways and means committee and Fred Jones was returned as secretary. The rest of the executive is new. The vice-president is Dick Edward, the treasurer, Gus Christopher, is new to his post, but familiar with executive duties since he was vice-president last year. The Public Relations Director, Kevin Kirby, and the Chairman of the Social Committee Chairman, Bruno DiGenova, round out the executive elect.

Part of Thursday's meetings included the presentation of individual awards for last season. Paul Ruttan, representative of the Carling-O'Keefe Breweries, was on hand to present Dario D'Anna with the Most Improved Player, Zoltan Vigh with the Most Sportsmanlike Player, Peter Vitaliotis with the Player Demonstrating the Most Leadership and Joe Iasenza with the Most Valuable Player of 1974.

It was also decided that the third Thursday of every month would be a meeting night. The next meeting of the organization comes February 20 at 7.30 p.m. All meetings will be held at the Golden Mile Restaurant.

Green Too Good For Blue

Ginny Irwin scored 18 points as her Green team rolled to a 66-16 victory over Blue in the Quinte Ladies Basketball League Wednesday night. In the other league game White routed Red 44-21.

Green held a 14-2 lead at the quarter mark and a 28-10 lead at half time.

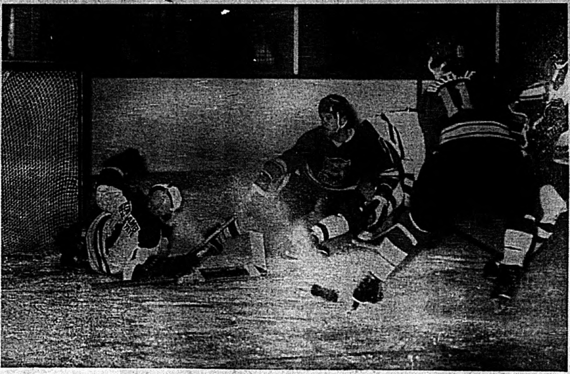
After the third quarter it was 38-14 Green. The final period told the story of the game as Green outscored Blue 28-2 to walk away with the 50 point win.

Lynn Brarley scored 12 for the winners and Sheila Alexander got 10.

For Blue, Gabi Cornellier was tops with eight.

Carol Northey dropped in 14 points for White and teammates Donna Petterson and Nancy Birch added 10 each.

Lynn Burkitt led the way for Red with 11 points.



Belleville Bobcat, Wayne Calberry, really slammed on the brakes on this scroing drive during Thursday night's Metro Junior B game at the Cataraqui Arena in Kingston. Calberry broke through the defencemen, but couldn't put the puck past Voyageur goalie, Joe Myke. Grant Goegan (11), watched by Kingston's Kim Elliot, waits for the rebound that never came. The Voyageurs came up with an all-round strong performance to dump the Bobcats 10-4. The win almost clinches third place for the Voyageurs, even though the Belleville club has two games in hand.

Cats Lose Keech, Langstaff and Game

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

KINGSTON — In Thursday night's Metro Junior B hockey game between the Belleville Bobcats and the home team Kingston Voyageurs, the only thing lacking was any indication that either team could do just that ... play hockey.

Besides losing the game 10-4, the Cats lost two of their most steady performers.

Centre Steve Keech was the first victim, late in the first period. He was taken into the boards by two Kingston players who then started to rough up the lone Belleville player. Keech had a thumb jabbed into his eye

Keech escaped without further injury but will be out of the line-up for an indefinite period.

Foster connected for three goals for the visitors besides adding some muscle to the Belleville offence.

Rick Langstaff also fell prey to the home team's "questionable" tactics as he was dumped from behind with the play at the other end of the ice. He suffered undetermined injuris to his shoulder or collar bone after hitting the ice, forcing him to remain behind after the game for x-rays.

Kingston badly out-skated the Cats in the opening 20 minutes of play and as a result held a 4-0 lead going into the middle frame.

"We weren't taking the man in front of the net out of the play," said Cats coach Bob Boyle after the game.

The problem plagued the Belleville squad throughout the game with goalie Bruce Clark often having to make four and five saves in succession.

"The first period really killed us but we played solid in the rest of the game," offered Foster.

The visitors came out strong in the second period knocking the Kingston team all over the ice with some hefty body checks and looked like they might make a game of it.

Foster opened the period with two of his goals with Grant Goegan adding the other to round out the Cat scoring for the period.

Kingston came up with three of their own goals in the period taking advantage of Cats' mistakes.

The third period was little more than a head hunting match as both sides came out swinging.

Defenceman, Neil Turner and Brian Langille were involved in a minor skirmish. Turner was sent off as the 10-minute aggressor while his counterpart in the duel received only five minutes.

Foster by this time had scored his third goal and the home team took advantage of the extra man for the last 10 minutes of the game, scoring three goals.

The Cats go right back at it tonight when the Wexford Warriors will be in town for a 9 p.m. hook up.

Boyle promises a tough game for the visitors; "We're going to have to get physical for these last few games to build up a bit of momentum for the playoffs."

Eric Powell will be back in the line up after missing the Kingston game while still recovering from a touch of the flu.

From One To Another In QHL

While one tie was broken in the Quinte Hockey League Thursday night, another deadlock resulted.

Cornerstone Builders came up with a convincing 5-2 win over Reid's Dairy to break the first place deadlock.

In the second QHL game, Stinson Construction upset Belvedere Hotel 6-4 to force a tie between the two for last place.

The win gave Cornerstone 21 points, two more than Reid's. Terry Pope scored twice and added an assist to the winners attack. Singles went to Phil Meeks, Dave Langille and Bruce Raciot.

Carl Boomhower and Moe Hunter replied for Reid's.

Andy Prudden scored twice to pave the way to Stinson's victory. His team is now tied with Belvedere. The two clubs have identical records with 12 points apiece. Singles in Thursday night's win went to Dwight Rathwell, Dave Horwood, Jim Clark and Rick Rosebush.

Ron Urch, Eric Johnston, Dave Hallam and Jason Morris tallied once each for Belvedere.

Stirling Bantams Make It a Habit

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — Over the years since the Second World War, Stirling has been nothing to be trifled with when it comes to hockey. The Bantam All-Stars have just added to the long hockey saga of this small community.

For the fifth year in a row, the bantams have won the Havelock Lions tournament. Competing were Warsaw (D), Marmora (D), Campbellford (C), Humberview (B), Maple (DD), Newcastle (DD), Havelock (DD), and Stirling (DD).

Stirling knocked off Maple 4-0, and had a bit more challenge from Humber view, 4-2, Marmora put up some resistance, 5-2, but Stirling took top honors, the 'A' championship with Maple winning the 'B' consolation trophy.

Right now it is believed that Stirling is in first place in the Trent Valley League. There was some question about that, on the weekend, some thinking that Marmora was first, or that perhaps the two were tied.

The matter will no doubt be resolved, but it is hoped that ice problems do not upset the Stirling team. Marmora too has their problems, since their rink was shut down. Right now Stirling's ice-making machine is non-operational. Pools of water lay on the rink on the weekend. The ice had hardened enough for practice Monday, but the surface was poor.

Back in 1947-48 Ross Hermiston coached the Stirling Midget 'C' team to top shape to do battle with Port Dalhousie for the Ontario championship, but Stirling came out second best. G. R. Dobson was the team manager.

Juvenile 'C' teams from Kincardine tangled with Stirling in 1949-50 and again in 1953-54. Ralph Vandervoort and Russell Pyear were the Stirling coaches respectively. Doug Patterson was manager in 1949, and Blake Faulkner had the task in 1953. Stirling didn't quite have the oomph to knock Kincardine off for the all-Ontario championship in two attempts, but they were still second-best in the province.

Stirling players wielded strong sticks to get a crack at the bantam 'C' championship in 1955-56, but got lost in the woods when Forest proved best. Pete Utman was coach and Doug Robson manager.

Early March of 1963-64 saw Stirling playing in Belmont for the juvenile 'C' championship. "It was 70 degrees and there was water on the ice," druggist George Noble recalls. "It was a real thriller right to the end when Belmont got the final goal to wrap it up at 3-2." Bob Anderson was coach and Doug Faires, manager.

1969-70 ... this was THE YEAR for Stirling Pee Wees. They defeated Six Nations. Bert Bastedo was coach of this provincial championship team and Ted Dobson was coach.

Stirling produced two tough teams in 1971-72 and 1972-73 but first the bantams and then the midgets found out that Oshweken had something they didn't. Bob Whatam coached and Cecil Solmes managed the bantams, and Ron Hadley coached and Gary Mason managed the midgets.

The story doesn't end there however. This hockey community, small but proud of its achievements, was the only municipality east of Toronto to have had teams in all six divisions in the semi-finals for the Ontario championships last year. The midgets and bantams knocked off many teams to get close to top spot, both getting within two games of the final.

Juvenile B Team In Action

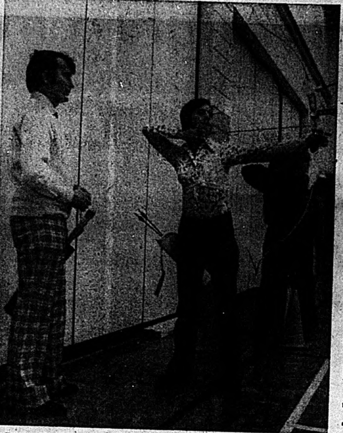
Belleville Minor Hockey Association's Juvenile B Select team has a home date Saturday with the Trenton Firm Seal squad. The clubs will hook up at Dick Ellis Rink at 9.30 p.m.

In a recent exhibition match with Picton, the Selects kept their unbeaten string intact, playing to a 4-4 tie.

The Belleville team had a 4-2 lead in the late going but gave up a pair of goals and had to settle for the tie. Penalties hurt Selects during the Picton uprising.

Peter McInroy was a two-goal man for Belleville. Checking in with one each were Paul Murray and Peter McBride. Gord Male earned two assists with one for Murray.

Picton marksmen were Jamie Bovoy, John Woodward, Archie McConnell and Dan McCaw.



Experienced archer instructor Floyd Armstrong looks on as Eleanor Kinnear draws a bead on the target. Archers from Loyalist College will be taking part in Saturday's Ontario Athletic Association meet in Hamilton.

Archers Aim for Title

If desire and determination have anything at all to do with winning, the Loyalist College Archery teams should have no trouble picking up firsts at this year's Ontario Collegiate Athletics Association meet in Hamilton on Saturday.

The group has been together since late November and at first were practising for a couple of hours, two days a week.

"They decided that wasn't enough and ever since have been coming out at 8 a.m. every morning plus Wednesdays in the afternoon,' explained coach Floyd Armstrong who is currently enrolled in the retraining division at the College.

Last year, Loyalist placed second over-all out of seven teams but entered only one out of a possible three teams.

Each college is allowed to enter a men's, ladies, and a mixed team but the local college entered only a men's team.

Returning from last year's team will be George Vanderlinden, who placed second over-all and Perry Givens, the fourth place finisher.

This year the college will be entering a men's and a mixed team. The men's team will consist of: George Vanderlinden, Perry Givens, George Poon Ling and Greg Jessup. In the mixed team: Eleanor Kinnear, Gwen Thompson, Phil Downs and Floyd Armstrong will be representing Loyalist.

"We've been trying to simulate tournament conditions to prepare for the meet," said Armstrong "but the beginners are bound to be a bit more hyper."

Coach Armstrong has recently been appointed to the position of Provincial Training Director by the Ontario Association of Archers. He describes his duty as "teaching people how to teach."

Floyd was one of the original members of the Belleville Archery Club which was formed approximately 15 years ago and he has been teaching in the city ever since. He also holds a coaching certificate from the Federal Association.

"Each shot in archery is like one chess move. There's such a tremendous amount of concentration that goes into every arrow,' explained Armstrong.

"If you put a shot into the centre of the target you have to duplicate the moves exactly, it's like turning yourself into a robot."

During the practice sessions at the college the members have been firing the full length of the gym, 30 yards. That is the distance that the teams will start from, shooting five ends of six arrows and then moving up 10 yards and firing another five ends of six arrows.

They will be aiming at a 24-inch multi-faced target, scoring 5-4-3-2-1 from the centre out.

There will be trophies for the first place finishers in the events with special awards going to the best male and the best female.

SAYS NO TO PANCHO

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jimmy Connors' manager said Wednesday that his player would refuse to play Sunday's $100,000 winner-take-all tennis match against Rod Laver if Pancho Gonzales is the referee. The controversy seemed contrived to most observers because Gonzales was Connors' coach for several years and they still are friends.

Huskies Whip Panthers

PORT HOPE (Special) — Goalies took the night off in Ontario Hockey Association Junior C action here Thursday night. Sixteen goals were chalked up as visiting Frankford Huskies outscored Port Hope Panthers 10-6.

JOEY EDWARDS

Huskies led 4-2 at the first intermission and were in front 7-4 after two periods. The Frankford squad held a 3-2 edge in the final 20 minutes.

When they weren't scoring goals, the players took part in a steady parade to the penalty box.

Among Huskies' 13 sentences were five for fighting and five for high sticking. Panthers took a 10-minute fighting penalty and five for high sticking in their total of 18.

Huskies' captain Joey Edwards, Rob Arbuckle, Gary Payne and Lou Doucette each fired a pair of goals. Scott Poupart and Curt McLean had the others.

Gary Rowe was a two-goal shooter for Port Hope. Jim Hart, Phil Taylor, Gord Brereton and Greg Tivy notched one each.

Tonight in Frankford, Huskies play host to Cobourg Cougars.

Most people who make small cars really want to sell you something else.

Have you noticed how many small cars are coming out today that bear no resemblance to anything small?

There's a good reason for this. Big cars make big profits. And simple, practical, unencumbered small cars make small profits.

At Fiat, we learned how to make a living out of small cars a long time ago. And we've spent the last 40 years making sense out of them.

The Fiat 128 below is about 4 feet shorter than the Skylark, the Fury, or the Monarch. But, it gives you just about the same kind of legroom.

Instead of making the 128 low and sleek like the others, we've given it more headroom than a Rolls-Royce.*

Instead of loading it down with all sorts of gadgetry, we've given it things that actually make it perform better.

Rack-and-pinion steering, front-wheel drive, and an all-independent suspension are standard equipment.

None of which are even available on the Skylark, Fury, or Monarch.

Last, the Fiat 128 costs hundreds of dollars less than they do.

You see, when the Big Three said these were small cars, they never said they had small prices.

211.1"
The small Plymouth Fury: Is this Chrysler's idea of a small car?

200.3"
The small Buick Skylark: Can this be GM's idea of a small car?

199.9"
The Mercury Monarch: Is this Ford's idea of the precision size for today?

157.2"
The Fiat 128: Instead of naming it small, we made it small.

IN MEMORIAM

ROSS — In loving memory of a dear grandmother Lillie Mae Ross who passed away January 31, 1974.

God saw her getting tired,
He did what He thought best,
He put His arms around her,
And whispered come and rest,
The golden gates stood open,
One year ago today,
With goodbyes left unspoken,
She gently slipped away.

—Missed by granddaughter Janice, Ron, Lynne and Stephen Warkentin.

CODLING — In loving memory of our dear beloved sister and aunt Gertrude Codling who passed away Jan. 31, 1966.

Though her smile is gone forever,
And her hand we cannot touch,
Still we have so many memories,
Of the one we loved so much,
Her memory is our keepsake,
With which we'll never part,
God has her in His keeping,
We have her in our hearts.

—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by sisters Clara, Ethel and Helen, niece and nephew Alice and Robert.

CODLING — In loving memory of my dear beloved wife Gertrude Codling who passed away Jan. 31, 1966.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles and trials are past,
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.

—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by her husband Frank.

ROSS, Lillie Mae — In loving memory of a dear mother who passed away Jan. 31st, 1974.

So many things have happened,
Since you were called away,
So many things to share with you,
Had you been left to stay,
Everyday in some small way,
Memories of you come our way,
Though absent you are ever near.

—Still remembered and sadly missed by daughter Edaline, son-in-law Nelson and grandson John.

ROSS, Lillie Mae — In loving memory of a dear grandmother who passed away Jan. 31, 1974.

A little tribute small and tender,
Just to say we still remember,
Though absent you are very near,
Still loved, still missed and ever dear.

—Lovingly remembered by Jay, Barbara and Meredith.

ROSS, Lillie Mae — In loving memory of a dear mother who passed away Jan. 31, 1974.

Resting where no shadows fall,
In peaceful sleep she awaits us all,
God will link the broken chain,
When one by one we meet again.

—Sadly missed by son Bill and daughter-in-law Ruth.

ROBINSON — In loving memory of our dear brother and uncle, Gary who passed away January 31, 1973.

So many things have happened,
Since you were called away,
So many things to share with you,
Had you been left to stay,
Every hour in some way,
Memories of you come our way,
Though absent you are ever near.

—Lovingly remembered by Cheryl, Faye, Greg and Amy, Geoff, Donna, Julie and Kristopher.

ROBINSON — In loving memory of our dear son, Gary Merle, who passed away Jan. 31, 1973.

In memory you walk with us,
No matter where we go,
In dreams you come and talk to us,
Oh, Gary, we miss you so,
You are only with us in spirit and in mind,
But we will always hold you in our hearts,
From now till the end of time.

—Lovingly remembered by Dad and Mom.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to extend our sincere thanks to the nurses and staff of the WCA wing, level four, of the Belleville General Hospital and to Dr. Jack Empson, for their care and extreme kindness shown to our late mother and grandmother, Lelia May Hawley. Also we express our appreciation for the floral tributes, cards and words of kindness received from friends, neighbors and relatives on her passing. Thanks also to Rev. John Morrison and to the staff of the John R. Bush Funeral Home.

The Family.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all our friends, neighbors and relatives who have been so kind to us in the passing of our much loved son and brother, the late Robert M. Carter (Bob). Especially thanking Dr. Bates, Dr. Loudin, Mrs. Glenda Flesch, the nurses and orderlies of the ICU and 7th level of the Belleville General Hospital who were so kind to him. Also to Mr. Doug Bushnell and staff of the John R. Bush Funeral Home for their kind attention. Thank you all so very much.

Murney, Helen, Bill and Donna Carter.

Ontario Housing Corporation

WANTED

We're looking for rental accommodation in your community. It's for lower income families who are spending more than they can really afford on rent. Families in need of rental assistance can be housed within the private sector.

The Rent Supplement Program for landlords will guarantee units will be occupied at the prevailing market rents for three years or more. Market rents mean just that. We'll review the rents annually to ensure they are consistent with rents in your municipality.

For developers we'll provide second mortgage financing at below market interest rates — up to 35 per cent of capital cost — to bring mortgage financing up to 95 per cent of construction cost. In return we ask developers to take part in our rent supplement program.

We will consider apartments, detached or semi-detached houses and row houses. All we ask is that units are self-contained and meet residential standards.

After a landlord and the Ontario Housing Corporation agree on a market rent, the landlord participates in selecting a tenant or tenants from the local waiting list for assisted housing. The tenant then pays his rent to the landlord, just as other families in the building do, and OHC mails a monthly cheque to the landlord to cover the difference between that rent and the agreed market rent.

The new tenants are treated the same as any other family. They sign a lease and assume the normal responsibilities outlined in The Landlord and Tenant Act.

Applications should be submitted to:

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Saturday, February 1

Aries (March 21-April 19) Worthwhile results will come from a discussion with a friend who does not limit his thinking to traditional concepts.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Ideas you get today on ways to advance ambitions or career aspirations should be heeded. Act in harmony with your thoughts.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You'll have an opportunity to speak of something interesting you've learned. Pals you'll be chit-chatting with will be impressed.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You'll be in a frame of mind today to make some constructive transformations around the house that will please the family.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're a nice person to be around today. Your thoughts will focus on doing all you can to please those about you.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Look for little ways to economize. If something is broken, try to fix it yourself or have it repaired inexpensively.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) As the day wears on your mood will grow more and more sociable. By evening you'll be ready for party time.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) One who knows you can be trusted not to repeat things will let in on a juicy tidbit regarding a personal family matter.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be more comfortable today in activities more mental than physical. Mix with friends with similar ideas.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) As today's events unfold you'll spot a situation that will offer you a small opportunity for material gain.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) News that you've been hoping for regarding something that's outside of your direct control will be coming.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) A valuable lesson will be learned from observation of how another handles an issue. Later you'll use this to your advantage.

Exercise Won't Change Periods

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 48. I am healthy and always have had regular periods.

I recently started a couple of rather strenuous exercise classes, putting pressure on the old stomach and uterus that have been relaxing so many years.

My period started shortly after this, then stopped in a couple of days until I resumed the exercises, then went a couple of days more.

Would this sudden, heavy exercise cause this change in my periods? I had my check-up not too long ago and there was nothing wrong.—Mrs. M.B.

I doubt that there is any cause and effect relationship between the exercise and the change in your periods. I suspect it is more of a coincidence.

At your age, menstrual irregularity, in the matter of time as well as quantity, is not uncommon. And having had an examination and been found normal, it should not worry you. However, it would be wise to be checked again in six months if the irregularity continues.

And incidentally, although you don't mention it, I would guess that the exercise was beneficial in reducing any of the discomfort you may have suffered in previous periods before the exercise. I have suggested to readers complaining of such discomfort that exercise can be helpful.

Note to R.M.: Ejaculatory incompetence can mean one of two things.

It can mean that a climax is reached but without ejaculation of seminal fluid. This is unusual. The other possibility is that ejaculaton occurs, but the fluid escapes backward into the bladder. This may follow prostate surgery. It is not equated with impotence, which means that the man cannot perform the sex act at all.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My friend and I both have hypoglycemia which has been confirmed by a glucose tolerance test. His doctor has him on a high-protein diet and says absolutely no sugar.

My doctor tells me to carry candy in my pocket so that whenever I feel dizzy I can eat some to help me overcome the dizziness.

We are wondering which doctor is right. When I questioned my doctor, he said he feels his method is the best.—L.E.S.

Your friend is on a high-protein diet with no sugar. But what kind of a diet, if any, are you on? This is very important to know.

The high-protein diet is the proper one for hypoglycemia, and the idea of carrying a bit of candy about is only an emergency adjunct to it.

A little candy will help offset the symptoms of a sharp drop in blood sugar. But if you are on the high-protein diet, there might be no need for the emergency use of sugar.

All hypoglycemia means, as you are probably aware, is that there is a low level of blood sugar. The high-protein diet helps because the protein is converted into sugar only in part and at a slower, more gradual rate than, say, carbohydrates. Thus, for the person with hypoglycemia it is a better food.

And in eating the candy, there is always the chance of a rebound from the sudden stimulation of the pancreas to secrete insulin, which in turn can further reduce the blood sugar level. That is what insulin does.

Your friend's doctor is essentially correct in his treatment of the disease.

Portuguese Imports Disappear from Goa

GOA, India (AP) — Dr. Carmo Azevedo served three wines at dinner in a reminder of the days when this tiny Indian territory was a Portuguese colony.

But from crystal decanters into ornate Portuguese glasses Azevedo had to pour homemade wine. The free imports from Portugal are long gone and New Delhi's rule has all but erased the colonial manner he tries to preserve.

"Those people who were accustomed to this sort of life of course felt the changes," said the 63-year-old physician, editor and epicure.

The 850,000 inhabitants of this sun-splashed little corner of the western Indian coast were freed from colonial rule when Indian troops drove out the Portuguese in 1961.

Since then, New Delhi has stamped the territory's 1,400 square miles with an unmistakably Indian seal and ended its years as a stubborn enclave of European imperialism, free-wheeling trade and smuggling.

Few regret the departure of the Portuguese dictatorship. But nostalgia lingers among the 400 Goan merchant families who lived high by importing almost all the colony's needs—and many things it didn't need, for smuggling into the rest of India.

"In Portuguese days we were allowed to take 18 per cent profit; now it is only 1½ per cent," lamented Arundas Narayandas, a merchant in the capital city of Panaji.

"Today the restrictions are such that a businessman like me is discouraged from doing business. Anything you touch, any line, there is a shortage."

In the old days, filling out a form was enough to get an import licence for almost anything except books and papers with anti-Portuguese thoughts. Foreign exchange was readily available from Goan banks and even vegetables were imported.

But as part of an India faced with severe foreign-exchange shortages, Goa now endures the same restrictions. An import licence request has to wind through the bureaucracy and most of the time it never comes back out.

As a result Azevedo mixed Kashmiri grapes with local plums to get his red wine and Goans have switched from the real thing to Indian whisky.

"What is good is not necessarily pleasant," said another businessman, P. S. Angley, vice-president of the Goan Chamber of Commerce and Industries.

Listing some economic benefits of Indian rule, Angley said Goan farmers used to get about $22 a thousand for their coconuts under the Portuguese regime. Soon after the Indian takeover, prices shot up to more than $60 and now stand at more than $100.

"And why?" he asked. "Just because the market to India was opened."

But as in the rest of India, the higher prices have often left Goa's peasantry treading along at the same subsistence level.

"Sometimes I get 10 rupees ($1.20) a day, sometimes not one little thing," said 60-year-old Shankar Anant Shet Kargaokar, a bullock-cart driver. "It doesn't make much difference to me. In those days, cattle fodder was cheaper, though."

Nevertheless, per-capita income has moved from about $47 a year in Portuguese days to about $120, slightly above the national average.

The number of government employees has tripled to 18,000.

From about 50,000 under the Portuguese, the number of children in primary schools has jumped to more than 120,000. The number in secondary schools has gone from 3,000 to 33,000.

The Portuguese-language training that used to be compusory under the colonial regime has become an option that fewer children take every year. English is the prerequisite for getting ahead.

Azevedo still speaks Portuguese at home with his wife, a custom preserved by many upper-class families in Panaji.

But the circulation of his newspaper, O Heraldo, Goa's last Portuguese-language daily, has slipped to 2,500. Before, O Heraldo competed with two other Portuguese-language dailies and sold 4,000 copies.

Still, little signs of the past are everywhere.

The architecture of Panaji is a seedy reminder of its European heritage and many streets still have Portuguese plaques calling them "rua."

Old women still wear black lace mantillas to mass and about a third of the population still calls itself Roman Catholic. The palace of Bishop Raul Gonsalves is still one of the most imposing buidings in Panaji.

Publishers Want Ban On Boycott

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association wants further amendments to the government's competition bill to remove the right of advertisers to combine to withhold their business from certain newspapers.

In a brief submitted to the government Thursday, the association notes advertising income is the primary source of revenue for most newspapers. Thus, large advertisers collectively can hurt a newspaper if they disagree with its editorial views or with factual reports on their industry or business.

The association says that during the last year, auto dealers in Ottawa combined to withhold advertising from a newspaper after it ran a series of articles critical of some used-car dealers' practices. The Citizen had a series of articles on the topic.

A delegation including several publishers met to discuss the brief with Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, who last Dec. 3 presented a series of 30 proposed amendments for the Commons committee studying the bill to consider.

A corporate affairs spokesman says the bill, in its current form, has drawn about 200 submissions from business and consumer groups.

The brief asks that the section allowing advertisers to combine to restrict advertising be dropped entirely, because a proposed amendment to prohibit advertisers from boycotting certain newspapers would still permit them to "diminish significantly but not completely" their advertising and thus was not adequate protection.

Love of Country Music Leads to Busy Career

By BOB BOXALL

Jack McCaughen of Stirling started his musical career some 45 years ago and now at 55 years of age his endeavors have reached national acclaim.

Mr. McCaughen, owner of Jack's Appliances in Stirling recently sent a tape of an original song to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporations and three days latter was phoned and asked if he would do it on national television.

A TV crew came to his store Dec. 9 and taped him playing his guitar and singing There's Too Much Month Left At The End Of The Money. The show was aired Dec. 29, from coast to coast, on CBC's Marketplace with host George Finstad.

Mr. McCaughen first became interested in music after listening to his neighbour sing and yodle. With much coaxing, he persuaded his father to get him his first guitar when he was 10 years old.

The self-taught musician along with his wife, Dorothy, the smiling drummer girl, started the Trent Valley Ramblers and travelled, with such musicians as Wilf Carter, putting on country music shows.

After retiring for a short period Mr. McCaughen and a friend, Ken Stapley, started a Canadian Grand Ole Opry in the form of the Trent Valley Jamboree, which Mr. McCaughen left in 1971 after five years.

The next year the couple started the Fidlar Mills Country Jamboree at the Stirling Theatre. He told that this is a 50-50 endeavour with his wife doing the work and himself taking the credit. Dorothy said there is a lot of work and he does his share which takes in promoting, producing and playing in the show. Besides all of this he still finds time to run his store, write an occasional song and organize bus trips to the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. McCaughen said he likes to put some social relevence into his songs and this is apparent in one that he uncoaxingly played during the interview.

The song has just been written and speaks of ."Lincolns and Cadillacs and a Rolls parked out back, Arabs don't ride those camels anymore.'

Since his television appearance he has been contacted by the Composers and Authors Publishers Association of Canada (Capac) and an undisclosed music publishing company that had him submit five songs for possible recording.

Movies of the Week

SATURDAY, (FEB. 1)

- There Was a Crooked Man (1970) — A pair of veteran actors, Kirk Douglas and Henry Fonda, join forces in this movie which takes place in a territorial prison in the 1800s. — Channels 6, 9 — 8 p.m. — Also on Channel 8 — 9 p.m.
- Electra Glide in Blue (1973) — It seems likely only last year that this movie was playing at the theatre. But its fast arrival on television is no reason to be turned off this movie of a motorcycle cop trying to solve a murder case. With Robert Blake. — Channel 13 — 9 p.m.

SUNDAY (FEB. 3)

- Divorce American Style (1967) — A light comedy farme for a quiet Sunday afternoon with Dick Van Dyke and Debbie Reynolds. — Channel 6 — 2 p.m.
- Sarah T (1975 Made-for-TV movie) — The girl from The Exorcist, Linda Blair, turns up tonight in the television movie of a 15-year-old who becomes an alcoholic. — Channels 6, 9 — 7 p.m.
- The Music Man (1962) — The Belleville Theatre Guild plans to present their musical version of this work late this spring. Here's a chance to see the movie version with Robert Preston and Shirley Jones. — Channel 10 — 7 p.m.
- Crazy Joe (1974) — Since the success of The Godfather in 1972 movies dealing with gangland violence have sprouted far and wide. This melodrama is a fictionalized account of the late crime king, Joey Gallo. Peter Boyle plays the title role. — Channel [illegible] — 8:30 p.m.

[illegible] (FEB. 3)

- Bea[illegible] — Made three years before his death in 1956, this Humphrey Bogart movie also stars Jennifer Jones, Gina Lollobridgia and Robert Morley trying to get rich. — Channel 6 — 12:30 p.m.
- Batman (1966) — The movie spawned from the Batman television series of the middle 1960s. With Adam West and Burt Ward portraying the comic book heroes. Along for the ride are The Joker, Catwoman, The Riddler and The Penguin. — Channel 3 — 6:30 p.m.
- The Only Game In Town (1970) — Elizabeth Taylor and Warren Beatty team up in this story of two people combating loaliness in their own ways. — Channel 13 — 9 p.m.

TUESDAY (FEB. 4)

- The Cardinal (1963) — The subject matter and story may be too heavy for afternoon viewing as this is the type of film you want to get involved in. But it's worth setting time aside to take a look at. Shown in two parts with second part same time tomorrow. — Channel 6 — 12:30 p.m.
- Death Be Not Too Proud (1975 Made-for-TV movie) — Preempting the series Happy Days this movie is anything but that, as it dramatizes the last months of a teen-age boy, dying of a brain tumor. — Channel 13 — 8 p.m.

WEDNESDAY (FEB. 5)

- The Cardinal (1963) — The conclusion of the two part movie based on the life of a young priest on his way to become a prince of the church. — Channel 6 — 12:30 p.m.
- Airport (1970) — This movie ranks up there with the list of all-time box office money makers. Everyone by now must know the story line of drama aboard an airline flight. Helen Hayes, Burt Lancaster and Dean Martin are among the star-studded cast. — Channels 6, 9 — 8 p.m.
- Heat of Anger (1972) — This TV-movie stars Susan Hayward as a lawyer acting in a murder case.

THURSDAY (FEB. 6)

- The Brothers Rico (1957) — Richard Conte and James Darren as brothers in a crime drama. — Channel 6 — 12:30 p.m.
- Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here (1969) — For those who are Robert Redford fans and want to see one of his earlier efforts. With Katherine Ross of The Graduate. — Channel 10 — 9 p.m.

Sarah T.

This is the portrait of a teen-age alcoholic, the poignant story of a 15-year-old girl and the events that led up to her affliction. Linda Blair (right) stars as Sarah Travis. Vera Bloom and William Daniels also star. Shown Sunday at 7 p.m. on Channels 6 and 9.

TV Brief

Laugh-In was during its year on television one of the most popular and humorous series on the air. While such series regulars as Goldie Hawn turned to movies, others have stayed with television.

Gary Owens, the announcer with the ear glued to the headset, is the off-camera announcer for ABC's Superman special.

SHARON MacINTYRE

Church Sponsors Concert

A musical treat will be offered at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening, February 2nd, at 8 p.m. when Miss Sharon MacIntyre, soprano, and Mr. Jon Donald, pianist, will present a concert of classical, religious music and folk songs.

Miss MacIntyre, soprano soloist at Bloor Street United Church, Toronto and a voice student of Lois Marshall, great Canadian soprano, is a native of Toronto. Her musical talent was discovered at an early age when she sang for children's shows. When she entered high school, she also enrolled in the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto on a full scholarship basis to study voice and musical theory. She later became involved with radio and was also a member of the Young Chorus of the Canadian Opera Company.

While pursuing her musical career, Miss MacIntyre acquired an Honor Bachelor of Arts degree in Modern Languages from the University of Toronto.

In 1971, she was the national winner of the Canadian Music Competitions and gave a number of concerts. She toured Ontario on a government grant, singing the lead in Mozart's Impresario and Ravel's L Heure Espagnole with the Young Canadian Opera Theatre.
